Assumpsit, and declares that the defendant covenanted with him, being executor to J. S. as executor, upon which account so much was due, and he promised to pay it. Upon non assumpsit the plaintiff was nonsuit, and the question was: if he should pay costs? Wylde held that he should pay costs, because he does not sue as executor, nor produce the will, but founds the action upon an account with himself. Rainsford Chief Justice, Twysden and Jones Justices contra: for the action is in the right of his executorship, and the money recovered will be the assets; and they gave judgment accordingly.

Statute of Limitations is no plea to debt by assignee of commissioners of bankrupt. Plaintiff discontinues after argument. S. C. 3 Keb. 625, 645. Q. 3 Lev. Vide post, 209.

Assumpsit as assignee of the commissioners of bankrupts, for a debt due by contract to the bankrupt. The defendant pleaded non assumpsit infra sex annos, and the plaintiff demurred. And Weston argued, that the Statute of Limitations extends not to this case, the debt being assigned by virtue of an Act of Parliament, and said it was so adjudged in 1653, whereupon a day was given to shew that record. But after for a default in the declaration, the plaintiff had leave of the Court to discontinue.

STRANGE against GREENHIL.

Debt sur obligation of 50l. and the obligation was quantoginto libris. S. C. 2 Jo. 48. 3 Keb. 644.

Debt and counts upon an obligation of 50l. The defendant demands oyer of the obligation, which was noverint, &c. me teneri in quantoginta libris, and then demurs, and judgment was given for the defendant, for this variance and insensibility of the word quantoginta.

[167] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 28 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

ATTORNEY GENERAL against MATTHEWS IN CHANCERY.

General charities are not within the power of the commissioners but of the King himself, and to be settled on information in Chancery by the King.

Upon a decree made by the Commissioners of Charitable Uses, being brought hither, and exceptions taken thereunto, the case was: Henry Frier seised in fee 7 Car. 1 infeoffed several persons in trust, and by his will appointed they should pay 100l. per annum to three parishes in London, scilicet A. B. and C. for the poor of those parishes; and likewise appointed some other charities now determined, and of the residue he declared they should stand seised to the use of the poor in general for ever: after the death of Henry Frier, Dr. Frier his son and heir whom he disinherited upon some displeasure, contested this settlement and will in the Court of Wards, 8 Car. 1, and at last the matter was referred to the King: who by the advice of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Lord Keeper Coventry awarded, that the hundred pounds per annum should be distributed to the three parishes, scil. 20l. to A. and 40l. apiece to B. and C. and that 80l. per annum for ever, should go to the rebuilding and repair of the church of St. Paul's London: the residue to Dr. Frier and his heirs; this award was confirmed by several orders in the Court of Wards, but no formal decree was made, neither there nor in the Court of Chancery, where the King in his award ordered it should be settled by decree also. And the trustees were to convey the lands subject to these uses to Dr. Frier, and the land [168] having ever since been enjoyed by him, and the trust performed, accordingly the Commissioners of Charitable Uses upon complaint to them, made a decree, whereby they settled the whole estate to charitable uses, without regard to former proceedings, the King's award, or the former orders of the Court: and this decree of the commissioners was now quash'd by the Lord Keeper Finch, because this being a general charity, and for the poor in general, the commissioners have nothing to do with it, but it is to be determined by the King himself in this Court, upon an information by the Attorney General in behalf of the King, which accordingly he directed to be brought. And now upon the information the Lord Keeper said, this general charity belongs to the King himself to dispose, but yet to the poor. And therefore the disposal of 80l. per annum to Paul's, was out of the trust, and void; and the distribution to the three parishes good, and to be confirmed. But as to the poor kindred of Frier, who prayed to be considered, no consideration he said could be had of them, for the disposition must be such as may endure for ever, and they cannot live poor for ever. But before he would dispose of the residue, he said he would acquaint the King with the case, and the value of the estate, which appeared to be 400l. per annum at least, to have his directions how the disposition of this general charity should be, and that to be confirmed by the decree of this Court. And afterwards the King directed it should go to the maintenance of the mathematical scholars in Christ's Hospital, whom the King had lately appointed to be brought up there in order to be instructed in the art of navigation; which, ut audivi, was accordingly confirmed by the decree of this Court. Levinz for the defendant.

[169] BROWNE against WAYTE.

What words in Acts of Parliament extend to make a forfeiture of estates-tail.
S. C. 2 Jo. 57. 2 Mod. 130. Poll. 181.

Ejectment upon a lease of the manor of Daventry, upon the demise of John Danvers, son and heir of Sir John Danvers: and upon non culp. a special verdict, wherein the case was: Sir John Danvers upon a settlement made before the 25th of April 1646 was seised in tail the remainder to his right heirs. He after the year 1646, levied a fine to the same uses without alteration, except only a power to make leases to raise money for payment of debts and portions; and 5 April 1655 died; and being one of those persons who gave judgment of death against King Charles I. By the general Act of Pardon 12 Car. 2 it is provided, That nothing in this Act shall extend to discharge the lands, goods or chattels of Sir John Danvers, and others therein named from being forfeit. And after by another Act of the same Parliament it is enacted, That all the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, possessions and reversions, remainders, rights, interests, hereditaments, leases, chattels real, and other things of what nature soever, that Sir John Danvers, or any other to his use, or in trust for him, had 25 March 1646, or at any time after, shall be forfeited to the King. Whereupon two points were started. First, Whether by this latter statute this estate-tail was forfeited to the King? Against which it was argued, that estates-tail were never forfeitable for treason before 26 H. 8, c. 13, and not then neither by the general words of lands, tenements and hereditaments; but by the particular words of any estate of inheritance whatsoever, which included tail-estates. But this statute extends to cases of attainder only, and therefore will not reach this case: for Sir John was never attainted; which shews also that the Parliament intended not to be so severe in the case of Sir John Danvers, as it had been against other persons guilty of the same crime, whom the Parliament attainted, though dead. And that lands intailed were never forfeited by Acts of Parliament, which gave the forfeiture of lands, tenements and hereditaments by general words, [170] were cited statute 25 E. 3 de Treason, which declares all lands and tenements to be forfeited to the King by treason; 27 E. 3, 5, makes all lands forfeited for drawing men to foreign pleas; 15 R. 2, 5, makes all lands and tenements forfeit for bringing into this realm excommunications from Rome; 13 R. 2 for accepting benefices out of the realm; and the Statute of Præmunire makes a forfeiture of all lands, tenements and hereditaments; and yet none of these extend to lands intailed, Co. Litt. 130. 11 Co. 63 b. Trudgeon's case, & Co. Litt. 393 b. Intailed lands were never forfeited by any thing till statute 26 H. 8 in cases of attainder of treason, and that not by the general words all lands, tenements and hereditaments, but these there following, or any estate whatsoever. 2d Point, Whether by the fine levied after the treason committed (though it be to the old uses in tail) and the seisin in fee which he gained at the instant of levying the fine, this forfeiture shall take place as a charge upon the land precedent to the new intail? Against which it was argued for the plaintiff, that this instantaneous seisin was not forfeitable nor chargeable: for it is revera, no more than a fictitious seisin, not regarded in law, Co. Litt. 31. A wife is not endowable thereof, 2 Cro. 615. Tenant in special tail took a second wife, and made a feoffment, she is not endowable. But for the defendant it was argued, that an estate-tail is here forfeited by the words of the statute, all interests, which are as comprehensive, as any estate whatsoever, in stat. 26 H. 8. And the intent of the Parliament could not be other than to give estates-tail as forfeited, that the penalty might be answerable to the crime of the King's murder. And in stat. 12 Car. 2, where some of the regicides are attainted, the same words of forfeiture, as here, are used; and all the difference intended by them was only to spare corruption of blood in the one case, and not in the other; but to make both liable as to the same forfeitures: and it may be for any thing appears to the contrary, Sir John Danvers had no lands but what were entailed; and then there is no penalty at all upon him, neither by corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate. To this opinion some of the Judges seemed inclinable. But as to the other point they held, that the forfeiture could not attach upon the instantaneous seisin gained by the fine. Et adjournatur. And [171] afterwards in Michaelmas term, the judgment of the Court was delivered by Rainsford Chief Justice, that the plaintiff ought to be barred upon the first point. Upon which judgment a writ of error was afterwards brought in 1690, in the Exchequer Chamber, and the judgment affirmed: and afterwards 1691, error thereupon was brought in the House of Lords, and there again affirmed by a majority of two or three voices. Levinz for the plaintiff, and Sir John King for the defendant in the first argument in Banco Regis.

Nota, This judgment was afterwards 1 W. & M. affirmed in Parliament by one voice only.

ATTORNEY GENERAL against SIR EDWARD FARMEN, IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

King granted derelict lands, and all lands contigue adjacen' which hereafter at any time should be recovered from the sea: non obstante non nominando valorem, quantitatem, sive qualitatem; lands derelict after shall not pass. Raym. 241, 242. 2 Mod. 106.

Information by English bill, for lands derelict upon the sea-coast, wherein the case as drawn by consent of the parties was: King James I. granted to J. S. certain particular marsh lands bordering upon the sea. Et ex uberiori gratia granted, omne solum, fundum, terram, arenam, terram mariscal' contigue adjacen' præmissis, quæ modo inundat' vel aqua maris cooperta existunt, & quæ ad aliquod tempus imposterum recuperat forent per relictionem maris, vel aliter alio quocunque modo, non obstante non nominando valorem, quantitatem sive qualitatem. After this 100 acres became derelict by the sea adjoining to the marshes before particularly granted, and whether it belonged to the King or the patentee? was the question. It was argued that the King should have it. First, Because the King had not these 100 acres since become derelict, and could not grant that which was not in him to grant. Secondly, This is to pass a parcel of lands which the King has by his prerogative, which cannot pass by general words. Thirdly, If any thing shall pass it must be only so much as a line borders upon the parcels before granted; otherwise should the sea by recession leave ten or twenty miles of sand, what must be the boundary? Surely the patentee is not to have all this extent of soil. To this it was answered, that the King may grant that which is not actually in him at the time of the grant, as it is in Dyer 108 [172] a. 252 b. the marriage of a ward quando acciderit, and yet the King too hath the ward in right of prerogative. 2. Here is as much certainty as the fact was capable of; no number of acres or description of the soil, quia non constat what it would be, and to say that in that respect the grant is not good, is to argue against the prerogative, and to make the King in a worse condition than the subject, scil. that he hath lands, but cannot grant or dispose of them. 3dly, The non obstante will make it good, if not good without it; for it is non obstante non nominando valorem, qualitatem sive quantitatem, which implies all the objections which are or can be against the grant, 4 Co. 4 b. particular non obstante in letters patents, cure all defaults for want of information in the King; and here is a particular of all things whereof the King ought to be informed, but cannot by reason of the nature of the thing. 4thly, The words contigue adjacen' include all which in any part adjoins, if not unknown; as one close is said contigue adjacens to another, and yet in fact it is not the whole close, but the skirts of it that is contigue adjacens in a line. Sed postea, Montague Chief Baron & Curia, with the advice of the Chief Justices Rainsford and North, held, that nothing passed by these general words; but the patent as to the 100 acres which became derelict after the patent, was void. Sawyer pro Rege, Levinz for the patentee.

Case against the master and servant, for that the servant brought a coach into Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, with two ungovernable horses, to train them, which run over the plaintiff, &c. S. C. 1 Vent. 295. 4 Keb. 650.

Case, for that the defendants in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, a place where people are always going to and fro about their business, brought a coach with two ungovernable horses, & eux improvide incaute & absque debita consideratione ineptitudinis loci there drove them to make them tractable and fit them for a coach; and the horses because of their ferocity, being not to be managed, ran upon the plaintiff, and hurt and grievously wounded him: the master was absent, yet the action was brought against him as well as his servant, and both found guilty. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that no sciens is here laid of the horses being unruly, nor any negligence alledged, but e contra, that the horses were ungovernable: yet judgment was given for the plaintiff, for it is alledged that it was improvide & absque debita [173] consideratione ineptitudinis loci; and it shall be intended the master sent the servant to train the horses there.

Distribution equal between the whole and half blood. S. C. 1 Vent. 307, 316, 323. 2 Jo. 93. 2 Vent. 317. 3 Keb. 669, 730, 776, 831.

Prohibition. One died, having brothers A. B. and C. of the whole blood, and D. E. and F. of the half blood. Administration was committed to A. and the Ordinary would bind him to distribute equally between those of the whole, and those of the half blood: this was argued at Bar several terms, and for the prohibition 'twas urged, that the Judges of the Common Law are to judge of Acts of Parliament, and half blood is not regarded at common law; the one cannot be heir to the other, nor can the testator or intestate be presumed to have the same affection for the half blood, that he had for the whole; and therefore unreasonable the Ordinary should give them equally a like share of the estate. Farther, the statute is silent as to the point, whether half blood be of kin; it only appoints division shall be made between the kindred of equal degree; and therefore the common law is to determine who is of kin, and what are the equal degrees of kindred; but which were cited Fitz. Devise 9. 2 Roll. 303. For the consultation 'twas argued, that the statute being only for a distribution of things testamentary, it must be construed according to their law. And a brother of the half blood is a brother, as well as a brother of the whole blood; and our law takes notice of this, and therefore allows that a brother of the half blood may be a guardian, as Owen & 3 Cro. Swan against Gateland. And this statute is, that they ought to distribute according to the law in force, and our law makes no mention of distribution; therefore the law in force must be intended the canon law. And they cited also 2 Roll. 303, and Style 74, 75. And Trin. term. 29 Car. 2, 'twas said at Bar, that the Spiritual Court gave the half blood half shares, which Rainsford and Wylde held reasonable, & postea Mich. 29, a consultation was granted: quære tamen whether generally or with an ita quod they gave but half shares to the half blood: for ever since their constant course is to divide equally between the whole and the half blood; and that has been approved since in the Courts of Westminster.

Assumpsit for scavage without express promise. S. C. 1 Vent. 298. 3 Keb. 480, 491, 677. Ante 142. 1 Danv. 27, 7. 1 Show. 35.

Assumpsit for money due by custom for scavage: upon non assumpsit the jury found the duty to be due, but that no promise was expressly made: and whether assumpsit lies for this money thus due by custom, without express promise? was the question: resolved it does, and judgment for the plaintiff.

Assumpsit to beat one, naught. Vide 1 Cro. 113, 195, 245, 246. 11 Co. 53, 54. 2 Jo. 24.

Assumpsit, in consideration that the plaintiff would give him 20s. to give the plaintiff 40s. if he did not beat J. S. out of such a close; and that he gave the defendant the 20s. but he did not beat J. S. out of the close. Verdict for the plaintiff, but judgment was stayed, for the consideration and the whole contract is illegal and void.

GOLD against CUTLER.

Justifies the imprisonment per breve return' 15 Martini: plaintiff replies, and shews a writ return' octabis Martini, and traverses 15 Martini.

Debt upon an obligation to the sheriff, conditioned to appear octabis Martini ad respondend', &c. Defendant pleaded the stat. 23 H. 6, and that he was taken and imprisoned virtute brevis return. quinden' Martini, and that the obligation was taken for ease and favour. The plaintiff replied, auter briefe return. octabis Martini, and that he was taken and imprisoned upon that, absque hoc that he was in prison virtute brevis return' quindena Martini. The defendant demurred generally. And now Saunders argued the traverse was ill and immaterial; for it matters not, whether any writ was returnable quindena Martini or not: but he should have concluded et hoc paratus est verificare; and left the defendant to traverse the writ returnable octabis Martini; and [175] upon this traverse no good issue can be taken, for it is not material, whether any writ was returnable quindena Martini or not; the only material thing to maintain the goodness of the obligation is this, that the writ was returnable octabis Martini. Sed per Curiam, If the traverse be immaterial, the defendant waiving that, should have traversed the writ being returnable octabis Martini. But they held the traverse was well enough in this case, it being taken to be the most material thing pleaded in bar to avoid the obligation; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Bennet and Filkin's case, Mich. 18 Car. 2, B. R. Sed intrat. Trin. 18, Rot. 1172.

Trover laid the first day of Easter term, and the declaration was of the same term. S. C. 2 Jo. 87. 3 Keb. 693. For declarations in trover.

Trover for goods supposed by the declaration to be converted 20 April; and the declaration was generally de termino Paschæ, and Easter term this year began 20 April. Whereupon after verdict pro quer', this matter was moved in arrest of judgment: but on making it appear that the bill was filed, and the declaration also delivered, both after the 20th of April, the judgment was entered for the plaintiff, without any amendment; for though the declaration being general, relates to the first day of the term, yet the bill being filed at a day after, all relates to the filing of the bill by the course of the Court; of which course if error be brought, the Court where the error is brought, will take notice, as the custom of this Court. And a precedent was produced, where it was so done. Vide Trin. 27. Ante, Hutchinson against Thomas; & Trin. 23, Castle vel Tatlow against Bateman.

Sheriff's bond to appear coram Majestate Sua apud Wesmonasteriam; and to answer a bill of 100l. not saying whose bill. Vid. post. 180. Ante, 123. 2 Show, pl. 38.

Debt upon obligation, conditioned to appear before His Majesty at Westminster, Wednesday next after three weeks of Easter, to answer Sarah Asly of a plea of trespass, and also of a bill to be exhibited against him for 100*l.* The defendant pleaded the statute of H. 6. and shewed that the writ was to appear coram domino Rege apud Westmonasterium ad respondend' Sarah Asly de placito transgressionis, ac etiam billæ versus ipsum exhibend' pro centum libris. The plaintiff demurred, and upon argument the Court was of opinion against him: 1. For that the condition of the obligation was to appear coram Majestate Sua apud Westmonasterium, whereas it ought to be coram domino Rege. 2. Because it is not expressed in the condition at whose bill he is to answer, and it ought to be a bill ipsius Sarœ exhibend'; as it is, it does not appear to whose bill of 100l. he is to answer.

DUNWELL AND WIFE against BULLOCK.

Trover de ferramento, Anglice a range, naught. 1 Vent. 304. Vide pag. precedent.

Trover inter alia de uno ferramento, Anglice, an iron range. Verdict for the plaintiff and intire damages, and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that ferramentum is a word too general; for it signifies any iron tool whatsoever. Sty. 313, 327. Trover de quodam instrumento ferreo, vocat' a pair of fetters, or a horse-lock, or a brand-iron, naught. And there is a proper term in Latin for a range; for if so be he means the grate, cratis is Latin for it; if the broach or rock upon which the spit turns, crateuta or crateutorium is Latin for it; and judgment was staid.

[178] HORE against THE EARL OF DORSET.

Issue in two counties tried in one.

Debt against him as heir to his father upon an obligation. He pleaded riens per discent prœter the reversion of certain lands in Herefordshire and Worcestershire, expectant upon the life of A. and judgment thereupon against him upon his confession of assets. A. died, and now in a scire facias against him upon this judgment, he pleaded, that B. was seised of those lands, until C. disseised him and infeoffed his father, who demised to A. for life: after whose death B. entered and ousted him; and issue being that B. did not enter, it was tried by a jury of Herefordshire, and verdict for the plaintiff. Upon which it was moved in arrest of judgment that this was a mis-trial, for it should have been tried by both counties by several venire's; for which judgment was staid at present.

Note 1. This seems cured by stat. 21 Jac. which says where the venue is of one place where it ought to be of more; and does not restrain it to one county, so that it may well extend where the places are in several counties, according to the opinion of Hale in Jennings and Hawkins's case, ante 26 & 27 Car. 2. 2. This is in debt against the heir, wherein damages, which are several, are not to be recovered, but the debt itself, which is intire; and if his plea be falsified in any part, the whole debt must be recovered; and his plea is falsified here by a jury of Herefordshire, where part of the lands lie, who are proper jurors as to that part. Quære.

UNDERWOOD against SAUNDERS.

Prescription for him & quibusd' aliis tenentibus de manerio Irtlingborough. 1. Quibusd' incertain. 2. Ne nom. le manor.

Case, and declares that he was seised of such lands, and that he and all those whose estate he had, simul cum quibusdam aliis tenentibus tent' per copiam curiæ de manerio in Irtlingborough, time out of mind, &c. have had solam pasturam in such a close, from such a time until such a time; and the defendant disturbed him. The defendant demurred generally upon the declaration, and took these exceptions. 1. That cum quibusdam aliis tenentibus is uncertain, both as to what kind, and what number of tenants. 2. De manerio in [179] Irtlingborough is also uncertain what manor: for several manors may be in one vill, and every manor hath a particular name: for which reasons the Court held the declaration ill, and gave judgment for the defendant. Levinz counsel for the defendant.

THE KING against MOORE.

Information in B. R. upon the Statute of Ph. & Mar. for taking a woman out of the custody of her guardian. S. C. 3 Keb. 708, 715.

Information for that the defendant and others, existentes above the age of 14 ceperunt, one A. then being a virgin unmarried, possessed de bonis movilibus, and seised of lands of great value, out of the custody of her mother, contra formam statuti. After verdict for the King it was moved in arrest of judgment; 1. That it is said the defendants were above the age of 14, at the time of the caption; for existens or being refers to the time of the information, not of the caption, as in the cases of forcible entry, existens liberum tenementum refers to the time of the indictment, not to the time of the entry. Sed non allocatur: in these cases the existent' follows the verb ipsum disseisivit of such and such land existent' liberum tenementum; and so may be his freehold after the disseisin: but here the existens precedes the verb ceperunt, and so it is tied up, and must relate to the time of the caption. 2. The information is possessed de rebus movilibus, and it ought to be mobilibus, for there is no such word as movilibus: sed non allocatur: the seisin of the lands is sufficient without the goods. 3. This information lies not in this Court; for the Statute of Philip and Mary directs the punishment to be in the Star-Chamber, or before Justices of Assize by fine and imprisonment; therefore it lies not in this Court upon the statute; and it cannot be maintained as an offence at common law, because of the conclusion contra formam statuti: sed non allocatur: for though the statute appoints the examination in the Star-Chamber, &c. yet there are no negative words, and therefore this Court is not excluded. Hereupon they gave judgment for the King, and fined the defendant 500l. and committed him till he paid it: and thus the doubt in Mary Smith's case 1 Cro. resolved.

Writ is to appear coram dom' Rege at Westminster; condition of the sheriff's bond to appear before His Majesty's Justices of the King's Bench at Westminster, good. Vide ante, 123, 177. 2 Show. pl. 38.

Debt upon an obligation of 2000l. to the Sheriff of Cumberland, conditioned to appear before His Majesty's Justices of the King's Bench at Westminster die Mercurii post tres septimanas Sancti Michael' ad respondend' Annæ Curwen viduæ in placito transgressionis, ac etiam billæ ipsius Annæ against the defendant pro mille libris. The defendant pleaded the statute of H. 6, and shewed the writ was to appear domino Rege apud Westmonasterium, &c. and that the obligation was given for ease and favour. The plaintiff demurred, and now it was argued for the defendant, that the obligation was void; not being made according to the writ, which is to appear coram domino Rege, whereas the obligation is to appear coram Justiciariis domino Regis de Banco Regis. To which it was answered, that the statute was made only to prevent extortion and oppression by the sheriff, and not to tie the sheriff up to strictness of forms, so long as the thing be satisfied in substance; and that words in deeds or obligations are to be taken according to common parlance, as in Cro. a submission to an award, so that it be made before the first day of the term, and the award was made after the essoin, but before the quarto die post, and good; for in vulgar acceptance the quarto die post is the first day of the term: so here, coram dom' Reg' apud Westmon' is in common parlance before His Majesty's Justices of the King's Bench at Westminster; and all one. And if the party had pleaded comparuit ad diem coram domino Rege apud Westmon' secund' exigen' brevis, it had been sufficient. And 2 Cro. 286, Villiers Sheriff of Leicester against Hastings, niceties are not to be favoured in sheriffs bonds so long as they contain such certainty that the defendant may know where to appear: upon the view of which case of Cro. the Court was of opinion and gave judgment for the plaintiff: but the matter being formerly moved in Hale's time, and he then doubting, the defendant brought a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, where Hill. 28 and 29 it was argued again, [181] and most part of the Judges were for affirming the judgment. But North Chief Justice de Com. Banc. being strongly against it, the case was thereupon adjourned till Pasch. prox. Levinz for the plaintiff in the action.

BULL against KNIGHT.

Smith's forge to pay chimney-money, not a blowing-house.

Trespass for taking his goods, and upon non culp. the jury found a special verdict, and therein the Statute of Chimney-money, which does enact, that for every fire-hearth shall be paid 2s. per annum, proviso, that the Act shall not extend to any blowing-house, stamp or kiln. And that the plaintiff had a smith's forge, which cannot be used without bellows to blow the fire; and because the plaintiff would not pay 2s. for it, the defendant collector of the chimney-money, took the goods as a distress for the 2s. & si, &c. And upon argument by the King's Counsel for the defendant, no one appearing for the plaintiff, judgment was given for the defendant, for a blowing-house is a house where iron, lead, or tin is cast or melted, to which the proviso extends, but not to a smith's forge.

Ordinary grants administration where there is a will and executors, but concealed. it is void, and not made good by the executor's renunciation afterwards. S. C. 1 Vent. 303.

Ejectment; wherein upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was: David Cunningham being possessed of an interesse termini for 30 years to commence in 1671, made his will; and made another David Cunningham his executor, and died in 1659. David the executor, 8 October, 1661, made his will, and Ninian Cunningham and Andrew Hays his executors, and 15 September, 1665, died, having proved the will of the first David. The Ordinary not having notice of the last will 14 Feb. 1665 granted administration de bonis non of the first David, non administratis by the second David to Bradborne a creditor of the first David, no probat being made of the will of the second David. 21 Octob. 1671 Hays the surviving executor renounced the will of the second David before the Ordinary, whereby the first David died intestate. 1 March, 1672, Bradborne for 1000l. assigned the term to Lovelace. 11 Feb. 1673, Bradborne was sued by citation to repeal the administration committed to him, and the 13th of February, 1673, the administration was repealed and committed to Cunningham the defendant, who entered; upon whom Lovelace re-entered, and made the lease to the plaintiff, whereupon the action is brought. And whether the plaintiff or defendant hath the better title? was the question, which was argued by Saunders for the plaintiff; and two things were admitted by him; 1. That where an executor is in [183] esse, who after proves the will, administration granted in the mean time, without notice of the will, and all mean acts done by such an administrator are void, according to Greysbrook and Fox's case, Plowd. Com. 2. Where administration is granted to one who disposes of goods, and his administration is repealed afterwards by citation, as here; all mean acts done by him are good, as Packman's case, 6 Co. But thirdly, he said this is a middle case, for here is an executor in esse and a will at the time of administration granted. But the executor renouncing afterwards, especially before the grant to Lovelace, hath made that good ab initio, and consequently the sale of the term also; although the administration be afterwards repealed upon the citation. Levinz answered, that the grant of administration, there being an executor in esse, was utterly void, and not voidable, and so could not be made good by the renunciation, and this for two causes: 1. Where there is a will and executor in esse, the Ordinary hath no power to commit administration, but as he is enabled by the statutes of the realm, 9 Co. Hensloe's case. Now the statute of the 31 Ed. 3, 11, is, that where a man dies intestate, the Ordinary shall commit administration to his next friends. The Ordinary then hath no power by this statute till the party dies intestate, which was not in this case till the executor had refused. And the statute of 21 H. 8, 5, is more plain; for that is in case any person die intestate, or the executors refuse, then the Ordinary shall commit administration. When then shall he commit? When the executor refuses. By the death of the testator the executor hath immediately the property of the goods in him, and may either grant or release before probate, though he cannot maintain an action, 5 Co. Middleton's case. How then can the Ordinary vest the property in another by granting him administration? For there cannot be two several properties in several persons in the same thing. Suppose the executor sell to one, and the administrator to another, and afterwards the executor refuse, which of the two vendees should have the goods sold? Doubtless the vendee of the executor. 3dly. If the administration was void ab initio, no subsequent matter could make it good; for things voidable may be made good by matters subsequent, but things void cannot; Co. Litt. 215 a. 3 Co. 64 b. Dyer, 339, 240. 1 Co. 62. Bishop makes a lease for four [184] lives, one of which determines in the life of the bishop, yet the lease is not made good as to the successor. The Court were strongly of opinion for the defendant, that the administration was void at first, and was not made good by the renunciation of the executor; and therefore the sale by the administrator, though made after the renunciation was void, and gave rule for judgment for the defendant, nisi causa before the end of this term. But after upon the importunity of Pemberton to be heard to this point the next term they gave him leave accordingly. But he not arguing it next term, the rule was made absolute, and judgment given for the defendant.

HIPPSLY against TUCKE.

Judge of an Inferior Court has not taken the oath, &c. according to stat. 25 Car. 2, &c. yet his judgment is not void, and cannot be assigned for error. S. C. 2 Jon. 81. 3 Keb. 606, 665, 682, 721. 3 Blac. Abr. 471. Post. 242.

Error of a judgment in Newberry Court; and it was assigned, that the mayor who was Judge there had not taken the oath and sacrament according to stat. 25 Car. 2, for which his office was void before the judgment given, and so the matter coram non Judice. To which it was answered, that this is not matter assignable, being contrary to the record, whereby he is taken and admitted to be Judge, 2 Cro. 359. 3 Cro. 320. Also though the statute make the office void, yet that is only quoad himself, to subject him to a fine for meddling in the office; not quoad strangers, who may not know whether he had taken the oaths or not, to make his judgments void to their prejudice: farther it was said, that he is de facto a Judge, which is sufficient; as if a steward de facto admits a copyholder, the admission is good, though he was not de jure steward. But to this it was replied, that the statute in making the office void makes it void to all purposes touching the jurisdiction, and then this matter is assignable, though contrary to the record. 2 Roll. 761. Of which opinion was the Court now, and reversed the judgment. But afterward Hill. 30 & 31 Car. 2, inter Denning and Jennings, which is entered Pasch. 30 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 391, it was adjudged contra.

By a lease of land and mines, wherein some are open and some not, those open pass only. S. C. 2 Jon. 71. 3 Keb. 709, 723, 761, 765, &c. Vide Plowd. case of Mines.

Trover, upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was, one seised of land wherein were some mines open, and some not open, by indenture demised the lands and mines therein to the defendant, who opened a new coal mine, not open before, and there dug the coals for which the action is brought; and whether in this case by the demise lands and mines he could open new mines, or not? was the question. For the plaintiff it was said, that he could not, and Co. Lit. 54 b. cited: a lease of lands and mines, some open, and some not; those only which are open pass, being sufficient to satisfy the words, and the lessee cannot open new mines: so if a man demise land and timber, the lessee is not impowered to sell timber. 11 Co. Liford's case. By such general words lessees shall not have power to commit waste; where it is intended to invest him with such power, there ought to be express words in the grant to that purpose, as in this case, mines open or not open: for the defendant it was answered and agreed, that Co. Lit. 54 b. is, as was cited; but to warrant his opinion he cites Saunders's case, 5 Co. which does not warrant it; for there it is expressly said, that by a lease of land mines open will pass, not that by a lease of land and mines, mines not open will not pass; and if by a lease of land only mines open pass, and by a lease of land and mines, mines not open do not pass, the word mines will signify nothing in the case; for by a lease of land and mines nothing but the land mines open pass, and so they would by a lease of the lands only: this then is only the opinion of Coke in his comment upon Littleton, not warranted by Saunders's case, nor any other; for all the former books say, that by a lease of land and mines the mines pass, not making any distinction, whether open or not open. But the Court held, that by the words land and mines, there being mines open at the time of the demise, no mines pass but those open, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Simpson and Pemberton for the plaintiff; Levinz for the defendant.

[186] WIFE against CREEKE.

Repair of the parish chapel sufficient to exempt from repair of the parish church. 3 Keb. 727, 791, 809. Ante 102, 163.

A prohibition was prayed this term to stay a suit in the Spiritual Court by the churchwardens of Adderbury in com. Oxon. against the inhabitants of Bodecut, a village within the parish of Adderbury, for repair of the parish church ; suggesting, that they have a chapel parochial and rights parochial, and ratione inde have time out of mind been discharged from repairing the parish-church. The Court granted a prohibition, but ordered the plaintiff to declare thereupon, that the matter might come judicially in debate, whether such custom be good or not? Accordingly the plaintiff declared, that time out of mind they have had in Bodecut a chapel parochial, or church of Bodecut infra parochiam de Adderbury ; in which time out of mind there has been a body of a church, a chancel, campana & omnia alia parochialia trophæa, and divine service and sacraments, and a distinct perambulation for Bodecut, separate from that of Adderbury, and that the inhabitants of Bodecut never go to the church of Adderbury, nor have seats there, and that the inhabitants of Bodecut have distinct church-wardens, and make no other use of the church or church-yard of Adderbury, nisi tantum pro sepultura ; and that time out of mind they have repaired their parochial chapel or church of Bodecut, and the inhabitants of Adderbury have been freed and exempt from this charge, and ratione inde time out of mind they have been freed and discharged from repairing the church of Adderbury, and yet the defendants libel against them to repair the church of Adderbury. Upon this the defendant demurred, and for the plaintiff it was said, that a general prescription without cause to exempt from repair of the parish church is not good, for every parishioner is liable thereto of common right. 2. The cause here ; scil. the repair of their own parochial chapel is not a sufficient cause of discharge ; for it is for their own ease, and therefore cannot discharge them from a duty to which they are liable of common right : but if they had prescribed to be discharged upon paying so much towards the repair of the parish church, or the walls of the church-yard, that might be good, as 2 Rolle, 290. Hob. 166. Thirdly, This custom, if there be such a custom, might have been pleaded [187] in the Spiritual Court, and there tried, being matter ecclesiastical, and triable there by the express words of the Statute de Circumspecte Agatis, scil. de ecclesia discooperta vel cemiterio non clauso non jacet prohibitio : but for the defendant it was answered ; First, 'Tis true a general prescription to be discharged from the repair of the parish church is not good without some reasonable cause, no more than a general prescription of discharge from repair of the highway, quia bonum publicum. But 2. Here is a good cause of discharge for want of seats in the parochial church and not going there nisi ad sepeliend', and this might have a reasonable commencement : for instance, the mother-church might become too small for the people, and the people too numerous for the mother-church by the increase of new buildings and inhabitants in the village ; and it might be agreed, that the inhabitants of the village should build them a chapel, and no longer overthrow the mother-church ; but should repair and find seats, bells, &c. in their own proper chapel : and this hath been allowed a good consideration of being exempt from the repair of the mother-church ; as in 2 Rolle 219, the same case before cited on the other side, and Hob. 67, where it appears the consultation in the case of Chapel-Bromwich was not granted because the custom was void, but because the suggestion was false ; and Hob. himself in the end of the case says, if such a custom had been alledged, a prohibition had lain, and so it was resolved in this Court inter Palfrey & Brown, Pasch. 26 Car. 2, B. R. To the third objection ; it is true, the repair of churches is expressly within the Statute de Circumspecte Agatis ; but when a custom comes in dispute, the custom is temporal, and must be tried in the Temporal Courts, because their law and the common law differ in the very essence of customs. So tithes and a modus decimandi are within the words of the same statute ; scil. decimis, sive consuetis, where decimis consuetis est modus decimandi ; Co. 2 Inst. 490. And for this reason a modus decimandi is suable there ; but yet if the modus be denied, or another modus there pleaded, a prohibition lies ; 2 Roll. 293. Het. 138. 3 Bulst. 241, and of this opinion was the Court ; Mich. 26, when this case was argued upon the prohibition, scil. that a prohibition lay, and advised the defendant's councel to take issue upon the custom ; to which purpose they gave him time to talk with his client. Holt jun. for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

Surviving joint-merchant brings action as survivor; naught. 3 Keb. 737, 798. Ante, 111. Post, 228.

Assumpsit for 100l. for wares sold by the plaintiff, and one Witty whom the plaintiff survived. The defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff and Witty were joint-merchants, and that per legem mercatoriam there is no survivorship inter mercatores, and that Witty made such a one his executor, who administered, and is still alive, not party to the suit. The plaintiff demurred, and upon consideration of Co. Lit. 172, 182. F. N. B. 172 e. it was resolved by the whole Court, that the action should abate.

[189] TERMINO PASCHÆ, ANNO 29 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

NORDEN against LEVIT.

[Disapproved, Farr v. Newman, 1792, 4 T. R. 631.]

Executor having an action of trover in right of the testator compounds it by articles for payment of so much at a future day, this is a conversion and assets in his hands before payment. 3 Keb. 597, 615, 691, 706, &c. Vid. 1 Danv. 241, pl. 20. Vide 6 Mod. 94. Vide ante 40, 110, 133. 1 Lev. 147, 245, 255, &c. ib. 2 Show. 55, 56. 1 Saund. 307. 2 Saund. 403.

Scire facias upon a judgment against the defendant is alledged, that he had wasted the goods and disposed and converted them to his own use; and upon issue non devastavit, vendidit seu in usum proprium convertit, a special verdict was found, that A. was liable to an action of trover to the defendant for goods of the intestate; and that after an action brought the defendant and A. came to an agreement by articles, that the defendant should discharge A. and that A. should pay him such a sum at a future day not yet come, & si &c. And it was argued by Eyre for the plaintiff, that the issue is found for the plaintiff; for the defendant by accepting a new security for payment of the money to himself hath extinguished the old right; as if he had taken an obligation for a debt due by contract, and therefore he hath made himself liable ad valorem, though he hath not received the money; for the new security is quasi a payment to him, Yelv. 10. It was answered by Pollexfen, that this cannot be a devastavit, for here is no hurt done by him; he hath only taken the best means that could be to secure the estate; and this is not like the case of an obligation taken for a sum due by simple contract; for there is a debt certain, but here only damages were to be recovered, according to the discretion of the jury, which are now ascertained by the articles, but are not assets in his hands until the money received. Curia, This is not a [190] devastavit. But by Sir Thomas Jones Justice, This it a disposal and a conversion to his own use, by reason of the new security, whereby he had discharged the antient right to the goods, and so it is quasi a sale of them, and they are assets presently, though by his own act the money is not payable until a future day. Some of the other justices seemed to incline to this, & adjournatur; but afterwards next term all the Judges agreed that it was a disposition, and judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court.

GRANWELL against SIBLY.

Executor sued imparles, and then pleads in bar that he is administrator, and not executor; this is only in abatement, and therefore naught after general imparlance. Lex Testam. 407, 408.

Debt against the defendant as executrix of her husband; the defendant imparled, and then pleads actio non, because her husband died intestate, and administration was committed to her absque hoc that she is executrix, or ever administered as executrix; upon which the plaintiff demurred. And it was said for the plaintiff, that his plea is no more than misnomer, which goes only in abatement, and therefore cannot be pleaded after general imparlance, and it is not like the plea ne unques executor, which wholly estranges the testator; for here she admits herself liable to the action, but in another manner, scil. as administratrix. To which it was answered for the defendant, that though this plea does not go to the right of the action, yet it goes to the action of the writ, as Robison's case, 5 Co. and this will bar the plaintiff ever to charge the defendant as executrix, and so it is more than a plea in abatement, though it be no bar to the right itself, when the plaintiff charges the defendant as administratrix. But per Curiam, this plea is only in abatement, and therefore cannot, as it is in this case, be pleaded after general imparlance; upon which they gave judgment for the plaintiff. Simili casus & simile judicium eodem tempore inter Howly & Sibly. Martin Stanhope Attorney, and Levinz counsel for the plaintiff, Saunders counsel for the defendant.

Devise to a man during his exile. S. C. Show. M. S. 1 Vent. 325. 2 Mod. 223. 1 Jon. 73. 3 Keb. 638, 749.

Ejectment upon non culp. was tried at Bar, and upon a special verdict the case was, Brown being seised of lands devised them to Voscius during his exile. And if it shall please God to restore him to his country, or if he die, then he devised them to the lessor of the plaintiff. Voscius was a Dutchman and had a pension from the States, but upon some displeasure the States deprived him of his employment and of his pension, and gave them to another, whereupon he voluntarily left the country, and came and lived here with Brown, who had been his acquaintance beyond sea. After his coming hither a war happened between the Dutch and the English, and afterwards a peace was concluded between the two nations, yet Voscius still continued here. And whether the estate of Voscius be determined, or continues? was the question. Argued this term and Trin. prox. by Holt jun. and Maynard King's Serjeant for the defendant; and by Jones Attorney General and Pemberton King's Serjeant for the plaintiff. And for the plaintiff it was said, 1. That exile is either by restraint, as when the States of the country forbid or make it penal for the party to return, which is not in this case: or 2. Voluntary, where the party leaves his country upon disgust, but may return again at his pleasure. Now this second cannot be the exile Brown meant, because of these words, if it shall please God Voscius be restored; and therefore the exile Brown intended was not such as depended upon the pleasure of Voscius; but he meant, that when he could return to his country with safety, which could not be done (during the war) his estate should determine; and though the war was not the cause why he left his country, yet it was the cause why he could not return; and now when he may return, and does not return, equum est as if he had returned; so is the 15 H. 7, 1. Annuity granted until he be promoted, offer of promotion and refusal shall determine the annuity. On the other side, those for the defendant agreed the distinction of exile voluntary, or coercive; Calvin's Dictionary, verbo exilium. Plutarch in the Life of Marius [192] says, that he went into voluntary exile. One who abandons his country upon its displeasure at him is in exile: here Voscius's pension and office were taken from him by the States, and given to another; and in our law it is exile in hominibus to impoverish the tenants; here Voscius is impoverished by taking away his pension. 2. The war does not concern him: he came here before the war, and he might have returned before the war. 3. If there be no exile in the case, then is the estate of Voscius an absolute estate for life, for the exile is not a condition precedent, but subsequent; which was denied by Jones Attorney General, for the estate is devised to him during his exile, and if he be not in exile omnino, he hath no estate omnino; for this is not like the case of a feoffment and condition subsequent; there the estate passes before, here it is by a devise during his exile, so that exile is in the devise itself, and if no exile no devise. Twysden Justice, If a voluntary exile will serve the turn, then hath Voscius an estate for life if he pleases, which does not seem to be the devisor's intent. Jones Justice, These words, if it please God to restore him, seem to signify and refer to something else than only the will of Voscius. Rainsford Chief Justice, Brown takes notice of the difference and of the war between the Dutch and English, and of the displeasure of the States to Voscius, and their taking away his pension; and these seem to be the exile intended by him: adjournatur; and after Hill. 29, 30, judgment was briefly delivered by Rainsford in the name of the whole Court for the defendant. He said they were all agreed, that the exile intended by Brown was the leaving of his country because of the States displeasure to him; and the withdrawing of his pension upon that displeasure; nothing of which is altered since the making of the will, and therefore the estate devised does continue.

Case for some words, cumq; etiam other words, is good; otherwise in trespass. 1st Count lays the words in auditu quamplurimorum; the last does not, yet good. 2 Jo. 197. 2 Sho. Case 17, 413 & 294. 1 Com. Dig. 193, 195. Ld. Raym. 959. Cowp. 276. 1 Lev. 338.

Case for words, and declares; that whereas the plaintiff was of good fame, the defendant in præsentia quamplurimorum spoke such and such words (which were actionable) cumque etiam the defendant postea tali die ex ulteriori malitia spoke other words (which were also actionable). After verdict for the plaintiff and entire damages, it was twice moved in arrest of judgment by Pemberton and Tremail, and two exceptions taken; 1. That the last count is not affirmative that he spoke the words, but under a cumque etiam, which in trespass hath been several times ruled naught; and then the damages being intire, the plaintiff cannot have judgment for any part. Sed non allocat'. This is well enough in an action upon the case as this is, though in trespass it has been ruled ill. Nota, similis casus & simile judicium inter Cotterell & Matthew; Mich. 4 W. & M. in Com. Ban. sed intrat. Trin. 4, Rot. 837. 2. The last words are not said to be spoken in præsentia & auditu quamplurimorum. Sed non allocatur; the first audita quamplurimorum goes to all. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

MERCHANT against WHITEPANE.

Prescription for a seat belonging to his messuage, without saying time out of mind they had the seat. 3 Keb. 754. Ante 148. 1 Vent. 274.

Case; for that he is seised in fee of a messuage, and he, and all those whose estate he hath in the messuage, have had a seat in the church, and toties quoties necesse fuit have repaired it, and the defendant disturbed him of his seat. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. it was moved in arrest of judgment by Saunders, that the plaintiff hath not prescribed by a time out of mind, &c. Curia. It is said that he was seised in fee, and that he, and all those whose estate he hath, have had this seat, and the fee hath been time out of mind, &c. by consequence therefore he, and all those whose estate he hath, have time out of mind had this seat. But especially it is good in this action, which is founded [194] upon his possession and the disturbance thereunto done, according to St. John and Mowdy's case lately resolved in this Court.

GREGORY against MAIOR.

In covenant concerning the possession, eviction may be pleaded without shewing title. 3 Keb. 744, 755.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff promised to pay the defendant so much yearly for five years for such a thing, the defendant assumed to save him harmless in the possession of it; and that such a one had evicted him, and the defendant had not saved him harmless. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non assumpsit, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it is not shewn that he was evicted by title, and all covenants of this nature extend only against legal title and eviction. Curia, This agreement is only quoad the possession, not quoad title; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

JEPSON against JACKSON.

Trespass against baron and feme. Baron pleads a licence to enter with his wife and servants. Plaintiff replies, non dedit licentiam to the baron and feme, naught. 3 Keb. 755, 761.

Trespass against baron and feme for entering his house, and continuing possession for three years; the defendant pleaded non culp. quoad two years; and quoad the third, a licence to the husband to enter with his wife and servants, and inhabit there; and the issue was, non dedit licentiam to the baron and feme modo & forma prout, &c. and both issues found for the plaintiff, and entire damages; and this being in Com. Banc. a writ of error was brought, and it was assigned for error, that the second issue is impertinent and void; for when the defendant pleads a licence to him to enter with his wife, &c. the replication quod non dedit licentiam to the husband and wife is foreign, and does not meet the plea; for he may give licence to the husband to enter with his wife, and in such case the licence is given to the husband only, and not to the husband and wife; and this is a material difference, for the licence amounts to a lease, and if it be made to the husband and wife, she, as survivor, shall have it; but if it be made to the husband only, the wife shall not have it, as survivor; and so, upon two several debates twice this term, held the Court, and reversed the judgment. Levinz for the plaintiff, Holt jun. for the defendant in error.

Plaintiff took one of the defendants in execution; whether the bail be discharged as to the rest. S. C. 1 Vent. 315. 1 Sid. 107. 2 Jon. 75. 2 Mod. 312. 3 Keb. 709, 723, 761, 765, &c.

Scire facias against the defendant as bail for A. B. C. and D. The defendant pleaded that before the return of the second scire facias the plaintiff took A. in execution upon a capias, and still detains him. The plaintiff demurred, and Saunders and Levinz argued that the plaintiff having taken one of the principals in execution had thereby disabled the bail to render him, and therefore discharged him quoad all the rest: Curia cont', The bail having undertaken to bring in all the four principals, and therefore though the plaintiff hath taken one, this does not discharge the bail as to the other three; for they ought, as they took upon them, to bring in all the four; and gave rule for judgment for the plaintiff, nisi, &c. by such a day; when Jones Attorney General came and pressed to be farther heard in the case; for he said, that the plaintiff by taking one of the principals had determined his election to have the principals in execution, and thereby had discharged the bail; and cited 1 Roll. 897, let. G.

WADE against HATCHER.

Trespass for taking a parcel of yarn.

Trespass for entering his house, and taking divers goods, and inter alia unam parcellam pensarum laniarum, Anglice, a quantity of woollen yarn. After verdict for the plaintiff and entire damages, judgment was staid ex motione Levinz, for the incertainty de una parcella, and what quantity is meant by it.

[196] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 29 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

VIRTUE against BIRDE.

Case for not appointing a place to unload his cart whereby his horses took cold. S. C. 1 Ven. 310. 3 Keb. 766. 2 Cro. 386. 1 Roll. Ab. 101. Yelv. 20. 1 Sid. 146. Carth. 90. Salk. 102. 3 Term Rep. 31.

Case that whereas the defendant had hired him to carry a load of timber from Woodbridge to Ipswich to be laid there at any place the defendant should appoint, and that he gave notice to the defendant that he would carry it such a day, and requested the defendant at Woodbridge to appoint where it should be laid, and that accordingly he carried it to Ipswich, and the defendant appointed no place where it should be laid, but made the horses of the plaintiff being hot stay so long in the cart, that they took cold, whereby some of them died, and the rest were spoiled; and after verdict for the plaintiff, upon non culp. judgment was staid, because the action lies not; for, first, he might have taken his horses out of his cart, and have walked them up and down, or put them into the stable. 2. As soon as he came there, and found no place appointed by the defendant, he might have unladen the timber in any convenient place, and returned; and therefore the injury which the horses received is owing to himself, and through his own default.

[197] HARKER against MORELAND.

Upon oyer of administration craved after imparlance, the defendant pleads in abatement, that it is tested since the action brought, and the action abated per Curiam ex officio. 3 Keb. 768. Ante 190. 3 Lev. 55. 6 Mod. 80, &c. 1 Stra. 22. 2 Stra. 806. 1 Wils. 180. Cowp. 454, 671. Doug. 62.

Scire facias tested 12th Feb. the last day of Hillary term, was brought by the plaintiff as administrator against the defendant as tertenant, who imparled generally, and after craved oyer of the letters of administration, which were dated the 26th of March following in the vacation between Hillary and Easter term: whereupon the defendant pleaded this in abatement. The plaintiff demurred, because he cannot plead in abatement after general imparlance; but per Curiam, it appearing now upon record, that the plaintiff hath brought his action, the Court ought ex officio to abate the writ; and so they did: and yet the party could not have a scire facias tested after 12 Febr. in this Court, until term Pasch. and it might in rei veritate have been sued during the vacation, after the grant of administration. Aliter, where the suit is by obligation out of the Chancery, for there the Court is always open; tamen quære of this judgment; for it does not appear rightfully upon record when the administration bears date, it being upon an oyer after general imparlance; quære tamen, for an oyer may be after imparlance.

GAMLY against BECHINOR.

Assumpsit on consideration that he should not sue quidam . . . Allison. 3 Keb. 769.

Assumpsit; whereas quidam . . . Allison was indebted to the plaintiff, who intended to sue the said . . . Allison, the defendant, in consideration the plaintiff would forbear the said . . . Allison, promised him to pay the debt. After judgment upon verdict for the plaintiff in C. B. in non assumpsit, error was brought in B. R. and it was assigned that it does not appear what Allison was intended in the case; for it is quidam Allison without Christian name, and so it may be any Allison in the world; and Rainsford Chief Justice, and Twysden held this an error. But Wylde and Jones contra; be it what Allison it will, the defendant hath promised, and that is so [198] found, and this judgment may be pleaded in bar to any other action brought in consideration of forbearance of any Allison without Christian name, with an averment that he is the same person; and rather than reverse it for this cause, they would intend quidam was his Christian name. Quare adjournat'.

TRIPPS against RAND.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff at the defendant's request would procure himself to be made a knight, and saith that he procured himself to be made a knight, but does not say at the defendant's request. 3 Keb. 769, 800.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff at the defendant's request would procure himself to be made a knight at his own proper charges, so that his wife, the defendant's daughter, might be a lady, to pay him 2000l. and says, that he procured himself to be knighted at his own charges, whereby his wife became a lady; yet the defendant had not paid him. After verdict and judgment upon non assumpsit in Com. Banc. it was now assigned for error in B. R. that it is not said the plaintiff procured himself to be knighted at the request of the defendant: it might be he did it of his own head, and the request here is part of the consideration, executory and traversable, and by omitting it the plaintiff hath lost his traverse of the request; and upon non assumpsit he was not obliged here to prove a request upon evidence, as are the cases in Hob. 88, 106, and for authority in point, 2 Leon. 53. 3 Leon. 91. Curia contra, The request shall be intended here to be made at the time of the promise; scil. that he then requested him to be made a knight, and promised to give him 2000l. and it shall not be intended that he promised to give him the 2000l. if he would procure himself to be made a knight when he should afterwards request him, and so the request is not executory, but executed at the time of the promise made: and they gave rule to affirm the judgment; but at the earnest motion of Jones Attorney-General, to be farther heard for the plaintiff in error, it was adjourned until next term, when the judgment was affirmed by the whole Court. Vide 1 Cro. Poynter v. Poynter, accordingly.

Archbishop, as guardian of the spiritualties sede vacante Glocestriense, institutes and sends his mandate to the archdeacon to induct, but induction is not made till after bishop consecrated; it is void. S. C. 1 Vent. 309, 319. 2 Jon. 78. 3 Keb. 747, 773, 821.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and a special verdict the case was; The Bishoprick of Glocester being void, and the Archbishop of Canterbury gardianus spiritualium, a church became void, and the patron presented to the archbishop, who admitted and instituted the presentee, and granted a mandate to the archdeacon for his induction, who according to usage appointed certain ministers to do it, who for three or four months neglecting to induct him, a new Bishop of Glocester was made and consecrated in the mean time: afterward the induction was made by the ministers, and whether this were a good induction or not? was the question; which this term and the next was argued by Weston and Holt jun. for the plaintiff, and by Saunders for the defendant: for the plaintiff it was urged, that the suffragan authority is derived out of the authority of the metropolitan, Hob. 185. 11 H. 7, 9, and therefore the acts of the metropolitan concerning any thing which belongs to the diocesan are not void, but voidable. 2. He that hath a power of instituting hath also the power of inducting, Lyndew. 141, (the new edition). In this case the institution is by the archbishop, and therefore so ought the induction; for authority well commenced shall be perfected by the same person; 2 Cro. 73, 83. 1 Cro. Smith vers. Executors of Pandrell. And the institution here is the judicial act, the induction no more than a ministerial act, thereupon. 3dly, Induction belongs to the archdeacon jure officii, and the mandate from the archbishop for induction is not authoritative, but only directive to certify what person he hath instituted, and when the induction is done, it is by virtue of a power inherent in the office of archdeacon, and not by the mandate from the bishop: 11 H. 4, 9 b. Plowd. Com. 529. Hob. 15. Afterwards towards the end of Mich. term judgment was given by the whole Court that the induction was void, for though it belongs to the office of archdeacon to induct, yet he does it only by mandate and authority from the bishop; and they said the case is no more in effect than if a man makes a letter of attorney to make livery, and dies, and the attorney makes livery after his death.

Custom of London to commit for not accepting the livery. S. C. 1 Vent. 327 2 Danv. 422. 3 Keb. 714, 764, 784, 799, 811. Vid. Sty. 78. Mar. 179. 1 Stra. 560. 5 Com. Dig. 197. 1 Ba. Abr. 681.

Upon a certiorari was returned a custom for the Company of Merchant-Taylors to choose livery-men, and for refusing to accept of the office to commit the refusers; and that Smartford was elected, and without reasonable cause refused, for which he was committed; to which return these exceptions were taken by Holt jun. 1. This custom to commit is not good, for it does not concern the government of the city, but only the state of the company. 2. It does not appear that he was habilis & idoneus, and therefore not eligible, 2 Leon. 29. March 103. Sed non allocatur; for first, all their customs are confirmed by statute. 2. A refusal without reasonable cause implies him habilis & idoneus.

THE KING against THE CITY OF LONDON.

Custom of London to disfranchise freemen upon information before the mayor and aldermen for speaking disgraceful words of an alderman. S. C. 1 Vent. 302, 327. 2 Show. 3 Keb. 764, 109, 811. 3 Keb. 714. 2 Salk. 426.

Upon a habeas corpus and certiorari they returned the custom of London, that if any freeman of the city speak disgraceful words of an alderman, that for such speaking the common serjeant hath usually exhibited an information before the mayor and aldermen, wherein if the offender be convicted by verdict or confession, the use is to punish him by fine or disfranchisement, and that Clark spoke scandalous words of Alderman Lawrence, as he was surveying the measures of coals; scil. that he would undo the city, and that he was a knave, &c. for which the common serjeant exhibited an information, whereupon he was taken and imprisoned. To which return these exceptions were taken; 1. This custom to try a man for words spoken of an alderman in the Court of Aldermen is unreasonable; it is to make them Judges and parties. 2. It does not appear by the return that Clark was a freeman. In the information indeed, which is returned in hæc verba, he is said to be a freeman, but that is not sufficient; the return itself must set forth in fact, that he was a freeman; for upon this return, as it is here, he cannot have an action upon the case for the [201] falsity of the return, if he be not a freeman. 3dly, This custom to disfranchise for words is void, 11 Co. Bagg's case. To which it was answered, that their customs being confirmed by the statute of R. 2. as it appears by the record, the custom thereby is made good; and for that omission in the return, in not saying he was a freeman, they said they had a multitude of precedents after that form, and proceedings upon them; which the Court desired to see, but none were produced, and the parties agreed in the mean time; upon which the Court was afterwards moved by the city counsel for a procedendo, but the Court would not grant it without farther argument, saying it might be dangerous to put it in the power of the aldermen to disfranchise a freeman for speaking words of an alderman; and though the words were here spoken to him in the exercise of his office of alderman and justice of peace, yet they said it would be more reasonable to punish him by fine and imprisonment, which might be by information in this Court, but this Court cannot disfranchise him.

Trover for 100 negroes, and upon non culp. it was found by special verdict, that the negroes were infidels, and the subjects of an infidel prince, and are usually bought and sold in America as merchandise, by the custom of merchants, and that the plaintiff bought these, and was in possession of them until the defendant took them. And Thompson argued, there could be no property in the person of a man sufficient to maintain trover, and cited Co. Lit. 116. That no property could be in villains but by compact or conquest. But the Court held, that negroes being usually bought and sold among merchants, as merchandise, and also being infidels, there might be a property in them sufficient to maintain trover, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, nisi causa, this term; and at the end of the term, upon the prayer of the Attorney-General to be heard as to this matter, day was given until next term.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was; One having three sons, A. the first, B. the second, C. the third, devised a part to each without any limitation of estate, and if any of them die, that his part shall remain to the rest. John died, and whether his part should remain? was the question: and it was argued by Saunders, that it should not remain, but the remainders are contingent, and the descent of the fee upon John destroyed the particular estate devised to him, and consequently the remainder to the others. Pollexfen answered, that it might be good by way of executory devise, according to the opinion of Fleming in Wood and Ingersole's case, 2 Cro. 260, contrary to the judgment of that case; & adjournatur till Pasch. 30, postea, when, ut audivi, the Court adjudged it to be a good executory devise to the younger sons, according to the opinion of Fleming, and contrary to the judgment of Wood and Ingersole's case.

Payment to a gaoler, or to the sheriff upon a ca. sa. is no plea in debt upon a judgment, but payment to the sheriff upon a fi. fa. is. S. Debt upon a judgment: the defendant pleads, that he was taken upon a capias, and committed to the marshal of this Court, and that he had paid the money to him in satisfaction of the judgment; upon demurrer adjudged no plea, for the marshal is not to receive the debt, but only to detain the defendant in prison until he hath paid it to the plaintiff. But payment to the sheriff upon a fieri facias is a good plea, for he hath thereby an authority to levy the debt; but payment to the sheriff upon a capias ad satisfaciend' is perhaps no plea for the reason aforesaid.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE against BLITHE.

Upon removal from an Inferior Court an heir shall not be held to bail, as he was below. S. C. 2 Jon. 82. 3 Keb. 803.

Debt in London against the defendant, as heir, being removed hither, the question was, if the heir should find bail here, as he did in the Inferior Court of London, where they compel all defendants, heirs or executors, to find bail? And there are precedents wherein executors, being held to bail there, were here also upon removal forced to find bail: but no precedent being shewed of bail found by an heir in such case, the Court denied to hold the defendant to special bail in this case: and it was said, that Kelynge and Hale had denied it upon removals in the case of executors.

Debt upon the 5 Eliz. ought to be laid in the proper county. S. C. 3 Keb. 804. 1 Lev. 249, 250.

Debt was brought in B. To which it was answered, that in Hughes and Barnes's case it was resolved, that debt lay in this Court: but it was replied, that after that case inter Nicholls and Cochinell, in the time of [205] Hale Chief Justice, it was adjudged that the action ought to be brought in the proper county, upon which the Court ordered the case to be put in the paper.

Trespass tried by Nisi Prius in Northumberland: the jury not agreeing cast lots for their verdict, and gave it according to lot; for which, upon the motion of Levinz, the verdict was set aside; and ordered the jury to attend here next term to be fined.

He would have A. rob the house of B. and he (innuendo A.) did rob him; actionable. S. C. 2 Jon. 84. 1 Vent. 323. 3 Keb. 805, 812, 841. 1 Com. Dig. 176. 4 Bac. Abr. 508. 1 Str. 194. Hob. 140.

Case for these words; Richard Froude went to Dean's house, and would have had him to rob Bolton's house, and he (præd. Richard Froude innuendo, did rob him). After verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. judgment was staid, because it does not appear but by the innuendo who it was that robbed Bolton's house, and the innuendo does not sufficiently shew it; for it is but the plaintiff's inference, or construction upon the words that the words were spoken of him. But afterwards upon argument by Maynard for the plaintiff, citing 3 Cro. 291, 308, 349, 618, 710, 747, 787. Mo. 63, 409, 410, that the first words are actionable of themselves, and the others for aggravation: and by Pollexfen for the defendant, citing 2 Bul. 206. 3 Cro. 167. Co. 4, 15 b. 18 b. Lane 98. Yelv. 90, contra, judgment was given by the whole Court, scil. Rainsford, Twysden, and Jones for the plaintiff, that the first words of themselves were actionable, and made worse by the second, whether the robbery be intended done by the plaintiff himself, or by any other at his procurement.

Error of a judgment in battery in Chester, assigned by Levinz, that the declaration is by way of recital, quod cum he was beaten, &c. upon which the judgment was reversed, nisi, &c. when Saunders came and prayed a new certiorari, for the record is right there, but badly certified. HARPER against BURGH.

Lessor grants his reversion, and after assignment releases covenants to the lessee, but before breach. S. C. 2 Jon. 102.

Covenant, and declares, that lessee for forty years demised to the defendant for twenty years, rendering 16l. per annum rent: and that the defendant covenanted to pay it, and that afterwards he in reversion upon the new lease for 40 years assigned his term to the plaintiff; to which the defendant attourned, and assigns for breach non-payment [207] of 16l. for a year's rent due at Lady-Day, 29 Car. 2. The defendant pleaded, that before the rent became due, the lessor released all covenants to him; upon which the plaintiff demurred; and now by Rainsford and Jones, they two being only in Court, this release of the lessor to the lessee is a good bar of this action, being before breach though after the assignment, according to Middlemore and Goodale's case, 1 Cro. Sed postea term Pasch. being moved again, and the Court full, judgment was given for the plaintiff, for they would intend the action to be grounded upon the reddendum, which is a covenant in law, which ran with the reversion at common law, before the statute of H. 8, and passed by the grant of the reversion, so that the lessor could not release it after his assignment; and Middlemore's case is upon a collateral covenant.

PHILIP BICKERSTAFFE AND WIFE against PERCY.

Debt upon judgment, and declared, that Clarke recovered 90l. and made the plaintiff Anne executrix, and died, and that she took for husband quendam Philippum Bickerstaffe. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiffs were never married; the plaintiff demurred; upon which the declaration was adjudged ill, or quendam Philippum Bickerstaffe shall not be intended the now plaintiff Philip, according to Dy. 70 b.

SMARTLE against SCHOLAR.

Ejectment, and in a special verdict upon non culp. the case was: one seised in fee devised to a stranger and his heirs after the death of the devisor and his wife; the devisor died, and whether the stranger should take presently, or not until after the death of the wife? And whether she should have it for her life by implication?

was the question: and Tremaine argued, that the stranger shall have it presently, and the wife nothing: otherwise, he said, if the devise had been to the heir after the [208] death of the wife, for then there is no one else to take in the mean time, Mo. Pasch. 7, 123. 2 Cra. 75, Horton v. Horton. Conqia Courtney v. Pet. Bro. 107. A devise to a stranger after the death of the wife is an estate for life to the wife by implication. But then, ut videtur, the stranger is not to have the estate until after the death of the wife, as well as the husband; and the heir takes it in the mean time; & adjournatur. But afterwards it was so adjudged.

Indictment, quod scienter recepit divers robbers, and does not say felonice, nor sciens them to be robbers. 3 Keb. 674, 375, 760, 782, 817. Vide 6 Mod. 311. 3 Inst. 213. Hob. 138. 2 Hawk. P. C. 323.

Error of a judgment on an indictment, which was, that the defendant did scienter receive and harbour divers robbers, to the jury unknown, who had stolen several goods, and committed divers burglaries. The 1st exception was, that this is too general, no more in effect than communis receptor felonum and cited Co. 3 Inst. 12, 13. Indictment for using diversas diabolicas artes; and Rolle Indictment 79. Communis oppressor vicinorum, naught; but communis barrectator is good; for it is a term well known. 2. Scienter recepit is not good, but it ought to be that he knowing them to be robbers received them; for he might know the men, and not know them to be robbers, 1 Cro. Bolton v. Banks, & ib. Kirmion v. Wells. 3. It ought to be felonice recepit; for the receipt and harbour of robbers, knowing them, is felony. Sed non allocatur; for per Curiam, 1. Perhaps the felons, no more than the felonies and burglaries, could not be known particularly; and a house that harbours felons is a common nusance as a common bawdy-house is; and to the second, Jones said, that scienter had been lately ruled good in one Sally's case: and to the 3d; the King, if he please, may pass by the felony, and make the indictment for trespass; whereupon the judgment was affirmed.

Debt upon an obligation against the defendant as executor; and declares upon a devastavit. Defendant pleads several judgments and nul assets ultra 5*l*. liable to the judgments, which is not sufficient to satisfy them. The plaintiff demurred, and upon argument judgment for the defendant; for an action upon an obligation counting of a devastavit against an executor will not lie; aliter, in an action upon a judgment; for there the plaintiff may count of a devastavit. One devised goods to A. and B. the executor assented to the legacy, and afterward A. died; and now the executor of A. sued in the Spiritual Court for A.'s share, there being no survivorship in such case by the laws ecclesiastical; whereupon B. sued a prohibition, and declared, and upon demurrer and argument it was adjudged the prohibition should stand; for by the assent of the executor the interest was vested in the legatees, and became a chattel in them governable by the rules of the common law.

BEVERSHAM against OSBORNE.

Debt for rent, pleads, paratus fuit solvere without obtulit. S. C. 1 Vent. 322. 3 Keb. 800, 810, 828.

Debt for rent. The defendant pleaded actio non, &c. quia dicit, &c. when it became due, paratus fuit, & adhuc paratus existit solvere, & profert hic in Cur' the money. The plaintiff demurred, and the plea was adjudged ill; 1. Because he does not plead an obtulit. 2. The plea is not to the action, but only in excuse of damages.

Release of all demands does not release the rent due upon a lease. 1 Vent. 314. 2 Mod. 281. 3 Keb. 785, 829.

Replevin; defendant made conusance for rent and Heriot, as bailiff to J. S. The defendant pleads in bar as to the rent a release of all demands; and as to the heriot, that A. and B. as bailiffs to the said J. S. auter fois made conusance in Com. Banc. and pleads the record at large, prout patet, &c. The defendant demurred, and Pollexfen argued, that the bar was naught as to both points; for 1. The rent is incident to the reversion in this case, and is not barred by release of all demands, for the release does not bar the reversion, 2 Cro. Hancock and Field's case; and Fenn and Hanson's case in this Court, Pasch. 15 Car. 2. But such a release will bar a rent-service in fee according to Litt. to which the Court inclined. 2. This is not good as to the heriot, because it is not said, that the conusance in the Common Pleas was made by the assent of J. S. for it might be by a stranger without his privity. Also there wants an averment of a life, as it appears by the record here set forth; and then the judgment there being founded upon the manner of the plea, and not upon the matter, it is no bar here, where the continuance of the life is averred; to which the Court inclined likewise. But it was adjourned.

DUTTON AND WIFE against POOLE.

[Questioned, Tweddle v. Atkinson, 1861, 1 B. & S. 399.]

Son promised his father to pay 1000l. to his sister: the sister may bring the action. S. C. 1 Vent. 317, 318, 332. 2 Jon. 102. Ray. 302. 3 Lev. 139. 3 Keb. 786, 814, &c. 4 Burr. 2237. Cowp. 294, 365.

Assumpsit, and declares, that the father of the plaintiff's wife being seised of a wood which he intended to sell to raise portions for younger children, the defendant being his heir, in consideration the father would forbear to sell it at his request, promised the father to pay his daughter, now the plaintiff's wife, 1000l. and avers, that the father at his request forbore, but the defendant had not paid the 1000l. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non assumpsit, it was moved in [211] arrest of judgment, that the action ought not to be brought by the daughter, but by the father; or if the father be dead, by his executors; for the promise was made to the father, and the daughter is neither privy nor interested in the consideration, nothing being due to her: also the father, notwithstanding this agreement with the son, might have cut down the wood, and then there was no remedy for the son, nor could the daughter have released the promise, and therefore she cannot have an action against him for not performing the promise, and divers cases were cited for the defendant, as Yelv. Rippon v. Norton, Hawes v. Leader, Starky v. Milner, 1 Roll. 31, 32, Sty. 296, and a case lately resolved in Com. Banc. inter Norris & Pine, intrat. Hill. 22 & 23 Car. 2, 1538, where the case was; If you will marry me, I will pay your children so much; and the action being brought by the children, adjudged it lay not. On the other side it was said, if a man deliver goods or money to H. to deliver or pay to B. B. may have an action, because he is to have the benefit of the bailment; so here the daughter is to have the benefit of the promise: so if a man should say, Give me a horse, I will give your son 10l. the son may bring the action, because the gift was upon consideration of a profit to the son; and the father is obliged by natural affection to provide for his children; for which cause affection to children is sufficient to raise a use to them out of the father's estate; and therefore the daughter had an interest in the consideration, and in the promise; and the son had a benefit by this agreement, for by this means he hath the wood, and the daughter is without a portion, which otherwise in all probability the son would have been left to pay, if the wood had not been cut down, nor this agreement between him and his father, and for authorities of this side were cited, Roll. 1 Ab. 31, Oldman v. Bateman, and ibid. 32, Starky v. Meade. Upon the first argument Wylde and Jones Justices seemed to think, that the action ought to be brought by the father and his executors, though for the benefit of the daughter, and not by the daughter, being not privy to the promise, nor consideration. Twysden and Rainsford seemed contra; and afterwards two new Judges being made, scil. Scroggs Chief Justice in lieu of Rainsford, and Dolbin in lieu of Twysden, the case was argued again upon the reasons aforesaid; and now Scroggs Ch. Just. said, that there was such apparent consideration of affection from the father to his children, for whom nature obliges him to provide, [212] that the consideration and promise to the father may well extend to the children: and he and Jones remembered the case of Norris & Pine; and that it was adjudged as aforesaid. But Scroggs said, he was then and still is of opinion contrary to that judgment. Dolben, Justice, concurred with him that the daughter might bring the action; Jones and Wylde hæsitabant. But next day they also agreed to the opinion of the Chief Justice and Dolben; and so judgment was given for the plaintiff, for the son hath the benefit by having of the wood, and the daughter hath lost her portion by this means. And now Jones said, he must confess he was never well satisfied with the judgment in Norris & Pine's case; but being it was resolved, he was loth to give his opinion so suddenly against it. And nota, upon this judgment error was immediately brought; and Trin. 31 Car. 2, it was affirmed in the Exchequer-Chamber.

Bail cannot plead lessor sum paid by the principal to the plaintiff in satisfaction of the judgment. Vide 2 Jon. 75, 188. 1 Mod. 24. 1 Bac. Abr. 218. 2 Term Rep. 576.

Scire facias upon a judgment had against the principal for 35l. 6s. 8d. Defendant being bail pleaded, that the principal after the judgment paid the plaintiff 34l. in satisfaction of the debt due upon the judgment, which he accepted. The plaintiff demurred, and had judgment; for though the bail may plead payment to the plaintiff by reason of the condition of his recognizance, which is to pay the condemnation or to render the body, which the defendant himself cannot plead; yet the bail cannot plead payment of a less sum in satisfaction of a greater after the money was become due. Pennel's case 5 Co. and here the money was due immediately by the judgment.

[213] WALKER against HALL. IN THE EXCHEQUER.

Feoffment with letter of attorney but no livery nor name of attorney in the deed, shall operate as a covenant to stand seised. Vid. N. Lut. 243. Post, 225. 2 Jon. 105, 106. 3 Lev. 370.

Ejectment of lands in Durham by quo minus was sent and tried at Durham, and upon a special verdict the case was, Maddison being seised in consideration of marriage, gave, granted and confirmed to Margaret, his intended wife, habend' to her, her heirs and assigns, with a letter of attorney in the deed, but a blank for the attorney's name. And the deed was indorsed, memorandum, that livery and seisin was made per Attorney, leaving a blank for his name; but no witnesses of the livery indorsed, but to the sealing and delivery of the deed names of witnesses were indorsed. And whether this should inure as a covenant to stand seised to the use of the wife? was the question. Argued by Shaftoe, serjeant for the plaintiff, and by Levinz for the defendant; and for the plaintiff were cited Sanders and Savil's case, Com. Banc. Hill. 1655, Rot. 1578. Adjudged, that the grant of a rent and attornment by one who in fact was not tenant, and so no attornment, should inure as a covenant to stand seised: and in Crossing and Scudamore's case, lately in B. R. there was a blank letter of attorney. To which it was answered for the defendant, that Crossing and Scudamore was a bargain and sale to the son, and no money paid, and that deed inrolled, which it was held, might operate as a covenant rather than the conveyance should be void. But there the intent of the party was only to pass a use, and since a use could not pass by bargain and sale for want of consideration, it passed as a use in another manner as it could. But when the parties intent is to pass an estate as at common law, and not by way of use, as it apparently was in this case by the letter of attorney, and the indorsement; though the deed be void as to this purpose, it shall not operate by way of use. Co. Lit. 49 a. 2 Roll. 787, pl. 1, 5. Tibb & Poplethwait's case, where the same point was adjudged that was afterwards in Crossing and Scudamore's case. If a letter of attorney had been in the deed, it could not have passed by way of use, for the alteration of the warranty. Here the blank letter of attorney is sufficient to shew the parties intent was to pass the estate as by conveyance at common law, and not by way of use. And Pitfield and Prince's case, 2 Rol. 789, nu. 2, father grants [214] to the son without letter of attorney; yet that shall not amount to a covenant to stand seised. And Foster & Foster's case, nuper in B. R. where the mother by articles doth grant and demise to the son in the present tense; yet that shall not operate as a covenant to stand seised, & adjournatur. But afterwards, as I heard, judgment was given by all the Barons, that this should operate as a covenant to stand seised: I did not hear their arguments, but I was informed they principally relied upon the case of Crossing and Scudamore.

Runnagate rogue, and if he had his deserts he would be hanged, said of one who used the trade of buying and selling, not actionable. Vide post. 233.

Case, that whereas the plaintiff for 7 years last past, artem vendendi barganizandi & emendi legitime usus fuit, and thereby had gained great profit for the support of himself and his family, the defendant injuriose falso & malitiose said of him, He is a runnagate rogue, and worse than a rogue, and if he had his deserts he had been hanged, whereby he lost his custom, but does not alledge any special damage. After verdict for the plaintiff, and divers books cited pro & cont. Judgment was staid, and the words adjudged not actionable; for per Cur', runnagate is not of the same sense with bankrupt; and the plaintiff does not shew what was the trade he used, it might be a tinker or a pedlar, who travel up and down the country, and are rogues by the stat. of El. And what follows, and deservest to be hanged, are not actionable. Sed quære by reason of the words, deservest to be hanged.

General release reciting the particular purposes and for what it was made. S. C. 2 Show. pl. 32. 5 Keb. 814, 840. Ante, 210. 3 Lev. 273, 274. 1 Lev. 99, 110, 272. 1 Sid. 141. 2 Show. 90. 1 Mod. 99. 1 Vent. 314. 3 Mod. 281.

Covenant against the defendant, as executor of Sir Samuel Starling, upon an indenture made between the plaintiff of the one part, and Sir Samuel Starling, and Mary his wife, on the other part, reciting, whereas Richard Garford, father of Mary, had devised to the plaintiff divers lands and goods in trust for the said Mary, and that her husband [215] should not intermedle with them, and that suits and differences having been touching the estate so devised, it was agreed, that Sir Samuel Starling, the husband, should have 2000l. out of the estate, and that he should release all his title to the residue, and covenant that he would not, plus sectare turbare vel molestare

the plaintiff, pro vel concernen' stat. præd' Garford vel receptione vel retentione inde; and assigns for breach, that Sir Samuel afterwards sued the plaintiff by English bill in the Exchequer to have an account of the estate of Garford, and thereby put him to the charge of 300l. The defendant pleads, that by indenture after the death of Sir Samuel made between the Lord Grandison, the husband and of the said Mary, and the plaintiff, of the one part, and the defendant of the other part, the Lord Grandison, and the said Mary, and the plaintiff, release to the defendant totu' eorum jus titulum clameum & demand' to the brew-house, of Sir Samuel, and to all the brewing vessels, and all claim and demand to the brewing vessels, and all their claim and demand to the personal estate of Sir Samuel, virtute consuetudinit Civitatis London vel aliter quocunque modo. Upon which the plaintiff demurred; and now it was argued for the plaintiff, that this release cannot bar the plaintiff, 1. Because the release was made for a particular purpose, scil. to release the wife's customary part, and the general words, vel aliter quocunque modo, do not extend to foreign matter; scil. damage to be recovered for breach of covenant with the plaintiff, though he be the executor of Sir Samuel. 2. Release of all demands to the personal estate of Sir Samuel will not bar Morris, the plaintiff, because at the time of the release he had no right to demand any part of the estate, but only to bring his action against the person, like the 25 Ass. 7, tit. Execution, 330. Co. Litt. 265 b. If the conusee release to the conusor of a statute all his right in the land, yet he may still sue execution of the land; for he had no right nor demand to the land at the time of the release, but only to have an action against the party, and the land is not bound but in respect of the person. To which it was answered for the defendant, that this case is not like that of the statute; for there the person is bound, and he hath nothing to do with the land but in respect of the person; but here he hath nothing to do with the person but in respect of the assets, for without assets, the party being an executor, is not chargeable. Jones, [216] Wylde and Twysden Justices upon the first argument were of opinion, that the release is no bar, notwithstanding the general words; for the release being made for particular purposes the general words are to be guided by the particular purposes. Rainsford Chief Just. contra. And after the case had been argued at Bar several times in Hill. 30 and 31, judgment was given for the plaintiff per totam Curiam. Levinz and others for the plaintiff: Saunders and others for the defendant.

[217] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 29 & 30 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

LOURY against REYNES.

Where an infant hath only goods, the Ecclesiastical Court may appoint him a guardian.

Prohibition was prayed to the Ecclesiastical Court of York to stay a suit there by a curator, which that Court had appointed to an infant who had only personal estate, against another who detained the person of the infant from him; and the suit was to have the person of the infant delivered to him. Curia. The Spiritual Court may appoint a curator for an infant that hath only personal estate, but whether such curator can maintain an action there for the custody of the person? they seemed to doubt. But they granted a prohibition, and ordered the plaintiff to declare that the matter might come judicially before the Court; accordingly it was done, and in Hillary term 30 & 31, the case came to be argued. The declaration was, that the title to guardianship is determinable at common law; nevertheless, that the defendant had libell'd against him in the Spiritual Court, that by the canons and ecclesiastical constitutions any person having the tuition of an infant under age committed to him by the will of the father, or per judicem competentem, ought to have the custody of such infant and of his portion, and that if any person detain such infant or his portion, he is punishable, and compellable by ecclesiastical censures to deliver up the person and portion of such infant to his tutor or guardian, and that the custody of James Reynes, [218] an infant under the age of 14, and of Anne Reynes under the age of 12, both of them having legacies left them by their father, was upon the probate of the will committed by the Ecclesiastical Court to the now defendant, plaintiff there, grandmother of the said infants, 'till the son should attain the age of 14 and the daughter the age of 12, and that the defendant there detained them. The defendant pleaded non prosecut' fuit contra prohibitionem; and pro consultatione habend' he pleaded, that by the common law used and approv'd in England, if any person by his will bequeath goods to his infant children, the Ordinary, before whom the will is prov'd, hath us'd to commit the custody of sons and their portions 'till they come to the age of 14, and of daughters and their portions 'till they attain the age of 12, except where such children are in custody of any other by reason of tenure, or by the appointment of their father. And if any person detain such infants or their portions, to compel them by ecclesiastical censures to deliver them; and that the father of these infants devised goods to them, but appointed no guardian, and that they were not in the custody of any other ratione tenuræ, for which the Ordinary upon probate of the will committed them to the custody of the plaintiff there, defendant here; and that the defendant there, plaintiff here, detain'd them. The plaintiff replied, that the father of these infants being sick of a distemper whereof he soon after died, during his sickness constituted the now plaintiff and his wife, their grandmother, (now dead) their guardians, upon which he sued the defendant there for detaining them. The defendant demurr'd, and now, scil. Hil. 30 & 31, it was argued for the defendant, that where infants have only goods, the Spiritual Court may appoint them curators or guardians Swynb. 175, 176, and then as the appointment of a guardian belongs to them, so ought the suit for detainer from such guardian. 2. The republication of a commitment by the father is not material, 1st. Because it is not shewed to be by deed, testament, or quo modo. 2dly. One of the guardians being dead, the authority (for this is no more) is determined, Dy. The Lord Bray's case. To which, 'twas answer'd for the plaintiff, that supposing the Ecclesiastical Court hath authority in some cases to commit the custody of infants that have only personal estate, yet as the libel is here, the prohibition must stand, and they ought not to be suffer'd to proceed upon such libel, and the prohibition is founded upon the libel; now the libel is, that by the laws ecclesiastical every [219] person having the tuition of any infant under age committed to him by the will of his father, vel per judicem competentem, ought to have the custody of such infant, and suit in the Ecclesiastical Court for detainer of them. And this include commitments by the father upon stat. 12 Car. 2, which appoints a remedy in other Courts: and also comprehends all guardianships at common law, of which the Spiritual Court hath no power; and though the declaration abridges the matter by an exception (scil. excepting where they are in custody of any other ratione tenuræ, or by the appointment of the father) yet this will not amend the libel. And so held the whole Court, and that they ought not to be suffered to proceed upon such libel. 2. It was answered, that the commitment to the father is well pleaded, without shewing how; for it might be by parol, or by delivery of the infant; and the 26 E. 3, 65 is the case in point admitted. To which Scroggs, Chief Justice, agreed. 3. It was said, that the custody of an infant is an interest, and may survive, 2 Cro. Shopland v. Rider. He may make a lease in his own name; it is grantable over, F. N. B. 142 P. Latch. 157. Mich. 8 Ed. 4, pl. 2. But as to this point the Court said nothing. 4. It was said, that admitting the Ecclesiastical Court may appoint such guardian, yet it does not follow that the guardian must sue there for detainer. F. N. B. 142 G. the mayor, &c. may commit orphans, and yet the suit for detainer must be in other Courts. To this likewise the Court said nothing. But for this fault in the libel it was unanimously resolved, the prohibition should stand. Levinz for the plaintiff, Holt, junior, for the defendant in the prohibition.

Debt upon an obligation made to A. B. and C. wherein they were jointly and severally bound, and the action now brought against A. only. The defendant upon oyer of the obligation pleaded that the seal of B. fuit divulsus, and therefore the obligation cancelled and made void as to all. The plaintiff demurred; and now Pollexfen for the plaintiff argued, that the obligation being joint and several, it is still good as to the rest. 5 Co. Mathewson's case. To which it was answered, that the obligation being at first joint and several as to all three, by this cancelling of it as to one, it ceases to be so, and therefore the obligation is wholly void: for it is not now an obligation of the same nature as it was when it was first executed. March. Rep. Watford's case. The Court at first doubted; but afterwards upon sight of Watford's case, and another case which Wylde remembered to be so adjudged, inter Bloom and Tracy, the whole Court gave judgment for the defendant.

Indictment of forgery wanting vi & armis, S. C. 2 Show. pl. 2. Forgery super caput suum proprium. Vide 1 Jo. 325. 1 Lev. 138. 3 Mod. 66. Raym. 81. Ante 21.

Error of a judgment upon an indictment for forgery assigned, 1. Because the indictment wants vi & armis, and this indictment is not for a non-feasanze but a male-feazance. 2. The indictment is, that he forged it super caput suum proprium instead of ex imaginatione sua propria, or ex capite suo proprio; for as it is it must be intended that the writing was writ upon his head, and that might be by another. 3. The jury find him guilty de transgressione contempt. & forgeria prædict', and there is no such Latin word as forgeria: but the Latin word is fabricator. And then the defendant is not found guilty of the forgery, and yet judgment is given against him for the whole; and as to the word transgressio, there are other trespasses laid in the indictment to answer that. As to the first Jones, Justice, answered, It is cured by the express words of statute 37 H. 8, and Hart's case, 2 Cro. is so resolved. But Twysden and Wylde totis viribus contra; for multitudes of indictments have been quashed for this cause, and without vi & armis no capiatur can be awarded, nor fine to the King; and to this Rainsford, Chief Justice inclined, whereupon Curia advisare vult. But as to the second, it is but a literal translation of the words of the statute, and therefore the whole Court held it well enough, though they be not so elegantly translated as they might be 3. Transgress. prædict. includes the forgery, and all other trespasses. Postea Trin. prox. upon reading the stat. 37 H. 8, and several perusals of it, it was agreed by the whole Court that the want of vi & armis is cured. *Similis casus ante Trin. 2 Car. int. CORY against PEPPER.

Suit in the Spiritual Court for keeping of a school without license from the Ordinary. Nels. Lutw. 341.

A prohibition was prayed and granted nisi causa upon a suit in the Spiritual Court, for teaching a school without licence, in contempt of the canons, and now upon hearing counsel of both sides a consultation was granted; for though the Statute of Uniformity in the 13 Car. 2 gives a penalty of 5l. in such case, for which the suit must be at common law; yet that does not take away the jurisdiction of the Spiritual Court, when they proceed upon the canons, and not upon the statute for the penalty. And the canons made ann. 1571 in the reign of Queen Eliz. and in 21 Jac. being confirmed by Q. Eliz. and K. James are good and valid per stat. 25 H. 8, so long as they neither impugn the common law, nor the King's prerogative. Before the stat. 25 H. 8, the clergy made canons without the King; but now they are restrained by that statute cap. 19, yet still notwithstanding that statute the clergy may make canons with the King's consent, provided they be not contrary to the laws of the land, nor derogatory to the King's prerogative; which cannot be said on these canons requiring a school-master should be licensed by the bishop of the diocess, to the end school-masters may be fit to instruct their scholars in the true principles of religion. Williams for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant in the [223] prohibition.

THE KING against LEAVER.

Certiorari to the County Palatine, how it should be directed.

Error of a judgment upon an indictment of barretry in London, an exception was taken to the writ. First, Because it is directed to the Judge of Assise, where it ought to be to the Chancellor, and he to command the Judge of Assise; and precedents were ordered to be searched, and two found; one 7 Car. 1, directed to the Chancellor and proceedings thereupon, and judgment affirmed: the other 19 Car. 2, directed to the Judge, but no proceedings thereupon appearing in the record, the Court had little regard to it: but in truth there were proceedings thereupon, for I myself was a counsel in the cause, and assigned error ore tenus, which being over-ruled by Hale then Chief Justice, the plaintiff in error being this same Leaver, in a conviction of barretry as this is, agreed with the prosecutor, and obtained a pardon, by which means it happened, that none of the proceedings were entered upon record. But in that case no exception was taken to the writ. A second exception to the writ was, that in the style of the King, Carolus Secundus, &c. Scotiæ was omitted; and for this cause the writ was quashed, and Leaver brought a new writ of error directed to the Chancellor, and no writ quod coram vobis residet, for it was held the record was not removed by the first writ.

LISLE against [illegible].

Covenant to stand seised to A. for life; remainder to his 2d, 3d, and 4th sons in tail male, and to all and every the heirs males of the body of A. Whether A. has an estate for life, or in tail? S. C. Raym. 278, 302, 315. 2 Sho. pl. 3. 2 Jon. 114. Vid. ante 9, 76. Post 226.

Ejectment of lands in Northumberland; and in a special verdict upon non culp. the case was: one seised of the lands in question covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for life, the remainder to Edward his first son for life, the remainder to the first son of Edward in tail male, the remainder to the second, third, and fourth sons of Edward in tail male, and so to all and every other the heirs males of the body of Edward respectively and successively, and to the heirs males of their bodies, according to their seniority of birth, the remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff for life, [224] the remainder to his first son in tail male, and so to the 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th son in tail male, and so to all and every other the heirs male of the body of the lessor severally and respectively, according to their seniority of birth. The covenantor died; Edward suffered a common recovery, and dies without issue male; and if the lessor was barred by the recovery? was the question; which rests entirely upon the words of the limitation after the limitations to the four sons of Edward, viz. and so to all and every the heirs male of the body of Edward; whether by these words Edward took an estate tail for default of the issue of his four sons? or, whether he was only tenant for life, and the words, and so to all and every the heirs male of the body of Edward shall be taken as if it had been to all and every other sons of Edward? And 'twas argued for the plaintiff, that Edward took only an estate for life. First; by the words, and so to the heirs male of the bodies of those heirs, it appears, that the heirs male are to take by purchase; for otherwise these words and to the heirs male of their bodies need not have been added; for if they take by purchase and successively, then have the words the same sense as all and every son and sons. 2. And so to all and every other the heirs males, &c. (How must that be?) So as the heirs male, scil. the sons, took before. 3. Translate the word so in Latin, eodem modo as the four first sons took; as was done in Beresford's case, to serve the intent of the parties, and to make the conveyance coherent. 4. Not only the precedent, but also the subsequent limitations shew, his intent was to settle it to the lessor and his four sons in tail male, and so to all and every the heirs male of the sons, &c. which would be in vain, if Edward shall have such an estate as will enable him by common recovery to defeat all the rest. 5. Here is a proviso, that if Edward die without heirs male of his body, he may charge the estate with portions for his daughters, which were needless if Edward hath an estate tail, for then he may do it without such proviso. But 'tis proper to add it to an estate for life, which shews also his intent, that Edward should have but an estate for life. On the other side it was said, that in all cases when the ancestor takes an estate of freehold, a limitation afterwards to his heirs, or the heirs male of his body, vests the inheritance in himself, Co. [225] Litt. 22 b. and 1 Co. Shellie's case. Curia, Edward hath only an estate for life by the manifest intent of the conveyance, which ought to be pursued where by any means it can; and therefore they, as was done in Beresford's case, would translate the word so, eodem modo, as in Beresford's case they translated the words to the heirs male of Aden, in this manner, sc. hæredibus masculis de Aden or ex Aden: to supply the words de corpore, and to make good the intent of the donor in that conveyance; and so they gave judgment for the plaintiff; upon which a writ of error was brought, and upon the first argument the Court of Exchequer-Chamber inclined to affirm the judgment: but before it was affirmed or reversed, the suit abated per mortem. And afterwards a new ejectment was brought, sed quid inde venit nescio. Levinz for the plaintiff, Lisborn for the defendant.

COLTMAN against SENHOUSE.

In an indenture of mutual covenants between mother and son, he covenants that if he dies without issue, he gives and grants the land to her, &c. this raises a use to the mother. S. C. 2 Show. pl. 7. 2 Jon. 105. Nels. Lutw. 243. Vide prox. pag. 3 Lev. 370, & ante, 213.

Ejectment of lands in Cumberland, and upon non culp. and special verdict, the case was; Dalton seised in fee, died seised, leaving Henry his son and heir and one daughter, to whom he gave 100l. for a portion, the wife of Dalton entered, and paid the portion during the minority of the daughter, and after married the defendant, and after Henry came of age; and then by indenture between Senhouse and his wife on the one part, and Henry on the other part, reciting this whole matter, Senhouse and his wife for the advancement of Henry, and for the love his mother had for him and for settling the lands to him quit of all claims for jointure, dower or otherwise, Senhouse and his wife covenanted, granted and aliened the lands to Henry, from the day of date, and that Henry should enjoy the lands during the life of his mother. Also he covenanted that his mother should enjoy there cattlegates for ten oxen or cows. And that he should pay all taxes, and 13l. per annum to his mother during her life, and divers other covenants and agreements were betwixt them. And then towards the end of the deed came this covenant upon which the action is brought, sc. Henry covenants that if he die without [226] issue, he does give and grant the lands in question to her and her heirs, and after he died without issue, and his sister being his heir brought the ejectment; and whether this last covenant and grant shall amount to a covenant to stand seised, and shall convey the estate to the mother? was the question. For the plaintiff it was argued that it should not, 1. Because the consideration is for the advancement of the son, and the affection of his mother to him, and there is no appearance of any intention to raise a use to the mother. 2. The scope of the deed seems to be an agreement to compose matters between the son and his mother, who entered and took the profits of his estate, and paid a portion to the sister. And Foster & Foster's case was cited, wherein was such an agreement as this is by articles, and yet no use arises, tho' it contained the same words, does give, grant, &c. and Pitfield and Piers's case, 2 Roll. 789. 3. The mother entered, and it might be by disseisin; for it does not appear how she entered, neither does it appear that the son re-entered, and then his covenant cannot raise a use out of an estate whereof he was not in possession. 4. The indenture seems to be only mutual covenants and agreements betwixt them; and by the covenant that Henry should enjoy for the life of the wife, no use can arise to Henry, because it is her covenant, and she was a feme-covert, and all on her part rests only in the covenant to bind the husband, and so on the part of Henry, his covenant rests only in covenant that his mother shall have the estate if he die without issue. For the defendant it was said, that where the intent appears to pass an estate, but the conveyance is defective, it shall be supplied and made good by way of use to fulfil that intent; and that here was a manifest intent that his mother should have the estate if he died without issue, 2 Roll. 789, Tibb and Poplethwayt's

And they said that Wylde Justice, now dead, was of the same opinion. Levinz counsellor for the plaintiff, Saunders for the defendant.

GILMORE against SHUTER.

Promise of a marriage-portion without writing made before the Statute of Frauds and sued after. S. C. 1 Vent. 330. 2 Ton. 108. 2 Show. pl. 9.

Assumpsit upon a promise for payment of a marriage-portion made before the late Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, and a special verdict was found before Rainsford Chief Justice, at Guild-hall: and it was resolved by the whole Court, that whereas the statute is, that after the 24th of June, 1677, no action shall be brought upon any promise in consideration of marriage without a writing testifying the same; and this action is brought after the 24 June 1677, yet being grounded upon a promise made before the 24 of June 1677, it is good without any writing thereof; and that the statute extends only to promises made after the 24 of June 1677, for which actions are brought after the 24 of June 1677, and no other; for it was not the intent of the Parliament to defeat all promises made before the Act.

CHAPMAN against FOTHERGILL.

Consideration that he would consent, and not hinder a marriage, and does not say where he consented and did not hinder.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff would consent, and would not hinder the defendant to marry such a woman, in whom the plaintiff had some power of persuasion, the defendant promised to pay him 20l. and says that he consented and hindered not the marriage, and that the defendant married the said woman, and had not paid the 20l. Upon general demurrer, judgment was given for the defendant, because it is not shewed in the declaration where, or in what place the defendant did consent, and this is not a mere negative, not to hinder, as was objected by the plaintiff, but affirmative also; to consent, and not to hinder.

Surviving joint-merchant, and the executor of his companion, join in an action. Ante 110, 111, 188. 3 Keb. 737, 798.

Assumpsit by Hall and George Wood, and his wife executrix of John Whitley, and declares, that by the law of merchants there is no survivorship; and that Holt and Wood joint merchants were possessed of 40 ounces of musk, and sold it to the defendant at so much per ounce, as they should sell the rest of their musk and that they sold the rest at such a price, and that the defendant had not paid; and declares also of another promise made to the plaintiff after the death of the testator. Upon non assumpsit, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the plaintiffs ought not to join, but should sever for their moieties; for the action brought by the executor ought to be in the detinet tantum, and by the survivor in the debet & detinet. 2dly, The executor himself ought not to join two promises in one action, the one made to the testator, the other to himself. Sed non allocatur; for the judgment for an executor is all one as for any other plaintiff, and whatever is recovered in such case will be assets in the hands of the executor: but a man cannot sue an executor and another jointly; for the one is to be charged de bonis testatoris, the other de bonis propriis; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Justification 10 October for taking one by virtue of a warrant of the sessions the 9 October, not averring the sessions then continued, is naught. Yelv. 53. 1 Term Rep. 645. 2 Burr. 899.

Trespass and false imprisonment; the defendant justified that a General Quarter-Sessions of the Peace was held 9 October 27 Car. 2, and that the justices made a warrant to him to bring the defendant to the sessions, and that he the 10 October, virtute warranti præd' took the defendant to bring him to the sessions, and detained him for a quarter of an hour, and then the defendant rescued himself. The plaintiff demurred and had judgment; for the bar is ill in not averring that the sessions continued the 10 of October, for otherwise it shall not be intended; and his saying that he took him virtute warranti præd' will not supply it, as in Bayton's case, 3 C. 44 b. virtute warranti præd' supplies, that it was in writing, and that it was betwixt the testa and return of the writ. Tamen quære.

Debt for rent; the case upon the declaration after verdict was, lessee assigned the moiety of the land for the whole term, the lessor brought debt against the assignee for the moiety of the rent: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that both the privity of estate and contract, in this case, remain entirely in the lessee, and by consequence the moiety of the assignee not chargeable. But per totam Curiam, the assignee having the entire estate in one moiety of the land, he hath the privity of estate sufficient to be charged by the lessor for the moiety of the rent if he will; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

THE KING against MAYOR, CITIZENS, AND COMMON COUNCIL OF LONDON.

Information in nature of quo warranto for taking ½d. per chaldron for all sea-coals brought to London, the defendants prescribe for the duty, and issue was taken upon the prescription, and tried at Bar. The defendants produce several citizens, freemen of London, to prove the prescription; and it was objected they ought not to be witnesses, quia in proprio casu. Sed per Curiam, it appearing that the mayor and sheriffs have the whole profit of this toll, tho' they have it for the benefit of the whole corporation, of which all the citizens and freemen are members; yet these having no particular profit to themselves, were sworn as witnesses; for it cannot be presumed that for an advantage so small and so remote, they would be partial and perjure themselves; and the jury found for the defendants. And Scroggs, Chief Justice, said that it ought not to be a general rule, that members of corporations shall be admitted or denied to be witnesses in actions for or against their corporations: but every case stands upon its own particular circumstances; viz. whether the interest be so considerable as by presumption to produce partiality or not.

[232] JAMES against RICHARDSON.

Devise to the heir of Robert Durdant now living, who then had a son George, a good devise to George. S. C. 2 Jon. 99, 100. Ray. 330, 331. 2 Vent. 311. 1 Vent. 334, 335. 3 Keb. 832. 2 Show. 2. Ejectment, and upon non culp. and special verdict, the case was, Weekes seised in fee, devised the lands to Higden and his heirs, for the life of Robert Durdant in trust for Robert Durdant, and after the death of Robert Durdant, to the heirs males of Robert Durdant now living, and such heirs males or females as he afterwards shall have of his body. Robert at the time of the devise had a son called George; and whether this was a remainder executed in George by the name of heir male of his father? was the question; for it was objected, nemo est hæres viventis, and Robert being then living, George could not take during his life by the name of heir: but after divers arguments it was adjudged, that the remainder was vested and executed in George, and not a contingent remainder, and so destroyed by the fine of Higden in the life of Robert; for the testator takes notice that Robert was alive, and then devising to heirs now living, George is the person he intended by the word heir, he is heir apparent in law, and in common parlance is called heir, and now living, refers to all; sc. heirs males now living, although Robert Durdant are the words precedent; for he took notice before that he was living, and therefore a tautology to refer them to him, but proper to refer them to George, who was named before, and perhaps his name not remembered by the devisor, and therefore added these words now living, to demonstrate what person he intended; and yet he shall take in fee-simple, and not an estate for life only, as was objected, it must be if the words were only added to denote the person; for by heirs is included all heirs of heirs, as a remainder limited to the right heirs of J. S. includes all heirs of heirs, without saying to the right heirs of J. S. and their heirs: whereupon a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer-Chamber, and there this judgment was reversed upon the point in law; and upon that another writ of error was brought in the House of Lords: and the judgment in the Exchequer-Chamber was reversed, and the judgment in the King's Bench affirmed. And afterwards a new ejectment was brought upon the death of George against [233] his heir to try this point again, whether George took only an estate for life, or in fee? and the matter was found specially again, and judgment given in B. R. for the heir upon a new hearing of this matter; and upon this a writ of error was also brought, and the judgment in B. R. affirmed, whereupon another writ of error was brought in the House of Lords, and the judgment affirmed.

NEWTON AND HIS WIFE against MASTERS.

She is a strumpet and a bawd, and kept a bawdy-house. Vid. ante 274.

Case by baron and feme for saying of the wife, She is a strumpet and a bawd, and kept a bawdy-house: after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that none of these words are actionable save the last, scil. she kept a bawdy-house, and they are spoke in the preter-tense, and so it may be intended, that she kept a bawdy-house before the general pardon. But per Curiam; The scandal remains, and it shall not be intended of keeping a bawdy-house before the pardon, unless it fully appears it was the meaning of the party, and that he so intended.

WETHERHEAD against ARMITAGE.

Of a school-mistress; She is as much a man as I, she got a woman with child, she is an hermaphrodite, not actionable without special damage. S. C. 2 Show. pl. 11. Vid. 1 Sal. 16.

Case by the plaintiff, a woman, and declares, that she per diversos annos (not saying ultimos elapsos) was skilled in dancing, and taught young women to dance, whereby she gained a livelihood; and the defendant to injure her said, She is as much a man as I am, she got J. S. with child, she is an hermaphrodite; by which she lost divers scholars but does not mention any in particular. Verdict for the plaintiff; but after divers motions pro & con. judgment staid; for hermaphrodite is not actionable, nor is it any scandal to her profession; for young women are taught to dance more frequently by men than women; and no special damages are laid. And therefore the Court held the words not actionable in themselves, without regard to the exception of its being diversos annos (omitting ultimos elapsos). Holt jun. for the plaintiff; Levinz for the defendant.

Issue, riens arrere, and verdict for the avowant; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the avowant hath shewn no title for want of attornment: sed per Cur'. riens arrere hath admitted a title in the avowant; at least it is cured by verdict, for the jury could not find any rent arrear to him, if he had no title. Quære of the first reason, for riens arrere is the general issue.

ASSER against FINCH.

Trespass, and justifies for a way; issue extra viam: full costs. S. C. Sho. pl. 19. Ante 124. 5 Mod. 74.

Trespass for entering his close, and spoiling his grass, the defendant justifies for a way there; the plaintiff replies extra viam, and issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff, and whether the plaintiff should have full costs, or no more costs than damages upon the new statute? was the question: for it was said, no title came in question upon the trial, for the way is admitted, and the issue is now only, whether he was guilty extra viam? Sed per Cur'. The plaintiff shall have full costs; for 1st, There was a title to the way in question upon record, and so the case is out of the intent of the statute. 2dly, Upon this issue extra viam, a title to the way is in question; scil. of what extent the way is? Whether 10 or 20 feet in breadth, &c.? All which came in question upon the trial. Otherwise perhaps, if the extent and place where the way lies had been agreed in the pleadings. But as it is, the plaintiff had judgment and full costs by the rule and direction of the Court.

Award that one should pay the other so much for sums received out of the estate of W. a mere stranger. S. C. 1 Danv. 485. 2 Show. pl. 47.

Assumpsit, whereas differences had been between the plaintiff and defendant (but does not say touching what matter they were in difference) they submitted to the award of J. S. who did award de & super præmissis, that the defendant should pay the plaintiff 30l. in satisfaction of all sums due to him out of the estate of one Woolly. After verdict for the plaintiff, judgment was staid; but at last after divers motions this and other terms was entered for the defendant, because it does not appear that the defendant is executor, administrator or trustee for Woolly; it does not appear he had any thing of Woolly's, or that he submitted on behalf of him, and so no consideration why he should be charged for the estate of Woolly.

[236] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 30 & 31 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

ENFIELD against HILLS.

Freemen admitted to be witnesses for the corporation. See p. 231. S. C. 2 Jon. 115.

Case, whereas the plaintiff was an alderman of Canterbury, and put out of his place, and sued a mandamus to be restored; the defendant falso, &c. procured a return to be made in the name of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of Canterbury, and set forth the whole return in haec verba, and the falsity of it, by which he lost his place. Upon non culp. pleaded, and a trial at Bar, the defendant produced seven freemen of Canterbury, as witnesses for him to prove the truth of the return; to whom it was objected, that they being freemen of Canterbury ought not to be received as witnesses; producing a by-law there made, by which their return was ordered to be made, and that the charges insuing should be borne by the corporation. To which the counsel for the defendant answered, and shewed a release from the defendant to the mayor, aldermen and commonalty, and all others, the freemen of Canterbury, of all advantages, contributions and demands which he might have against them by virtue of this by-law, or any other order, aut alio modo quocunque. And yet by the opinion of Rainsford and Twysden, contra Jones, these three Judges being only then in Court, the seven witnesses were not allowed to give evidence, and the jury gave their verdict for the plaintiff, and 300l. damages. Hereupon the defendant's counsel prayed the Court to sign a bill of [237] exceptions for not admitting the witnesses, which they agreed to do accordingly, and before judgment it was drawn, signed and sealed by them. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, upon the bill of exceptions, and divers points shewed and argued. And for the defendant 'twas said, 1st. That a bill of exceptions lies upon a trial at Bar as well as a trial by Nisi Prius, and that upon Stat. of Westmin. 2, 31, and for authorities were cited 27 H. 8, 24, 25, upon a trial by Nisi Prius, 2 E. 4, 66, upon a trial at Bar in Com. Banc. and also 21 E. 4, upon a trial at Bar in C. B. And Co. 2 Inst. 427, upon the words of the stat. Et si dominus Rex venire faciat coram illo, who says it is to be intended of a writ of error, which does not lie in Banco Regis upon a judgment in the same Court, therefore he supposes that a bill of exceptions would not lie upon a trial by Nisi Prius out of this Court, for there the judgment and record is in this very Court, which would render the statute of little or no effect; for by the same reason it will not extend to trials in the Exchequer, for error lies not in B. R. upon their judgments. But these words si venire faciat are to be understood that the record is brought here by writ of error; not to exclude cases where the record is already there; nor where it can never come there, but goes before other justices by writ of error. 2dly, It was said for the defendant, that of this bill of exceptions advantage may be taken as well in arrest of judgment, as upon a writ of error; and in the 27 H. 8, 24, 25, 'twas so done. 3 H. 4, 14 b. it is as well to prevent judgment as to reverse it. 3dly, Here needs no scire facias ad cognoscendum sigill', because the Judges are of the same Court where the bill was signed, either to confess or deny their seals; and though it happens that two of the three Judges are removed, sc. Rainsford and Twysden, yet it is sufficient that Jones continues; for by the words of the statute one Judge is enough to seal the bill, & si forte unus justiciarior' non vult apponere sigillum apponat alter. And if one be sufficient to seal, one is sufficient to acknowledge. 4thly, The refusal of the witnesses was error; for be it as it will in other respects by the release of the defendant, all the advantage he can have against the citizens for his charges upon the by-law is discharged. And the whole Court now held that these witnesses should have been admitted. [238] 5thly, The declaration itself is naught; for it does not shew what was done upon the return, perhaps it may yet be adjudged ill, and then the plaintiff shall be restored, and yet shall have 300l. for the loss of his place; he ought to have stayed till judgment had been entered upon the return, and thereupon have declared; otherwise it is like an action upon the case for indicting a man of felony, which lies not without shewing he was acquitted, or that the grand jury found the bill ignoramus. And of this opinion was Scroggs, Ch. Just. to which the rest inclined. For the defendant 'twas answered, that a bill of exceptions lies not upon a trial in this Court, whether it be at the Bar here, or by Nisi Prius out of this Court, and that upon the words of the stat. si venire faciat dominus Rex recordum coram illo, Co. 2 Inst. 427. But the Court seemed to incline that a bill of exceptions lay as well upon trials in this as in any other Court. Et nota afterwards, in or about the year 1693, upon a trial at Bar between the Duke of Grafton, and the Lord Chief Justice Holt, for the office de Chief Prothonotary de Banco Regis, the Court agreed to sign a bill of exceptions. But afterwards, for apparent falsities there inserted, they refused to seal it, which was complained of to the House of Lords, where the falsities were examined. To the 2d point it was argued for the plaintiff, that a bill of exceptions is not to be used in arrest of judgment, but only in a writ of error, and they produced and cited many precedents where it had been used upon a writ of error, which the Court said were good proofs that it might be used upon a writ of error: but they did not prove that it could not be made use of by motion in arrest of judgment; however they gave no positive opinion as to this point. 2dly. It was said for the plaintiff, that no use could be made of the bill here, because it is not entered upon the record, but only brought into Court under the seals of the justices. But to this the Court answered, it appears by the stat. that it is not always entered upon record, for the stat. says, si non inveniat in rotulis, &c. then a scire facias shall issue. Also it may be entered now if that be necessary: but the bill not being entered, the plaintiff's counsel did not speak to the refusal of the witnesses. But the whole Court declared, that the witnesses should have been admitted, and the refusal is an injury to the defendant, which will be a sufficient reason for the Court to grant a new trial, come what will of the other matters. And as to the exception to the declaration, [239] it was said by the plaintiff's counsel, it is not usual in the Crown Office to enter up judgment in these cases, unless where restitution is awarded. And the plaintiff hath concluded his declaration, scil. whereby he lost his place, which is a sufficient averment in such case, that the return was adjudged sufficient, so that he was not restored. But the whole Court held the contrary; and though the clerks ex officio do not enter up judgment upon the return but where they make farther benefit by issuing out writs of restitution; yet if judgment was given upon the sufficiency, the plaintiff should have procured it to be entered up to enable him to bring his action: and the Court strongly inclined that the declaration was naught for this cause; but they gave no judgment at present, but gave the plaintiff's counsel farther time to advise with his client; for be the law one way or other, here is at least sufficient grounds for a new trial. Afterwards the parties agreed, as I suppose, for I heard no more of the case. Holt, jun. for the plaintiff; Levinz for the defendant in the motion in arrest of judgment.

COLBORNE against WRIGHT.

Co-executor and administrator during the minority. S. C. 2 Jon. 119. Vid. 3 Leon. 143, 209. 4 Leon. 56, 212. Yelv. 130. 1 Brownl. 101. 5 Co. 27. 1 And. 117. 1 Mod. 47, 297. 1 Saund. 212. 2 Lev. 181, 299.

Debt for arrears of rent as executor, and also as administrator durante minore ætate of his co-executor, and declares, that the testator made the plaintiff and others his executors, and that J. D. seised of a rent of 20l. per annum, devised it to three persons in equal parts in common, and that all the three devisees levied a fine of one moiety thereof to the wife of the testator in fee, and of the other moiety to the use of a stranger in fee, and that the stranger granted his moiety to the wife of the testator in fee, that the testator had issue by her, and after the wife died, whereby the testator became seised of the whole by curtesy of England, and that the rent grew due to the testator, who made him and the other co-executors, and that he solely proved the will, and administration was granted to him during the minority of the co-executor, who is still under age. To this declaration the defendant demurred, and two things were now insisted on for the defendant: 1. That this being a rent-charge which is against common right, it cannot be divided only to make tertenant subject [240] to several distresses without his consent, and there is no attornment, Co. Lit. 148 a. aliter of a rent service or such things as are of common right, Hob. 25. Grantee of a rent gives part thereof by fine, the tenant is not bound to attorn, therefore the devise and the fine to uses thus divided is not good. He agreed, that to a devise or a fine to uses there needs no attornment; but the devise or fine in such case of things not dividable can't be divided, but the devise and the fine itself are void. 2. Both the executors ought to join in the action, though only one of them prove the will, and an executor and administrator to the same person are inconsistent; for where there is an executor, the Ordinary hath no power to grant administration. 9 Co. Hensloe's case. Yelv. 130, Smith v. Smith, and Cunningham's case lately adjudged in this Court. To which it was answered by the counsel of the plaintiff, and resolved by the Court; 1. That by these conveyances of devise and fine to uses, the rent may be divided without the assent or attornment of the party, because his assent or attornment is not necessary to the perfection of these conveyances. 2. Where one of the executors is an infant and cannot prove the will, administration durante sua minoritate may be granted to the other, who must sue solely, and it is not inconsistent to have administration in such case, for it is not granted in this case, as it is upon a dying intestate; for here the will is proved but only to enable him to sue solely, because the other is not capable of proving the will, nor to join with him, and he cannot sue solely; and cited Hatton and Mascall's case entered in this Court, Mich. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 703, the roll whereof was brought into Court, and appeared to be so adjudged. But where both executors are of full age, though the will be proved by one only, the action must be brought in both their names: so judgment was given for the plaintiff; Holt junior for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

Church-wardens prescribe to dispose the seats of the church, ratione edificat' & reparations. Ante 102, 186. Vid. 1 Sid. 88, 89, & 101. 1 Lev. 71. Noy. 104. 2 Jon. 3, 4, 202, 203. Raym. 52. Bridg. 4. Mo. 878. Hob. 69.

Prohibition was prayed, upon a suggestion, that time out of mind the parishioners at their own charge have built and repaired all the seats of the church, and ratione inde the seats have time out of mind been disposed of by the churchwardens, and that now the bishop took upon him to dispose of them. Bigland for the plaintiff argued, that though generally the Ordinary hath the disposal of the seats of the church, yet it might be otherwise by custom, and cited 2 Roll. Abr. 288, Tredenham's case. Jones Justice; Of common right the Ordinary hath the disposal of all seats in the church, and of common right the parishioners ought to repair them; Co. 2 Inst. 489. Then what have the parishioners done here to oust the Ordinary of his jurisdiction? They have only said that they have repaired the seats at the parish charge, which is no more than their duty, for which they have the easement of sitting in them, according to the disposal of the Ordinary; whereupon a prohibition was denied by the whole Court, as it was before done in Com. Banc. in this very case, where it was first moved.

College of Manchester against Trafford.

A lease reciting a lease which is not, and demises for 21 years, and so from 21 to 21 years, &c. till 99 years are ended, though no number of 21 can center in 99, yet it shall be a lease for 99 years from the end of the first 21 years.

Error of a judgment at Lancaster; where upon a special verdict the case was; the college in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, reciting a lease made by them in the time of Edw. 6, demised to one Trafford for 21 years, rendering rent 21l. 16s. 4d. and habendum from the end of the said term made in the time of Edw. 6, and then follows a condition of re-entry for non payment of the rent, and after that a covenant and grant, that after the said 21 years ended he should have the land for other 21 years, and so from 21 years to 21 years, till 99 years past thence next ensuing shall be compleat and ended. And it was found there was no lease made in the time of Edward 6, and since the date of the lease made in the time of Queen Elizabeth more than 99 years are expired, [242] but that 99 years, computing from the end of the term for 21 years, are not expired. And so the question was, whether the lessee shall have 99 years only, reckoning as from the date of his lease made in the time of Elizabeth, or 99 years over and above the first 21 years; for it was agreed, that although the number of 21 years can never center in 99, yet this term shall endure for 99 years, which is a term certain, and the odd years shall be rejected according to Baldwin's case, 2 Co. Rep. But the point in question was, when the 99 years should commence? And at Lancaster it was adjudged, that the lessee should have 99 years over and above the 21 years, and the first 21 should not be reckoned part of the 99, and that by reason of the word thence; for if it must be reckoned from the making of the lease in the time of Queen Elizabeth, it ought to be hence. But thence is a word that does not denote a present time, but another time, and then thence must refer to the end of the first 21 years, because there is no other time to which it can refer; for the jury have found, that there was no lease in the time of Ed. 6, whereunto the defendant would have referred it, and so the term not expired; and of this opinion was the whole Court, and affirmed the judgment, and so was the Court of Exchequer about the year 1687, where the term being then expired, the plaintiff recovered for the term. Levinz for the plaintiff in both Courts.

Judgment in an Inferior Court not void quia the Judge did not take the oaths.
S. C. 2 Jon. 137. Vid. ante 184 contra.

Error of a judgment in Norwich Court, assigned, that the Sheriff by whom the judgment was given had not taken the oaths, and subscribed the declaration, according to 13 Car. 2, cap. 1. The defendant pleaded, that the oaths and declaration were not tendered to the sheriff. The plaintiff demurred. And resolved, this is not assignable contrary to the record and admittance of the parties; for this is in effect to say that he was not sheriff, because the statute says upon default &c. shall be void, contrary to Hipsly and Tuck's case, Pasch. 27 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1620, quod vide ante. 2. The Court held clearly, that the tender is traversable; for though the proviso for avoidance be per se & absolute, yet it shall relate to the precedent and first part of the statute which appoints them to be tendered.

STRODE against BERAGER.

Devise to Robert my son; Robert the son dies in the life of the testator, and having a grandson Robert, he republishes, saying, Robert my grandson shall have, &c. S. C. 1 Vent 314. 1 Mod. 267. 3 Mod. 313. 2 Jo. 135. Raym. 408. 2 Danv. 534, 10. 2 Show. pl. 49.

Error of a judgment upon an ejectment in Communi Banco, wherein upon a special verdict the case was: Robert Berager had issue his first son William, who had issue the wife of the lessor, and a second son Robert, which second son Robert had also a son Robert, grandson to the first Robert. Robert the grandfather devised the lands in question in these words, I give my lands in Tilling to my son Robert and his heirs, and I give to my grandson Robert 50*l*. Also I give to my great grandaughter 100*l*. Robert the second son died in the life of his father, afterwards Robert the devisor made a codicil whereby he devised part of those lands which he had devised to his son Robert, to his daughter Judith, and afterwards he made a republication of his will by parol, without writing, and said, Robert my grandson shall have and take by my will as Robert my son should have done, and afterwards died; and the question was, whether Robert the grandson, defendant in the ejectment, and likewise here, should have the land by virtue of this will and republication, or to the wife, lessor of the plaintiff, daughter and heir of William the first son? And it was adjudged in Communi Banco, by the opinion of North, Chief Justice, Atkyns and Wyndham, contrary to the opinion of Scroggs, that the grandson should have it; and now it was argued that this judgment was erroneous, 1st, Because grandson and son are different names of appellation, and denote different persons. 2ly, Land cannot pass by will unless the will be in writing. 3dly, The devisor takes notice in the will of the difference betwixt son, grandson, and great grandson, and makes devises to several persons by these several names. 4thly, The republication by parol will not supply the defect of this will, which, being of lands, ought to be in writing. 5thly, The republication itself takes notice of the difference of these appellations, scil. my grandson [244] Robert shall have, &c. as my son Robert should have had. It was agreed that republication might aid a will, if there be words in the will capable of being aided, as The Lord Cheney's case, a devise to William, there are two Williams, it may be averred what William was meant, because the word William was in the will; and 3 Cro. 493, Buckford and Parnecote, a devise of all his lands in Aldworth, and after the will he purchases other lands, and then republishes the will, all the lands shall pass, for the words in the will are sufficient for that purpose. But here the word grandson is wanting in the written will. And this case is all one with the case of Brett and Rigden. Plowd. Com. and Hartrop's case. 3 Cro. 243. And the opinion of Popham and Fenner in Fuller and Fuller's case, 3 Cro. 422, 423, is denied by the other Judges, scil. Gawdy and Clench, and the case there was adjudged upon another point. For the defendant in error, it was said, that here was a good foundation in the words of the will, and the intention of them may be supplied by matter dehors. That grand is but an addition to son to distinguish the son from the grandson, who were both alive at the time the will was made; but when the son was dead, as he actually was at the time of the republication, the grandson might well enough be meant and understood by the name son: and if a man hath no sons but a grandson called Robert, and devise lands to his son Robert, the grandson shall take according to the opinion of Walmsly, Owen 88. And here, though at the time the will was made the devisor had a son Robert and a grandson Robert, yet at the republication, which is a new making of a will, he had only a grandson Robert, and therefore he shall take by the name son, so as the name of baptism is rightly expressed, and there is no one else to take it. Scroggs, Chief Justice, continued his former opinion, saying, he was never satisfied with the first judgment, and that the judgment ought to be reversed. Dolbin, Justice, seemed contra, cæteri nil dixerunt. Et adjournatur; but after I was informed the judgment was reversed. But quære here of, for I was not then present.

Assumpsit for money received in an office, to which the defendant claimed title. S. C. 2 Jo. 126, 127. 2 Mod. 260, 261. 1 Danv. 27. 2 Show. pl. 14.

Assumpsit for money received for his use and upon non assumpsit, and special verdict, the case was, The Queen having granted to the plaintiff Sir Robert Howard the stewardship of the honor of Pomfret for years, habend' from the end of a former term, in which stewardship were comprised several courts-leet as well as courts-baron, the first term being ended, the defendant by a grant subsequent to that grant made to the plaintiff, held the court, and received the money, for which the plaintiff brought his action for the fees. And upon arguments at Bar, the Court was of opinion that the grant to the plaintiff in reversion for years was void as to courts-leet, as being a judicial office, but was good as to courts-baron. And as to the objection, that this action will not lie for the money received by the defendant as money received for the paintiff's use, because the defendant claimed title by another grant made to himself, and therefore received it to his own use; and that the plaintiff should have brought an action of trover for the money, or case, for disturbing him in his office; the Court answered, that it might be hard perhaps to maintain it, if this were a new case, and the first of this nature; but they said two or three actions of this kind had been held before, and cited a case between Bradshaw and Porter, of Grays Inn, for money received as Judge of the Sheriff's Court of London to be so resolved; and therefore it would be hard now to adjudge the contrary. But at the importunity of Jones, Attorney General, to be farther heard in this case, it was adjourned.

And Weston moved in arrest of judgment, that the prescription was not good, 1st. Because it is not laid to be appurtenant to any land. 2dly, The prohibition ought not to be in the name of the mayor and burgesses, but he ought to have prescribed in every burgess, quod quilibet burgensium, &c. and that it ought to be alledged in the corporation by way of custom, Rolle Common, 403, Green and Stain's case. 5 E. 4, 29, 32. Curia contra. This might be a common in gross, and not appurtenant to any land, 9 H. 6, 36. 1 Co. FARMER QUI TAM, &C. against BROWN.

Answering upon oath in Ecclesiastical Courts. S. C. 2 Jon. 122. 3 Keb. 802, 819, 829. 1 Vent. 339. 2 Show.

Prohibition to the Spiritual Court, for that they compelled the defendant to answer upon oath there in a suit for not repairing of the church; suggesting, that the Ecclesiastical Court ought not to require answer upon oath nisi tantum in rebus testamentariis & matrimonialibus; and this being a point of great consideration, the plaintiff was ordered to declare, that the case might be judicially determined upon demurrer. And for the defendant in the prohibition 'twas argued, that the Spiritual Court might in such cases take answers upon oath, and that the writ mentioned in Rast. Abridg. Prohibition 5, and in the register, are things antiquated, originally devised for the prevention of two things practised antiently among the clergy, but now disused; they had a custom of citing men before them pro lesione fidei in not performing their agreements, and forcing them to swear performance. Those were the mischiefs intended to be reformed by the institution of these writs. Cosin's Apology, part 1, cap. 11, fol. 77, 78, & ibid. eadem parte, cap. 8, & Register 43 a. And the juramentum calumniæ mentioned Co. 2 Inst. 657, was another invention of theirs to make a man accuse himself of crimes, which is not lawful. But as for answering upon oath in civil cases, it hath been their constant course time out of mind, [248] as it is in Chancery, and every jot as well allowable in this Court as in that; and in Chancery they never compel a man to answer upon oath to matter criminal, or scandalous. To which Maynard, King's Serjeant, in answer cited the Register 38. F. N. B. 41, and Co. 2 Inst. 621. He said, the Ecclesiastical Court had unquestionably a jurisdiction in the principal matter, but they had no jurisdiction but by incroachment to administer oaths nisi tantum in causis testamentariis & matrimonialibus; that the statute of Ed. 6 allows them jurisdiction in the case of tithes by any legal means other than that of the party's oath; which shews, that the Parliament intended that they should not have power to administer oaths in such cases; and yet this is a civil case: that they may proceed by answer without oath of the parties, and by proofs thereupon, as all proceedings are at common law, where the party is never compelled to put in his answer or plea upon oath, except in case it be a foreign plea, which stands upon a particular reason; viz. that it is to oust the Court of jurisdiction, and tends to manifest delay; that Dr. Cosins is of no authority where any difference is between the common and the canon law: and as to Chancery, that their taking answer upon oath is a very antient usage, but no precedent for other Courts to do the like in matters without such usage. Scroggs; There may be the same reason to take pleas and answers upon oath in this Court, that there is for so doing in Chancery; but the usage of Courts makes a law in such case. Adjournatur, and in Trin. term. prox. 'twas argued again at Bar, and against the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts to give oaths in such cases were cited Rast. Stat. tit. Consultation, fol. 223 b. Hob. 84. Reg. 36. Co. 2 Inst. 557, 657. Roll. Chan. 371. And the civilians were also heard in this case, who affirmed it had been the constant practice of their Courts to proceed upon oath, and to oust them of this power would be to destroy their Courts: that this was never disputed 'till now by these defendants, who being Quakers would not take any oath, and so for their own particular sakes made this attempt to destroy the Ecclesiastical Courts: that the common law itself in some cases requires answer should be upon oath, as in leygager; and that the course and usage of all Courts was the law of the Courts: Dolben Justice cited the case of Scarr versus Burwell in this Court in 1664, when Scarr being sued in the Ecclesiastical [249] Court for being at church with his hat on in time of divine service, and compelled to answer upon oath, prayed a prohibition for that cause upon the same grounds now offered. Whereupon Twysden held a prohibition ought to be granted, to which also Kelynge inclined; but Hyde Chief-Justice totis viribus contra: and after the Court coming to know by information that this was always the course of the Court, a prohibition was denied: and afterwards in this case a consultation was granted per totam Curiam, Scroggs Chief-Just. Jones, Dolben and Pemberton.

Ejectment upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was: One seised in fee of lands worth 10l. per annum devised legacies to several persons to be paid out of the land, amounting in all to 120l. within a year after his death; and after devised the land without any limitation of estate to J. S. under whom the defendant claims. The devisee enjoyed the land three years, and paid 30l. of the legacies, and his executor after his death secured the residue: the heir of the devisee entered, and brought an ejectment; and 'twas argued by Pollexfen for the plaintiff, that the devisee hath only an estate for life; for this is not a devise paying, but here the payment is to be made out of the profits, and the land is bound in the hands of the heir, or whosoever it comes to. Saunders contra: This must be a fee of necessity; otherwise the devisee can never pay 120l. out of the estate, being but 10l. per annum; and therefore 'tis to be looked upon as all one with the cases paying. Jones Just. held it was a fee, but conditionally, as paying; which condition by not paying within the year is broken, and therefore the entry of the heir good. Cæteri tres; 'tis a fee not conditional, but in trust to pay; and gave judgment for the defendant.

Priest or not priest, how triable. S. C. 3 Keb. 567, 827. 2 Jon. 131. 2 Show. pag. 52.

Prohibition to stay a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court to deprive a parson, libelling there that he was not a priest, suggesting here that at the time of his institution he was a priest by episcopal ordination. The defendant pleaded, that at the time of his institution he was not a priest per episcopal ordination, et de hoc ponit se super patriam. The plaintiff demurred, and the sole question was, how this issue should be tried? For the defendant hath put it upon a trial per pais. And now 'twas argued by Masters for the plaintiff, and agreed that priest or not priest is triable by the Ordinary, but priest or not priest at such a time is triable per pais. Plow. Com. 14 b. Roll. Trial. 575. Pollexfen contra. By the Statute of Uniformity all that are not priests are disabled to have livings, and then if not priest, the presentation, &c. are all void, and the church itself void; and then void or not void is to be tried per pais. Jones Just. Case; whereas the plaintiff was a freeman, and had a voice in the election of mayors, the defendant the present mayor refused to receive his vote; and now upon issue and trial the plaintiff was nonsuit, but the roll not marked for double costs. And now the defendant moved to have double costs, which was opposed, because it does not appear whether the plaintiff was non-suit for want of proof that the defendant was the present mayor. 2. The statute gives double costs where the officer is sued for matter done by him in doing his office, and this suit is for non fezans in his office. Cur'. This case is not within the [251] intent of the statute; the scope whereof was, that whereas mayors, &c. were sued for false imprisonment, or such matters, wherein they ought to justify that they may plead the general issue, and shall have double costs, but not in such cases as this.

ETHERINGTON against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

Pope's bull pleaded as inducement notwithstanding stat. of H. 8. Vide dismes Roll. Abr.

A prohibition was prayed suggesting that by stat. 28 H. 8, 16, all briefs, bulls, &c. of the Pope shall be void, and shall not be pleaded, used or allowed in any Court; and yet the defendant libelled against him in the Spiritual Court for a pension, setting forth that the church of Rillington was appropriated per Sanctissimum Patrem Clement. Divina providentia Papam sextum, anno Domini, 1443, al Abby de Belland, and that upon the appropriation the abbot granted to such a bishop the pension, and that so he grounded his suit upon the Pope's bull contrary to this statute: to which 'twas answered, that the bull and appropriation are not used otherwise than as inducements to his title, which is founded upon the grant of the pension, and 'twas necessary to shew the appropriation; for till the appropriation no pension could be granted by the abbot, and it ought to appear how the appropriation was. The statute does not extend to this case; for the statute directs that they who have liberties, &c. granted by the Pope, ought to come to the King within a year, and take new grants from the King, which shall be of the same force and efficacy as the Pope's bulls, &c. Here the bull was not made to the archbishop, nor could he have a grant of the pension from the King, for 'twas not granted to him by the Pope, as it is not necessary for the bishop to shew the King's confirmation, for that is not his title, but only matter of inducement. The prohibition was denied. Levinz for the archbishop.

Stranger puts his beasts into a common, commoner may distrain them.
S. C. 2 Show. pl. 12. Vide ante, 246.

Error of a judgment in replevin in Durham, where the plaintiff avowed that Sunderland is an ancient borough, consisting of twelve capital burgesses, vocat. freemen, and twelve inferior burgesses, vocat', stallingers and that there is a custom there, that every freeman inhabiting any house there, hath common in the place where for so many beasts, scil. for two horse beasts, and four cows; and that every stallenger inhabiting any messuage there, hath common for one cow; and because the plaintiff being a stranger put his beasts there to the prejudice of his common, the defendant avowed the taking. The plaintiff traversed the custom; and the jury found that the capital burgesses scil. the freemen have had common for two horse beasts, and four cows, and that the stallengers have common for one cow. But farther they found, that the wife of every freeman or stallinger inhabiting, have the same common after the death of their husbands. And that the copyholders, burgesses and stallingers have [253] common also pro vaches, vitulis, bobus, spadonibus, juvencis & omnibus ad quantitatem & loco & vice Anglice, their stints, ut præsent' limitat' & si super tota materia, &c. for the plaintiff; upon which verdict judgment was given for the avowant, and therein two errors assigned. 1. That the common found varies and differs from the common pleaded, scil. for sheep, calves, heifers, &c. 2. A custom for inhabitants to have common, is naught, and all one with Gateward's case, 6 Co. Rep. To which it was answered and resolved. 1. The jury have found the custom expresly at first, and the farther finding is void, like the case in Dyer. In assumpsit the jury found that the defendant did assume modo & forma, if J. S. said true; this is good, and the si, &c. surplusage and void; and 3 Cro. 405, Gray v. Fletcher, ibid. &c. 546, Lovelace v. Reynolds in point. 2. The custom here is not for inhabitants, but for freemen and stallingers and inhabitants of the corporation, and the habitation in this case is only restrictive, scil. no common unless they inhabit. 3. The custom alledged for every member is good, as well as when laid in the corporation, to have for them, and each member, &c. as was done in the case of Derby, int' Stables and Mellor, ante. And of this opinion was the Court, and affirmed the judgment. Holt jutior pro querente, Levinz for the defendant in error.

Prohibition was prayed to stay a suit in the Court of York, Pasch. 28 Car. 2, for dissolving a marriage had betwixt one and the daughter of his first wife, because this is not within the Levitical degrees, and a prohibition was granted nisi causa, &c. at which day came Sir John King, and prayed a consultation, because it is within the Levitical degrees, scil. 8 Levit. ver. 14. The nephew shall not marry his father's brother's wife, a pari ratione, the uncle shall not marry his wife's sister's daughter, for they stand in the same degree of proximity; and he said Parson's case, Co. 1 Inst. 252, in margine is the only case against him; and though a prohibition was there granted, yet he said consultation was afterwards awarded. And as authorities for him he cited Man's case, Moore 907. 3 Cro. 228. Hill. 11 Car. 1, B. R. Allen v. Weston. Hob. 181. 2 Roll. 832, and Hill v. Gord in Communi Banco, 1672. Where the marriage of a man with the sister of his first wife, was not judged illegal, reported now by Vaughan. Twysden, Justice, cited Allington's case, wherein it was resolved, that tho' the nephew cannot marry the aunt, yet the uncle may marry the niece; because in the first case the wife was superior to her husband in point of parentage, and therefore the marriage incongruous. But in the latter case the uncle is superior to the niece as well in point of parentage as in point of [255] matrimonial government. But the Court being unwilling to grant a consultation upon motion, ordered the plaintiff should declare, so that the matter should come judicially before them. Accordingly it was done, and the case was argued again much to the same purpose as before for the consultation: and on the other side by Wallop, who much enforced the case of Allington, and cited Grotius de Jure Belli, lib. 2, cap. 5, sect. 12, and Seld. Ux. Hebraica, 594, and that the reason why a marriage between the nephew and the aunt is void, was for the contradiction, and because the wife ought to be in subjection to her husband in point of marriage, and yet in point of parentage would be superior to her own husband; and he said, marriages are not a moral law, but admitted by Christians by ecclesiastical authority, and therefore the Romish doctors hold, that as it was instituted by the authority of the Church, it may be dissolved by the same authority: and 'till marriage became a sacrament they held it dissolveable for many more causes than they have done since they have brought it to be a sacrament, and therefore it stands upon the same reason it did before; and not being in this directly prohibited by the Levitical law, though another case of the same propinquity be forbidden, scil. the nephew and the aunt, yet this marriage between the uncle and the niece ought not to be prohibited, because it is not of the same contradiction and absurdity. 'Twas adjourned, but afterwards (as I heard) a consultation was granted.

LEMAYNE against STANLEY.

[See Roberts v. Phillips, 1855, 4 El. & Bl. 453.]

A will written by the testator himself, but not signed by him, good. S. C. 3 Mod. 219. 2 Danvers 542, pl. 12. Lex Test. 484, 485. Post 86. 1 Ventris 341. 1 Sid. 315, 362. 2 Ventris 350. Douglas 230. Right v. Price.

In ejectment upon not guilty, and a special verdict the case was: Stanley seised in fee writ his will with his own hand; beginning, In the name of God, Amen, I John Stanley make this my last will and testament, and thereby devised the lands in question, and put to his seal, but did not subscribe his name, only had it subscribed by three witnesses in his presence; and all this was done after 29 Car. 2, against Frauds and Perjuries; and whether this was a good will to pass the lands? was the question: and after several arguments it was adjudged by the whole Court, sc. North, Wyndham, Charlton, and Levinz, to be a good will; for being written by himself, and his name in the will, it is a sufficient signing within the statute, which does not appoint where the will shall be signed, in the top, bottom, or margin, and therefore a signing in any part is sufficient: and per North, Wyndham, and Charlton, the putting of his seal had of itself been a sufficient signing within the statute; for signum is no more than a mark, and sealing is a sufficient mark that this is his will: but Levinz (1) doubted of this upon the case in Roll. 1 Abridgm. 245, f. 25. Submission to an award ita quod it be made, signed, and delivered, the arbitrator makes an award, and delivers it, but does not sign it: et [2] per Cur'. It is not good; but all agreeing upon the other reason, judgment was accordingly given for the defendant.

MICHAELMAS, 32 AND 33 CHARLES II. ROLL 495.

THE COUNTESS OF PORTLAND against COLE.

Vide post 66. Declaration in assumpsit. Joinder.

London, to wit.—Maurice Cole, late of Whitlesly, in the Isle of Ely, in the county of Cambridge, gentleman, was attached to answer Frances Countess of Portland, of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And thereupon the said countess by Robert Bird her attorney complains, that whereas the said Maurice, upon the 20th day of October, in the 29th year of the reign of the lord the now King, &c. at London, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, had accounted together with the said countess of divers sums of money by the said Maurice to the said countess then due and being in arrear, and as yet unpaid; and upon that account the said Maurice was found in arrear to the said countess in 1207l. 6s. 7d. of the lawful money of England, and so being found thereupon in the arrear aforesaid, the said Maurice in consideration thereof afterwards to wit, upon the said 20th day of October, in the 29th year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, upon himself assumed and to the said countess then and there faithfully promised, that he the said Maurice the said 1207l. 6s. 7d. to the said countess when thereto afterwards he should be requested, would well and faithfully pay and content. And whereas also the said Maurice afterwards to wit, on the 1st day of May, in the 30th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, &c. at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, had accounted together with the said countess of divers other sums of money by the said Maurice to the said countess then due and being in arrear, and in like manner unpaid; and upon that account the said Maurice was found in arrear to the said countess in 1338l. 9s. 8¾d. of the like money, and so being found thereupon in the arrear aforesaid, the said Maurice in consideration thereof, afterwards to wit, on the said 1st day of May, in the 30th year aforesaid, at [3] London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, upon himself assumed, and to the said countess then and there faithfully promised, that he the said Maurice the said 1338l. 9s. 8¾d. to the said countess when thereto afterwards he should be requested, would well and faithfully pay and content. And whereas also the said Maurice on the 1st day of February, in the 32d year of the reign of the lord the now King, &c. at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, had accounted together with the said countess of divers other sums of money by the said Maurice to the said countess then and in like manner due and being in arrear, and then unpaid; and upon that account the said Maurice was found in arrear to the said countess in 1924l. 7s. 3d. of the like money, and so being found thereupon in the arrear aforesaid, the said Maurice in consideration thereof afterwards to wit, upon the said 1st day of February, in the 32d year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, upon himself assumed, and to the said countess then and there faithfully promised, that he the said Maurice the said 1924l. 7s. 3d. to the said countess when thereto afterwards he should be requested, would well and faithfully pay and content. And whereas also the said Maurice afterwards to wit, upon the 30th day of February, in the 32d year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, in consideration that the said Maurice then and there had received of several persons several sums of money, amounting in the whole to two thousand pounds of the like money to the said countess due, to the use of the said countess, upon himself assumed and to the said countess then and there faithfully promised, that he the said Maurice the said two thousand pounds to the said countess, when thereto afterwards he should be requested, would well and faithfully pay and content. And whereas also the said Maurice afterwards to wit, upon the 1st day of March, in the 32d year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, was indebted to the said countess in three thousand pounds of the like money, for money by the said Maurice for the said countess, to the use of the said countess before that time had and received; and so thereupon being indebted the said Maurice in consideration thereof, afterwards to wit, upon the day and year last specified, at London aforesaid, [4] in the parish and ward aforesaid, upon himself assumed and to the said countess then and there faithfully promised, that he the said Maurice the said three thousand pounds to the said countess when thereto afterwards he should be requested, would well and faithfully pay and content. Nevertheless the said Maurice his several promises and assumptions aforesaid not regarding, but contriving and fraudulently intending the said countess craftily and subtilly to deceive and defraud, the said several sums of money or one penny thereof to the said countess hath not paid, nor her in any wise hath contented for the same, [although so to do by the said countess afterwards to wit, upon the 20th day of March, in the 32d year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, he oftentimes was requested,] but to pay the same to her hitherto altogether hath refused, and still doth refuse, to the damage of the said countess of 2000l. and thereupon she brings her suit, &c.

(1) Nor do I think sealing is to be considered as signing, and I declare so now, because if that question ever comes before me, I shall not think myself precluded from weighing it thoroughly, and decreeing that it is not signing, notwithstanding the obiter dicta which in many cases were nunquam dictâ, but barely the words of the reporters, for upon examination I have found many of the sayings ascribed to that great man Lord C. J. Holt were never said by him. Per Willes, C.J. 1 Vesey jun. 13. But testator's declaration before three witnesses that it is his will is equivalent to signing it before them, and constitutes a good will within the 5th, or a revocation of a will within the 6th sections of the Statute of Frauds, the 29th Charles the 2d, c. 3. 1 Vesey jun. 11. The Irish Statute of Frauds is the 7th Wil. 3, c. 12, and its third section corresponds with the two above mentioned.

And the said Maurice Cole by Edward Ferrour his attorney cometh and saith that the said countess to her writ aforesaid ought not to be answered—because he saith that before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said countess, to wit, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace of the lord the King held at Westminster for the Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of the Collegiate Church of the Liberty of St. Peter, Westminster, of the city, borough and town of Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, and Saint Martin le Grand, London, on Monday, to wit, the 13th day of July, in the 26th year of the reign of our Lord Charles the Second, by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland King, defender of the faith, &c. before William Earl Craven, John Cutler, Knight and Baronet, Edward Grey, Esquire, Charles Herbert, Knight, Surveyor General of the said lord the King, Edmund Bury Godfrey, Knight, Richard Newman, Esquire, and others their fellows, justices of the said lord the King, assigned to preserve the peace of the said lord the King within the liberty aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdeeds within the liberty aforesaid committed, by the oath of William Drew, Richard Ewstice, Edward Waite, Richard Rawlins, Alexander Hilton, Edward Watts, James Diston, John Felmingham, John Pierson, Thomas Crosse, Erasmus Draiton, William Lodge, William Farlowe, William Timbe, Thomas Hoskins, James Blundel, and John Nichols, good and lawful men of the liberty aforesaid, sworn and charged to enquire for the said lord the [5] King, and for the body of the liberty aforesaid, it was presented that the said countess, by the name of Frances Countess of Portland, then late of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields, within the liberty aforesaid, in the county of Middlesex, upon the 1st day of March, in the 26th year of the reign of our Lord Charles the 2d, by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland King, &c. then being of the age of sixteen years and upwards, from the said first day of March, in the year aforesaid, had not repaired to her parish church, nor to any other church, chapel, or usual place of common prayer, at any time within the space of one month next ensuing the said 1st day of March in the year aforesaid, but had forborne the same from the said 1st day of March in the year aforesaid, for the said space of one entire month, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and also against the peace of the said lord the now King, his Crown and dignity, &c. whereupon at the said Session of the Peace public proclamation was made, and then and there by the said proclamation according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, by the said Court the said Frances Countess of Portland was commanded that she should surrender her body to the bailiff of the liberty aforesaid, before the next Quarter Session of the Peace to be held for the liberty aforesaid, or otherwise she would be convicted of the trespass and contempt aforesaid, in the indictment aforesaid above specified, according to the form of the statute in that behalf made and provided. And afterwards to wit, at the next Quarter Session of the Peace of the said lord the King held at Westminster aforesaid, for the liberty aforesaid, on Monday to wit, the 5th day of October, in the 26th year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, before William Earl Craven, John Cutler, Knight and Baronet, Edmund Bury Godfrey, Knight, Philip Matthews, Baronet, and William Dolben, Esquire, then justices of the said lord the King, assigned to preserve the peace of the said lord the King within the liberty aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdeeds within the liberty aforesaid committed, [before which day the said Frances Countess of Portland, as appeared to the Court of Session aforesaid, did not surrender her body to the bailiff of the liberty aforesaid], the said Frances Countess of Portland did not appear of record, to answer the said lord the King of the trespass and contempt aforesaid, in the indictment [6] aforesaid above specified, but made default; and the said default of the said Frances Countess of Portland by the Court of Session aforesaid then and there was recorded, whereby the said Frances Countess of Portland of the trespass and contempt aforesaid, in the indictment aforesaid specified, according to the form of the statute in that behalf made and provided, in the said Court of Quarter Session then and there was convicted, as by the record thereof in the said Court remaining, [the tenor of which by the writ of the said lord the King of certiorari into the Court here is duly removed and remains], more fully is manifest and appears. And the said Maurice further saith that the said record had as aforesaid, in its full force and effect as yet remains not revoked, reversed, or annulled, and this he is ready to verify by the record of the conviction aforesaid, where, when, and as the Court of the said lord the King here shall consider. Whereupon the said Maurice prays that the plaint aforesaid may remain without a day, until the said countess shall conform herself and repair to church and hear divine service, and shall receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper according to the laws of this kingdom of England, and shall take the oath appointed and prescribed by a certain Act made and provided in the Parliament of the Lord James late King of England, held by prorogation at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, the 5th day of November, in the 3d year of his reign, entitled An Act for the Better Discovering and Repressing of Popish Recusants, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. With this that the said Maurice further will verify that the said countess the now plaintiff, and the said countess in the record of the conviction aforesaid above named are one and the same person, and not other nor different; and with this that the said Maurice further also will verify that the said Frances Countess of Portland, after the said 5th day of October, in the 26th year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, and before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said countess, or as yet hath not conformed herself, nor hath repaired to church, nor hath heard divine service, nor hath received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper according to the laws of this kingdom of England, nor hath taken the oath appointed and prescribed by the said Act, entitled An Act for the Better Discovering and Repressing of Popish Recusants, &c.

[7] And the said countess saith that the said Maurice, notwithstanding any thing by him above before alledged, ought to answer her writ aforesaid.—Because she saith that after the indictment and conviction aforesaid, and before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said countess, the said lord the now King by his letters patent, sealed with his Great Seal of England, made at Westminster aforesaid, in the said county of Middlesex, on the eleventh day of June, in the 31st year of the reign of the said lord the now King, &c. hath pardoned, remised, and released to the said Frances Countess of Portland, the crime, offence, trespass, and contempt in the indictment and record of conviction in the said plea of the said Maurice above mentioned and specified by her the said countess so as aforesaid committed, and whereof as aforesaid she is convicted, and also the indictment and conviction aforesaid, and all pains and penalties whatsoever, of, for or concerning the premisses aforesaid, against the said countess, before that time had, made, rendered, or adjudged, and the firm peace of the said lord the King to her thereupon gave and granted, so that she should stand right in the Court of the said lord the King, if any person would speak against her concerning the premisses. And the said countess brings here into Court the said letters patent of the said lord the now King, sealed under the Great Seal of England, testifying the premisses which follow in these words—Charles the 2d, by the grace of God, &c. to all to whom our present letters shall come, greeting—Whereas at the General Quarter Session of our Peace held at Westminster, for the Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of the Collegiate Church of the Liberty of Saint Peter, Westminster, of the city, borough, and town of Westminster, and of St. Martin le Grand, London, on Monday to wit, the 13th day of July, in the 26th year of our reign, before William Earl Craven, John Cutler, Knight and Baronet, Edward Grey, Esquire, Charles Herbert, Knight, our Surveyor General, Edmund Bury Godfrey, Knight, Richard Newman, Esquire, and others their fellows, our justices, assigned to preserve our peace within the liberty aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdeeds within the liberty aforesaid committed, by the oath of William Drew, Richard Ewstice, Edward Waite, Richard Rawlins, Alexander Hilton, Edward Watts, James Diston, John Felmingham, John Pearson, Thomas Crosse, Erasmus Draiton, William Lodge, William Farlowe, William Timbe, Thomas Hoskins, James Blundell, and John Nichols, good and lawful men of the liberty aforesaid, sworn and charged to enquire for us and the body of the liberty [8] aforesaid, it was presented that our beloved and faithful cousin Frances Countess of Portland, by the name of Frances Countess of Portland, then late of the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, within the liberty aforesaid, in the county of Middlesex, on the first day of March, in the 26th year of our reign, then being of the age of sixteen years and upwards, from the said 1st day of March, in the year aforesaid, had not repaired to her parish church, nor to any church, chapel, or usual place of common prayer, nor had been there during the time of common prayer, at any time within the space of one month next ensuing the 1st day of March, in the year aforesaid, but had forborne the same from the said 1st day of March, in the year aforesaid, for the space aforesaid of one entire month, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and also against our peace, our Crown and dignity, &c. Whereupon at the said Session of the Peace public proclamation was made, and then and there by the proclamation aforesaid according to the form of the statute in that behalf made and provided, by the said Court the said Frances Countess of Portland was commanded that she should render her body to the bailiffs of the liberty aforesaid, before the next Quarter Sessions of our Peace to be held for our liberty aforesaid, or otherwise she would be convicted of the trespass and contempt aforesaid, in the indictment aforesaid above specified, according to the form of the statute in that behalf made and provided. And afterwards to wit, at the next Quarter Session of our Peace held at Westminster aforesaid, for the liberty aforesaid, on Monday to wit, the 5th day of October, in the 26th year of our reign aforesaid, before the said William Earl Craven, John Cutler, Edmund Bury Godfrey, and Philip Matthews, Baronets, and William Dolben, Esquire, then our justices assigned to preserve our peace within the liberty aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdeeds within the liberty aforesaid committed, [before which day the said Frances Countess of Portland, as appeared to the Court of Session aforesaid, had not rendered her body to the bailiffs of the liberty aforesaid], she the said Frances Countess of Portland did not appear of record to answer to us of the trespass and contempt aforesaid, in the indictment aforesaid above specified, but made default; and the said default of the said Frances Countess of Portland, by the Court of Session aforesaid then and there was recorded, whereby the said Frances Countess of Portland of the trespass and [9] contempt aforesaid, in the indictment aforesaid specified, according to the form of the statute in that behalf made and provided, in the said Court of Quarter Sessions then and there was convicted, as by the record of the said conviction in the said Court remaining, more fully is manifest and appears—Now know ye that we moved with piety, of our especial grace, certain knowledge and mere motion have pardoned, remised and released, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors do pardon, remise and release to the said Frances Countess of Portland, or by whatsoever other name or sir-name, or addition of name or sir-name, dignity, title, office, or place the said Frances Countess of Portland is known, reputed, called or named, or lately was known, reputed, called or named, the crime, offence, trespass and contempt in the indictment and record of conviction above recited, mentioned and specified by the said Frances Countess of Portland so as aforesaid committed, and whereof as aforesaid she is convicted; although the said Frances Countess of Portland is or is not for or concerning the premisses arrested, indicted, impeached, outlawed, condemned, convicted, or adjudged, and also the indictment and conviction aforesaid before recited in these presents, and all and singular other indictments, informations, inquisitions, convictions, condemnations, executions, imprisonments, punishments, and all other pains and penalties whatsoever, of, for, or concerning the premisses aforesaid or any of them, upon or against the said Frances Countess of Portland before this time had, made, rendered or adjudged, and also all, and all manner of actions, plaints, suits, and demands whatsoever, which we against the said Frances Countess of Portland, of, for, or because of the premisses have had, have or in any manner in future can have, or which our heirs or successors can have, and the suit of our peace which to us against her belongs or can belong, by reason of the premisses. And we give and grant to her thereupon, by these presents, our firm peace, so that she may stand right in our Court if any person will speak against her, because of the premisses. And further of our bountiful especial grace, we give, grant, and restore by these presents unto the said Frances Countess of Portland, her heirs, executors, and administrators, all and all manner of forfeitures and losses, of all and singular her goods and chattels, manors, messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever, to us [10] by reason of the premisses forfeited or lost, in whosesoever hands or possession they now are or ought to be. To have, hold and enjoy to the said Frances Countess of Portland, her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, of our gift for ever, and to be taken in whosesoever hands or possession they severally are, without giving, paying, or making any account or any other thing therefore to us, our heirs or successors; being unwilling that the said Frances Countess of Portland, her heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, by the sheriffs, justices, escheators, bailiffs, or the other ministers of us our heirs or successors, should be molested, troubled, disturbed or in any wise opposed, because of the premisses. But that these our letters patent, or the enrollment thereof, and the pardon, grant and restitution in the same contained, as to all and singular the premisses above mentioned, are and shall be good, firm, valid and effectual in law, although the crime, offence, trespass or contempt aforesaid, is not certainly specified; and that this our pardon in all our Courts and elsewhere, shall be interpreted and adjudged in the most beneficial and benign sense, for the better discharging of the said Frances Countess of Portland, according to our true intent, without any ambiguity, question or delay whatsoever; and also shall be pleaded and allowed in all our Courts and before all our justices, without any writ of allowance in that behalf first obtained or to be obtained, notwithstanding the indictment or conviction aforesaid; and the several proceedings thereupon be not recited or mentioned; and notwithstanding the statute made in the Parliament of the Lady Elizabeth, late Queen of England, held in the 23d year of her reign; and notwithstanding the statute made in the Parliament of the said Queen Elizabeth, held in the 29th year of her reign; or any other statute, Act, ordinance, proclamation or restriction before this time made, enacted or provided, or any other thing, cause or [11] matter whatsoever, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent; witness our self at Westminster the 11th day of June in the 31st year of our reign; and this the said countess is ready to verify; wherefore she prays judgment, and that the said Maurice to her writ aforesaid may answer, &c.

And the said Maurice saith, that the said countess at any time, before the making of the letters patent aforesaid, or afterwards, hitherto hath not conformed herself, nor hath repaired to church, nor hath heard divine service, nor hath received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the laws of this kingdom of England: nor hath taken the oath appointed by the said Act of Parliament, entitled, An Act for the Better Repressing of Popish Recusants, in the plea of the said Maurice above-mentioned; and this he is ready to verify; wherefore as before, he prays that the plaint aforesaid may remain without a day, until, &c.

And the said countess saith, that the said plea of the said Maurice above by rejoining pleaded, and the matter in the same contained are not sufficient in law to delay the plaint aforesaid of the said countess against the said Maurice; and that she to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is she bound by the law of the land to answer, and this she is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient rejoinder of the said Maurice in this behalf, the said countess as before prays judgment, and that the said Maurice to her writ aforesaid may answer, &c.

And the said Maurice, because that he above by rejoining hath alleged sufficient matter in law to cause the said plaint to remain without a day, until, &c. which he is ready to verify; which matter the said countess doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise doth answer, but altogether, doth refuse to admit that averment, as before, prays judgment and that the said plaint may remain without day, until, &c. And because, &c.

COUNTESS OF PORTLAND against COLE.

Recusancy pleaded in abatement, not saying papalis recusans. It was the plaintiff demurred, ut videas supra. Post. 66. The English statutes against popish recusants are, 23 Eliz. c. 1. 29 Eliz. c. 6. 35 Eliz. c. 1. 1 Ja. I. c. 4. 3 Ja. I. c. 4, 5. 7 Ja. I. c. 6. 25 C. II. c. 2. 16 Geo. II. c. 30.

Assumpsit for monies received; the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff was recusant convict for not coming to church. The plaintiff replied, that the King had pardoned the conviction; upon which the defendant demurred: and now it was objected, that the plea was naught for not averring that the plaintiff was a popish recusant, and the statute 3 Jac. 5 does not make any recusant convict excommunicate, but only such as are popish recusants convict; and any other persons may be convict for not coming to church. And North Chief Justice and Wyndham inclined, that an averment of popish recusant would not be sufficient here, if it be not expressed in the indictment itself, that he is papalis recusans. [12] Charlton and Levinz contra; they held it might be supplied by averment; for the indictments have run generally as this is, without express saying papalis recusans. And a respondeas ouster was awarded by the whole Court for want of this averment; and see Pasch. 33 C. 2, in Com. Banc. Rot. 703, a like case.

HILARY 32 & 33 CHARLES II. ROLL 495.

THE KING against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, AND OTHERS.

Quare impedit.

York, to wit.—Richard Archbishop of York, and Stephen Sowton, clerk, were summoned to answer to the lord the now King, of a plea, that they permit the lord, the now King to present a proper person to the church of Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston, which is void and belongs to his donation, &c. And whereupon Creswell Levinz, Knight, Attorney General of the said lord the now King, who for the said lord the King in this behalf prosecutes, for the said lord the King saith, that Charles now Earl of Carlisle, late Charles Howard, Esq. was seized of the advowson of the church aforesaid; as of one in gross by itself as of fee and right, and so being thereof seized, to the church aforesaid being vacant, presented one William Dealtry his clerk, who on the presentation of the said earl was admitted, instituted, and inducted into the same, in the time of peace, in the time of the said lord the now King; and the said Attorney General, &c. for the said lord the King further saith, that the said church being full and consulted, the said earl afterwards, to wit, on the first day of September in the 25th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston aforesaid, by his certain writing, sealed with his seal, gave and granted to one Thomas Stephens, clerk, his executors, administrators and assigns, the first and next advowson, donation, presentation and free disposition of the church aforesaid, to have perceive and enjoy the said first and next advowson, donation, presentation, and free disposition of the church aforesaid to the said Thomas, his executors, administrators and assigns for the first and next avoidance of the same only, by virtue of which grant, the said Thomas was possessed of the said advowson of the said church, for the said first and next avoidance of the [13] same only, and being so thereof possessed, the said Thomas afterwards, to wit, upon the first day of October, in the 25th year of the reign of the said lord, the now King, aforesaid, at Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston aforesaid, by his certain writing, sealed with his seal, granted and assigned to one William Stephens, his executors, administrators and assigns, all his right, estate, title and interest aforesaid, which he then had of and in the advowson aforesaid, by virtue of which grant the said William, was of the said advowson of the church aforesaid, for the said first and next avoidance of the same possessed; and the said William so being thereof possessed, afterwards to wit, upon the 29th day of May, in the 26th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, the church aforesaid became void by the death of the said William Dealtry, the last incumbent. And the said Attorney General, &c. for the said lord the King further saith, that by a certain Act made and provided in the Parliament of the Lady Elizabeth, late Queen of England, &c. held at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, in the 31st year of her reign; among other things it is enacted by the authority of the said Parliament, that if any person or persons, bodies politick or corporate, at any time after the end of forty days, next after the end of the said session of Parliament, for any sum of money, reward, gift, profit, or benefit directly or indirectly, or for or by reason of any promise, agreement, grant, bond, covenant or other assurance of or for any sum of money, reward, gift, profit or benefit whatsoever, directly or indirectly, should present or collate any person to any benefice with the cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or ecclesiastical living; or should give or bestow the same for or in respect of any such corrupt cause or consideration: that then every such presentation, collation, gift and bestowing, and every admission, institution, investiture and induction thereupon should be void, frustrate, and of no effect in law; and that it might and should be lawful to and for the said lady the Queen, her heirs and successors to present, collate unto, or give or bestow every such benefice, dignity, prebend and ecclesiastical living, for that one time and term only, as by the said Act among other things more fully [14] appears: and the said Attorney General, &c. for the said lord the King further saith, that the said church at the said time of the making of the Act aforesaid, was and still is an ecclesiastical living; and that after the end of forty days next after the end of the said session of the Parliament aforesaid, to wit upon the 19th day of August, in the 26th year aforesaid, at Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston aforesaid, between the said Stephen Sowton and one Anne Stephens, the sister and familiar friend of the said William, the church aforesaid so being void, it was simonically and corruptly agreed, that in consideration that the said Anne would present or cause to be presented, the said Stephen Sowton to the said church of Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston, so as aforesaid void, the said Stephen should give to the said Anne 53l. whereupon the said William Stephens by the procurement of the said Anne, afterwards, to wit, upon the 1st day of October, in the 26th year aforesaid, to the church aforesaid, so as aforesaid void, presented the said Stephen Sowton, who at the presentation of the said William, afterwards, to wit, upon the 1st day of December, in the 26th year aforesaid, in fact was instituted and inducted into the said church; by colour of which, and by force of the statute aforesaid, the said presentation of the said Stephen Sowton, by the said William to the church aforesaid made, and the said institution and induction of the said Stephen thereupon had, became entirely void in law; and by reason whereof, it belongs to the said lord the now King, by force of the statute aforesaid, to present a proper person to the church aforesaid, so void at the present: and the said archbishop and Stephen, the said lord the now King unjustly hinder, to the damage of the said lord the now King of 100l. And this the said Attorney General of the said lord the now King, is ready to verify, &c.

And the said archbishop and Stephen, by Thomas Langley their attorney come and defend the force and injury, when, &c. And the said archbishop saith, that he neither has nor claims to have any thing in the church aforesaid, nor in the advowson of the said church, except the admission and institution of the parsons into the said church, and the amoval of them therefrom, and the other things which belong to the Ordinary, as the Ordinary of the place, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he doth not apprehend that the said lord the now King, without a special disturbance in the person of the said archbishop to be assigned, the said archbishop will or [15] ought to impeach or trouble, &c. And the said Stephen Sowton saith, that he neither hath nor claims to have any thing in the advowson of the said church; but further saith that he is the parson of the said church by the presentation of the said William Stephens, who as yet is alive and in full life, to wit, at Fowlton, otherwise Fowleston aforesaid, wherefore because that the said William is not named in the said writ, he prays judgment of the said writ, &c. And the said Attorney General, who, &c. as to the said plea of the said archbishop, because the said archbishop neither has nor claims to have any thing in the said church, nor in the advowson of the same, except the admission and institution of the parsons into the said church, and the amoval of them therefrom, and the other things which belong to the Ordinary, as the Ordinary of the place, prays judgment against the said archbishop, and the writ to the said archbishop, &c. Therefore it is considered that the lord the now King recover against the said archbishop his presentation to the said church, and that he have the writ to the said archbishop; that notwithstanding the disclaimer of the said archbishop he admit a proper person to the said church at the presentation of the said lord the King, &c. and no amercement against the said archbishop, because he hath excused himself of the special disturbance, &c. But let execution thereupon stay, until the said plea, between the said lord the now King, and the said Stephen be determined. And as to the said plea of the said Stephen for quashing of the said writ in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, the said Attorney General, who, &c. saith, that the said plea of the said Stephen, in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, is not sufficient in law to quash the said writ of the said lord the King, and that he for the said lord the King to the said plea by the said Stephen, for quashing of the said writ in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore, because the said writ is sufficient in law he prays judgment, and that the said writ may be adjudged good, &c.

And the said Stephen because that he sufficient matter in law for quashing of the said writ above hath pleaded, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said Attorney General, who, &c. doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer; but altogether doth refuse to admit that averment, as before prays judgment of the writ aforesaid. And because the justices here will advise of and upon the premises before they give their judgment [16] thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid, here until the day of Easter, in fifteen days to hear their judgement thereupon, because the justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

THE KING against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK AND STEPHEN SOWTON.

In quare impedit for simony need not make the patron a defendant. Vide post. 83, 115, 206, 237. 2 Lut. 1086, 1087, &c. Nel. Lut. 345. 2 Bla. Com. 279. 19 Vin. Ab. 474.

Quare impedit, and counts, that Charles Earl of Carlisle was seised in fee of the advowson of the church of Foulston ut de uno grosso, and presented Dealtry, who was instituted and inducted, and after granted the next avoidance to Stephens, and the church became void by the death of Dealtry, and then sets forth the Statute of Simony, and a simoniacal agreement between the defendant and Anne, sister of Stephens; whereupon the defendant was presented, admitted, &c. Cujus prætextu & vigore statuti it belongs to the King to present, and the defendants hindered him. The archbishop claims nothing but as Ordinary. Sowton pleads in abatement, that the patron is not named in the writ: upon which the Attorney General demurred, and after argument it was adjudged that the patron need not be named in this case, for his title is not now in question, but admitted; for the King claims in affirmance of his title, and in his right, but by the fault of the defendant; and the patron shall not be put out of possession by the recovery in this action; and he hath had the fruit of his presentment; but his clerk shall be removed because of the simony; and therefore the patron need not be made a party; by North, Wyndham and Levinz, upon 7 Co. 26, Hall's case de quare impedit. 7 H. 4, 35. 47 E. 3, 11. But Charlton doubted, for the patron is not only to have his clerk admitted, but to have him some time in under his induction, by which he came in: but a respondeas ouster was awarded.

Upon a bad plea in award, a breach needs not be assigned. Vide post, 23, 24. 1 Salk. 69, 72, 138. Freeman, 62, 139. Comberbach, 318. Kyd on Awards, 22, 23.

Debt upon an obligation against William Blorksidge, conditioned that if he and Joseph Blorksidge his son, and each of them, perform the award of A. and B. arbitrators indifferently chosen to arbitrate between the parties, &c. ita quod, &c. then the obligation to be void: the defendant pleads, that Joseph his son was within age; and the plaintiff demurred. And now it was argued by Bigland, that submission by an infant is void, and a submission being void in part, both that and the award are void in toto; and cited March Rep. 141, Rudson v. Yates, and Jones Rep. Knight v. Stone. As to the point, whether the submission by an infant, or by the father on behalf of an infant, be void? the Court gave no opinion. But they held clearly, that the father's submission for himself was good, and the arbitrators may make their award between him and the plaintiff only; and the plea does not answer to that, but contains a collateral matter in bar, and therefore though no breach be assigned, nor no award pleaded in the replication, judgment for the plaintiff.

Cranden against Walden.

That a parson preaches lies, suable in the Ecclesiastical Court. Post. 18.

Prohibition for saying of a parson, He preaches nothing but lies and malice in the pulpit; for these words are actionable at common law; 1 Roll. Abr. 58, Drake's case, and therefore not suable in the Ecclesiastical Court: but a consultation was granted; for it concerning an ecclesiastical person and an ecclesiastical matter, it is fit to be tried there, and it is no certain rule that a thing triable here is not triable there; witness violent hands upon a parson, a pension by prescription, &c.

[18] Linfield against Ferne.

Award to pay, upon condition that he shall acquit. Award to pay the charge of a suit upon a bill delivered.

Debt upon an obligation condition to perform an award; the defendant pleaded no award: the plaintiff replied, an award that he should pay the defendant 20s. upon condition that each should acquit the other of all things submitted, and that the defendant should pay the plaintiff the charge of a suit now depending between them, and the plaintiff gave the defendant a bill of charges; and for breach assigns, that the charges amounted to 40s. of which he delivered a bill to the defendant, and he had not paid it. Upon this the defendant demurred, and now took two exceptions. 1. That the award is not absolute, but conditional, scil. that the plaintiff should pay the defendant 20s. upon condition that each shall acquit the other, &c. 2. That the award does not ascertain what the charges are, but refers them to a bill to be given by the plaintiff: sed per Cur'. As to the first on condition they shall acquit is an award that they shall acquit; and as to the second, the charges are ascertained by the bill delivered, Cro. Cha. Beale vers. Beale. Judgment for the plaintiff.

BLACKHOUSE against MOORE.

S. C. 1 Danvers 25, 9.

Trover de aliis utensiliis. 2 Lev. 85, 176. 2 Stra. 738, 809, 810, 827.

Trover for several goods in particular, & aliis utensiliis, Anglice implements. After verdict and entire damages, judgment was stayed, for aliis utensiliis quot, quanta, vel qualia, are uncertain.

YATES against LODGE.

Suit for saying of a parson, He lies with all the women in D. and prohibition denied. Ante. 17.

A prohibition was prayed to stay a suit in the Spiritual Court, which was for saying of the Parson of Hatton, He is a lying fellow, and has lain with all the women between Hatton and D. He lies so much with other women, that he lies not with his (own) wife, but denied; for these words spoken of an ecclesiastical person are very scandalous though not actionable, at common law.

[19] PITT against RUSSEL.

A que estate in a term, when it may be pleaded. 1 Salk. 363. 2 Salk. 562. 1 Lev. 190. Raym. 389. 1 Mod. 231. Nel. Lut. 29. 1 Lev. 190. Non infregit conventiones. 1 Lev. 183. 1 Sid. 289.

Covenant, and declares of a lease made by the Queen to George Baker, and brings the reversion to himself by divers mesne conveyances, and the term to the defendant by a que estate he hath by several mesne conveyances generally, concurrentibus his quæ in jure requiruntur, and assigns divers breaches in not repairing the premisses. The defendant pleads, non infregit conventiones. The plaintiff demurs; and upon argument by George Strode for the plaintiff, and Baldwin for the defendant, judgment was given for the plaintiff. 1. A que estate in a term may be pleaded in a person under whom the party claims not, but is a stranger, for he is not privy to the estate, nor to the conveyances made to a stranger; but one cannot plead a que estate in a term in himself, or in any other under whom he himself claims; Hill. 18 E. 4, pl. 29. Dy. 238, 6, and so it was adjudged Mich. 18 Car. 2, B. R. Cotes versus Wade, and so are Co. Lit. 121 a. and Cro. Eliz. 22, to be understood. 2. The plea is too general; for first, several breaches are alledged; secondly, two negatives cannot make a good issue, and the breach is in non reparando, and therefore non infregit, &c. can be no good plea. Judgment for the plaintiff.

CONYERS against FRANKE.

Amercement pleaded without affeerment, bad. 4 Bac. Abr. 89. 1 Salk. 108.

Trespass for taking several goods; the defendant justifies for several amerciaments assessed in a court-baron, but shews no affeerment by the affeerers. Upon this the plaintiff demurred generally, and adjudged for the plaintiff by the whole Court upon the first argument for this cause.

[20] COTES against MICHILL AND OTHERS.

Officer may justify by the writ without the judgment, but plaintiff cannot. Post 113. 4 Bac. Ab. 450.

Trespass for breaking his house, and taking his goods, against a bailiff and the lessor in ejectment. The plaintiff pleaded an habere facias possessionem, and a warrant thereupon, and so justifies. The lessor pleads non culp. The plaintiff demurred to the plea of the bailiff, because he shews no judgment whereupon the habere facias possessionem was founded; but per Curiam; The plea is good, for the sheriff and his bailiffs are bound to obey the King's writs without enquiry after the judgment. But if the party himself had justified, he must have shewn a judgment as well as a writ. Judgment for the defendant.

DOBSON against DOUGLAS.

In replevin the being bailiff traversed. 1 Leon. 50. 2 Leon. 169, 216. Yelverton 148. 1 Salk. 107. Cro. El. 14. 1 Rol. Rep. 46. Repleader. Vide post 440. 6 Mod. 2, 3, 102. 1 Lev. 32. 2 Lev. 135. 1 Salk. 216. 2 Salk. 579. 4 Bac. Ab. 80, 388.

Replevin; the defendant makes conusance as bailiff of J. S. for a rent-charge. The plaintiff in bar says, that he took the distress without the privity or command of J. S. and that such a day after the distress J. S. came first to have notice, & de advocavit captiones prædictas. The defendant demurred generally: and per Cur'; The bar is naught, for he should have traversed his being bailiff; and he was ruled to replead accordingly, and to mend his bar, paying costs, and go to trial upon issue bailiff, or not?

[21] TRINITY TERM, IN THE THIRTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

BENNET against KING.

In avowry for fealty, &c. Statute of Limitations no plea. Anderson 57, 58.

Replevin, and avows upon tenure by fealty, rent, and suit of court. Plaintiff confesses the tenure, but pleads that the avowant nor none of his ancestors were seised of the said services, or any of them within 50 years. The defendant demurred, and had judgment: for fealty, homage, and such casual services, which peradventure may not happen in 50 years, are not within the statute H. 8 of Limitations, according to Bevil's case, 4 Co. 8, 9, &c.

LANGDON against GOOLE.

Obligation not said to whom made good by the intent of the condition. 1 Lev. 3, 45, 77. 2 Shower 15, 16. 1 Lut. 436. Croke El. 561, 729, 758. 3 Bac. Ab. 692.

Debt as administrator of John Garnes, upon an obligation to John Garnes for 16l. The defendant craved oyer of the obligation, & ei legitur in hæc verba: Know all men, that I Philip Goole do stand bound (not said to whom) in the sum of 16l. and is to be paid to the said John Garnes the elder's executors; for which payment to be made, I bind me, my heirs and executors (but does not say to whom). Then the defendant craves oyer likewise of the condition; which was long and senseless in divers recitals, and inter alia was recited a devise of 8l. by a stranger to be paid to John Garnes the elder within one year after [22] his death: if therefore the defendant shall pay to John Garnes the elder's executors, within one year after his death, the bond shall be void. Whereupon the defendant demurred. And now it was objected for the defendant, that this is no obligation to John Garnes as the plaintiff hath declared; for this is to be paid to John Garnes the elder's executors; so that if the defendant be bound at all, he is bound to the executors of John Garnes; and then the plaintiff being his executor should have sued in his own name, and not as executor upon an obligation made to his testator. But upon argument and deliberation it was resolved by the whole Court, that judgment should be given for the plaintiff; for an obligation cannot be made to executors in the life of the testator, because he cannot have an executor during his life: and this obligation was sealed and delivered to the testator, and it shall not be void, if by any means it can be made good; and some held, that the words John Garnes the elder's executors should be disjoined, and be read, John Garnes the elder his executor, and to be taken John Garnes the elder and his executors. Others held these words, the elder's executors, should be wholly rejected as void, and then the words are to be read to be paid to John Garnes only; for he cannot have executors in his life-time, as Cro. Ja. 358, Goodman versus Knight; where the insensible words in a covenant are rejected as void, and the covenant read in the sensible words only; and per totam Curiam judgment was given for the plaintiff.

GIBBONS against SUMMERS.

Devise of a term to J. and if he die not married, and without issue, to his sisters; and if J. be married, and hath no issue living to enjoy it, to his sisters after the death of J.'s wife. The limitation to the sisters is void as being too remote. 1 Salk. 224, 225, 230. 1 Levinz, 25, 290. 3 Levinz, 264. 1 Mod. 50, 114. 1 Cha. Rep. 229. 1 Eq. Ab. 192. 1 Mod. 52. 1 Sid. 37.

In ejectment upon a long special verdict and devastavit alledged by an executor, and not denied by him, the case was. One possessed of a long term of years in the manor or Whimple devised the same to his son John, and if John die unmarried and without issue, all to go to his daughters and their executors; and if John be married, and have no issue living to enjoy it, then after the death of John's wife to the daughters. John died without issue, and made his sisters his executors. If the sisters take the estate by the devise of their [23] father, they have not wasted: but if they take it as executors to their brother, for whose debts they are sued, then they have wasted. And upon argument and consideration it was now adjudged, that this remainder of the term to the daughters by the devise of the father was void, being a remainder to them upon the death of their brother without issue; and for this reason they take it as executors of their brother, for this is not, as the counsel for the daughters would have had it, to be construed without issue living at his death, whereby the contingency would happen within the compass of a life. And yet if it were so, the Court held it would be void according to Child and Bayly's case, Cro. Ja. 459, for though this hath prevailed in the case of a devise of an inheritance, as in Pell and Brown's case, Cro. Ja. 590, yet it hath never yet obtained in the case of a term: and the Court will not extend a devise of chattels to make perpetuities farther than has been already allowed.(1)

FRUMPTON against PETTIS.

Judgment upon an attachment in London upon an obligation made out of their jurisdiction, voidable by plea. 2 Salk. 675. 1 Lev. 16, 31. Post. 24, 41.

Assumpsit; the defendant pleaded two several attachments of the money in London; scil. one for part of the money due to himself upon obligation, the other for the residue upon an obligation to a stranger. The plaintiff replied, that the two several obligations, upon which the attachments were made, were made extra jurisdictionem Cur' de London. The defendant rejoined, that the obligation to himself was made infra jurisdictionem Cur' de London. The plaintiff demurred, and upon argument and consideration it was adjudged for him; for judgment there given of a thing out of their jurisdiction is absolutely void, and advantage may be taken thereof in pleading, without reversal by writ of error, according to the case of James and Richardson, Trin. 14 Car. 1, B. R. Rot. 1590, reported 1 Roll. 809. Litt. F. pl. 3. And then the rejoinder in this case answers only to part of the replication, and gives no answer to the residue, and therefore the plaintiff ought to have judgment for the whole.

(1) The authority of this case and of Child v. Baily, Cro. Ja. 459, upon which it was adjudged, have been over-ruled by the Lord Nottingham in The Duke of Norfolk's case, 3 Cha. Ca. 1. Ferne's Essay, 2d Vol. 182. C. L. 20 a. n. 5.

[24] MICHAELMAS TERM, IN THE THIRTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

GENNE against TINKER.

An award ill pleaded by the defendant; the plaintiff need not assign a breach. 1 Salk. 138. 1 Saunders, 102. 3 Bac. Ab. 716.

Debt upon an obligation, whereby the defendant and two others were to perform an award made betwixt them and the plaintiff. The defendant pleaded the award; which was, that the defendant should pay the † plaintiff 20s. and each of the others 20s. a-piece, and that he tendered the 20s. so to be paid by him, which the plaintiff refused to accept of. The plaintiff replied, that at a day after the refusal he demanded the said 20s. of the defendant, which the defendant then refused to pay him. The defendant demurred; and per Cur'; the replication is idle: for the 20s. being a sum collateral to the obligation was lost for ever by the first refusal, 9 Co. 79 a. Co. Lit. 207 a. Lit. sect. 338. But then it was resolved that the bar was ill, as answering only to part, scil. that 20s. to be paid by himself, and not to the other sums to be paid by the others, and he is answerable for all; and then the defendant pleading a collateral matter, which is insufficient in law, the plaintiff needs not assign a breach; and so judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[25] BARRINGTON against TURNER AND OTHERS.

Count in trespass vi & armis for killing two greyhounds.

Essex, to wit.—Edward Turner, late of London, Knight, Humphry Fletcher, late of Hatfield Bradock, in the county of Essex aforesaid, yeoman, Robert Casse, late of the same, yeoman, and John Fletcher, late of the same, yeoman, were attached to answer John Barrington, Esquire, of a plea, wherefore with force and arms two greyhounds of the said John Barrington, at Whitfield Bradock in the county aforesaid being, they took and killed—and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said John Barrington, and against the peace of the said lord the now King, &c. And thereupon the said John Barrington by John Brocket his attorney complains, that the said Edward, Humphry, Robert, and John, on the 8th day of April, in the 33d year of the reign of the lord the now King, two greyhounds of the said John Barrington at Hatfield Bradock aforesaid being, did take and kill, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereby the said John Barrington is damaged to the value of 20l. and thereupon he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Edward, Humphry, Robert, and John, by Thomas White their attorney, come and defend the force and injury when, &c. and say that the said John Barrington ought not to have his action aforesaid against them, because they say that the said Edward Turner, Knight, before the said time in which the trespass aforesaid is supposed to be committed, and also at the said time in which, &c. was and as yet is possessed of and in a certain chase, called Hatfield Forest, otherwise Hatfield Chase, in the parish of Hatfield Bradock, in the county aforesaid, in which chase there were and are deer, and at the said time in which, &c. there were deer and other beasts of chase; and the said Edward so being thereof possessed, the said two greyhounds at the time in which, &c. hunted and chased the deer being in the said chase, and one deer of the deer aforesaid in the said chase then and there killed, whereupon the said Edward and [26] they the said Humphry, Robert, and John, as the servants of the said Edward, and by his command, the said greyhounds of the said John Barrington in the chase aforesaid, at the said time in which, &c. took, and in and for the preservation of the said deer in the chase aforesaid being, [lest the said greyhounds should destroy all the deer in the said chase], the said greyhounds killed as it was well and lawful for them to do; and this they are ready to verify, wherefore they pray judgment if the said John Barrington ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said John Barrington saith that he by any thing before alledged, ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid against the said Edward, Humphry, Robert, and John, because he saith that long before and at the said time in which, &c. one John Barrington, Knight and Baronet, was and as yet is seised of and in the manor of Barrington Hall, in Hatfield Bradock aforesaid, in his demesne as of freehold, which manor is and at the said time in which, &c. was without the said chase, called Hatfield Forest, otherwise Hatfield Chase, and without any other chase or forest, but lying contiguous to the said place called the chase, and that the said deer in the said plea mentioned to be killed, and many other deer at the said time in which, &c. were in and upon the said manor eating the grass and corn there growing, and thereupon he the said John Barrington the now plaintiff, as the servant of the said John Barrington Knight and Baronet, with the greyhounds aforesaid, for chasing the deer aforesaid, so being in and upon the said manor, and by his command, the said deer at the said time in which, &c. hunted and chased the said deer in and upon the said manor, &c. and that the said deer so chased then and there ran towards and into the chase aforesaid, in, through and over the hedge of the said John Barrington, Knight and Baronet, in the parish, &c. between the said chase and the said manor, in the ditch of the said John Barrington, Knight and Baronet, in the parish, &c. and that the said greyhounds in chasing the said deer in the said chase, when one of the said deer in their flight forcibly over the hedge aforesaid, into the ditch aforesaid, then and there leaped and ran, in that ditch, the said deer then and there took and killed, and in chasing and pursuing the said [27] deer in the form aforesaid, in the chase aforesaid, the one deer aforesaid there killed, and the said other deer in the chase aforesaid, in the manner and form aforesaid, terrified, hunted and chased, which is the same hunting and chasing of the said deer and the killing of the deer aforesaid, in the plea aforesaid mentioned, without this that the said greyhounds in the chase aforesaid, at the said time in which, &c. hunted and chased the said deer, or killed the said deer in any other manner, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and his damages by occasion of the said trespass to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John say that the said plea of the said John Barrington the plaintiff above by replying pleaded, is not sufficient in law to maintain the action aforesaid of the said John Barrington the plaintiff, against them the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John, and that they to that plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer, and for cause of demurrer in law they the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, shew to the Court here that the said John Barrington the plaintiff by his replication aforesaid doth not answer, nor traverse the matter in the bar of the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John alledged; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said John Barrington the plaintiff in this behalf, the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John pray judgment, and that the said John Barrington may be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said John Barrington because that he above by replying hath alledged sufficient matter in law to have and maintain his action aforesaid, against the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said Edward, Humphry, Robert and John do not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment, and his damages by occasion of the said trespass to be adjudged to him, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premisses before they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here until from the day of St. Michael in three weeks to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

A deer being in my land, I chased her with my dogs, who pursue and kill her in the park, the park-owner may kill the dogs. 1 Saunders 84, 85, 220. 1 Lev. 216. Cro. Ja. 45. Lut. 481. Post 227. Cro. Eliz. 125. 5 Bac. Ab. 174, 263. 1 Poph. 161.

Trespass quare cepit & interfecit two dogs called greyhounds. The defendant justifies, for that the said greyhounds chased a deer in his park, and there killed her, upon which to prevent more mischief by them, he took them and killed them. The plaintiff replied the deer was out of the park in the plaintiff's land, eating his grass, and that thereupon he hounded the greyhounds to chase the deer out of his land, and that they followed the deer into the park, and there killed her. Upon which the defendant demurred; and upon argument it was adjudged, that the replication was ill, because he does not say that he did his endeavour to stop the greyhounds at the side of the park to stay them from entering into the park. But then it was objected, that the bar was ill; for though it was not lawful to chase within the park, yet when the defendant took the greyhounds there, he ought not to have killed them; and for this they cited Roll. 2 Abr. 567, Lewis's case. On the other side was cited Cro. Ja. 45, Wadhurst v. Dam, and afterwards upon consideration of both these books judgment was given for the defendant.

Assumpsit upon a bill of exchange for 20*l.* against the drawer; for that the person against whom it was drawn refused to accept it, and declares upon the custom of merchants. The defendant pleaded outlawry of the plaintiff in bar; whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and for him it was argued, that outlawry is not pleadable in bar, but in abatement only in this case, because the recovery is to be of damages only, which are uncertain as in trespass. But per Curiam: it is pleadable in bar in this case, for the debt itself is certain, though it is to be recovered in damages, and it is forfeitable by outlawry, as debts upon simple contract. But because the defendant concluded his plea ill, with a hoc paratus est verificare, instead of prout patet per recordum, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Case for a double return upon an election of members for Parliament. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was not chosen, and issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that no action lies for a double return; and so after divers arguments by the serjeants at Bar, it was at last resolved. For first, this matter [30] hath not yet been examined in Parliament, as it was in Bernardiston's case; and it would be great presumption in this Court to meddle with elections to Parliament before the matter hath been determined in Parliament. 2. No such action was ever maintained but in Bernardiston's case, and in that the judgment for the plaintiff in B. R. was after reversed in the Exchequer-Chamber, and no writ of error brought in Parliament upon that reversal. 3. Nevill's case about the restoration was sent to Parliament, as a case too grand for this Court, and there it stopped without any determination. 4thly, The statute 23 H. 6 gives remedy for a false return, but none for a double return; and now for this Court to maintain this action would be to break an Act of Parliament, and to give a further remedy than the Parliament itself hath given, and that in matters touching themselves. 5. The Parliament cannot be misconusant of double returns; for they have been frequent; there were no less than 70 double returns to Parliament in 1641, as North Chief Justice said, and yet the Parliament have never thought fit to make a law in this case; wherefore it is not for this Court to make a law in this case, and to maintain that actionable, for which no action was ever yet maintained, which is proof enough against it by the opinion of Littleton upon the Statute of Wards. Therefore judgment was, that the plaintiff shall take nothing by his writ.

And Wyndham and Charlton held, that to call a common person Papist is actionable in respect of the penal laws against Papists; more especially at this time just after the popish plot, for it is dangerous as to their persons to be reputed a Papist, in respect of assaults by the rabble, and words are no otherwise actionable than in respect of the scandal, damage, and danger, they subject a person to. North and Levinz held it not actionable to call a common person Papist, but that it was actionable to call officers Papists, and that in respect of their dignity, and the danger of losing their offices, of which Papists in most cases are not capable; and words may be actionable in respect of officers of dignity, and who are interested in the administration of the Government, which are not actionable in the case of common persons, 3 Cro. 195, Sir William Walgrave's case; 2 Cro. 561, Sir John Harper versus Beaumont; ibid. 202. TRINITY, 33 CHARLES II.

THE MAYOR, SHERIFFS, CITIZENS AND COMMONALTY OF NORWICH against JOHNSON.

Declaration in waste. Statutes concerning waste are, 52 H. 3, c. 23. 6 Ed. 1, c. 5. 13 Ed. 1, c. 14. 20 Ed. 1, stat. 2. 11 H. 6, c. 5.

City of Norwich, to wit.—Richard Johnson, executor of the testament of William Cooke was summoned to answer the Mayor, Sheriffs, Citizens and Commonalty of the City of Norwich, for that, whereas, it is provided by the common council of the lord the King of England, that it should not be lawful for any person to commit waste, sale, or destruction of lands, houses, woods or gardens to them demised for term of life or years; the said executor of houses in Norwich, which the mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty for the time being, the [32] predecessors of the said now mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, demised for a term of years, committed waste, sale and destruction,(1) to the disherison of the said now mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, and against the form of the provision aforesaid, &c. And whereupon the said now mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, by John Westhorpe their attorney, say that whereas, they the said predecessors of the said now mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid; upon the 1st day of April, in the year of our Lord 1658, by a certain indenture made at the City of Norwich aforesaid, between them the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, by the names of the Mayor, Sheriffs, Citizens and Commonalty of the City of Norwich of the one part, and the said William Cooke, by the name of William Cooke, citizen and alderman of Norwich, of the other part; which other part of which indenture sealed with the seal of the said William Cooke, the said now Mayor, Sheriffs, Citizens and Commonalty of Norwich aforesaid, bring into Court, the date whereof is the same day and year aforesaid; had demised to the said William, one barn and close of pasture with the appurtenances in Norwich aforesaid; except all timber trees, called pellings, growing and being upon the premisses, other than such as were seared and dead, to have and to hold the said barn and close of pasture with the appurtenances, unto the said William Cooke, from the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel then next ensuing the date of the said indenture, until the full end and term of thirty-one years, from that time next ensuing, and fully to be compleated and ended; by virtue of which demise, the said William into the tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances as aforesaid demised, entered and was thereof possessed; and the said William within the term aforesaid, of the tenements aforesaid, as aforesaid possessed, died, to wit, at Norwich aforesaid, after whose death the said Richard, as the executor of the testament of the said William, into the said tenements with the appurtenances entered, and was and as yet is thereof possessed; and so being possessed thereof, the said executor made waste, sale and destruction, in the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances as aforesaid demised, to wit in prostrating one barn thereof, of the value of one hundred pounds, and in taking and carrying away the timber and roof of the said barn; and also in cutting down six posts, every one of them of the value of ten shillings, parcel of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances above demised, [33] and in taking and carrying away them in like manner, to the disherison of the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the said city, and against the form of the provision aforesaid, whereby they say they are prejudiced and have damage to the value of 100l. and thereupon they produce their suit, &c.

And the said Richard by Thomas Balston his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and saith that the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid ought not to have their action aforesaid against him, because he saith that the said William Cooke in his life-time, by virtue of the demise aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid abovementioned, into the tenements aforesaid in the said declaration in like manner mentioned, with the appurtenances entered and was thereof possessed; and so being thereof possessed the said William Cooke afterwards, to wit, upon the first day of December, in the year of our Lord 1666, at Norwich aforesaid, died intestate, no testament by the said William Cooke in writing or otherwise howsoever being composed or made; and that after the death of the said William Cooke, administration of the goods and chattels which were the said William's at the time of his death, or of any part thereof, to the said Richard never was committed; and the said Richard further saith, that the term of years in the declaration aforesaid, above specified, or any part of the said term or any right, title, or interest in the tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances, or any part thereof, or to the same or any part thereof by the said William in his life-time, or by any administrator, or administrators of the goods and chattels which were the said William's at the time of his death, or of any part thereof after the death of the said William, to the said Richard in no manner was or were assigned, conveyed or made over, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty ought to have their action aforesaid against him, &c.

And the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, say that they by any thing before alledged, ought not to be precluded from having their action aforesaid against the said Richard; because they say that the said Richard after the death of the said William Cooke as the executor of his own wrong of the said William Cooke into the tenements aforesaid, by the mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty aforesaid, the predecessors of the said now [34] mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, to the said William Cooke as aforesaid demised, entered, claiming the term aforesaid; and by virtue thereof was possessed, and as yet is possessed of the said tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances for the term aforesaid, as the executor of his own wrong of the said William, and the said Richard so being thereof possessed, the said Richard committed waste, sale and destruction in the said tenements with the appurtenances as the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, above against him have declared, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore because the said Richard above hath confessed the waste, sale and destruction aforesaid, the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty aforesaid, pray judgment, and their damages by occasion of the waste, sale and destruction aforesaid to be adjudged to them, &c.

And the said Richard saith, that the said plea of the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid above by replying pleaded, is not sufficient in law to maintain them the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, to have their action aforesaid against the said Richard, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient replication in this behalf, the said Richard prays judgment, and that the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, may be precluded from having their action aforesaid against him, &c.

And the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the city aforesaid, because that they in their plea aforesaid, above by replying have alledged sufficient matter in law to maintain them the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the said city to have their action aforesaid against the said Richard, which matter the said Richard doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, they the said mayor, sheriffs, citizens and commonalty of the said city pray judgement and their damages, by occasion of the waste, sale and destruction aforesaid to be adjudged to them, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises before they give their judgment thereupon; therefore day is given to the parties aforesaid here, until from the day of St. Michael in three weeks, to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

Waste against the defendant, as executor of Cooke, and declares upon a lease for 31 years made to Cooke, and that he died and the defendant being executor to Cooke entered, and did waste: the defendant pleaded, that Cooke died intestate, and that administrator was not granted to him, nor the term assigned to him by Cooke, or any administration of Cooke. The plaintiff replied, that the defendant after the death of Cooke entered as executor, and did the waste. Upon this the defendant demurred, and Baldwin argued for the defendant, that one could not be a tort executor of a term, for no man can apportion his own wrong; but if a man enter tortiously he is a disseisor, and not a termor. In Styl. Rep. Porter versus Swetman, 'tis doubted even in an action of debt reserved upon a lease for years, whether one can be a tort executor of a term; which though it be admitted, yet it cannot be so in waste, which is founded upon a penal statute, whereby the action is given de domibus dimissis, and here is no lease to the defendant: and that a tortious entry makes the party a disseisor in fee, though he claims a particular estate only, was cited 28 Ass. 11. 9 H. 6, 20 b. Dyer 134 b. 14 H. 8, 18. Co. Lit. 127. Baldoc for the plaintiff cited Stephens versus Cart in this Court in the time of Vaughan Chief Justice, wherein it was held by Wylde and Archer Justices, that debt lies against an executor de son tort of a term. Tyrril contra. Sed per Vaughan; If a stranger enter and pay no rent, he is a disseisor; aliter, if he pay rent, for thereby he shows the intent of his entry. Et adjournatur. But afterwards upon consideration of the books, judgment per totam Cur' was given for the plaintiff: for in the cases cited there was no particular estate or term in esse, and the claim of the tort-fesor cannot create a particular estate, and so apportion his own wrong, but of necessity he is a disseisor in fee; because there is no particular or other estate in esse. But in the case at Bar there was a rightful term in esse, and he in [36] reversion cannot maintain trespass during the term, and therefore it is reasonable that he should have his remedy upon the contract against him that claims to be in by the contract. And Mo. pl. 126, it seems to be admitted, that there may be a tort executor of a term.

Fine levied by an infant vacated without writ of error. 1 Salk. 337, 339, 341. 2 Shower 281. 1 Cruise 301, 302. "If the fine is not reversed during minority it must ever afterwards stand good." 1 Cruise 111, 112, 113, 114. Shep. Touch. 6.

Hutchinson and his wife, she being an infant of 16 years old, levied a fine of the wife's land, and paid the King's silver, and the said fine was compleat and exemplified. But upon complaint by the remainder-man in fee next after the estate-tail of the wife, the husband and wife were brought into Court by rule, and examined; whereby the levying of the fine and the infancy appeared, and the father and mother of the infant came into Court, and prayed the fine might stand: and Maynard their counsel insisted that the fine, the King's silver being paid ought not to be vacated. But upon view of a record, Hill. 4 Jac. 1, Rot. 70, Pierpont's case entered among the rolls of fines and King's silver, where such a fine was vacate, and upon the information of North Chief Justice, and Robinson Chief Prothonotary, that there are divers other precedents in Court of such fines vacate notwithstanding the King's silver paid, and the fines perfected, the Court now vacated this fine, and caused the exemplification to be brought into Court, and delivered up, and ordered him in reversion to prosecute an information against the commissioners who took the conusance of the fine. But note, the vacate was entered quoad the wife only: and Trin. 34 another fine levied by Sir Robert Massam and his wife, an infant, was vacate for the same cause.

Difference inter trespass involuntary, and per mistake.

Trespass for breaking his close called the balk and the hade, and cutting his grass, and carrying it away. The defendant disclaims any title in the lands of the plaintiff, but says that he hath a balk and hade adjoining to the balk and hade of the plaintiff, and in mowing his own land he involuntarily and by mistake mowed down some grass growing upon the balk and hade of the plaintiff, intending only to mow the grass upon his own balk and hade, and carried the grass, &c. quæ est eadem, &c. Et quod ante emanationem brevis he tendered to the plaintiff 2s. in satisfaction, and that 2s. was a sufficient amends. Upon this the plaintiff demurred, and had judgement; for it appears the fact was voluntary, and his intention and knowledge are not traversable; they cannot be known.

Custom of London for weighage for all goods brought into the port. Lit. Rep. 101, 103. 1 Lev. 37, 97. Post. 424. 3 Burr. 1402. 2 Wilson 95. 1 Term Rep. 616, 660.

Error of a judgment in B. R. in assumpsit brought by the mayor and commonalty against Hunt, wherein they declared of a custom, that they and their predecessors, mayors, &c. have had of every master of a ship 8d. per ton for every ton of cheese brought from any part of England to the port of London, ab oriente de London-bridge, in the name of weighage, and the defendant being master of a ship had brought to the port of London so many ton, which at the rate aforesaid came to so much, and had not paid it; and upon non assumpsit verdict and judgment for the plaintiff. Upon which Hunt the defendant brought a writ of error, and two errors were assigned; 1. That the action lies not against the master, for the duty is due from the merchants owners of the goods. 2. That there is no consideration here for the duty; for this is only in the nature of a [38] toll-through, which is not due without consideration, 22 Ass. 58, and the river is a common highway. But the judgment was affirmed; for first the master is intrusted with the goods; he hath recompence from the merchants for the portage; he is responsible for them, and shall be charged for the duty; and indeed it would be infinite to search out the owners of the several goods: besides, the goods are in the custody of the master; he brought them into port, and therefore shall be charged. 2dly, The consideration is sufficient; he had the liberty of bringing them into port, which is a place of safety, and therefore implies a consideration in itself, and Cotton's Rec. 678, the Mayor and Commonalty of London have the view and correction of the river of Thames by stat. E. 4, and Hill. 33 & 34, the judgment was affirmed.

Want of pledges substance, but amended after demurrer and argument. British. 4 Anne, c. 16. Irish. 6 Anne, c. 10.

Case for wards by attachment of privilege. The defendant demurred upon the declaration for want of pledges; and it was argued for the plaintiff, that want of pledges is but form, and that they may be found at any time, pending the plea. Trin. 9 E. 4, pl. 37. 18 E. 4, 9 Hut. 92. Sed per Cur'. This is substance, 1 Cro. Wolfe versus Hole; also the defendant hath demurred specially for this cause, and the plaintiff having now joined in demurrer, and thereby put it upon the judgment of the Court, though otherwise pledges might be found at any time pending the plea, yet they cannot be found now after the demurrer joined, but judgment must be given for the defendant; yet afterward, by the importunity of counsel, the declaration was mended, and pledges entered, upon payment of costs.

RANDAL against BREES.

Discontinuance as to part, cured by verdict. Post 55.

Debt for rent reserved upon a lease of lands, part copyhold, and part freehold. The defendant pleaded eviction from all by the devisee of the lessor, father of the plaintiff. The plaintiff replied, protestando that he was not evicted from the lands copyhold, pro placito dicit, that the freehold was intailed, and therefore the devise void. The defendant traversed the intail, and issue thereupon, which was found for [40] the plaintiff, and verdict for the whole rent: and now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here was a discontinuance as to the copyhold, and the issue upon part only, and yet verdict for the whole rent, and it may be the greater part of the land was copyhold, and so the defendant is charged for the whole rent, and yet had only the lesser part of the land, and so the issue immaterial, and not aided by any statute. It was agreed the rent issues out of the whole land, as well the copyhold as the freehold, according to 3 Cro. Collins versus Harding. But the greater part of the justices held this discontinuance was cured by the statute of 32 H. 8, as 11 Co. Higden's case. Battery against two; discontinuance as to one is cured by a verdict against the other; so here a discontinuance as to part of the land is cured by a verdict as to the residue: and this issue is not an immaterial, but a good issue as to part; whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide postea Graves versus Morley, all put in issue, jury omit part, ill.

THOMAS against NICHOLS.

The lord may drive the cattle of the commoners, mixed with those of strangers, to sever them. 2 Lutw. 1492, 1497.

Trespass for entering his close, and spoiling his grass pedibus ambulando, and taking and driving his beasts to places unknown, so as they could not be replevied. The defendant pleaded, that the place where is a waste parcel of his manor, and that the beasts of the plaintiff were there intermixed with the beasts of strangers, which had no right there, and because he could not sever the beasts of the plaintiff from those of the strangers he drove them all together to a pound within the waste to part them, and there severed them, and drove the strangers beasts out of the waste, and left the beasts of the plaintiff in the waste. The plaintiff, quoad the plea as to the entry into his close, demurred, because it amounts but to the general issue: and quoad his plea, as to taking and driving the beasts, he prescribes for common and says, that immediately after the defendant impounded his cattle, the plaintiff requested him to deliver them to him, which he refused, and after drove them to places unknown. [41] The defendant rejoined, and maintained his bar, absque hoc quod die & loco alledged by the plaintiff, the plaintiff immediately after the impounding requested the defendant to redeliver them; upon which the plaintiff demurred, and it was adjudged that this traverse of the day and place in the rejoinder was ill; also that it is multifarious, and the defendant should have traversed some single point, and not so many things together: 2. The replication was ill, for the plaintiff ought to have traversed the bar, scil. either, first, that the defendant did not leave the beasts in the waste after the severance; or 2dly, that he might have severed them without impounding; or 3dly, de injuria sua propria absque tali causa, and then the defendant upon this issue must have proved a necessity of impounding. 3. It was resolved by all the justices præter Charlton, that the bar was good without alledging custom to drive in the common; for the lord or any commoner seeing a stranger's beasts there may impound or drive them out of the common without custom; and to sever them from the beasts of the commoners, if it cannot otherwise be done, may drive them and the beasts of the commoners together, to a convenient place to separate them. But where the usage is at certain times of the year to drive a common for view, if the beasts of strangers are found there; or if the common be over-charged, in such case the party must prescribe, and shew the custom; but here in this case the beasts of strangers were seen in the common, and that was sufficient. 4. It was resolved, that the bar being entire, though the plea quoad entering the close and pedibus ambulando be no more than the general issue being his own act, yet it being here joined with special matter of justification in one entire plea, it is good.

One covenant is not pleadable in bar of another covenant in the same deed. 1 Ld. Ray. 124. 2 Saunders 155, Jones v. Barkley. Douglas 684.

Covenant upon a charter-party, whereby the master of a ship covenanted to sail the first fair wind to Barcelona, and that his mariners should attend with his boat to relade the ship there, and that then he would return with the first fair wind to London, and would unload and deliver the goods. The merchants covenant to pay him so much for freight, and so much per diem during his stay there, and the master brought [42] this action for the money due to him for the freight, and for the demurrage, and declares that he sailed with the first fair wind, and so on according to the articles. The defendant quoad the freight pleaded, that the ship did not return directly to London, but went to Alicant and Tangier, and made divers deviations, by which the goods were spoiled. And quoad the demurrage, that that was occasioned by the neglect of the mariners to attend with their boat to relade the ship. Hereupon the plaintiff demurred; et per totam Curiam judgment was given for the plaintiff; for the covenants are mutual and reciprocal, whereupon each hath his action against the other; and cannot plead the breach of one covenant in bar of the other; and perhaps the damage of the one side and the other was not equal, and therefore the one not pleadable in bar of the other; but each party is by his action to recover against the other the certain damage he sustained, and so it was adjudged Hill. 13 Car. 2, B. LORD GORGES against GORE, ESQUIRE.

Declaration against a sheriff for an escape. Vide Lilly Entr. 60. 3 Morgan Vad. Mec. 294. 1 Mallory En. 136, 174-5-6, 219.

London, to wit.—Thomas Gore, late of Alderton, in the county of Wilts, Esquire, late Sheriff of the county of Wilts, was attached to answer Richard Gorges, Lord Gorges in the kingdom of Ireland, of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And whereupon the said Richard by William Hayes his attorney complains, that whereas one Thomas Packer, of Ashley, in the county of Wilts aforesaid, yeoman, on the 1st day of October, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, &c. at Ashley aforesaid, justly was indebted to the said Richard in the sum of two hundred and fifty pounds, of the lawful money of England, for the arrears of rent of certain tenements of the said Richard, in Ashley aforesaid, by the said Richard to the said Thomas before that time demised. And whereas the said Richard, for the obtaining of his debt aforesaid, to wit, in the term of the Holy Trinity, in the 33d year aforesaid, in the due manner prosecuted out of the Court of the said lord the King of the Bench here, to wit, at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, a certain writ of the [43] lord the King of capias ad respondendum against the said Thomas Packer, to the then Sheriff of Wilts aforesaid directed, by which writ the said lord the King the said then sheriff commanded that he should take the said Thomas if he could be found in his bailiwick, and him should safely keep, so that he should have his body before the justices of the said lord the King here to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, from the Day of St. Martin, in fifteen days then next ensuing, to answer the said Richard of a plea, wherefore with force and arms he broke the close of the said Richard at Ashley, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Richard, and against the peace of the said lord the now King, and also to answer to the said Richard according to the custom of the said Court of the Bench, in a certain plea of debt upon a demand of three hundred pounds, and that he should have here that writ, which writ the said Richard prosecuted with intention, that the said Richard upon the appearance of the said Thomas to be made in the said Court here upon the return of the said writ, should declare against the said Thomas among other things in a plea of debt for the said two hundred and fifty pounds, to be recovered, to the said Richard by the said Thomas so as aforesaid then due; and the said writ the said Richard afterwards and before the return thereof, to wit, upon the 14th day of October, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Ashley aforesaid, to the said Thomas Gore then being Sheriff of the county of Wilts delivered, in the form of law to be executed, by virtue of which writ the said Thomas Gore afterwards and before the return thereof, to wit, upon the 14th day of October, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Ashley aforesaid, [the said Thomas Gore then being Sheriff of the county of Wilts aforesaid], the said Thomas Packer took and arrested; and him the said Thomas Packer then and there by virtue of that writ in his custody had and detained: nevertheless the said Thomas Gore not ignorant of the premisses, but the duty of his office of Sheriff of the county of Wilts aforesaid lightly regarding, and contriving and fraudulently intending the said Richard in this behalf unjustly to oppress, and to obstruct him in obtaining his debt aforesaid, afterwards to wit, upon the 21st day of October, in the 33d year aforesaid, [the said Thomas Gore then being Sheriff of the county of Wilts aforesaid], the said Thomas Packer being under the custody of the said Thomas Gore for the cause aforesaid, at London, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, out of his [44] custody wheresoever he would did permit to go and escape, without any security for the appearance of the said Thomas in the said Court here, according to the command of the said writ by the said Thomas Gore taken or had, and against the will of the said Richard, [the said Richard then or at any time afterwards not being satisfied for his debt aforesaid or for any part thereof], whereby the said Richard is entirely hindered and deprived of recovering and obtaining his debt aforesaid, and forasmuch as the said Thomas Packer after his escape aforesaid hath concealed himself, and hath withdrawn and as yet withdraws himself to places to the said Richard entirely unknown, so that the said Richard by any process of the law could not nor as yet cannot again take or arrest the said Thomas Packer, the said Richard is very likely to lose his debt aforesaid; whereupon he saith that he is injured and hath damage to the value of 300l. and thereupon he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Thomas Gore by John Atkins his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and saith that the said Richard ought not to have his action aforesaid against him; because he saith that well and true it is that the said Richard prosecuted out of the said Court of the said lord the King of the Bench here to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, the said writ of the said lord the King of capias ad respondendum against the said Thomas Packer, [he the said Thomas Gore then being Sheriff of the county of Wilts aforesaid], and that he the said Thomas Gore by virtue of that writ the said Thomas Packer took and arrested, and had in his custody as the said Richard above hath alledged; but the said Thomas Gore further saith that after the taking and arresting of the said Thomas Packer in the form aforesaid, and in bringing the said Thomas Packer to the common gaol of the said county, at Forherton Anger, in the said county; and before he came to the said gaol, to wit, upon the said 20th day of October, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Blackheath, in the said county of Wilts, one Robert Packer, of Ashton Keynes, in the said county of Wilts, yeoman, John Hill, of Great Bedwyn, in the said county of Wilts, husbandman, Francis Hill, of Marlborough, in the said county, butcher, Anthony Hill, of Marlborough, in the said county, butcher, and Stephen Bullen, of Marlborough aforesaid, in the said county, labourer, with force and arms in and [45] upon one Nathaniel Bayly, then the bailiff of the said Thomas Gore, then sheriff as aforesaid, who by virtue of the warrant of the said sheriff then was conducting the said Thomas Packer, then being in the custody of the said sheriff, to the gaol aforesaid, made an assault, and the said Thomas Packer out of the custody of the said Nathaniel, and out of the custody of him the said Thomas Gore then being sheriff as aforesaid, then and there rescued, and caused to go at large, against the form of the statute, &c. and to the great damage, &c. as well of the said Thomas Gore as of the said Nathaniel, without this that the said Thomas Gore permitted the said Thomas Packer to escape out of the custody of the said Thomas Gore in the manner and form as the said Richard above by declaring hath alledged, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said Richard ought to have his action aforesaid against him, &c.

And the said Richard saith that the said plea of the said Thomas above in bar pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude the said Richard from having his action aforesaid against the said Thomas, and that he to that plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient answer in this behalf, the said Richard prays judgment and his damages by reason of the premisses to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Thomas Gore, because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said Richard from having his action aforesaid against him, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said Richard doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment, and that the said Richard may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against him, &c. and because, &c.

[46] LORD GORGES against GORE.

In case for an escape defendant pleads rescue, not saying it was returned. Cro. Ja. 419. Buller N. P. 63. 1 Stra. 429. F. N. B. 232. Note (a).

Case against the sheriff for an escape upon mesne process. The defendant pleaded a rescue. The plaintiff demurred. And this was resolved a good plea in an action upon an arrest by mesne process; not upon an execution according to 2 Cro. May versus Proby and Lumly. Then exception was taken to the plea, that it does not shew the rescue was returned; whereupon Curia advisare vult; but after it was resolved to be good enough, and judgment for the defendant; and Hill and Mountague's case 27 Car. 2, B. R. were cited to be so adjudged.

NERVIN against MUNNS, &C. EXECUTOR OF FINEUX.

Covenant, that notwithstanding any thing by him done he was seised in fee, and that he hath good right to sell, are synonymous, and of the same effect. Cro. El. 9, 44. Cro. Car. 106, 496. Cro. Ja. 644. Comyns Rep. 181.

Covenant. And declares upon a feoffment of land, wherein the testator covenanted, 1. That notwithstanding any thing by him done to the contrary, he was seised in fee-simple, or in fee-tail, without any condition or limitation to determine his estate. 2. That he had full power and good authority to sell it. 3. That the lands were clear of all incumbrances made by him, his father, or grandfather: and 4. The said Fineux covenanted, that the feoffee should enjoy against all persons claiming under him, his father, or grandfather; and declares that the testator had no power to sell. The defendant pleaded, that the testator, notwithstanding any thing by him done, had power to sell. The plaintiff demurred; and now upon argument it was admitted by the whole Court, that all the covenants are distinct and several; and North Ch. Justice held the second covenant absolute, and not restrained by things done by him in the first covenant, or by him, his father, or grandfather, as in Cro. Car. Crayford versus Crayford, covenant that notwithstanding any thing by him done he was seised in fee, and that there was no [47] reversion in the Crown, and that it was of the yearly value of 300l. per ann. each is distinct and absolute; and Bennet's case.

Cæteri tres justiciarii contra; Though the covenants are distinct, yet the first two covenants are synonymous, and of the same nature, for if he was seised in fee, he had power to sell, and when by the first covenant he covenants against his own acts, it cannot be intended that immediately by another covenant to the same effect he would covenant against all the world. But in the cases cited, the covenants are of divers natures, and concern different things, although relating to the same land; and the two subsequent covenants in this case are particular and limited, and therefore the middle covenants shall not be construed indefinite and general. Sed adjornatur.

HOLT against THE BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, &c.

Same person both patron and parson dies, his heir shall present, not his executor.
Post, 59, 377, 435. Cro. Ja. 371. 2 Bac. Ab. 419. Godolphin 121, 123.

Quare impedit; upon special pleading the case was: One and the same person being parson of the church, and seised in fee of the advowson, died; and who should have the next presentation, whether it belonged to the heir, or to the executor, was the question upon a demurrer. For it was objected, that the advowson descended not to the heir till after the death of the ancestor, and that by the death of the ancestor the church was void, and the avoidance thereby severed and vested in the executor. But the whole Court upon the first argument held and adjudged, that the heir should have it in this case for the descent to the heir and this fall of an avoidance to the executor happened all in one instant; and where two titles concur in one instant, the more elder right shall be preferred; as is the case of jointenants, the one devises his part, if the title of the devisee and of the survivor fall in one instant, the title of the survivor being the elder right shall be preferred.

[48] WOODCROFT against THOMPSON.

Trespass lies not for taking in one county, and impounding in another, but action upon the statute.

Trespass for taking his gelding at Cattonen in com. Norfolk, and driving and impounding him at a place unknown, so that he could not be replevied. The defendant justified as damage feasant en son franktenement, and that he impounded him at Carrow-Ably within three miles of the place where he took him; the plaintiff replied, that Carrow-Ably is in the county of the City of Norwich, and not in the county of Norfolk. The defendant demurred, and contrary to the opinion of North Ch. Justice, it was adjudged by the other three justices for the defendant; for at common law a distress might be drove out of the county, 2 Inst. 106, and the Statute of Marlborough, cap. 4, and 1 & 2 Ph. & Ma. 12, have prohibited such driving upon penalties; and therefore he that would take advantage of these statutes ought to do it by way of action, that may entitle the King to a fine, and not by way of bar. 2 Inst. 131. Also this replication is a departure, for the action is founded upon the common law, and the replication would make it good, and support it by the statute.

WELLS against COTTERELL.

Prescription for the steward, with the consent of the homage to make by-laws, ill. Comyns Dig. title Bye-law A. 1 Roll. Ab. 365.

Replevin for four cows. The defendant made conusance as bailiff to J. S. lord of the manor of D. and pleads a custom for the steward with the consent of the homage to make by-laws, and impose penalties for good government within the manor, to be forfeited to the lord of the manor; and a custom to distrain for such penalties; and that the inhabitants of Ovington within the manor used to repair a bridge within the manor for the convenience of the commoners who have common in such a waste within the [49] manor; and that at a court of the manor held such a day the steward with the consent of the homage made a by-law, that the inhabitants of Ovington should repair the bridge before such a day, under penalty of 5l. which not being done, and presented at the next court, this distress was taken upon the plaintiff, one of the tenants of Ovington: the plaintiff replied, de injuria sua propria absque tali causa: the defendant demurred; and the whole Court besides Levinz held the replication good without any particular traverse. But Levinz held it ill and multifarious, because the conusance contains the title of the manor, the custom, the by-law, and not making the bridge. Sed per omnes: The conusance is ill; for 1. It is for the steward to make the by-laws, and the homage only to consent; whereas the by-laws ought to be made by the homage. 2. To impose the penalty upon the whole township, and to levy it upon one particular person, who hath no remedy by contribution; for the commissioners of sewers cannot impose penalties by townships, but by headships: and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[50] EASTER TERM, IN THE THIRTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

HUDSON against SPIER.

Defendant in pleading covenants omits part. Plaintiff prays the articles may be entered, and demurs, and judgment for him. 8 & 9 Wil. 3, c. 10. English. 9 Wil. 3, c. 35. Irish. 1 Saunders 8, 9. 1 Lev. 55, 303. 2 Wilson 100. 4 Term Rep. 370, 371.

Debt upon obligation. The defendant demanded oyer of the obligation and of the condition, which was to perform articles, and then pleads the articles, and that he hath performed them. The plaintiff prayed, that the articles might be inrolled in hæc verba, and that being done, the plaintiff demurred generally, and for cause shewed, that the defendant in pleading the articles had omitted part: whereupon, by the opinion of the whole Court it was adjudged for the plaintiff; for perhaps the plaintiff might have assigned his breach in those articles which are omitted, of which advantage he is deprived by this means. And North Chief Justice remembered a case in B. R. wherein it was adjudged accordingly.

STAWEL against CAUNE.

Papist said of a justice of peace, and deputy-lieutenant; jury find he was justice of peace, but not deputy-lieutenant. Vide ante 30, Sir Thomas Clarges v. Roe. Post 248.

Case, and declares, that he is and always was a Protestant, and that he now is, and hath been for several years a deputy-lieutenant and justice of peace of the county of Somerset, and stood to be elected Parliament-man for Bridgwater, and that the defendant maliciously [51] intending to scandalise him, and procure him to be turned out of his offices, and hinder his being chosen burgess of Parliament, said of him, He is a Papist, and said to one of the electors, Do not you vote for him, for he is a Papist: whereby he was much scandalised, and in danger of losing his offices. Upon non culp.

a special verdict found that the defendant is not guilty of any of the words, præterquam he is a Papist: and they found that he is and always was a Protestant, and that he is and for divers years hath been a justice of peace, and that he stood Parliament-man for Bridgwater; and that the defendant knowing that, maliciously, &c. and with intent to hinder him of his election, and to cause his removal from his office of justice of peace, spoke these words of him, He is a Papist. But they find that he was not then a deputy-lieutenant: and now upon the first opening of this case the whole Court was of opinion, that the word Papist spoken of a justice of peace, who by the statutes is intrusted with putting the statutes against Papists in execution, is actionable; and that his not being deputy-lieutenant is not material, being inserted to no other end, but to shew his title; that his being justice of peace is sufficient, and deputy-lieutenant is no more than surplusage, for which no damage is given: and judgment was given for the plaintiff, as it was in the case of Sir Thomas Clarges antea, where not proving part of his title was also ruled not to be material.

Barrow against Hagget.

Formedon.

Heretofore as appears in the term of the Holy Trinity, last past, Roll 1158, it is thus contained. Cumberland, to wit. William Barrow gentleman, by John Patterson his attorney, demandeth against Barbara Hagget widow, two messuages and two acres of meadow with the appurtenances in Amstapleth, and the Rectory of Amstapleth with the appurtenances, and also all the tythes of corn and hay, annually growing, increasing or renewing in Amstapleth, of which Henry Barrow gentleman, the grandfather of the said William [52] was seized in his demesne as of fee, and so being thereof seized after the 4th day of February, in the 27th year of the reign of the Lord Henry the VIII. late King of England, of the said tenements, rectory and tythes with the appurtenances, enfeoffed John Vaux, Esq. and Humphry Gowling, gent. to have and to hold to the said John and Humphry, and their heirs to the use of John Barrow, son of the said Henry and his heirs male, which the said John Barrow should beget of the body of Jane Simpson, and which after the death of the said John Barrow, and of Leonard Barrow, the son and heir of the said John, by him of the body of the said Jane begotten; to the said William as the brother and heir of the said Leonard, and the son and heir of the said John by him of the body of the said Jane lawfully begotten, ought to descend by the form of the feoffment aforesaid, and by force of a certain statute for transferring uses into possession, made and provided in the Parliament of the said late King Henry the VIII. held at Westminster in the county of Middlesex, on the said 4th day of February, in the 27th year of his reign aforesaid, &c. And whereupon the said William saith, that the said Henry, the grandfather of the said William, was seized of the tenements, rectory and tythes aforesaid, with the appurtenances in his demesne as of fee, and so being thereof seized after the 4th day of February in the 27th year of the reign of the late King Henry VIII. to wit, upon the 16th day of October, in the 4th year of the reign of the Lord Charles the 1st, late King of England, of the said tenements, rectory and tythes with the appurtenances, enfeoffed the said John Vaux and Humphry Gowling and their heirs to the use of the said John Barrow the son of the said Henry, and of his heirs male which the said John should beget of the body of the said Jane Simpson, by virtue of which feoffment, and by force of the statute aforesaid, the said John Barrow was seized of the tenements, rectory and tythes aforesaid, with the appurtenances in his demesne as of fee tail and of right, to wit to him and to his heirs male, by him of the body of the said Jane lawfully begotten, by the form, &c. in the time of peace, in the time of the late King Charles the 1st, by taking the explees thereof to the value, &c. and from the said John, the said tenements, rectory and tythes with the appurtenances descended by the form of the feoffment, &c. and by force of the statute aforesaid, to the said Leonard as the son and heir, &c. which Leonard was thereof seized in [53] his demesne as of fee tail and right, to wit to him and to the heirs male by the said John Barrow of the body of the said Jane lawfully begotten, by the form, &c. in the time of peace, in the time of the lord the now King, by taking the explees thereof, to the value, &c. and from the said Leonard who died within twenty years now last past, the right descended by the form of the feoffment, &c. and by force of the statute aforesaid to the said William who now demandeth as the brother and heir of the said Leonard, and the son and heir of the said John Barrow by him of the body of the said Jane lawfully begotten, and which after the death, &c. and thereupon he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Barbara by James Bird her attorney cometh, and saving to herself all, and all manner of advantages and exceptions, as well to the writ as to the count aforesaid, prays leave to impart thereto here until from the day of St. Michael in three weeks, and she hath, &c. The same day is given to the said William here, &c. At which day here cometh as well the said William by John Patterson his attorney aforesaid, as the said Barbara by James Bird her attorney aforesaid, and saving to herself all, &c. prays leave to impart thereto, here until the octave of St. Hilary, and she hath, &c. At which day here cometh as well the said William, by John Patterson his attorney aforesaid, as the said Barbara, by James Bird her attorney aforesaid; and the said William prays that the said Barbara may answer his count aforesaid, &c.

And the said Barbara by James Bird her attorney aforesaid, cometh and saith that she cannot restore the said tenements and rectory aforesaid, with the appurtenances and the tythes aforesaid to the said William, because she saith that she is not tenant of the said tenements and rectory aforesaid, with the appurtenances and of the tythes aforesaid as of freehold, nor was at the day of suing out the original writ of the said William or at any time afterwards, and this she is ready to verify; wherefore she prays judgment of the said writ, &c.

And the said William saith, that his writ aforesaid, for the reason before alledged ought not to be quashed, because he saith that the said Barbara long before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said William, was seized of the tenements, rectory and tythes aforesaid, with the appurtenances in her demesne as of fee, and so being thereof seized, of the said tenements, rectory and tythes with the appurtenances before the day of the suing forth of the said writ, enfeoffed divers persons to the said [54] William unknown, by fraud and collusion, that the said William should not have notice of the names of the persons against whom he should sue out his writ aforesaid, of formedon in descender; and the said William further saith, that the said Barbara continually after the feoffment aforesaid made until the day of suing forth of the original writ of the said William, to wit, the 20th day of January, in the 30th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, and from that day continually afterwards hath perceived, and as yet doth perceive to the proper use of the said Barbara, the issues and profits of the said tenements, rectory and tythes, with the appurtenances now demanded, and this he is ready to verify; in which case, the said Barbara ought to be adjudged tenant of the tenements, rectory and tythes aforesaid with the appurtenances by the form of the statute, &c. Wherefore he prays judgment, and that his writ aforesaid may be adjudged good, and that the seisin of the tenements, rectory and tythes aforesaid, with the appurtenances may be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Barbara saith that the said plea of the said William in maintainance of his writ aforesaid, above pleaded, and the matter in the said plea contained, are not sufficient in law to maintain the writ aforesaid, against the said Barbara in the form aforesaid, and that she to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is she bound by the law of the land to answer, and this she is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea to the said William in this behalf, the said Barbara as before prays judgment of the writ aforesaid, &c.

And the said William because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law in his plea aforesaid above, by replying pleaded in maintenance of his writ aforesaid, and also of his action aforesaid against the said Barbara, which he is ready to verify; and which matter the said Barbara doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment, and that his writ aforesaid may be adjudged good, and that the seisin, &c. may be adjudged to him, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises aforesaid, &c. here until from the day of Easter in fifteen days to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon, not as yet, &c.

A. 2. 1 Viner Ab. 128.

Debt upon an obligation dated the 23d of March, 24 Car. 2, upon condition to pay 10l. The defendant pleaded an accord the last of April, 31 Car. 2, whereby it was agreed, that the defendant should give the plaintiff a new security for this debt, and for another due to him by obligation likewise, and he being the executor of the obligor, and the person with whom this accord was made, gave security pursuant to the accord by a bill sealed by himself. The plaintiff demurred; and by the whole [56] Court judgment was given for the plaintiff; for one obligation given in satisfaction of another is no discharge, whether grounded upon an accord, or not; for the concord does not mend the matter, and yet here the new obligation binds him de bonis propriis, whereas the first obligation bound him only de bonis testatoris.

The defendant pleaded an obligation of 40l. entered into by the testator adhuc insolut' and no assets ultra 5l. quæ non sufficiunt ad satisfaciend' debit predict' & ad ill' onerat' & obligat'. The plaintiff replied, that the said obligation was upon condition to pay 20l. at a day not yet come. And upon demurrer judgment was given for the defendant; for the plaintiff in his replication does not say the defendant had assets ultra the 20l. and if he hath not, he is not obliged to pay the plaintiff his debt upon simple contract, before the debt due upon obligation payable at a day not yet come.

Executor arrests before probat, and after proved the will; not legal as to strangers. Post, 93. 1 Rolle Ab. 917. But good as between the parties. 1 Salk. 302. 2 Bac. Ab. 413.

Assumpsit as assignee of the commissioners of bankrupts, scil. to one Staly a goldsmith, wherein upon non assumpsit and a special verdict, the case was, Staly being indebted to Walter 1090l. by judgment, and to other persons several other sums, particularly 1000l. to one Clerk, who died and made one Crew his executor: Crew sued out a [58] bill of Middlesex against Staly 6 Novemb. which was before probat of the will, which was not till the 18th of November; and Staly was arrested before probat, scil. on the 8th of November; and committed; and the same day that the probat was, scil. the 18th of November, Staly paid the 1000l. due to Walter; it does not appear whether the payment was before, or after the probat, but it was upon the same day: afterwards a commission of bankrupt was sued out against Staly, and this 1000l. paid to Walter was assigned by the commissioners to the plaintiff, as part of Staly's estate. In this case divers points were not unanimously agreed on by the Court. But in this all agreed, scil. that the arrest of Staly by the executor before probat was not legal, quoad Walter; and then Staly could not become bankrupt the 8th of November, when the arrest was made, quoad Walter, and so the payment to Walter good. They agreed that between the parties, scil. between Crew and Staly, the bill of Middlesex and the arrest thereupon before probat were made good by the probat afterwards, according to 1 Roll. Execut. 917. An executor sues a writ and arrests a man before probat, and after proves the will; now between them, being parties, all is made good; but here in the case at Bar it shall not prejudice Walter a third person to make the payment to him bad, which had been good, were it not for this arrest, which in rei veritate is not good before probat, though as to the parties it may be by relation. Note, The words of the statute are, that a man arrested and imprisoned six months shall be a bankrupt from the time of the first arrest; and in this case Staly was arrested the 8th of November, and lay in prison six months. Vide Raym. 478. Error upon this judgment, but the judgment affirmed. 1 Ventr. 370.

Trover for 120l. and upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was. Portman a goldsmith, having committed an act of bankruptcy in 1673, kept on his trade, and in 1677 bound his son apprentice to the defendant another goldsmith, and paid with him 120l. a usual sum given in such cases, and afterwards in 1679 a [59] commission of bankrupt was sued out against Portman, and he was found bankrupt, and this 120l. was assigned by the commissioners to the plaintiff as the money of Portman in the hands of Fowle. And by the opinion of the whole Court this money was not assignable by the commissioners, being paid so long before the commission and assignment, when neither he himself, nor no one else, suspected his becoming bankrupt; also the money is paid to put his son apprentice to the same trade which his father used, and was the usual sum given in such cases: so that no fraud can be intended; and the defendant is bound by the covenants to maintain him and instruct him in the trade; and it would be unreasonable to deprive him of the money which was given him upon the consideration, since no fraudulent intention is found or can be imagined in the case; and they conceived this was out of the intent of the statute; wherefore in this point they all agreed, but in some other points the Court differed in opinion.

Quare impedit against the bishop and three others. The bishop claims nothing but as Ordinary. Two of the others pleaded specially, whereupon it was demurred. The third pleaded to issue, which was tried for the plaintiff; and the jury that tried the issue inquired and found the value of the church, and that it was still vacant, and taxed damages for the half-year; and judgment was entered for the plaintiff, as well upon the demurrer, as upon the issue. And now it was moved, that in this case the church being still vacant, and the patron to have the fruit of his presentation, that he ought not to recover damages for the value of the half-year, and the prothonotary said, that the constant course is, that the plaintiff shall recover no damages for the half-year where the church remains void: and though the jury tax damages, yet in such cases where the church continues void, they enter a remittitur de damnis; and that so they would have done of course in this case without troubling the Court, if the parties had made application to them.

A prohibition was moved for to stay a suit in the Admiralty for mariners wages, suggesting, that the suit is founded upon the charter-party, which was made at land, and not upon altum mare. But the prohibition was denied; for mariners wages grow due to them for labour done at sea, and this charter and contract at land is only to ascertain them; and North Chief-Justice said, that this was the opinion of Hale Chief-Justice in his time, upon conference with him at the desire of the Court of Common Pleas, since he was Chief-Justice of this Court. Trover by an administrator, and declares, that he was possessed of such goods, and lost them, and the defendant converted them. Upon non culp. it was found for the defendant; and the question was, whether the plaintiff should pay costs? For it was objected by Serjeant Seis, this action being founded upon his own possession, he needed not have named himself administrator, and he cited Atkey and Heard's case, Cro. Car. 219, a like case, where the plaintiff paid costs. On the other side were cited Peacock's case, Cro. HILARY, 33 & 34 CHARLES II.

FURSDON against WEEKS AND OTHERS.

Declaration in trespass. Quare clausum fregerunt, with false imprisonment. Continuance.

Devonshire, to wit.—Richard Weeks, late of Crediton, in the said county, weaver, John Brown, late of Crediton, in the said county, weaver, George Hempton, otherwise Ames, late of Crediton, in the said county, weaver, and Benjamin Weeks, late of Crediton, in the said county, woolcomber, were attached to answer Nicholas Fursdon, gent. of a plea wherefore with force and arms, the close and house of the said Nicholas at the parish of South Taunton they broke and entered, and upon him the said Nicholas there made an assault, and him beat, wounded, ill-treated, and imprisoned, and him so in prison there against the law and constitution of this kingdom of England for a long time detained, so that his life was despaired of, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Nicholas, and against the peace of the lord the now King, &c. And whereupon the said Nicholas by Thomas Northmore his attorney complains that the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, on the first day of August, in the 32d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, with force and arms, to wit, with swords, staves, and knives, the close of the said Nicholas called the Court-lardge, and his house called Great Cooktree House, at the parish of South [62] Taunton, broke and entered, and upon him the said Nicholas then and there made an assault, and him did beat, wound, ill-treat and imprison, and him so in prison there for a long time, to wit, for the space of twenty-four hours, against the law and custom of this kingdom of England did detain, so that his life was greatly despaired of, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. Whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced and hath sustained damage to the value of four hundred pounds, and thereupon he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, by Thomas Flood their attorney, come and defend the force and injury when, &c. And as to the coming with force and arms, and the whole trespass aforesaid, except the assault and imprisonment aforesaid, say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the country; and the said Nicholas doth the like. And as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid above supposed to have been committed, they the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin say that the said Nicholas ought not to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, because they say that long before the time in which the assault and imprisonment aforesaid is above supposed to have been committed, to wit, in the term of St. Hilary, in the 31st and 32d years of the reign of the Lord Charles the Second, the now King of England, &c. one Arthur Bury, Doctor in Divinity, in the due manner prosecuted out of the Court of the said lord the King before the King himself, [the said Court being at Westminster in the county of Middlesex] a certain writ of the said lord the King of latitat against the said Nicholas, by the name of Nicholas Fursdon, gent. and Valentine Evans, John Cleake, and John Clarke, in the said writ in like manner named, to the then Sheriff of the county of Devon directed, by which writ the said Sheriff of the county of Devon was commanded, that he should take the said Nicholas Fursdon, Valentine Evans, John Cleake, and John Clarke, if they should be found in his bailiwick, and them should safely keep, so that he should have their bodies before the lord the King at Westminster, on the Monday next after the morrow of the Ascension of our Lord then next ensuing, to answer to the said Arthur Bury of a plea of trespass; and also to a bill of the said Arthur against the said Nicholas for sixty pounds of debt, according to the custom of the Court of the said lord the King before the King himself to be exhibited, which writ afterwards and before the return thereof to wit, upon the 9th day of May, in the 22d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, the [63] said Arthur Bury delivered to one Edward Seymour, Baronet, then sheriff of the said county, at South Taunton aforesaid, in the due form of law to be executed, by virtue of which writ the said Edward Seymour, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, afterwards to wit, upon the 10th day of May, in the 33d year aforesaid, and before the return of the said writ, at South Taunton aforesaid, made his certain warrant in writing sealed under the seal of his office, to the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, and to one Robert Eastbrook directed, by which warrant the said then sheriff on the behalf of the lord the King, to the said Richard, John, George, Benjamin, and Robert, and to every of them, did command that they should take the said Nicholas Fursdon, if he should be found in his bailiwick, and him should cause to be brought or, &c. to his prison in the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, in the county aforesaid, so that the said sheriff might have his body before the said lord the King at Westminster aforesaid, on the said Monday next after the morrow of the Ascension of our Lord, to answer the said Arthur Bury of the plea in the bill aforesaid, which warrant afterwards, to wit, upon the said 10th day of May, in the 32d year aforesaid, at South Taunton aforesaid, to the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin was delivered, in the form of law to be executed, by virtue of which warrant they the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, afterwards and before the return of the said writ, to wit, upon the said 20th day of May, in the 32d year aforesaid, at South Taunton aforesaid, the said Nicholas Fursdon took and arrested, and him in their custody, by virtue of the said warrant then and there had, and the said Nicholas for the time aforesaid in the declaration aforesaid above specified detained, as it was well lawful for them, which taking and arresting of the said Nicholas in the form aforesaid, and for the cause aforesaid, are the same assault and imprisonment whereof the said Nicholas above now complains; without this that the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, or any of them, are guilty of any assault or imprisonment otherwise or in any other manner before or after the said 20th day of May, in the 32d year aforesaid, and this they are ready to verify, wherefore they pray judgment if the said Nicholas ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said Nicholas as to the said plea of the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, as to the residue of the [64] trespass aforesaid, above in bar pleaded, saith that he by any thing in the said plea before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, because he saith that the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, on the day, year and place in the declaration above specified, of their own proper injury, and without the cause by them above in pleading alledged, upon him the said Nicholas made an assault, and him did imprison, and him so in prison there for the time in the declaration aforesaid above specified, against the law and custom of this Kingdom of England did detain, as the said Nicholas above complains thereof against them.

And the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin say, that the said plea of the said Nicholas above by replying pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law for the said Nicholas to have or maintain his action aforesaid against the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid by replying pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said Nicholas in this behalf, they the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin pray judgment, and that the said Nicholas may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against them, &c.

And the said Nicholas because that he above hath replied sufficient matter in law to maintain his action aforesaid, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said Richard, John, George, and Benjamin do not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment and his damages, by occasion of the trespass, assault, and imprisonment, to him to be adjudged, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises aforesaid specified before that they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here from the day of Easter in fifteen days to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

The plaintiff replies de injuria sua propria absque tali causa. The defendant demurred, and had judgment; for to thrust matter of record, and matter of fact, and varieties of matters, as the warrant, the arrest, &c. at once in issue is naught upon general demurrer; according to Crogate's case, 8 Co. Promise to marry is within the Statute of Frauds. 6 Mod. 155. 2 Salk. 437, 438. This case is over-ruled by the case of Cork v. Baker. 1 Strange 34. English Stat. of Frauds, the 27 Cha. 2, c. 3, Irish, the 7 Wil. 3, c. 12.

Assumpsit in consideration that the plaintiff at the defendant's request would consent recipere the defendant in virum suum. The defendant promised ducere the plaintiff in uxorem suam, and that she parata fuit & obtulit eum recipere in virum suum, but he refused. Upon non assump' the jury found the promise ut sup' but that it was made after June 24, 1677, and without writing; (1) and now it was objected against the action; 1. That this is no promise within the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, for that must be intended of promises for payment of money upon marriages, not of promises to marry. 2. The jury having found the promise, their farther finding of it to be without writing is surplusage and void. But to this it was answered and resolved, that this promise is directly within the words, and not out of the intent of the statute; because the [66] promise is, that in consideration the one would marry the other, and the other would marry him, and therefore it is a promise in consideration of marriage: and as to the 2d, the subsequent or further finding is but pursuant and expositive of the first part of the verdict, scil. that there was actually a promise, but no writing; whereupon the jury doubt whether it be a good promise in law to maintain the action, and thereupon refer it to the Court.

Debt upon a bill obligatory, whereby the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay him 20l. after he married the widow Sarmin, and assigns for breach, that the defendant married her and did not pay. The defendant craved oyer of the bill, which was, If he pay within two months after he marry the widow Sarmine, and demurred for the variance. Sed non allocatur; for the intent is apparent, and mispelling will not vitiate an obligation, and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

(1) The French is, Et or deux objections fueront fait versus le plaintiff, 1. Que ceo n'est un promise dien un Statute de Frauds et Perjuries, &c. It seems as if these were answers to the objections, and not the objections themselves.

RICAUT against TOMLIN.

Assumpsit; defendant pleads, the plaintiff is papalis recusans and convicted thereof secundum formam statuti, &c. held good. Ante 10.

Assumpsit for 18l. upon an insimul computasset. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff being a popish recusant was indicted for not coming to church for 11 months, and sets forth the indictment and conviction at large, and concludes prout patet per recordum, and pleads the conviction to be secund' formam statuti in hujusmodi casu provis. & hoc &c. unde petit judicium si responderi debet, cum hoc that the plaintiff being a popish recusant convict had not conformed. The plaintiff demurred. And now it was argued that this conviction was insufficient, for the statute of 3 Jac. cap. 5 does not disable any persons but only such as are popish recusants, convict of popish recusancy, and such by the statute are ipso facto excommunicate upon conviction; but in this indictment there are no words of popish recusant, or convict of popish recusancy; and other persons refuse to come to church, and may for that be [67] convict, but no persons are disabled but only popish recusants, convict of popish recusancy, by the statute; to which the Court agreed: but inasmuch as the indictment is after the common form of indictments against popish recusants upon this statute, and the plea saying that the plaintiff being papalis recusans was indicted, and that the conviction thereupon was secundum formam statuti; with an averment that he being papalis recusans convict hath not conformed, this is a sufficient demonstration of the recusancy, and that he is papalis recusans convictus de papali recusantia, and the plea was adjudged good.

Formedon of the manor of Etwall cum pertinent', & 35 messuag' 5 toftis 30 gardin' 200 acris terræ 100 acris prati 100 acris pastur' 500 acris bosc' & 200 acris jampner' & bruer' cum pertinen' in Etwall & Eggington. The tenant comes and defends jus suum quando, &c. and says, 6 mess. 10 acris terræ 10 acris prati & 20 acris pastur' cum pertinen' parcell' tenementor' in Etwall superius petit are and time out of mind have been parcel maner' de Etwall prædict' unde ex quo sunt bis petit' petit judic' de brevi. Demandant demurs, and upon argument and view of precedents the plea was adjudged ill; for where it is said that the 6 messuages, &c. are parcel tenementorum prædict', that may well be parcel of the manor, and demanded as parcel of the manor, ultra & præter the 35 messuages, &c. and a plea in abatement ought to be certain to every intent: to have made this a good plea, he should have said, that the 6 messuages, parcel of the 35 messuages, are parcel of the manor, and then they would appear to be bis petita; but the 6 messuages may be parcel of the manor, for the manor may comprehend 100 messuages, &c. and the 35 messuages, &c. are not demanded as parcel of the manor, but ultra & præter the manor. Farther it was said for the demandant, that in case they are bis petit', the demandant may abridge his demand, and the writ need not abate. But to that the Court gave no regard, but gave judgment upon the other point. [68] But it seems the demandant cannot abridge his demand in a formedon, or any other writ, wherein the thing demanded is particularly mentioned in the writ; for that would be to falsify his own writ, and therefore in such case the writ shall abate for all; but otherwise where the writ is general, and comprehends no certainty, as in an assise, which is generally de libero tenemento in D. and in dower unde nihil habet, &c. for there the writ being general, de libero tenemento, notwithstanding an abridgment, the writ remains true as to the residue; for it is liberum tenementum still. But in an assise, dower, &c. if the demand be de libero tenemento in D. & S. there can be no abridgment as to all the lands in either of the vills particularly named, as appears by 14 H. 6, 3, 4. 9 H. 6, 43 a. 8 H. 6, 13 a. 19 H. 6, 13 b.

I heard that one see a priest give him the eucharist and extreme unction, innuendo a popish priest. Ante 30, 50. Sir T. Ray, 482, 483. 2 Shower 140, 250. 3 Mod. 26.

Case, and declares he is a justice of peace, and hath been for several years, and also a deputy-lieutenant of the county of Warwick, and that the defendant id satis sciens, to scandalise and cause him to be removed from his offices, and to lose his election of Parliament-man for that county, for which he then stood, falso & malitiose dixit of him, I have heard that a maid-servant of Sir John Knightly's should report, that Sir John Knightly being sick, the maid-servant, looking through a hole of the door where Sir John Knightly then lay, saw a priest, innuendo a popish priest, give the eucharist and extreme unction to Sir John Knightly, & ex ulteriori malitia at another day said, I have heard that a maid-servant, who then lived with Sir John Knightly, peeped through a cranny of the door where Sir John lay sick, and saw a popish priest anoint him (extreme unction innuend') and give him the sacrament of the eucharist; and avers, that he never heard it. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. and 1000l. damages, it was moved in arrest of judgment Pasch. ultim. that the words are not actionable, and that they amount not to calling Papist, for in the first words it does not appear what the priest was, nor that he was [69] a popish priest, unless by the innuendo, which is not sufficient, and in the latter words it does not appear that he gave him extreme unction, unless by the innuendo, which is not sufficient: and the words eucharist and extreme unction are not actionable, for that it is not penal to give or receive extreme unction, and eucharist is an appellation common as well to our Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as to the popish sacrament; and so likewise is the word priest a common appellation of Protestant, as well as Romish priests; whereupon it was adjourned till this term, when it was argued again by counsel of both sides, and at last resolved that the words altogether are actionable, for one part explained the meaning and the scandal of the other; for the first words, a priest that gave the eucharist and extreme unction must be a popish priest, and he to whom it was given must be a Papist, for their priests never give their sacraments to any that are not compleat and perfect Papists; and the last words anoint, being of one that was sick, and applied by a popish priest, cannot be intended any thing else but extreme unction. And judgment was given for the plaintiff; whereupon the defendant immediately brought a writ of error returnable the last day of Michaelmas term next, which shews it was for delay chiefly.

Assumpsit by Philips, assignee of the commissioners of bankrupts, for moneys of one Watson received by Thompson, after Watson became bankrupt; and upon non assumpsit and a special verdict the case was; Thompson had a judgment against Watson for 600l. and on the 19th of June sued out a fieri facias which on the 30th of June was delivered to the sheriff in mane ejusdem diei. Watson having notice thereof went away from his house the same night, and thereby became bankrupt; and on the first of October the sheriff levied 400l. on the goods of Watson, and paid it to Thompson, and the commissioners assigned this money in the hands of Thompson to the plaintiff Philips as the goods of Watson [70] in his hands; and if the defendant assumed, as the plaintiff declares, they find for the plaintiff; si non, for the defendant:

and upon argument it was held by Pemberton Chief Justice, and Levinz, that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff; for though by the (1) new statute the goods are bound by the delivery of the writ to the sheriff, yet they are no otherwise bound by that delivery than they were by the teste of the writ at common law: and by the statute 21 Jac. it is enacted, that all goods shall be equally distributed among creditors, whereof no execution is sued and executed; and the delivery of the writ to the sheriff is not of itself an execution. Wyndham and Charlton contra. They grounding themselves upon the case of Adly and Halsey, Cro. Cha. 148, where after extent upon a statute, and before liberate, the party became bankrupt, the commissioners were held to have no power over those goods being extended, though there were yet no perfect execution. And Jones in the report of that case says, it is so in the case of a bargain and sale, if after the bargain the bargainor become bankrupt, yet by inrolment afterwards the power of the commissioners as to selling these lands is gone: to which it was answered by the other two Judges, that in the stat. of 21 Jac. there are these words, whereof no extent or execution is served and executed, and an extent is an extent served; and as to the case of a bargain and sale, if the statute had said, whereof no bargain and sale is executed, a bargain and sale before bankruptcy would not be made good by subsequent inrolment. And the last day of this term the case was intended to be adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber, but the Chief Justice being then sick, it was not; and I suppose the parties agreed, for it was not moved again. But afterwards this point appears to be so adjudged.

In suit for tithes in the Spiritual Court, if letters patents, &c. come incidentally in question, this Court will grant a prohibition. Salkeld 547. Cowper 424.

A prohibition was moved for, suggesting, that the trial of letters patents and all grants from the Crown are triable at common law, and not in the Spiritual Court, and that the defendant had libelled there against him for tithes, upon title to the rectory by letters patents; whereas the plaintiff hath a precedent right to the rectory by letters patents from the Crown more antient. Nota, The libel is only in common form, scil. that he is proprietor of all the tithes without making out his title in the libel; but upon the pleadings, titles are made by letters patents on both sides; and now by North, Wyndham and Charlton, a prohibition was granted, for the Spiritual Court are not to try the validity of letters patents. Levinz contra. The suit is founded upon the tort only, in withdrawing the tithes, and the title, if it comes in question, falls in only as an incident; and in all suits at common law for tithes, the declaration is general as proprietor without shewing a title in the declaration: and when the foundation of a suit is spiritual, and a temporal matter falls in question incidentally, the Ecclesiastical Court shall try the temporal matter so long as they proceed as the temporal law would in such case; but when they proceed in a temporal matter otherwise than the temporal law would, they are to be prohibited, but not before. 12 Co. 65, a rule is cited out of the register, quod non est [73] consonum rationi quod cognitio accessurii in Curia Christianitatis impediatur, ubi cognitio principalis pertinet ad forum ecclesiasticum, 1 R. 3, 4. Case, and declares, that he is seised of a messuage, and that he and all those whose estate he hath, have time out of mind had all the seats and the sole sepulture in an ayle of the church, and the defendant disturbed him. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. it was moved in arrest of judgment, that he had shewed no consideration for his propriety in not prescribing to repair the ayle. And Co. Entr. 8. Cro. Ja. 605, Dawny vers. Dee, in an action upon the case, a consideration of this kind is set forth. To which it was answered, that in an action upon the case against a stranger and wrong-doer, no title or consideration is necessary to be shewn, though it is indeed [74] so set forth in the cases cited, which like this are but actions upon the case against meer strangers; but where he claims against the Ordinary himself, who hath prima facie the disposal of all the seats in the church, he ought to shew some cause, as building, repairing, &c. but against a stranger who hath prima facie no right, his possession is sufficient ground for his action; and so was Bunton and Bateman's case, Mich. 14 Car. 2, cited to be resolved, & adjournatur. Afterwards at another day upon consideration of Bunton and Bateman's case it was resolved by the whole Court, and judgment for the plaintiff.

TRINITY 34TH CHARLES II.

CARVER against PINCKNEY.

Action of debt upon an indenture and the stat. of the 29th Car. 2. Demurrer.

Nottingham, to wit.—William Pinckney, late of Mansfield Woodhouse in the county aforesaid, Esq. was summoned to answer Charles Carver, clerk, of a plea that he render to him 26l. 13s. 4d. which he owes him and unjustly detains, &c. And whereupon the said Charles, by Francis Wyld his attorney saith, that whereas by a certain indenture made at Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, the 24th day of July, in the 23d year of the reign of the lord the now King, between one Michael Honeywood, Doctor of Divinity, late Dean of the Cathedral Church of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Lincoln, deceased, of the one part, and him the said William Pinkney of the other part; one part of which, sealed with the seal of the said late dean, the said William hath in his power, it is witnessed, that whereas the said dean in his life-time for divers causes and considerations him thereto specially moving, had demised, granted and to farm let, and by the said indenture for him and his successors did demise, grant and to farm let, unto the said William Pinckney, all that Rectory and Parsonage of Mansfield in the said county of Nottingham, with all members and appurtenances, and all and all manner of glebe lands, tenements, tythes, fruits, oblations, profits, commodities, emoluments, rents, services and hereditaments whatsoever; with all and singular the appurtenances to the said rectory and parsonage, and to the chapels of Mansfield Woodhouse and Skegby, or to any of them belonging or appertaining [the portion of the Vicarage of Mansfield, and the presentation thereto when it should become vacant, and the pension of the parochial church of Sutton in Ashfield always being excepted and reserved] to have and to hold the said rectory and parsonage, with all and singular the other premises [except the before excepted] to the said William Pinckney and his heirs from the time of the making [76] of the said indenture, for and during the natural lives of the said William Pinckney and of Elizabeth his wife, and of Elizabeth Pinckney the daughter of the said William Pinckney, then of the age of one year or thereabouts, and for the life of the longest liver of them, under the annual rent of 30l. to the said dean and his successors, Deans of Lincoln, or their assigns annually, to be paid at the Feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist. And the said William Pinckney by the said indenture did covenant, grant and agree to and with the said dean and his successors, that he the said William Pinckney, his heirs and assigns during the lives aforesaid, would find and provide one sufficient minister or priest to celebrate divine service in Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, and another sufficient minister or priest in the chapel of Skegby, and each and every of them should be such as should be allowed and approved by the said dean and his successors. And that the said William Pinckney, his heirs and assigns during the lives aforesaid, or the life of any of them, would allow and pay annually to the minister or priest of Mansfield Woodhouse, the sum of forty marks at the least, at the church or chapel of Mansfield Woodhouse, and to the minister or priest of Skegby, the sum of twenty marks at the least, at the church or chapel of Skegby; which payments should be made by even and equal portions at the said two feasts or days of payment above limited for the said annual rent to be paid to the said dean and his successors, as by the said indenture more fully appears. And whereas by a certain Act enacted in the Parliament of the lord the now King, held by prorogation at Westminster in the county of Middlesex, the 25th day of February in the 29th year of his reign, entitled An Act, for Confirming and Perpetuating Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons to Small Vicarages and Curacies; among other things it is enacted, that all and every augmentation of what nature soever, granted, reserved or agreed to be made payable, or intended to be granted, reserved, or made payable from the 1st day of June, in the 12th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, or which at any time afterwards should be granted, reserved or made payable to any vicar or curate, or reserved by way of increase of rent to the lessors, but intended to be for the use or benefit of any vicar or curate, by any archbishop, bishop, dean, provost, dean and chapter, archdeacon, [77] prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons whatsoever, so making the said reservation out of any rectory impropriate, or portion of tythes, belonging to any archbishop, bishop, dean, provost, dean and chapter, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons, should be deemed and adjudged to continue and be, and for ever afterwards should continue and remain, as well during the continuance of the estate or term upon which the said augmentation was granted, reserved or agreed to be made payable as afterwards, in whose hands soever the said rectories, or portion of tythes should be chargeable therewith, whether the same be reserved again or not. And the said vicars and curates respectively by the said Act are adjudged in the actual possession thereof, for the use of themselves and their successors; and the same should be for ever afterwards taken, received and enjoyed by the said vicars and curates and their successors, as well during the continuance of the term or estate upon which the said augmentations were granted, reserved or agreed to be made payable as afterwards. And the said vicars and curates should have remedy for the same, either by distress upon the rectories impropriate, or portions of tythes charged therewith, or by action of debt against that person who ought to have paid the said augmentation, his executors or administrators; any disability in the person or persons, bodies politick or corporate so granting, or any disability or incapacity in the vicars or curates, to whom or for whose use or benefit the said augmentations were granted or intended to be granted; the Statute of Mortmain, or any other law or custom, or other matter or thing whatsoever to the contrary notwithstanding; as in the said Act is more fully contained. And the said Charles further saith, that he the said Charles afterwards, to wit, upon the 5th day of June, in the 32d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, by the allowance and approbation of the said late dean, at the nomination of the said William, and by the licence of Richard now Archbishop of York, in the due manner was admitted curate of the church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, and from that time continually afterwards, hitherto was and as yet is curate there; and the said 26l. 13s. 4d. of the augmentation aforesaid, by the said William to the curate of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, in the form aforesaid granted to be paid, and by force of the said Act to the said Charles confirmed and continued for one whole year, ended at the Feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist last past, in the [78] 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, were in arrear and as yet are unpaid; whereby an action hath accrued to the said Charles to demand and have of the said William the 26l. 13s. 4d. aforesaid, nevertheless the said William, although oftentimes requested, the said 26l. 13s. 4d. to the said Charles hath not paid, but the same to him to pay hitherto hath altogether refused, and still doth refuse, whereupon he saith he is injured, and hath received damage to the value of 20l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c., &c.

And the said William, by Sylvester Petyt his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and saith that the said Charles ought not to have or maintain his action aforesaid thereupon against him, because he saith that well and true it is, that the said dean did demise, grant and to farm-let to the said William, the rectory, parsonage, tenements and premises aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to have and to hold to the said William and his heirs, for and during the lives of the said William, Elizabeth and Elizabeth under the annual rent aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid mentioned, and that the said William did covenant with the said late dean by the said indenture in the manner and form as the said Charles by his declaration aforesaid supposes. And the said William further saith, that he the said William, upon the 25th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1672, at Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, nominated the said Charles to the said late dean to be curate of the said church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, and that he the said late dean thereupon afterwards, on the said day and year, allowed and approved the said Charles to be curate of the said church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, whereby the said Charles, afterwards on the said day and year was in the actual possession of the said benefice, by virtue of such nomination and approbation aforesaid; but the said William saith, that by a certain Act enacted in the Parliament of the lord the now King, held at Westminster in the county of Middlesex, the 8th day of May, in the 13th year of his reign, among other things it was enacted by the authority of the said Parliament; that all and singular the ministers in any cathedral, collegiate or parochial church or chapel, or other place of public worship within this realm of England, should be bound to say and use the morning prayer, evening prayer, the celebration and administration of both the sacraments, and all other the publick and common prayer in such order and form as is mentioned in the book in the said statute annexed and joined, and entitled, The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies [79] of the Church according to the Use of the Church of England, together with the Psalter or Psalms of David, pointed as they are to be sung or said in the Churches, and the Form or Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons. And further by the said statute it was enacted, that every person who from that time afterwards should be presented or collated, or put into any ecclesiastical benefice or promotion within this realm of England, in the church, chapel or place of publick prayer belonging to his said benefice or promotion, within two months next after he should be in the actual possession of the said ecclesiastical benefice or promotion, upon some Lord's Day, openly, publickly and solemnly, should read the morning and evening prayers appointed to be read by and according to the said Book of Common Prayer, at the times by the said book appointed or to be appointed; and after such reading thereof, openly and publickly before the congregation there assembled, should declare his unfeigned assent and consent to the use of all things in the said book contained and prescribed, according to the form in the said statute before appointed; to wit, I do hereby declare my unfeigned assent and consent to all and every thing contained and prescribed in and by the book, intitled The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the Use of the Church of England, together with the Psalter or Psalms of David, pointed as they are to be sung or said in Churches, and the Form or Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons. And that all and every such person, who without any lawful impediment, to be allowed and approved by the Ordinary of the place, should neglect or refuse to do the same within the time aforesaid, or in case of such impediment, within one month next after such impediment removed, should be ipso facto deprived of all his said ecclesiastical benefices and promotions, and that from thenceforth it should and might be lawful to and for all patrons and donors of all and singular the said ecclesiastical benefices and promotions, or any of them, according to their respective rights and titles to present or collate to the same, as though the person or persons so offending or neglecting was or were dead; as by the said Act among other things is more fully contained. And the said William further saith, that the said Charles within two months next ensuing [80] after he was put and invested as aforesaid into the actual possession of the church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, upon some Lord's Day after the reading of the morning and evening prayers appointed to be read by and according to the said Book of Common Prayer, at the times by the said book appointed to be read by him in the church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, did not declare his unfeigned assent and consent to the use of all the things in the said book contained and prescribed, according to the form before recited by the said statute as aforesaid made and enacted, according to the form and effect of the said statute; he the said Charles during the said space of two months next ensuing after as aforesaid, he was in the actual possession of his benefice aforesaid, having no legal impediment by the Ordinary of the place allowed or approved of, but his unfeigned assent and consent to all and every thing in the said book contained for the time aforesaid, according to the form and effect of the statute aforesaid, did neglect and refuse to declare, whereby he the said Charles, by virtue of the statute aforesaid, became deprived of his benefice aforesaid, as if he the said Charles had been actually dead; and that he the said William at any time after the said 25th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1672 aforesaid, did not nominate the said Charles to the said late dean to be curate of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said Charles ought to have his action aforesaid, thereupon against him, &c. &c.

And the said Charles saith that he by any thing before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid, because he saith that well and true it is that the said William on the said 25th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1672, in the said plea above mentioned nominated the said Charles to the said dean to be curate of the church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid; and that he the said late dean thereupon afterwards, on the said day and year, allowed and approved the said Charles to be curate of the church aforesaid, whereby the said Charles was and continued to be in the actual possession of the said benefice until the 5th day of June in the declaration aforesaid mentioned, and the said Charles on the said 5th day of June, so being in possession with the assent and sufferance of the said William, and by the allowance and approbation of the said late dean, and by the licence of the said Richard, now Archbishop of York, to the said curacy of the said church in the due manner was admitted, and as yet is curate there; and the said Charles further saith, that he within two months next after the said 5th day of June in the declaration aforesaid specified, upon the Lord's Day, [81] to wit, upon the 13th day of June, in the 32nd year aforesaid, in the said church of Mansfield Woodhouse aforesaid, openly, publickly and solemnly, read the morning and evening prayers appointed to be read by and according to the said

Book of Common Prayer at the times by the said book appointed, and after such reading thereof, then and there openly and publickly before the congregation there assembled, did declare his unfeigned assent and consent to the use of all things in the said book contained and prescribed, according to the form appointed in the said statute, in the said plea in bar mentioned, to wit, in the form following: I Charles Carver do hereby declare my unfeigned assent and consent to all and every thing contained and prescribed in and by the book entitled, The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the Use of the Church of England, together with the Psalter or Psalms of David, pointed as they are to be sung or said in Churches, and the Form or Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons, according to the form and effect of the statute aforesaid: and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment and his debt aforesaid, together with his damages by occasion of the detention of the said debt to him to be adjudged, &c.

And the said William saith, that the said plea of the said Charles above by replying pleaded is not sufficient in law to maintain the said Charles to have his action aforesaid against the said William, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said Charles in this behalf, the said William prays judgment, and that the said Charles may be barred from having his action aforesaid, &c.

And the said Charles, because that he above by replying hath alledged sufficient matter in law to maintain his action aforesaid, against the said William, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said William doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof; as before prays judgment of his debt aforesaid, together with his damages by occasion of the detention of his said debt, to be adjudged to him, &c. and because the said justices, &c.

[82] CARVER against PINKNEY.

Debt upon an indenture and upon the statute 29 C. 2, for Augmentation of Vicarages. 3 Wils. 355.

Debt, and declares that Honywood, Dean of Lincoln, by indenture on the 24th of July, 23 Regis nunc, which the defendant penes se habet, demised to the defendant the Rectory of Mansfield for three lives, rendering to the dean and his successors, 30l. rent per annum; and that the defendant per eandem indenturam covenanted with the dean to find and to provide a sufficient minister, or priest to serve in the church of Mansfield, such a one as by the dean and his successors should be allowed and approved; and to pay to the said priest 40 marks per ann. ad minus by even portions at the Nativity of St. John the Baptist and Lady Day. And then set forth the statute of 29 Car. 2, for Perpetuating Augmentations to Poor Vicarages; whereby it is enacted, that every augmentation reserved or made payable to any vicar, curate, &c. should continue payable to them, and that they should be adjudged in actual possession of them and should have remedy for recovery of the same by distress or action of debt; and farther saith, that the plaintiff 5 June 32 Car. 2, by allowance and approbation of the dean, at the nomination of the defendant, and with the license of the bishop was admitted, & abinde hucusque fuit curat' of the church of Mansfield; and for 40 marks of the said pension due for a year brings his action: the defendant pleaded actio non, and confesses the lease and the covenants, but saith, that the plaintiff was nominated, &c. the 25th of November, 1672, and had possession; but farther saith, that by the stat. 13 Car. 2, of Conformity, it is enacted, that all ministers in any church or chapel, or other ecclesiastical benefice, shall read the prayers appointed by the Act, and within two months after actual possession had of their vicarage, curacy, &c. declare their assent and consent to all matters in the Book of Common Prayer contained, and upon neglect thereof shall ipso facto be deprived, and that it shall be lawful to the patron to present or collate, as if the incumbent &c. were dead; and that the plaintiff did not within two months after his possession declare his assent according to the stat. whereby he became deprived. [83] And that he at no time after the said Nov. 25, 1672, did nominate the plaintiff to the dean to be curate. The plaintiff by replication confesses the nomination, 25 Nov. 1672, and that he continued the possession till June 5, 32 Car. 2, and afterwards so being in possession ex assensu & permissione of the defendant with the allowance of the dean and licence of the bishop, within 2 months after the said 5th of June, 32, declared his assent and consent, &c. according to the statute. Defendant demurred. And upon argument these points were agreed by the whole Court; 1. That this stipendiary was within the Statute of 13 of Conformity, notwithstanding the words of the statute, which are, that the patron shall present as if the other were dead; and there is no presentation requisite in this case, but only nomination to the dean, and approbation by him; so Cro. Cha. 331, Bawderock & Mackaller, a donative is within the Statute of Simony, though the statute speaks of presentations, and so as was said it was resolved in this Court within these two years between the same parties; but judgment was then given against the plaintiff upon other exceptions. 2. The declaration is good without shewing the indenture, neither that nor the counter-part belonging to the plaintiff, and therefore good in this manner, which the defendant penes se habet; and the plaintiff is enabled to sue by the statute of 29 Car. 2. 3. That debt lies in this case though the lease be for three lives, upon which the reservation is made, and that by the words of the statute, which gives him election of remedy either by action of debt, or distress. 4. The principal point was, that though he was ipso facto deprived by the statute for his neglect in declaring his assent within two months after his first nomination and possession, yet this statute not disabling him to have a new nomination, as the Statute of Simony does, and he continuing always after in possession, performing the office, the permission, and allowance of the defendant, and the approbation of the dean, 'till 5 June 32, this amounts to a new nomination, which together with the declaration of his assent within two months after the 5th of June 32 makes him curate within the statute, and enables him to bring this action; and judgment was given for him per totam Curiam.

Dower lies against a tenant in common before partition. Co. Lit. 32 b. Co. Lit. 34 b. 2 Bac. Ab. 135. 3 Bac. Ab. 189.

Dower against the heir of the first husband, and demands the third part of the third part of the tenements. The tenant pleaded that A. being seised devised the tenements to the first husband of the wife, whereof she demands dower, and to the wife of the demandant, and to a third person, equally to be divided; and so demands judgment of the writ, supposing that the wife could not sue dower against the other tenants in common before partition. But upon demurrer it was adjudged the writ lay.

Trover for an anchor and cable; and upon not guilty pleaded, and a special verdict, it appeared that the plaintiff was possessed of them; and that the manor of Miching in Sussex lies bordering upon the sea, and that the custom of the manor is, that if any ship or boat failing upon the sea, percutit in & supra fundum & solum manerii per quod periret, quamvis non sit wreccum, vel accidit dissolvere a fundo, that the best anchor and cable belongs to the lord of the manor, and that the ship, to which this anchor and cable belonged, & percussit super fundum & solum manerii, & adtunc & ibidem periit; but that the seamen were saved, and that the defendant seized this anchor and cable to the use of the lord: and it was adjudged by Pemberton Chief Just. Wyndham and Charlton, ægrotante Levinz, that the custom is void, and without consideration. Nota, no custom of salvage is found.

[86] HILTON against KING.

Will signed by the testator; revocation upon the same paper not signed, is not valid. Ante 1. 2 Ventris 350. 1 Shower 89. 3 Mod. 218, 220, 259. 1 Sid. 90, 315, 362. Raym. 225, 240, 335. Post, 108. Lex Testm. 470, 471. 2 Danvers 527, to pl. 7. Powel on Devises 650. 1 Vesey, jun. 11. 5 Term Rep. 49.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty a special verdict found, that Edward King was seised of the tenements in question in fee, and the 29 Nov. 1679, devised them to his daughters Diana and Susan, and their heirs, and that the will was duly made according to the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, and the name Edward King subscribed to the bottom of the will; and they found that the said Edward King afterwards ad intention' revoc' the will, quoad Diana, who (1) was married and had her portion paid to the lessor, direxit verba sequentia to be subscribed super eandem voluntatem, viz. We whose names are under-written, do testifie that the above-named Edward King did the day of the date hereof publish and declare, that the several clauses and devises in his will, any way relating to his daughter Diana should cease and be void, she being since married, and her portion paid: in witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands this 28th of October, 1680, J. S. J. D. F. N. & G. W. and that the said words were written under the same will, upon the same paper, by the direction of the said Edw. King, and subscribed by the said four witnesses in his presence; but farther they find, that the said writing subscribed as aforesaid was not subscribed by the said Edward King, or any other by his direction or authority; and that after the death of Edward King Diana and her husband entered and demised to the plaintiff, and if the defendant be guilty, they find as to one moiety for the plaintiff, and as to the other moiety for the defendant. Nota, the words of revocation were written upon the same paper, and upon the same side of the paper with the will, immediately under the name of Edward King subscribed to the will; and whether the revocation quoad Diana be good, according to the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, being not subscribed by Edward King? was the question. And note, the clause concerning wills directs, that all wills shall be subscribed by the testator, or any other in his presence, or by his direction, and attested by three or four [87] witnesses, and subscribed in his presence; and the clause touching revocations saith, that no devise shall be revocable but by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing declaring the same, or by cancelling, &c. by the testator himself or in his presence, or by his direction; but all devises shall remain good till revoked or altered by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing of the devisor signed in the presence of three or four witnesses declaring the same, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding. And upon the first argument last term North Ch. Justice and Levinz held, that forasmuch as the devisor's intent appears fully in writing, and by consequence no doubt of fraud or perjury, that the subscribing by King upon the same paper may serve as well for the codicil, as for the will; and that it is not material whether the signing be at top or bottom of the will, or writing; for the statute doth not say subscribed, but signed by the testator: but now this term North being removed into Chancery, and Levinz sick, rule was given, that judgment should be entered for the plaintiff for a moiety, by Pemberton Ch. Justice, Wyndham and Charlton, nisi causa before such a day; at which day Levinz being present the cause was adjourned till next term; and whether any judgment be entered quære, for I do not remember it was moved again.(2)

HILARY, 34 CHARLES II.

SPRIGG against NEAL.

Declaration in trespass quære clausum fregit, &c.

Leicester, to wit.—Henry Neal, late of Lubenham, otherwise Lubinam, in the county aforesaid, yeoman, was attached to answer Samuel Sprigg of a plea, wherefore with force and arms the close of the said Samuel at Lubenham otherwise Lubinam he broke, and his grass to the value of sixty shillings there lately growing with feet by walking trod down and consumed, and other his grass to the value of forty shillings there to wit lately growing with certain cattle depastured, trod down, and consumed, and also his gates, walls, and hedges to the [88] value of ten pounds there lately made, erected, growing, and being, did spoil, break, cut down, tear up, and prostrate, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Samuel, and against the peace of the lord the now King, &c. And whereupon the said Samuel by William Parker his attorney complains, that the said Henry on the first day of January, in the 28th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, with force and arms, &c. the close, to wit, a certain portion of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, appurtenant to and adjoining the messuage or tenement now or late in the tenure of the said Samuel at L. aforesaid broke, and his grass the value, &c. there lately growing with certain cattle, to wit, horses, oxen, cows, hogs, and sheep, did depasture, tread down, and consume, and also his gates, to wit, four gates, and his walls, to wit, five perches of his walls, and his hedges, to wit, five perches of his hedges, to the value, &c. there lately made, erected, growing, and being, did spoil, break, cut down, tear up, and prostrate, the trespass aforesaid as to the breaking the close aforesaid, and the treading down and consuming the grass aforesaid with feet by walking, and the depasturing, treading down, and consuming the other grass aforesaid with the cattle aforesaid, and the spoiling, breaking, cutting down, and tearing up the gates, walls, and hedges aforesaid from the said 1st day of January, in the 28th year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, until the 10th day of April, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, at sundry days and times continuing, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced and hath sustained damage to the value of twenty pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Henry by Laurence Carter his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and as to the coming with force and arms saith that he is not guilty thereof as the said Samuel above complains against him, and of this he puts himself upon the country; and the said Samuel doth the like:—And as to the spoiling, breaking, cutting down, and tearing up the walls and hedges aforesaid, the said Henry saith that the said Samuel ought not to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, because he saith that the said Henry at any time within six years before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said Samuel, is not [89] guilty thereof as the said Samuel above complains against him, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays judgment if the said Samuel ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c. And as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid above supposed to be committed, the said Henry saith that the said Samuel ought not to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, because he saith that one Oliver Sprigg, the late father of the said Samuel, long before the time in which the trespass aforesaid is supposed to be committed, to wit, upon the 8th day cancelling, tearing, or obliterating the same, by the testator himself, or in his presence, and by his directions and consent, but all devises and bequests of lands and tenements shall remain and continue in force until the same be burnt, cancelled, torn or obliterated by the testator, or his directions, in manner aforesaid, or unless the same be altered by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing of the devisors, signed in the presence of three or more witnesses declaring the same; any former law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

of May, in the 13th year of the reign of the Lord Charles the First, late King of England, &c. was seised in his demesne as of fee of and in the said parcel of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, appurtenant to and adjoining the said messuage or tenement in the declaration aforesaid above mentioned, and also of and in one close of pasture with the appurtenances, containing by estimation three roods whether more or less, lying and being in L. aforesaid, then called the Kilne-Close, and also of one edifice or barn with the appurtenances adjoining the said close called the Kilne-Close, and of the land upon which the said edifice or barn then stood; and the said Oliver of the said tenements in the form aforesaid being seised, the said Oliver afterwards to wit, upon the said 8th day of May, in the 13th year aforesaid, at L. aforesaid, by his certain indentures sealed with the seal of the said Oliver, which the said Henry produces here in Court, the date of which is the said day and year, &c. as well for and in consideration of the sum of 38l. of the lawful money of England to him in hand by the said Henry paid, as for divers other causes and good considerations him the said Oliver thereto specially moving, and by livery of seisin then made upon the tenements aforesaid in the said deed granted, did grant to the said Henry by the name of Henry Neal, junior, of L. aforesaid, in the county of Leicester aforesaid, cordwainer, his heirs and assigns, the said close of pasture, edifice, or barn, and the land upon which the said edifice or barn then stood with the appurtenances, and by the said deed indented the said Oliver further granted to the said Henry, his heirs and assigns, free liberty in the court and homestead of the said Oliver to thatch the said edifice or barn, and free and common ways and passages, ingress, egress, and regress, to lead or drive any cattle or carriages [90] whatsoever, through the court and homestead of the said Oliver to and into the said premisses granted as aforesaid, and to lead or drive any cattle or carriages whatsoever of and from the said premisses granted as aforesaid, as by the said deed more fully appeareth: which court and homestead are the same parcel of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel; by virtue of which grant the said Henry had and used, and ought and was accustomed to have and use, from time to time and at all times, from thence afterwards at his free will, the liberty in the said parcel of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, to thatch the edifice or barn aforesaid, and the free and common way and passage of ingress, egress, and regress to lead or drive any cattle or carriages whatsoever through the court and homestead aforesaid in and into the premisses granted as aforesaid, and to lead or drive any cattle or carriages whatsoever of and from the premisses granted as aforesaid:—And the said Henry further saith that at the said time in which, &c. he the said Henry was about to pass through the way and passage aforesaid, and that a certain gate was erected and affixed across the way and passage aforesaid, so that the said Henry by occasion thereof through the way and passage aforesaid there could not pass; whereupon the said Henry at the said time in which, &c. the said gate so affixed across the way and passage aforesaid, spoiled, broke, cut down, tore up, and prostrated, doing as little damage to the same as he could, that the said Henry by the way and passage aforesaid there might pass, to use the way and passage there, and with the proper cattle of the said Henry into the said close of the said Samuel commonly called the yard of the said Samuel to use the way and passage aforesaid, entered and passed, and the cattle aforesaid then being the proper cattle of the said Henry led, drove, led back and drove back, and in using the way and passage aforesaid the grass aforesaid there lately growing with feet by walking trod down and consumed, and the other grass aforesaid there in like manner lately growing with his cattle aforesaid trod down and consumed, as it was well lawful for him, which cattle in driving by little morsels bit the grass in the way and passage aforesaid then growing, which spoiling, breaking, cutting down, tearing up, and prostrating of the said gate, and the entering into the said parcel of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, and the treading down and consuming of the said grass there lately growing with feet by [91] walking, and also the biting, treading down, and consuming the other grass aforesaid there in like manner lately growing, with the cattle aforesaid, for the cause and occasion aforesaid, is the same residue of the trespass aforesaid, in the same parcel of land commonly called the close of the said Samuel, whereof the said Samuel above complains against him, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays judgment if the said Samuel ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said Samuel saith that he by any thing before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid, because as to the said plea of the said Henry as to the spoiling, breaking, cutting down, and tearing up the walls and hedges aforesaid committed as aforesaid, by the said Henry above pleaded in bar, the said Samuel saith that the said Henry is guilty thereof within six years before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said Samuel, as he the said Samuel above thereof complains against him, and this he prays may be enquired of by the country, and the said Henry doth the like, &c. And as to the said plea of the said Henry as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid in the declaration aforesaid mentioned, the said Samuel saith that the said spoiling, breaking, cutting down, tearing up, and prostrating of the gate aforesaid, and the entering into the said parcel of land, commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, and the treading down and consuming of the grass aforesaid there as aforesaid growing with feet by walking, and also the biting, treading down, and consuming the other grass aforesaid there in like manner as aforesaid growing with the cattle aforesaid, for the cause and occasion aforesaid, by the plea aforesaid above supposed, is not the same residue of the trespass in the said parcel of land commonly called the yard of the said Samuel, whereof the said Samuel above complains against him, and this he prays may be enquired of by the country.

And the said Henry saith that the said plea of the said Samuel, in the manner and form aforesaid above by replying pleaded, as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid mentioned, is not sufficient in law for the said Samuel to have and maintain his action aforesaid against the said Henry, and that he to the said replication in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, hath no necessity neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for want of a sufficient replication in this behalf, the said Henry prays judgment, and that the said [92] Samuel as to the said residue of the trespass aforesaid, may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against him the said Henry.

And the said Samuel because that he above by replying hath alledged sufficient matter in law to have and maintain his action aforesaid against him the said Henry, as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid, committed as aforesaid, which he is ready to verify, and which matter the said Henry doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment, and his damages aforesaid by occasion of the said residue of the trespass aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c. and because, &c.

Trespass for treading his grass, and breaking and pulling down his gate, and for entering his close called The Yard, and breaking his hedges. The defendant, quoad breaking the hedges, pleaded non culp. and as to the residue justifies for a passage per & trans The Yard, and that tempore quo, &c. a gate was erected upon the passage, so that he could not pass with his beasts, wherefore he broke and pulled down the gate, and in passing rariter trod the grass, quod est' id' residuum. The plaintiff replied, that it is not the same residue whereof he complained. The defendant demurred: and now it was objected that the defendant cannot justify the pulling down and breaking of the gate, not having shewn that it was either locked or nailed so that he could not pass. Sed per Curiam; having pleaded that the gate was put there, so that he could not use the passage, it shall be intended it was locked or nailed, or the way thereby so streightened that he could not pass, and the plea good. But the replication that the residue is not idem residuum, without shewing some other trespass, is too general, and therefore vain and idle. Judgment per totam Cur' for the defendant.

Bailiff by warrant arrests before the writ delivered to the sheriff, held good. Ante 20, 57. 2 Lev. 19. 2 Saund. 298, 299. 1 Salk. 409. 9 Co. 69. 1 Jo. 375.

Trespass for battery and imprisonment 13 June 33 Car. 2. Defendant pleaded, that on the 16th of March an attachment issued out of Chancery to the sheriff, and that the sheriff after delivery of the writ to him, scil. May 27, made a warrant to the defendant his bailiff, whereupon he took him eodem 27 Maii, and traverses all other times before the warrant, or after the return of the writ. The plaintiff maintains his declaration absque hoc that the writ was delivered to the sheriff before the battery and imprisonment. The defendant rejoined, that before the return of the writ it was delivered to the sheriff, scil. the said 27th of May, and that before the arrest he had no notice but that it was delivered to the sheriff. The plaintiff sur-rejoined, that before the arrest the writ was not delivered to the sheriff. The plaintiff rebutted ut supra, that he had no notice, but that the writ was delivered to the sheriff before the arrest, & de hoc ponit se, &c. Thereupon the plaintiff demurred: and now by Pemberton Chief-Justice & totam Cur' judgment was given for the defendant. For 1. Whether or no the writ was delivered to the sheriff before the warrant and arrest, so long as in rei veritate there was a writ to warrant the arrest, is not material. 2. There being a writ and a warrant thereupon, the bailiff shall not be charged for the execution thereof; for he is not privy, nor hath notice when the writ was delivered to the sheriff; and he hath tendered an issue of notice, which the plaintiff hath refused to accept.(1)

Copyholder for life is attainted of felony; he in reversion for life may enter. 1 Levinz 263. 2 Ventris 38. 5 Co. 117.

In ejectment and a special verdict upon non culp. the case was; a copyhold was granted to A. for his life, and after, according to the custom, the reversion was granted to another for life, immediate post mortem sursumredditionem forisfacturam sive aliam determinationem status predict'. A. the first tenant was attainted of felony. The lord did not enter, and the King pardoned A. for the felony. He in reversion for life entered, and in B. R. his entry was adjudged lawful; upon which a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and error assigned in the matter of law; scil. that he in reversion for life could not take advantage of the forfeiture, but the lord ought to have entered for the forfeiture, and so have determined the first estate, and that he in reversion for life should have entered upon him. But the whole Court here held according to the opinion of B. R. that the estate for life was determined by the attainder; for in the eye of the law a copyhold is no more than a tenancy at will; and the attainder determines his will; for his attainder disables him to hold an estate, and of this determination he in reversion may take advantage: upon which judgment was affirmed.

A case on the statute for uniting the churches of London. 22 Char. 2, c. 11, § 63.

Error of a judgment in B. R. in ejectment of the Rectory of Bowe & quodam loco ibidem vocat' the vestry; and upon non culp. a special verdict found: that at the time of the great fire in London Dr. Smalwood was Parson of Bowe, Hutchinson of Honey-Lane, and Dillington of Soper-Lane; all which churches were then burnt down by the fire: and they found the statute 22 Car. 11, whereby these three parishes are united to the church of Bowe only to be rebuilt, and to be the parish church for the three parishes, and that the goods and plate of the other churches not to be rebuilt shall be delivered to the church-wardens of Bowe-Church: and that notwithstanding the union the parishes as to rates, taxes, &c. shall remain distinct, and the patrons of them shall present by turns to the church rebuilt. The first presentment to be by the patron of that church, which is of most yearly value; and that the present incumbent shall not be deprived of the tithes of their respective churches so long as they assist in serving the cure of the church to be re-edified: they farther find the statute of 22, 23 Car. 2, c. 15, for the better settlement and maintenance of the parsons, whereby the maintenance of every parson is reduced to an annual sum certain in lieu of tithes, scil. the Parson of Bowe, Honey-Lane, and Soper-Lane, to have 200l. per annum, to be assessed by the aldermen and common council of the ward, and to be levied by the mayor by distress and sale of goods for non-payment. Provided and enacted, that where any of the parishes have become vacant since the fire, the surviving incumbent of the parish thereto united, and therewith consolidated, shall have like remedy to recover the tithes hereby settled to be paid, as if he had been presented to both parishes since the union. They find that Dillington Parson of Soper-Lane died on the first of July, 24 Car. 2, that Smalwood Parson of Bowe died 20 Septem. 1679, and that Hutchinson is the survivor. The [96] Archbishop of Canterbury, Patron of Bowe, upon the death of Smalwood collated Puller, lessor of the plaintiff, to Bowe, who entered, and Hutchinson ousted him, whereupon he brought this ejectment; and the question in B. R. and also in this Court upon the writ of error was, whether Puller Parson of Bowe should recover the whole rectory in the life of Hutchinson, or whether Hutchinson should not hold the whole as survivor upon the statute? and it was adjudged in B. R. that Puller should recover the whole rectory; and this was assigned for error. Note, The verdict does not find that Bowe-Church is of more yearly value than the rest; nor whether upon the death of Dillington there was any presentation to Soper-Lane. But that seems not material; for Puller being admitted is parson in possession; which points seem to be admitted. And it was objected for the plaintiff in error, that the words of stat. 22 & 23, which are, have become void since the fire, must not be construed, have become void before the Act; so as to exclude the survivor in case of avoidance after the Act, so long as any of those that were parsons before the Act are living: for if so, the survivor shall have nothing, and construction must be made upon both Acts, by which it appears, that no parson alive at the time of the Act is to be left unprovided for during his life. For by the first Act each parson is to have the tithes of his parish so long as he assists in serving the cure: and in the latter Act when the tithes are taken away, and an annuity given in lieu of them, the proviso is, that the survivor shall hold all, as if he was presented to both; and does not provide that he shall recover part only of the annuity assessed upon his parish; and therefore he ought either to recover all or nothing, and the new presentee to have nothing during the life of the survivor. To this opinion Levinz inclined; but the rest contra. They held, that upon construction of both Acts the survivor should recover pro rata, according to the value taxed upon his parish, and that the new presentee should have the residue of the 200l. per annum, and shall be parson. Then an exception was moved to the declaration, scil. that an ejectment lies not de quodam loco vocat' a vestry, for the incertainty in execution, and Savill's case, 11 Co. 55, cited, that an ejectment lies not de uno clauso vocat. Dovecote Close, without shewing the nature of the land and [97] quantity of acres. But to this it was answered and resolved, that the declaration was well enough. Savill's case was undecimo Jac. and after that Mich. 15 Jac. in Sparrow's case, quam vid. Cro Ja. 435, an ejectment of two closes, vocat. Gabell's upper and nether, was adjudged good; and Cro. Ja. 654, it is held an ejectment lies de domo, though a præcipe will not; and a close called by a name, or a vestry, are things more certain to be found or delivered in execution than 100 acres of land lying sparsim in a common field: and the judgment was affirmed.

Replevin for two cows in quodam loco vocat' Alice Holt. The defendant made conusance as bailiff to the King, as damage-feasant there, being part of a forest in com' Southampton, whereof the King is seised in fee. Defendant in bar pleads, that the Bishop of Winchester is seised of the manor of Farnham, and whereof a messuage and lands copyhold are holden, and prescribes in the bishop for him and his tenants for common omni anno, omni tempore anni, without excepting the fence-month. The plaintiff traverses the prescription, and found for the defendant: and though it was moved in arrest, &c. that without the exception aforesaid the prescription was not good, yet over-ruled, and judgment was given for the defendant. Note, A record was produced here this term in a case between Brabrook and Carter, and entered there Hill. 33, 34 C. 2, Rot. 637, wherein a verdict was given on the same prescription; and upon consideration the next term after judgment was given as here, that the prescription was good without excepting the fence-month.

Trover and assumpsit were joined in the same action; and upon non culp. a verdict for the defendant quoad the trover, and for the plaintiff quoad the assumpsit. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that these two cannot be conjoined in one action; and though the jury hath severed them, yet the declaration being ill ab initio, the plaintiff ought not to have judgment; and of this opinion was the whole Court, and gave judgment, quoad nil capiat per billam.

Lease to commence after A.'s death without issue male, or from the time of his death before the daughter be 16, without issue male ; A. died leaving a son and a daughter then under 16. The son after died without issue, the daughter being above 16. Quære, Is she entitled to the term?

In ejectment upon non culp. a special verdict. Guybon upon the marriage of his son Fitz-William with Mercy Parker, for provision of portions for the daughters of that marriage, made a lease to commence upon the death of William without issue male, or from the time that William shall be dead before the daughter or daughters shall or may respectively attain to 16 years of age without issue-male of his body by Mercy, which shall first happen, or she being ensient of a daughter, for 200 years thence next ensuing. These are the words, William had issue by Mercy, Thomas and Barbara, and died June the 4th, 1664, Barbara then being under the age of 16. Thomas died without issue Decemb. 4, 1681, Barbara then being above the age of 16 ; and whether this lease should arise, or not? was the question. And the Court seemed to be of opinion upon the first words, that the lease should arise upon the death of William without issue-male, though it be not within the first part of the disjunctive, sc. or from the time that William shall be dead before the daughter or daughters shall or may respectively attain to 16 years of age without issue-male; for this being a [100] provision for daughters' portions, the construction shall be made upon the whole deed, that the intent was, that the daughters should be provided for, happen how it would. Sed partes concordaverunt.

HILARY, 34 & 35 CHARLES II.

COLE against WALTON.

Action of debt by executors upon a bond.

London, to wit.—Thomas Walton, late of London, scrivener, otherwise called Thomas Walton, citizen and salter, of London, was summoned to answer William Cole, Esquire, Richard Rains, Doctor of Laws, and Thomas Robson, Esquire, executors of the testament of Thomas Stretchley, gent. of a plea, that he render to them 100l. which he unjustly detains from them, &c. And whereupon they the said William, Richard, and Thomas Robson, by John Coke their attorney say, that whereas the said Thomas Walton upon the 26th day of January, in the 26th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at London, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, by his certain writing obligatory had granted that he was holden to the said Thomas Stretchley in his life-time in the said 200l. to be paid to the said Thomas Stretchley when thereto afterwards he should be requested, nevertheless the said Thomas Walton although oftentimes requested the said [101] sum of 100l. to the said Thomas Stretchley in his life-time, or to the said William, Richard, and Thomas Robson after the death of the said Thomas Stretchley hath not paid, but the same to them hath refused to pay, and to the said William, Richard, and Thomas Robson as yet doth refuse to pay, and the same from them unjustly detains, whereupon they say that they are prejudiced, and have sustained damage to the value of 20l. and therefore they produce their suit, &c. and they produce here in Court as well the writing aforesaid, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date whereof is the day and year aforesaid, &c. as the letters testamentary of the said T. S. whereby it sufficiently appears to the Court here, that the said William, Richard, and Thomas Robson are the executors of the testament aforesaid, and have the administration thereof, &c. &c.

And the said Thomas Walton by Ralph Grainge his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and prays oyer of the writing aforesaid, and it is read to him, &c. and he also prays oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it is read to him in these words :—" Whereas the above-named Thomas Stretchley hath the day of the date above-written lent unto John Bridge, citizen and weaver of London, the sum of 50l. of the lawful money of England, upon his obligation bearing date the day of the date hereof, wherein the said John Bridge is, and standeth holden and firmly bounden unto the said T. S. in 100l. of the lawful money of England, with condition for the true payment of 50l. 10s. of the like lawful money to the said T. S. his executors, administrators or assigns, at or in the now dwelling-house of the above bound Thomas Walton, scrivener, situate in Soper-Lane, otherwise New Queen Street, London, on the 27th day of July next ensuing the date of the same obligation as thereby appeareth ; which obligation was so accepted, and the money thereupon lent at and upon the undertaking of the said Thomas Walton, collaterally to secure the same according as is hereunder-mentioned. Now the condition of this obligation is such, that if the said John Bridge, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, shall make default of or in the payment of the said sum of 51l. 10s. at the place and on the day aforesaid unto the said T. S. his executors, administrators, or assigns, then if the said Thomas Walton, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, do or [102] shall on the last day of the said month of July now next coming truly pay or cause to be paid to the said T. S. his executors, administrators, or assigns, at the place of payment aforesaid, the said sum of 51l. 10s. in lieu of the said recited obligation, [the said T. S. his executors, administrators, or assigns, upon such payment made by the said T. W. his executors or assigns, delivering up unto the said T. W. his executors or assigns, the said recited obligation safe and uncancelled, and sufficiently assigning over the same unto him the said T. W. his executors or assigns, or unto such other person or persons, as he or they shall in that behalf require the same to be performed by the said T. S. his executors, administrators, or assigns], that then this obligation shall be void and of none effect, or else it shall stand and remain in full force and virtue. Which being read and heard the said Thomas Walton saith that the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson ought not to have their action aforesaid against him, because he saith that the said John Bridge in the condition aforesaid above-named, did not pay the said 51l. 10s. upon the said 27th day of July next ensuing the date of the writing aforesaid here in Court produced, to the said T. S. then being in full life, and that the said T. W. upon the said last day of July in the condition aforesaid mentioned, for the space of one hour next before the setting of the sun of the said day, went to the mansion-house of the said T. W. to wit, in the said parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap aforesaid, and there until after the setting of the sun of the said day remained, and during all that time there was ready to pay the said T. S. then being in full life as aforesaid, the said 51l. 10s. and that neither the said T. S. nor any other person on his behalf was ready to receive from the said T. W. the said 51l. 10s. and upon the payment thereof to deliver to the said T. W. the said obligation by the said John Bridge made as aforesaid, according to the form and effect of the said condition ; and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays judgment if the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson ought to have their action [103] aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson say, that the said plea of the said Thomas Walton above in bar pleaded and the matter in the said plea contained are not sufficient in law to preclude them the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson from having their action aforesaid against the said Thomas Walton, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer, and this they are ready to verify, wherefore for want of a sufficient answer of the said Thomas Walton in this behalf, they the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson pray judgment, and their debt aforesaid together with their damages by the occasion of the detention of that debt to be adjudged to them, &c.

And the said Thomas Walton because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson from having their action aforesaid against him, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson do not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof as before prays judgment, and that they the said William Cole, Richard Rains, and Thomas Robson may be precluded from having their action aforesaid, &c. And because the justices, &c.

COLE against WALTON.

Plea, paratus fuit to pay his obligation without obtulit ill.

Debt upon an obligation against the defendant, by the executors of Stretchley, conditioned, that whereas the plaintiff had lent to Bridge 50l. and took his bond for repayment of 51l. 10s. at the house of Walton, upon the 27th of July next, which he accepted upon the undertaking of Walton, that if Bridge did not pay Walton would secure it as herein is set forth. Now the [104] condition is, that if Bridge make default, then if Walton at the said time and place pay the money, Stretchley then delivering Bridge's bond to Walton uncancelled, and assigning it to him, the obligation to be void: the defendant pleaded that Bridge did not pay the money, whereupon he went to his house the 31st of July following, an hour before sunset, and there staid till the sun was down, paratus to pay the money, sed nec Stretchley, nor any other for him, was there ready to receive it, or to deliver up Bridge's bond, & hoc, &c. The plaintiff demurred generally, and had judgment per totam Curiam; for the plea is naught for want of an obtulit solvere; for the tender only is traversable, and not the paratus, and he is to tender before the other is bound to deliver up the bond.

WOOLTON against SALTER AND OTHERS.

Commoner cannot distrain a stranger's cattle without special damage. Keilway 47. 9 Co. 112 b. 4 Term Rep. 72.

Replevin, and avows damage-feasant in his common, and makes title to common in the locus in quo, and because these beasts were there damage-feasant, he took and impounded them. Hereupon the plaintiff demurred, and the avowry was adjudged naught, because he does not particularly complain of any special damage to himself, nor alledge that he could not have common in tam amplo modo quo debuit & consuevit; for without a particular damage he cannot distrain the beasts of a stranger no more than bring an action upon the case; and in actions upon the case some special damage is always alledged; and though this being an avowry was objected to be different, and to that purpose were cited two precedents, the one in Rastal, the other in Coke's Entries, without alledging any special damage; but being without argument the Court did not regard them, but held the law to be the very same in avowries as in actions upon the case, and that a commoner could no more distrain than bring an action upon the case, without alledging that he is damnified in his common. Another exception was taken to the avowry, sc. that he prescribes propter communem pasturam, [105] and not pro communia pasturæ, as it ought; and upon both exceptions judgment was given against the avowant.

HILARY, 34 CHARLES II.

MANBY against LONG AND OTHERS.

Declaration in replevin.

Lincoln, to wit.—Richard Long, John Browne, and Richard Sutton, were attached by the writ of the lord the King of second deliverance, to answer Francis Manby, Esquire, of a plea, wherefore they took the cattle of the said Francis, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges until, &c. And whereupon the said Francis by Patrick Shore his attorney complains, that the said Richard, John, and Richard, on the 1st day of July, in the 33d year of the reign of the lord the now King, at Potterhanworth, in a certain place called the North-Fenn, took the cattle, to wit, five mares, and one Colt, of the said Francis, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges, &c. Whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of 10l. and therefore he brings his suit, &c.

And the said Richard, John, and Richard, by Timothy Langthorne their attorney, come and defend the force and injury when, &c. and as the bailiffs of the Masters and Governors of the Hospital of Jesus Christ in the City of Lincoln founded by Richard Smith Doctor of Physic well acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. because they say that the said place in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be committed, contains and at the said time in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be committed, did contain in itself one thousand acres of marsh with the appurtenances in Potterhanworth aforesaid, and that the master and governors of the said hospital [being a body politic and corporate] long before the time in which, &c. were seised of Potterhanworth with the appurtenances in the county of Lincoln aforesaid, whereof the said place, called the North-Fenn, in which, &c. is and at the said time in which, &c. was [106] parcel, in their demesne as of fee in right of the hospital aforesaid, and because the cattle aforesaid at the said time in which, &c. were in the said place called the North-Fenn, the grass in the said place then growing eating up, and doing damage there, they the said Richard, John, and Richard, as the bailiffs of the said masters and governors of the hospital aforesaid, well acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. so doing damage there, &c.

And the said Francis saith that the said cognizance of the said Richard, John, and Richard, above in bar pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said Francis from having his action aforesaid against them the said Richard, John, and Richard, and that he to the said cognizance in the manner and form aforesaid made, hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore he prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the unjust taking and detaining of his cattle aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Richard, John, and Richard, because that they above have alledged sufficient matter in law in their cognizance aforesaid, to acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid, as the bailiffs of the masters and governors of the said hospital, in the said place in which, &c. to be just, which they are ready to verify, which matter the said Francis doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, pray judgment and the return of the cattle aforesaid, together with their damages, expences, and costs, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, to be adjudged to them, &c. And because the justices, &c.

Conusance as bailiff to a corporation without shewing how incorporate, or that he had a precept in writing.—Good. Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 K. 14. 6 Coke 39, Bellamy's case.

Second deliverance for taking his beasts in North Fenne. The defendants made conusance as bailiffs to the Masters and Governors of Christ's Hospital in Lincoln ex fundatione Richardi Smith; and say the master, &c. are a corporation, and seised in fee of the locus in quo, &c. in jure hospitalis, and so make conusance as bailiffs damage-feasant there. The plaintiff demurred generally, and took two exceptions to the avowry. 1. That it does not shew how it became a corporation. 2. That he does not say he had a command or precept for so doing, nor that it was in writing, without which the corporation could not make any precept to him. Yet per Cur' the avowry was adjudged good; for 1. Their being incorporated is but an inducement to alledge a seisin in them, and it need not have been shewn. 2. His conusance is good without mentioning their precept, or that it was in writing, for their precepts need not be in writing for such matters as this is.

HOLLET against SANDERS.

Baron and feme by settlement before marriage tenants in special tail male, remainder to the husband in tail male, remainder to J. S. the baron only suffers a common recovery, it bars the remainder to J. S. but whether the moiety of the intail to baron and feme only, dubitatur. Sed vide, 2 Cruise 226, 227.

Ejectment upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was. James Lee seised of the tenements in question, had issue William his first son, James his second son, and Jeremy his third son; and upon the marriage of his youngest son with Jane Searl covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for life, remainder to Jeremy and Jane and the heirs males of their bodies; remainder to Jeremy and the heirs males of his body; remainder to James the second son and the heirs males of his body; the remainder to William and the heirs males of his body; remainder to the right heirs of James the father. James the father died. Jeremy, Jane living, bargained and sold to Upton in fee, against whom a præcipe was brought, and Jeremy only without his wife [108] Jane vouched, and a common recovery was suffered; James the second son died without issue; Jeremy and Jane had issue a son James, who died without issue male, leaving only four daughters, Thomas the son of William, after the death of Jeremy and Jane, entered and was seised, and conveyed to the defendant. And the question was, whether this recovery suffered by Jeremy as vouchee solely, without his wife should bar the remainder to William? And it was adjudged that it did bar. 1. It was agreed that the estate tail to Jeremy and Jane was not barred in toto, Jane being not vouched, 3 Co. 5 b. Cuppledike's case, and Owen and Morgan's case there cited. But whether it be barred for a moiety or no, this being a settlement before marriage, which they took by moieties, may be a doubt, as it was in Cuppledike's case. But 2dly, the estate to Jeremy and Jane being determined, and Jeremy having a remainder to himself and the heirs males of his body, that remainder was wholly barred by the recovery, and all the remainders over; for the remainder in tail to Jeremy passed by the recovery, and is in supposition of law in esse, and precedent to all the subsequent remainders, according to Capell's case, Co. 62, and Benson and Baron's case lately adjudged in B. R.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and a special verdict, the case was: tenant in tail made his will, and devised his land, and after by bargain and sale inrolled, conveyed away the land to make a tenant to the præcipe, against whom a common recovery was had with voucher of the tenant in tail to the use of himself in fee: and whether by this recovery the will was made good, so as by virtue thereof the devisee shall have the land, or whether the devise be revoked by the recovery? was the question: and by Pemberton Chief Justice and the whole Court it was adjudged upon argument, that this was a revocation; for by the bargain and sale and recovery the whole estate was changed and altered after the making of the will.(1)

Bridgwater against Bythway.

Declaration in trespass. Vi et armis. Traverse.

Hereford, to wit.—Richard Bythway the elder, late of Lemtwardine, in the county aforesaid, gent. and Richard Bythway the younger of the same, in the county aforesaid, gent. were attached to answer Richard Bridgwater, wherefore with force and arms together with Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty, upon him the said Richard Bridgwater, at Wigmore they made an assault, and him beat, wounded and ill-treated so that his life was despaired of, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Richard Bridgwater, and against the peace of the said lord the now King, &c. and whereupon the said Richard Bridgwater, by Francis Edwards his attorney, complains that the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, on the 25th day of April, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, together with the said Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty, with force and arms, to wit, with swords, staves, knives, clubs and fists, upon him the said Richard Bridgwater, at Wigmore made an assault, and him did beat, wound and ill treat, so that his life was despaired of, and other wrongs, &c. whereupon he said that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of 50l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Richard Bythway the elder, by the said Richard Bythway the younger, his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and the said Richard Bythway the younger, in his proper person comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and as to the coming with force and arms, or whatever that is against the peace of the said lord the now King; and also the wounding aforesaid, they say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the county: and the said Richard Bridgewater doth the like; and as to the residue of the trespass and assault above supposed to be committed, they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, say that the said Richard Bridgwater ought not to have his action aforesaid, thereupon against them, because they say that before the said time in which the trespass and assault aforesaid, are supposed to be committed, to wit, in the term of the Holy Trinity, in the 32d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, the said Richard Bythway the elder, in the Court of the said lord the King, of [110] the Bench here, to wit, at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, by the consideration of the said Court, recovered against one Elias Jones, as well a certain debt of 8l. as 40s. which to the said Richard Bythway the elder, in the said Court of the lord the King were adjudged, for his damages which he had sustained by occasion of the detention of that debt, as by the record and proceedings thereupon in the said Court of the said lord the King here remaining, more fully appeareth; upon which judgment the said Richard Bythway the elder, afterwards, to wit, upon the 12th day of February, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, and in the term of St. Hilary, in the 32d and 33d years of the reign of the said lord the now King, prosecuted out of the said Court, here a certain writ of the lord the King of fieri facias, against the said Elias, to the then Sheriff of Hereford directed; by which writ the said lord the now King the then sheriff commanded, that of the goods and chattels of the said Elias in his bailiwick, he should cause to be made the debt and damages aforesaid, and that he should have that money before the justices of the said lord the King, here from the day of Easter in five weeks then next ensuing, to be paid to the said Richard Bythway the elder, for the debt and damages aforesaid; which writ afterwards, to wit, upon the 12th day of April, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, aforesaid, at Wigmore aforesaid, to one John Skippe, Esq. then being Sheriff of the county of Hereford aforesaid, was delivered in the form of law to be executed; by virtue of which writ, and for the execution thereof the said then sheriff afterwards, to wit, upon the said day and year, at Wigmore aforesaid, made his certain warrant in writing, sealed with the seal of his office of sheriff, to Edward Langford, Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty, bailiffs of the said sheriff directed; by which warrant the said sheriff to them jointly and severally did command, that they should cause to be made of the goods and chattels of the said Elias, the debt and damages aforesaid, according to the command of the said writ; which warrant afterwards, to wit, upon the said day and year, at Wigmore aforesaid, to the said bailiffs was delivered, in the form of law to be executed. And the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, further say, that on the said day of delivery of the said writ to the said sheriff, and also at the said time of the making of the said warrant, and at the said time in which, &c. the said Elias had divers goods and chattels, of his own proper goods and chattels, to wit, at Lemtwardine aforesaid, and for this because the said goods and chattels at the said time in which, &c. were in the possession of the said Elias, and then were found within the bailiwick of the said sheriff, the said Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty at the [111] said time, in which, &c. before the return of the said writ, as the bailiffs of the said John Skippe, Esq. being as aforesaid, Sheriff of the county of Hereford aforesaid, the said goods and chattels by virtue of the warrant aforesaid, at Lemtwardine aforesaid, took and arrested, and the said goods and chattels then and there under the custody of the said sheriff then and there had, and would have led and carried away, to cause to be made the debt and damages aforesaid, according to the command of the said writ, and the said goods and chattels under the custody of the said sheriff in the form aforesaid, and for the cause aforesaid being, the said Richard Bridgewater at the said time in which, &c. and before the return of the said writ, upon them the said Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty, with force and arms, at Lemtwardine aforesaid, made an assault, and the said goods and chattels out of the custody of the said sheriff, with force and arms then and there would and endeavoured to have taken and rescued; whereupon they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, then and there being present, and perceiving that he the said Richard Bridgwater, upon them the said Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty had made an assault, and would and endeavoured to rescue the goods and chattels aforesaid, out of the custody of the said sheriff; they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, in aid of the said bailiffs, and by their command, then and there their hands upon the said Richard Bridgwater gently laid, with intention to hinder the said Richard Bridgwater, lest he might take the goods and chattels aforesaid, out of the hands of the said bailiffs, as they lawfully might; which gentle laying on of the hands the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, upon the said Richard Bridgwater in aid of the said bailiffs, and by their command in the form aforesaid, and for the cause aforesaid, are the same trespass and assault whereof the said Richard Bridgwater above now complains, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray judgment, if the said Richard Bridgewater ought to have his action aforesaid, against them, &c.

And the said Richard Bridgwater as to the said plea of the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, as to the said residue of the trespass and assault aforesaid, above pleaded, saith that he by any thing by them the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, in the same plea above by pleading alledged, ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid, because he saith that the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, together with the said Thomas Jerman and Thomas Betty, with force and arms, of their own proper wrong, at Wigmore aforesaid, upon him the said Richard Bridgwater made an [112] assault and him did beat, wound and ill-treat, as he above complains against them, without this, that the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, at the time of the trespass and assault aforesaid, in aid of the said bailiffs and by their command, upon him the said Richard Bridgwater gently laid their hands, with intention to hinder him, the said Richard Bridgwater lest he might take the goods and chattels aforesaid, out of the hands of the said bailiffs, as they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, above have alledged, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore because the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, above acknowledge the trespass and assault aforesaid, he prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the trespass and assault aforesaid to be adjudged, &c.

And the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger say, that the said plea of the said Richard Bridgwater above by replying pleaded, is not sufficient in law to maintain him the said Richard Bridgewater to have his action aforesaid against them the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid by replying pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the said Richard Bridgwater in this behalf, they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, as before pray judgment, and that the said Richard Bridgwater may be precluded from having his action aforesaid, &c.

And the said Richard Bridgwater, because that he in his plea aforesaid, above by replying pleaded, hath alledged sufficient matter in law to maintain him the said Richard Bridgwater to have his action aforesaid against them the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard Bythway the younger, which he is ready to verify; which matter they the said Richard Bythway the elder, and Richard the younger do not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether do refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment and his damages, by occasion of the trespass and assault aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c. And because the justices, &c.

Battery; defendant pleads a judgment obtained by his father against Elias Jones, and an execution thereupon, whereon the goods of Jones were taken in execution, and that the plaintiff assaulted the bailiffs, and would have rescued the goods; whereupon in aid of the bailiffs, and by their command, the defendant molliter manus imposuit upon the plaintiff to prevent his rescue of the goods. The plaintiff replied, de injuria sua propria absque hoc that the defendant by command of the bailiffs, and in aid of them, to prevent a rescue of the goods, &c. Whereupon the defendant demurred generally, and upon argument it was resolved by the whole Court: 1. That the replication in traversing the command of the bailiffs was not good. For he might of himself do that, to prevent the rescue, which is a tort and a breach of the peace. 2. The defendants plea is ill; for the action was brought as for a battery at W. and the defendant justifies at L. in the same county; whereas the bailiffs have authority throughout the whole county, and therefore the cause of justification in the same county not local, so that he should have conformed and justified in the same place, being the same county, where the plaintiff declared: and if the place had been material, he ought to have traversed all other places within the same county; and sic, quacunque via data, the plea is ill. Whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff.(1) quoad the 5l. pro damnis, pleads payment to the plaintiff by Mary Sachwell. The plaintiff, quoad the first plea, maintains the waste, and issue thereupon; and as to the 5l. pleads non solvit, and issue thereupon also. As to the last issue, the jury found for the plaintiff, that Mary did not pay the 5l. And as to the first issue for 314l. 11s. 5d. that Mary wasted. And farther they find, that before the marriage between Henry and Mary, scil. May 2, 23 Car. 2, Henry covenanted with Henry Norwood to leave Mary at his death 1000l. and entered into an obligation of 2000l. to the said Norwood to pay accordingly: that after the marriage Henry died, indebted to the plaintiff the said 1700l. for money had and received, and that administration of his goods was committed to Mary, and after, scil. 23 Octob. 30 Car. 2, the plaintiff sued Mary for the 1700l. and obtained the judgment aforesaid. And that the 1000l. not being paid to Mary, Norwood eodem Oct. 23, brought debt upon the bond against Mary, as administratrix to her husband, and recovered a judgment against her for 2000l. upon the bond, de bonis Hen. si tant', &c. and that Mary by consent of Norwood had 1000l. left in her hands of the goods of Henry to satisfy the 1000l. due to him. Sed utrum illa devastavit præd' 1000l. necne petunt advisamentum Curiæ. And farther they find, that after judgment to the plaintiff other goods of Henry, to the value of 63l. came to her hands, which she paid in satisfaction of debts of Henry due upon obligations. Et utrum she hath also wasted the 63l. petunt advisamentum Curiæ. And upon argument it was resolved by the whole Court, that the defendant must be charged de bonis of Mary for the 1000l. left to her for her own use; for she by confessing judgment to the plaintiff hath made herself liable; because she might have pleaded the obligation of 2000l. in bar of the 1700l. being only due upon contract to the plaintiff, which having omitted, she shall be charged therewith notwithstanding the other judgment for her proper debt, as [115] if an administrator hath assets to the value of 100l. only, and confess two several judgments to two several persons for 100l. each, he shall be obliged to pay both, as if he had bound himself in two several obligations to pay them so much money. 2. By Pemberton, Wyndham and Charlton, it not being found that at the time of the judgment confessed, she the administratrix had notice of the obligations upon which she paid the 63l. she shall not be charged for the said 63l. nor shall her payment be a devastavit in her; for they held, that if an executor pays debts upon contracts, when there are debts by specialty unpaid, but he had no notice of them, his payment of the simple contract debts shall be no devastavit for want of notice that there are debts of a higher nature. Levinz totis viribus contra in this point. He agreed, that where executors pay debts of equal nature, after action commenced against them for another debt of the same degree, want of notice of the writ shall excuse them. (1) But after an action once commenced against them for a debt of a superior nature, they cannot pay debts of a lower nature; and whether they have notice, or not notice, is not material. Nor was it ever seen, that want of notice of specialties shall excuse the payment of debts upon simple contract by an executor. But the other three Judges being of opinion, ut supra, gave judgment accordingly. But Charlton told me afterwards, that he had changed his opinion as to this point.

The jury found that all this was done, to the end that Chamberlain Hammersly the defendant might be presented upon recovery had in the quare impedit. The church was recovered by Barker's quare impedit, and Avenant removed, and this defendant presented by Barker at the nomination of Tho. Hammersly, and thereupon instituted, and inducted. The conveyance aforesaid was not yet perfected. Afterwards the King presented Lake lessor of the plaintiff, who was instituted and inducted. Error of a judgment in B. R. where the mayor and commonalty brought debt against Starr for 60l. by them imposed upon him for refusing to take the oath, and make the declaration required by statute 13 Car. 2, for the better government of corporations; and declares that he was elected bailiff of the corporation for a year according to their charter, which gives them a power to fine such as refuse to accept of offices, and that by his refusal their election became void; and avers, that the bailiff usually spends in his office the sum of 60l. and that the defendant for refusal was fined 60l. for which the action is now brought; and upon nil debet in Banco Regis verdict and judgment was for the plaintiff: and now it was assigned for error, that the [117] statute 13 Car. 2, does not enable them to fine, but only makes the office void. Sed per Curiam, Refusal of the oath is by a mean a refusal of the office; and so within the power given them by their charter to fine for refusing to accept of offices: and judgment was affirmed.

Ejectment, and declares of two several leases, one by three lessors, and the other by two of them, held good. Ante 67. 9 Viner Ab. 347. 2 Ventris 314.

Error of a judgment in ejectment in B. R. where the plaintiff declared upon a lease 1 Apr. 32 Car. 2, made by A. B. and C. of a messuage, &c. in Corkeham for five years from the 30th of March then last past. Cumque etiam the said A. and B. omitting C. postea scilicet eodem primo die Aprilis demised to the plaintiff predict' messuag' for five years from the said 30th day of March; virtute quarum quidem dimissionum he entered, and was possessed till ousted by the defendant. And upon non culp. verdict and judgment were for the plaintiff in B. R. and now it was assigned for error, that the declaration was double; being founded upon two leases of the same date for the same thing, and for the same term; and he could not enter and be possessed by both leases. Sed per totam Curiam judgment was affirmed; for 1. If it be double, it is cured by the verdict. But 2. It is not double; for when all three let the whole, and afterwards two of the same lessors let the same again to the same lessee, this is a surrender of the first lease as to their two parts, and a new demise pro tanto; and the old lease continues as to the third part, the lease of him that did not join in the second lease: and so the lessee entered and was possessed by both leases; scil. quoad the third part by title from C. under the first lease, and for the other two parts from A. and B. by virtue of the second lease.

by walking had trod down and consumed, and also other corn to the value of one hundred shillings there lately growing had mowed, cut down, took and carried away, and other his grass there lately growing had mowed, and the hay arising therefrom to the value of one hundred shillings had taken and carried away, and his goods and chattels to the value of sixty shillings there lately found had taken and carried away, and other his goods and chattels to the value of forty shillings there lately found had scattered and spoiled, and the gates and bolts of the said Richard of the said close, and inclosing that close to the value of ten shillings had torn up, broke and spoiled, and the cattle of the said Richard of the price of six pounds there lately found had taken, led away and impounded, and also upon him the said Richard there had made an assault, and him had beat, wounded and ill-treated, so that his life was greatly despaired of, and other wrongs to him hath done, to the great damage of the said Richard, and against the peace of the lord the King; and whereupon the said Richard then by declaring against the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert, in the said plea by the said C. B. then his attorney complained that the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert, on the 2d day of August, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, with force and arms, to wit, with swords, staves [122] and knives, the close of the said Richard, to wit, one piece of marsh containing by estimation two acres, whether it be more or less, lying in S. aforesaid, abutting towards the east upon a common rivulet, and one piece of land containing by estimation three roods, whether it be more or less, lying in S. aforesaid, abutting towards the west upon the common highway, and one other piece of land containing by estimation three roods, whether it be more or less, lying in S. aforesaid, and upon the lands of Thomas Whord, gent. at S. aforesaid, had broke, and his corn, to wit, wheat, barley, oats, peas, and vetches, and his grass to the value, &c. there lately growing with certain cattle, to wit, horses, oxen, cows, pigs, and sheep, had depastured, trod down and consumed, and other his grass to the value, &c. there in like manner lately growing with feet by walking had trod down and consumed, and also other corn, to wit, three cart-loads of his wheat to the value, &c. there growing had mowed, cut down, took and carried away, and other his grass there lately growing had mowed, and his hay, to wit, four cart-loads of hay arising therefrom to the value, &c. had taken and carried away, and his other goods and chattels, to wit, two cart-loads of wheat in the straw to the value, &c. there lately found had taken and carried away, and other his goods and chattels, to wit, two cart-loads of wheat in the straw to the value, &c. there lately found had scattered and spoiled, and the gates, to wit, two gates, and the bolts, to wit, two bolts of the said Richard of the said close, and that close inclosing to the value, &c. had opened, broke and spoiled, and the cattle, to wit, two horses and two mares of the said Richard of the price, &c. there lately found had taken, led away and impounded, and also upon the said Richard then and there had made an assault, and him had beat, wounded and ill-treated, so that his life was despaired of, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon he said that he was prejudiced, and had sustained damage to the value of thirty pounds, and thereupon then produced his suit, &c. And thereupon it was in such sort proceeded that afterwards, to wit, in the term of St. Michael, in the 34th year aforesaid, it was considered in the said Court here that the said Richard should recover against the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert his damages by occasion of the trespass aforesaid, above his expences and costs by him about his suit [123] in that behalf laid out to forty shillings, and for his expences and costs aforesaid to fourteen pounds, and that the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert should be taken, as by the record and proceedings thereof in the said Court here remaining more fully appeareth; which judgment as yet remains in its full force and effect, not reversed, annulled, vacated, or satisfied, and the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert further say that the said piece of marsh containing two acres of marsh mentioned in the said record of the said judgment above pleaded, and the said piece of marsh containing the said two acres of marsh, in which the taking of the said two geldings was committed, whereof the said Richard above now complains, are one and the same piece of marsh, and not other or different, and that the said two geldings, of whose taking and detention the said Richard now complains, were the said horses and not other nor different. And that the taking, leading away and impounding of the said two horses, mentioned in the said record of the said judgment above pleaded, and the taking and detention of the said geldings, whereof the said Richard above now complains, are one and the same taking and detention of the said two horses, and not other nor different, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore because the said Richard his damages by occasion of the taking and detention of the said two geldings against the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert, in the manner and form aforesaid hath recovered, they pray judgment if the said Richard ought to have again his action aforesaid for the said taking and detention of the said two geldings against them, &c.

And the said Richard saith that the said plea of the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert above pleaded, and the matter in the same plea contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said Richard from having his action aforesaid against them the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert; and that he the said Richard to the said plea in manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert in this behalf, the said [124] Richard prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the unjust detention of the cattle aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert, because that they above have alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said Richard from having his action aforesaid against them the said Samuel, Samuel, William and Robert, which they are ready to verify, which matter the said Richard doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, pray judgment, and that the said Richard may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against them, &c. And because the justices, &c.

In replevin for 2 geldings, defendant pleads a recovery in trespass for taking 2 horses.

Replevin for two geldings taken July 28, 33 Car. 2, in two acres of land, naming them. Defendant pleads that Trin. 34, the plaintiff brought an action of trepass, quare clausum fregit, & duos equos querentis cepit & abduxit, and also his grass and corn spoiled, and recovered 40s. damages and 14l. costs; and avers the geldings in the declaration, and the horses in the first action to be the same, and also the taking the same. The plaintiff hereupon demurred generally; and after argument judged per tot' Cur' that the averment of the geldings in this declaration, and the horses in the former, were the same, was well and consistent, for equus is a general term for all horses. 2. It was argued that the recovery in trespass shall not be a bar in this action, which is brought for the very cattle themselves, the action of trespass being only for damages, which might be given for the taking and carrying away only, together with the other trespasses, and not for the value of the cattle; and that so it seems in truth to have been; for 40s. cannot well be imagined to be the value of two horses; whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. [125] Quære tamen, for in Lacon and Bernards' case, Cro. Cha. 35 in trover for 100 sheep, the defendant pleaded in bar another judgment in trespass, quare cepit & abduxit 100 sheep, and 2d damages; the plaintiff replied, that the 2d damages were only for the caption and abduction, and not for the value of the cattle; and the replication was adjudged good, and judgment given for the plaintiff. But in the case at Bar there is no averment that the damages in the first action were given for the trespass only, nor does it appear for what the 40s. were given, but by supposal and conjecture.

Ejectment upon the demise of Benjamin Cutter and Mary his wife; and upon not guilty it was found by special verdict, that John Church was seised in fee, and by his wife Isabel had issue four sons; Humphry the first, Robert the second, Anthony the third, John the fourth; and by his will the 6th of March, 1583, devised all to his wife for her life, if she do not marry, but if she do marry that Humphry presently after her decease enter, have, hold, and enjoy all the land to him and the heirs males of his body; remainder to Robert, and the heirs males of his body; the remainder to Anthony, and the heirs males of his body; remainder to John, and the heirs males of his body; with divers remainders over: that Isabel the wife did not marry; and they derive title from Humphry to his grandson, and from him to the wife (the lessor) filiam unicam suam; and that the title of the defendant was as heir male of the body of Robert the second son. And after argument it was resolved, that the verdict is imperfect as to the plaintiff, for the grandson of Humphry, though he hath no other daughter, may nevertheless have a son, according to Gymlett and Sand's case, Cro. Cha. 391. Whereupon by consent the verdict was mended, and made filiam unicam & hæredem suam. And then the question was, whether any estate tail be created by this will? For Isabel the wife never married, and if no intail was created, then the feme-lessor hath a good title as heir general. But upon [126] argument the Court resolved, that the land was entailed by this will; for by the whole scope of the will it appears plainly, the devisor intended an intail with several remainders over; and rather than this intent shall be defeated, the words shall be read and taken thus; scil. if she marry, Humphry to enter presently; if she do not marry, then Humphry shall have, hold, and enjoy them to him and the heirs males of his body, with remainder over. Whereupon judgment was given for the defendant.

Covenants to levy a fine before Mich. which shall be to the use, &c. and that he will stand seised, &c. no fine, no use. Post, 306.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty and special verdict, the case in short was. One Cockerill being seised of the lands by indenture, June 28, 1623, in consideration of a marriage to be had, covenanted before Whitsontide then following to levy a fine, which fine and all other fine and fines to be had, levied, and executed between the said parties before the said feast shall be; and the said William Cockerill, and his heirs, shall stand and be seised to the use, &c. No fine was levied, and the question was, whether by the last words it shall enure as a covenant to stand seised, and so to raise the uses. And the Court strongly inclined that it should not be a covenant to stand seised, for then it would amount to a covenant to stand seised presently, and thereby prevent the levying of the fine, as was intended; and it is not like the cases of covenants to levy fines or make feoffments to uses before such a day, and for default thereof, or defect therein, to stand seised; for there is a time left for the levying of the fine, or making the conveyance the way intended; but by this construction the party would immediately by sealing of the indenture be disabled to levy the fine. Time was given to the parties to accommodate the matter if they could, but that was not done; whereupon afterward, Mich. term 35, it was adjudged according to the aforesaid opinions, that no use could arise by the indenture.

Ejectment; and upon trial before Charlton Justice of C. B. for the poverty of the parties, and to prevent the charge of a special verdict a case was made to have the opinion of the Court, and the point was. One seised of lands a parte materna devised them to his executors for payment of his debt for 16 years; and after that to one who was his heir a parte materna; and the question was, whether the heir should take as purchaser by the will, or by discent as heir? Charlton, before whom the cause was tried, inclined that he should take by purchase, being the better for him; for then the heir a parte paterna will be inheritable to him before the heir of the mother's side, and so both heirs inheritable to him; and so it was argued at Bar by the counsel of that side. Contra, It was argued and so resolved by three Justices, Pemberton, Wyndham and Levinz, that the devise was void, and he should take by discent, and that it is no more than if the devisor had made a lease for 16 years, and then had devised the reversion to his heir; and as for the discent from him to the heir a parte materna or paterna, it is but a consequent arising from the nature of the estate; and this is not the like case where a man having two daughters devises land to them and [128] their heirs; for hereby the quality of the estate is altered in them, and they are now jointenants with a right of survivorship; which had not been, if the land had descended to them as coparceners. According to this opinion of the three Judges, judgment was given.

TRINITY 34TH CHARLES II.

JEFFERSON against JEFFERSON.

Declaration. In trespass upon the case. For pulling down a barn upon premises held by copy of court roll; the remainder whereof belonged to the plaintiff. 1 Mallory 201.

York, to wit.—William Jefferson, late of Skidby, in the county aforesaid, yeoman, was attached to answer Samuel Jefferson of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And whereupon the said Samuel, by John Robinson his attorney complains, that whereas one William Cocke, now deceased, in his life-time, to wit, upon the 30th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1658, at Skidby was seized of and in one messuage with the appurtenances, situate and being in S. aforesaid, held of the manor of S. in the county aforesaid by copy of the rolls of the said manor in his demesne as of fee at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the said manor; and so being thereof seised, the said William Cocke afterwards to wit, upon the said 30th day of January in the year aforesaid, without the court of the said manor, according to the custom of the said manor [among others] surrendered into the hands of the lord of the said manor by the hands and acceptance of Thomas Thompson and John Avis, two customary tenants of the said manor, the said messuage with the appurtenances, by the name of one Grass-place, adjoining to the buildings upon the east side of C— in S. aforesaid, to the use of Jane then his wife, for the term of the life of the said Jane, and after the death of the said Jane to the use of the said Samuel Jefferson, his heirs and assigns. And the said William Cocke of the messuage aforesaid, with the appurtenances, in the form aforesaid being seised, the said William afterwards, to wit, upon the 1st day of April, in the year of our Lord 1659, at S. aforesaid died, seised of such his estate therein; after whose death, to wit, at the court baron of William Wrench, gentleman, then lord of the manor of S. aforesaid, holden for the manor of S. aforesaid, at S. aforesaid, the 5th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1659 aforesaid, before Robert Bethel, gent. then steward of the court of the manor aforesaid, the said surrender by the said William Cocke in his life-time made as aforesaid, duly was presented and inrolled, and the said Jane then and there rightly and lawfully was admitted tenant [among others] of the said [129] messuage with the appurtenances for the term of the life of the said Jane, the remainder thereof to the said Samuel, his heirs and assigns, in the form aforesaid belonging, by virtue of which surrender and admission aforesaid, the said Jane into the messuage aforesaid with the appurtenances entered, and was thereof seised in her demesne as of freehold, for the term of the life of the said Jane, at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the said manor, the remainder thereof to the said Samuel, his heirs and assigns, as aforesaid belonging, and the said Jane so being thereof seised, the said Jane at Skidby aforesaid took to her husband the said William Jefferson; whereby the said William and Jane were seised of the messuage aforesaid with the appurtenances in their demesne as of freehold in the right of the said Jane, for the term of the life of the said Jane, at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the said manor. And the said William and Jane, so being thereof seised, the remainder thereof after the death of the said Jane, to the said Samuel, his heirs and assigns, in the form aforesaid belonging; nevertheless, the said William Jefferson not being ignorant of the premises, but contriving and fraudulently intending the said Samuel, of the messuage aforesaid, with the appurtenances to disinherit and entirely deprive, and also the estate and interest of the said Samuel, of and in the said messuage, with the appurtenances greatly to injure, diminish and depreciate, he the said William Jefferson, on the 1st day of February, in the 34th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at S. aforesaid, a certain barn, parcel of the messuage aforesaid, to the value of 50l. with force and arms, did pull down and prostrate, and the timber, stones, tiles, and the other materials of the said barn, then and there did take, carry away and sell, and the money therefrom arising did convert and dispose to his own proper use; whereby the said Samuel, not only in his estate and interest aforesaid, of and in his messuage aforesaid, with the appurtenances is very much injured and prejudiced, but also the said Samuel of the said parcel of the said messuage is totally disinherited and deprived, to the damage of the said Samuel of 100l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said William, by Alexander Richardson his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and saith that the said declaration, in the form aforesaid made and declared, and also the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to maintain the said Samuel to have his said action against the said William, and that he to the said declaration, in the manner and form aforesaid made and declared hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient declaration of the said Samuel in this behalf, the said William prays judgment, and that the said Samuel may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against the said William, &c.

[130] And the said Samuel, because that he above hath declared sufficient matter in law to maintain him the said Samuel to have his action aforesaid against the said William, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said William doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether hath refused to admit the verification thereof, he the said Samuel prays judgment, and his damages by occasion of the premises to be adjudged to him, &c. and because the justices, &c.

JEFFERSON against JEFFERSON.

S. C. 2 Danvers 202.

Case by him in remainder against a copyholder for life for waste done by him.

Case, and declares, that William Cocke copyholder in fee of a certain messuage surrendered to the use of the defendant's wife for life, remainder to the plaintiff in fee; that after the surrender the defendant and his wife married, and ad exheredita-tionem of the plaintiff had pulled down part of the messuage, and carried off the timber and other materials. Upon this declaration the defendant demurred generally; and two objections were made to the action itself; 1. That no action of this kind lies in this case; for Coke upon the Statute of Gloucester, against waste, says, that at common law he in reversion had no remedy for waste done by a termor; it being his own [131] fault and folly that he had not by covenant, &c. secured himself against this mischief. 2. The jury cannot know what damages to give; for how long the tenant for life may live is uncertain, and perhaps the messuage may be repaired by him during his life: for which reasons Wyndham and Charlton were strongly of this opinion now upon the first argument, and continued afterwards of the same mind: Pemberton Chief Justice and Levinz contra: they said that Coke was to be understood there according to the subject matter there treated, scil. that he in reversion had no remedy by action of waste; and Pemberton held, there was no peradventure but that he in reversion may waive his action of waste at this day, and take his remedy by action upon the case against his lessee for years for waste done by him, 2 H. 4, 12 a. If trees upon a copyhold are cut down by a stranger, the copyholder may maintain an action of the case, and so may the lord for the same trespass, in respect of the prejudice done to his inheritance: and in Roll. 2 Abr. 551, lit. N. nu. 4, 5, this is affirmed for good law; and it is there also said, so it would be in the case of tenant for years, 10 H. 4, 3 b. case lies for him in reversion in respect of his inheritance for damage done to his house, 19 H. 6, 45. If a stranger enters upon my tenant for years, and builds a house upon the land, case lies by him in reversion, Roll. 2 Abr. nu. 3. Cro. El. 461, Jeremy versus Lowgar. Husband seised in fee in right of his wife made a lease for years; lessee burnt the house, and the husband brought an action upon the case; and by two Judges, all that were then in Court, the action lies; and yet it was objected, that no action of waste lies at common law in such case, because he might have secured himself against it by the covenant of the party. Besides in this case the plaintiff was not the lessor himself, but a remainder man by copy of court roll, wherein are no covenants; and if he cannot have remedy this way, he is without remedy: and as for staying 'till the wife's death, because he may repair it in the mean time, it is unreasonable; for in the mean time the plaintiff or defendant may die, and then the action itself being founded only upon a personal tort must die too. Again, as to the incertainty of the damages, and that the jury cannot assess them; the jury may as well assess or ascertain them in this case, as where a man purchases in fee, and takes a covenant against incumbrances, and an estate for life is evicted; but the other [132] two Judges continuing strongly in their opinions, the case was to be adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber the last day of the term; but the Chief Justice being then sick, it was not adjourned; and I suppose the parties agreed it, for I heard no more of it.

Ejectment upon not guilty, and special verdict, the case was. A copyholder of land, burrough English, surrendered to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of his eldest son and his heirs, if he live to the age of 21 years: provided, and upon condition, that if he die before 21, that then it shall remain to the surrenderer and his heirs. The surrenderer died, the youngest son entered; and the eldest son being 17 brought an ejectment; and the sole question was, whether the devise to the eldest son be upon condition precedent, or if the condition be subsequent? scil. that the estate in fee shall vest immediately upon the death of the father, to be divested if he die before 21. For the defendant it was argued, that the condition was precedent, and that the estate should descend to the youngest son in the mean time, or at least shall be in contingency and in abeyance 'till the first son shall attain to one and twenty; and so the eldest son has no title now, being no more than 17. On the other side it was argued, and so agreed by the Court; that though by the first words this may seem to be a condition precedent, yet, taking all the words together, this was not a condition precedent, but a present devise to the eldest son, subject to and defeasible by this condition subsequent, scil. his not attaining the age of 21; and they resembled this to the case of Spring and Cæsar reported by Jones Justice and abridged by Roll. 1 Abr. 415, nu. 12. A fine to the use of B. and his heirs if C. pays him not 20s. upon Septemb. 10, and if C. does pay, to the use of B. for life, remainder to C. and his heirs, where the word si does not create a condition precedent, but the estate in fee vests presently in C. to be divested by payment afterwards; so here: accordingly this case was adjudged in Mich. term next following.

Case, and declares, that the defendant injuste & malitiose magnam partem cujusdam antiquæ molis super rivum de Darwent, fregit, divertit & prostravit & perinde magnam partem aquæ rivi ab antiquo & solito cursu suo ad molendinum of the plaintiff per rivum predictum divortit per quod the plaintiff lost the profit of his mill for so long, ad damnum 100*l.* To this the defendant put in a plea, which was agreed ill. The plaintiff by replication maintains his declaration. The defendant rejoined, but ill; and the plaintiff demurred. And the sole question was upon the declaration, whether that was good? For it was objected; 1. That the mill is not shown to be ancient. 2. It is not said, that the (1) defendant had time out of mind repaired the dam, but only that it was antiquam molem. 3. He does not shew that the water hath time out of mind run this way; but only that the defendant had now turned it ab antiquo & solito cursu suo; and upon these exceptions the case hung for some time. North Chief Justice held the declaration was well enough; and Levinz inclined to the same opinion, sed hæsitanter. Wyndham and Charlton contra. Afterwards North being made Lord Keeper, being here succeeded by Pemberton Chief Justice, he also held the declaration good; and Wyndham nunc mutata opinione concurred; and Levinz ut antea hæsitanter. Charlton totis viribus still contra. Thus it hung 'till Mich. prox. sequent' and then judgment was given for the plaintiff: upon which error was brought immediately in B. (1) The defendant pleaded that he repaired the dam. Vide 3 Mod. 48.

Ejectment upon the demise of Wolstenholme, and upon a special verdict, the case was; Sir James Bagge 10 July, 1 Car. 1, being seised of the lands in question, became collector to the new impost; and Febr. 28, 9 Car. 1, acknowledged a statute to Sir Paul Pinder for 10,000l. and Septemb. 29, 11 Car. 1, was upon account, arrear in the King's debt 22,500l. and so indebted died. After the death of Sir James Bagge, Octob. 4, 14 Car. 1, the tenements in question were extended and seised into the King's hands, tenend' quousq; the King should be satisfied of the said debt of 22,500l. The King being thus possessed, 23 Apr. 20 Car. 1. granted the tenements in question to Cary and his heirs in trust for Robert Bagge, the heir of Sir James. The Act of general pardon, 13 Car. 2, pardoned all sums of money and other things that the King could pardon, as by the fifth section of the Act appears. But in the tenth section of the Act are excepted all accounts of receivers, collectors, &c. who have received any subsidies, new impost, or any rents of King Charles I. the archbishops or bishops sequestered estates since the 30th day of January, 1642. And in the 11th section of the Act it is provided, that heirs, executors, &c. of accomptants for any thing contained in the last exception, except such sums as remain upon accounts [135] already stated and determined. In Trin. 13 Car. 2, George Bagge by fine &c. conveyed the inheritance of the premisses to Sir George Carteret; whereupon Cary the trustee also conveyed to him. In Trin. 14 Car. 2, George Bagge pleaded the pardon in the Exchequer in discharge of the said 22,500l. due to the King; and the plea was confessed by the Attorney-General, and judgment given thereupon to discharge the estate. 4 Octob. 20 Car. 2, Sir George Carteret by his will devised the tenements to the defendant his wife, who entered and continued till now possessed; 17 June, 30 Car. 2, Wolstenholme, executor of Pindar, sued execution of the statute, and had the tenements in question delivered to him; whereupon he demised to the plaintiff; and if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, and if not, for the defendant. After divers arguments in this case, the points hereafter following were resolved per totam Curiam: 1. By the whole Court it was agreed, scil. Jones Ch. Just. Wyndham, Charlton and Levinz, that the King having no more than a chattel by the extent, his grant to Cary in fee was void, the King being deceived according to 1 Co. 52 a. and the case of H. 7 there cited, and Mod. Rep. fol. 415. 2. It was resolved by all, that by the King's grant of the lands to Cary, the debt due unto the King did not pass, though the grant were good as to the lands; for though the King may grant a chose in action, yet that cannot be without special words; and therefore the King may still release, grant, or pardon the debt, notwithstanding the grant of the land, according to Cro. Cha. Flower v. Elgar, and ibid. 503-5. Middlemore versus Goodale, that a common person may release a debt or covenant, notwithstanding his assignment of the land. 3. It was agreed by all, that by the fifth section of the Act, debts and sums of money, though not concerning the wars, are pardoned and discharged; but as for acts and actions of subjects they are not discharged by the Act of Pardon unless they concern the war. 4. It was resolved that by the exception of accounts, the sum or sums due upon accounts stated is not an account, nor within the words merchants accompts in stat. 21 Jac. 1, of Limitations, as has been resolved; yet here sum stated is within the exception of accounts in this statute: and this appears by the 11th section, that heirs, executors, &c. shall not be charged for accounts, but [136] only accounts stated. The fifth point was, whether in this case the account stated and the sum due upon balance be pardoned or excepted? Which doubt grew from the words in the end of the tenth section, scilicet after the 30th of January, 1642; and here the money was and received and the account stated before 1642, scil. in October, 14 Car. 1, which was in 1638. But notwithstanding this, Jones, Wyndham and Charlton held this to be excepted, and not pardoned; and they divided the tenth section in such manner, as that the words (after Jan. 30, 1642) should refer only to the words, or any of the rents, &c. of any of the late King, &c. and so the first part of this section they would have to be taken absolutely, scil. concerning accounts, &c. without limitation or stint of time: and this they held reasonable for two causes; 1. Because at the time, scil. 1642, the usurpers began their sequestration of rents belonging to the King, the archbishops, and bishops, &c. 2. The section itself consists of several distinctions, and the words, or since the 30th of January, 1642, shall be referred only to the last, which concerns the King's rents, the archbishops and bishops, received after the said 30th of January, 1642. But Levinz held, that the words, since 1642, should be referred to all the disjunctives before in the same section, and that it should be taken literally, and that to take it any otherwise is but to make an uncertain and doubtful construction. And by the eighth section of this Act it is enacted that the Act in all points shall be taken most beneficially for the subject, whereas by this construction of a matter doubtful the Act is taken most beneficially for the King. But by the other three justices it was resolved, that this stated debt was not pardoned by the Act; and so notwithstanding the allowance and discharge thereof in the Exchequer, which is always with a salvo jure to the King, si, &c. the debt remains due to the King, and the land continues in him by the extent and seisure, and was not conveyed to Cary; and then although the defendant hath no title, yet forasmuch as the plaintiff hath none neither, but the title is in the King, judgment ought to be given for the defendant; and so it was accordingly.

[137] SNELL against BISHOP.

You were Bishop's whore before he married you; suable in Spiritual Court. Ante, 119.

A prohibition was prayed to the Spiritual Court to stay a suit there for these words, You were Bishop's whore before he married you; suggesting, that the plaintiff in the Spiritual Court gave him provoking words; scil. You are a rogue and a rascal, not fit to be drunk with; and cited Roll. Prohib. 295, & ibid. 277, cases of this kind. But the prohibition was denied; for this sounds only in mitigation of damages at common law, and not in bar of the action.

Obligation conditioned to account or render himself to prison; the obligor hath election. Condition to render himself 28 Nov. upon any action commenced does not oblige him to render to an action commenced after. 2 Jo. 95. Lutw. 688, 689. Poph. 98. Cro. Debt upon obligation, conditioned; if the defendant shall give the plaintiff a true account of all sums of money by him received as bailiff of his manor by the 28th day of November then next ensuing, or otherwise render his body to prison at the plaintiff's suit in any action he shall then commence against him; the obligation to be void. The defendant pleaded, always paratus to render an account; but farther, that the plaintiff ad vel ante 28 Nov. predict' had not commenced any action wherein he could render himself to prison: the plaintiff replied that 300l. were due to him upon account, and that thereupon the plaintiff after the said 28th of November, scil. April 12, afterwards sued out an original in account, and for want of appearance thereto by the defendant sued out a capias likewise, whereof he gave the defendant notice, and required him to render himself according to the condition aforesaid; quod facere the defendant neglexit & non curavit: hereupon the defendant demurred; and after two arguments at Bar on both sides, judgment was given per totam Curiam for the defendant. For 1. The defendant, who is to do the act, hath election either [138] to give the plaintiff a true account, or render himself upon an action commenced. Secondly, The breach is not well assigned in the replication; for the defendant is not obliged to render himself to an action that is not sued 28 Novemb. for the words then commenced in the condition, is not to be taken or construed then, or at any time thenceforth; that would be to give the plaintiff a liberty of commencing his suit at any time during his life: and conditions are always for the advantage and in favour of the obligor, not of the obligee; wherefore judgment was given for the defendant.

GILBY against COPLEY.

Deeds, whether indented or not, made between parties, are suable and releasable by the parties only, and not by strangers, though made to the use of strangers. Quære? 1 Levinz. 235.

Debt, and declares that the defendant per quoddam factum suum promisisset solvere 210*l.* upon the 16th of June next following for 448 sheep to the plaintiff, as executor of his father spectan' ac vendit' to the Defendant by Thomas Wawen ex parte of the plaintiff, prout per scriptum predict' apparet, and that he had not paid. The defendant craved oyer of the indenture, which was entered in hæc verba: articles of agreement made between Thomas Wawen, who is fully authorized on the behalf of Elizabeth Gilby, (the plaintiff) executrix to her father; as also on the behalf of William Savile, who is trustee on behalf of the children of the plaintiff's father on the one part; and Lionel Copley (the defendant) on the other part, 16 May, 1682. Imprimis Thomas Wawen covenants for the consideration after mentioned, that the defendant shall enjoy the close called the Sunke, for eight years from Lady-Day last past, the lessors to be at the charge of repairing the banks. Item, the said Thomas Wawen hath sold to the said Lionel Copley 448 sheep belonging to the said Elizabeth Gilby, as executrix to her father, being now upon the Sunke. In consideration whereof the said Lionel Copley hath paid in hand one shilling to the said Wawen, and doth covenant to pay 70*l. rent for the Sunke for the first year, and for the second year* 100*l. at two equal payments, and the lessors shall have liberty to imbank the Sunke; and the said Elizabeth may sell the bricks, unless she agree to sell* [139] them to Copley. And further, the said Lionel Copley doth promise (not said to whom) to pay to Elizabeth Gilby 210*l. for the said* 448 sheep on the 16*th of June next following.* The defendant demurs upon the declaration. And now it was argued by Pemberton, Serjeant, for the defendant, that the action ought to be brought in the name of Wawen, and not in the name of Elizabeth Gilby; for the articles being made inter parties, and she no party, she cannot sue for, nor release any thing which is in the articles, as she might if the deed were poll, or not between the parties; and cited Co. 2 Instit. 673, Scudamer's case. Serjeant Bigland argued contra: The contract being on the behalf only of Elizabeth Gilby, as to the sale of the sheep, and the promise being general, and not to any person certain, she pro cujus beneficio it was made may sue upon it: he cited Dutton and Pool's case lately adjudged in B. R. where the son promised the father to pay 1000*l.* to the sister in consideration the father promised to forbear selling certain timber growing upon the land; and though the action was brought by the sister, it was held well brought per totam Curiam; of which opinion were Jones and Charlton now upon the first argument, and Wyndham also inclined to concur with them, the bargain being made on the behalf and for the benefit of Elizabeth, she might bring the action, and the deed not being indented shall be no impediment or estoppel. Levinz Just. contra: He said, that the indenting or not indenting of the deed is not material, but the matter is his being party, or not party; for it is common erudition, that one not party to a deed made inter partes cannot take by the deed, unless by way of remainder; and he cited a case inter Cooker and Child adjudged by Hale and totam Curiam, Hill. 24, 25 Car. 2, B. R. sed intrat. Trin. 24, Rot. 663, where an action is brought upon a charter-party, which was in this manner: This indented charter-party witnesseth that Binly master and part-owner of the ship, with consent of Cooker the other part-owner hath let the ship to Child for such a voyage, and Child covenants with Binly necnon with Cooker to pay 300*l.* Cooker brings the action, and the defendant Child pleads, that only he and Binly were the parties to and sealed the indenture; whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and per totam Curiam; though the deed be indented, yet not being inter partes, there may be a [140] covenant with a stranger, as if it were a deed poll, or in the first person: Know ye, that I, &c. Otherwise where the deed is between parties, then no one that is a stranger can take advantage thereof by way of action; and in this case the authority of Co. 2 Inst. was cited at Bar by Sir William Jones, and affirmed per totam Curiam to be good law. Farther, the deed here could not be made in execution barely of an authority; for then it must have been made, sealed, and subscribed in the name of the principal: and as to the case of Dutton and Poole, that was an assumpsit upon a verbal promise, not founded as this is upon a deed: he also cited the case of Offly and Ward in B. R. Hill. 19 & 20 Car. 2, debt by A. upon a single bill made to A. by the defendant to the use of A. & B. A. brought the action, whereunto the defendant pleaded a release by B. and it was adjudged no bar; for he being a stranger to the bill cannot release it, though made to his use; and the book of Edw. 4, which says, that if a bill or bond be made to A. to the use of B. that B. may maintain an action upon it was denied for law. But Cro. Eliz. 729, Shaw versus Sherwood was allowed to be good law: that case was, a bill sealed in this manner; Received of A. to the use of B. and C. equally to be divided, to be repaid at such time as shall be most for the profit of B. and C. each may sue for his 20l. for the deed is not made to either. But if this had been an obligation to A. for the payment of 20l. apiece to B. and C. neither of them could have sued for it, but the suit must be in the name of A. which said case was affirmed upon a writ of error, as appears in Yelv. 23. But in the principal case Curia advisare vult; and I suppose the parties agreed, for I never heard more on it.

TRINITY, 35 CHARLES II.

FREEMAN against BOOTH.

Declaration in Replevin. Cognizance.

Gloucester, to wit.—Edward Booth was summoned to answer Timothy Freeman of a plea whereof he took the cattle of the said Timothy, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges, &c. And whereupon the said Timothy by Stephen Baldwin his attorney complains that the said Edward, on the 9th day of November, in the 34th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at Prescot, in a certain place there called Viccaridge, took the cattle, to wit, two cows of the said Timothy, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges until, &c. whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of 50l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Edward by Thomas Harris his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. And as the bailiff of Thomas Meeres Knight well acknowledges the taking of the cattle aforesaid [142] in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. because he saith that the said place in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be committed contains, and at the said time in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be committed did contain in itself ten acres of land with the appurtenances in Prescot aforesaid, and that long before the said time in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be committed, George Lord Coventry Baron of Aylesborough was seized of one messuage, forty acres of land, ten acres of meadow, and twenty acres of pasture, with the appurtenances, in Prescot aforesaid, whereof the said place in which, &c. and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, was parcel; in his demesne as of fee; and then held of the said Thomas as of his manor of Prescot in the county aforesaid by fealty, and by the rent of three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence yearly, to be paid by equal portions every year at the Feasts of St. Michael the Archangel, and the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and also by the service of doing suit at the court of the said Thomas of his manor aforesaid, to be held from three weeks to three weeks at the manor aforesaid, of which services the said Thomas was seized by the hands of the said George Lord Coventry as by the hands of his very tenant, to wit, of the fealty and suit of the Court aforesaid as of fee, and of the rent aforesaid in his demesne as of fee, and the said George Lord Coventry of the said tenements with the appurtenances being seized as aforesaid, he the said George Lord Coventry afterwards and before the time in which, &c. at Prescot aforesaid died, seized of such his estate therein after the death of which George Lord Coventry, the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. descended to John now Lord Coventry as the son and heir of the said George Lord Coventry, whereby the said John Lord Coventry before the said time in which, &c. entered and was and as yet is seized thereof in his demesne as of fee, and because three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence of the rent aforesaid for one whole year ended at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, and other three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief of the said John Lord Coventry after the death of the said George Lord Coventry to the said Thomas Meeres at the said time in which, &c. were in arrear and unpaid, he [143] the said Edward, as the bailiff of the said Thomas Meeres, as well for the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the rent aforesaid so being in arrear, as for the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief of the said John Lord Coventry so being in arrear, well acknowledges the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. as being parcel of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances of the said Thomas Meeres in the form aforesaid held and being within his fee and seignory.

And the said Timothy saith that the said Edward as the bailiff of the said Thomas Meeres by reason of any thing before alledged ought not to acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. to be just: because as to three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence of the rent aforesaid upon the said Feast of St. Michael the Archangel being in arrear, he saith that he the said Timothy in and upon the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, in the 34th year aforesaid, upon the said ten acres of land with the appurtenances in which, &c. was ready and offered to pay to the said Thomas Meeres the said rent of three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence payable at the said feast, and that he the said Thomas Meeres, or any other on his behalf, was not ready there to receive the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence from the said Timothy, and that he the said Timothy afterwards and before the taking of the cattle aforesaid, to wit, upon the said 9th day of November, at Prescot aforesaid, was ready and offered to pay to the said Thomas the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence, but the same to receive the said Thomas then and there totally refused, and this he is ready to verify, &c. and as to the said other three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief after the death of the said George Lord Coventry supposed to be in arrear, the said Timothy saith that the cognizance of the said Edward is not sufficient in law to maintain him the said Edward to acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. to be just, and that he to the said cognizance in the manner and form aforesaid made hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient cognizance in this behalf, the said Timothy prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the taking and unjust detention of his cattle aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c. And for cause of [144] demurrer in law in this behalf, the said Timothy according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided shews the following cause, to wit, that it doth not appear by the plea and cognizance of the said Edward, that the said Thomas Meeres hath any title to have relief for the tenements in the plea and cognizance aforesaid mentioned, and that the said plea and cognizance is uncertain and wants form, &c.

And the said Edward as to the said plea of the said Timothy as to the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence, for the rent aforesaid being in arrear upon the said Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, saith that the said Thomas Meeres always was ready to receive the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence from the said Timothy; without this that the said Timothy before the taking of the cattle aforesaid, offered to pay the said rent of three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence to the said Thomas Meeres, as the said Timothy in bar of the cognizance aforesaid hath alledged, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment and a return of the cattle aforesaid, together with his damages, &c. And as to the said plea of the said Timothy as to the said other three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief being in arrear after the death of the said George Lord Coventry, the said Edward, because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law in his cognizance aforesaid to maintain him the said Edward as the bailiff of the said Thomas Meeres, to acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. for the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief aforesaid being in arrear, to be just, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said Timothy doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment and a return of the cattle aforesaid together with his damages, &c. to him to be adjudged, &c.

And the said Timothy as to the said plea of the said Edward above by replying pleaded, as to the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the rent aforesaid, as aforesaid supposed to be in arrear, as before saith that the said Timothy before the taking of the cattle aforesaid, offered the said rent of three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence to the said Thomas Meeres, as the said Timothy above in bar of the cognizance aforesaid hath alledged, and he prays that this [145] may be enquired of by the country; and the said Edward doth the like. Therefore as to the trial of the said issue, the sheriff is commanded that he cause to come here from the day of the Holy Trinity in three weeks, twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. because as well, &c. And as to the said three pounds, eight shillings and eight pence for the relief aforesaid, above supposed to be in arrear, because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises before they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here from the day of St. Michael in three weeks, to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

Replevin. Johan' Coventry post mortem pred' Georgii* he makes conusance. The plaintiff demurred specially, quia non apparet that Sir Thomas had any title to the relief. The defendant joined in demurrer; and upon argument at Bar it was now resolved per totam Curiam, that it need not, for relief, though it is not a parcel of the tenure, is a flower incident to every tenure in soccage; and though it may be released, as it was objected, or there may upon the tenure be a special reservation without relief, yet such matter shall not be intended, but must be shown of the other part, because of common right it is incident, though separated by release or special reservation, as Co. 2 Inst. 232; sed ad ea quæ frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur. And judgment was given for the conusant.

EASTER 35TH CHARLES II.

JOHNSON against MAY.

Declaration in assumpsit for use and occupation. 1st. Count upon an express promise.

York, to wit.—John May, late of Preston, in the said county, yeoman, was attached to answer Richard Johnson, gent. of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And whereupon the said Richard, by William Freeman his attorney, complains that whereas the said John and Frances his wife, on the 10th day of August, in the 33d year of the reign of the lord the now King, at Preston aforesaid, had sold, and afterwards, to wit, on the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Preston aforesaid, before the deputy steward of the court of the manor of Bursowick, had surrendered into the hands of the then lord of the manor aforesaid, part of one messuage and one boone, to the said part of the messuage belonging, then in the occupation of the said John, and Frances his wife, in Preston aforesaid, of the annual rent to the lord of the manor aforesaid of sixteen-pence, to the use and behoof of the said Richard, his heirs and assigns, without impeachment of waste, according to the custom of the manor aforesaid for ever. She the said Frances, then and there alone and in secret being examined and confessed before the deputy steward aforesaid. And which surrender afterwards at the court of the said manor, held the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year of the [147] reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, at B. aforesaid, was presented. And the said Richard then and there was admitted tenant to the said part of the said messuage, and to the said boone. And whereas the said Richard by reason thereof, afterwards had and claimed right and interest in the said part of the messuage and boone aforesaid, and the said Richard so having and claiming the said right and interest in the said part of the messuage and boone aforesaid; the said John afterwards, to wit, on the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, at Preston aforesaid, in consideration that he the said Richard, at the special instance and request of the said John, would permit him the said John to occupy and possess the said part of the messuage aforesaid, and the boone aforesaid, until the first day of May from that time next ensuing, upon himself assumed, and to the said Richard faithfully promised, that he the said John fifty shillings, of the lawful money of England, to him the said Richard, upon the said first day of May well and faithfully would pay and content; and the said Richard in fact saith, that he the Richard, confiding in the said promise and assumption, at the said special instance and request of the said John, did permit him the said John to occupy and possess the said part of the said messuage, and the boone aforesaid, for the term aforesaid. And whereas also, the said John and Frances his wife, on the 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Preston aforesaid, before the deputy steward of the court of the manor of B. aforesaid, had surrendered into the hands of the then lord of the manor aforesaid, a certain other part of a messuage, and one other boone to the said part of the messuage last mentioned belonging, then in the occupation of the said John and Frances his wife, in Preston aforesaid, of the annual rent to the lord of the said manor, of sixteen pence, to the use and behoof of the said

(1) But if there be a demise by indenture and the tenant plead nil habuit, &c. and the plaintiff will not rely upon the estoppel, but plead habuit, &c. he waives the estoppel and the jury shall find the truth. 1 Salk. 277.

Richard, his heirs and assigns, without impeachment of waste, according to the custom of the manor aforesaid, for ever. She the said Frances, then and there alone, and in secret being examined and confessed before the deputy steward aforesaid; and which surrender afterwards, to wit, at the court of the said manor, held the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, at B. aforesaid was presented; and the said Richard then and there was admitted tenant to the said part of the messuage [148] aforesaid last mentioned, and to the said boone last mentioned; and whereas the said Richard by the reason thereof, afterwards had and claimed right and interest in the said part of the messuage, and boone aforesaid, last mentioned; and the said Richard, so having and claiming the right and interest in the said part of the messuage and boone last mentioned; the said John afterwards, to wit, on the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Preston aforesaid, in consideration that he the said Richard, at the special instance and request of the said John, would permit him the said John to occupy and possess the said parcel of the messuage, and the boone aforesaid last mentioned, as long as the said John should please; the said John afterwards, to wit, upon the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, at Preston aforesaid, upon himself assumed, and to the said Richard, then and there faithfully promised, that he the said John so much money as the said Richard therefore from the said John reasonably deserved to have to the said Richard, when thereto he should be requested would well and faithfully pay and content. And the said Richard in fact saith, that he the said Richard confiding in the promise and assumption to the said Richard last made as aforesaid, at the said special instance and request of the said John last mentioned, did permit him the said John to occupy and possess the said part of the messuage aforesaid, and the boone aforesaid last mentioned, as long as the said John would please, to wit from the said 10th day of August, in the 33d year aforesaid, until the 1st day of May from that time next ensuing; and further the said Richard, in fact saith, that he the said Richard, therefore from the said John, reasonably deserved to have one hundred shillings, of the lawful money of England; nevertheless the said John, his several promises and assumptions aforesaid to the said Richard in the form aforesaid made, not regarding, but contriving and fraudulently intending the said Richard in this behalf, craftily and subtilly to deceive and defraud, the said several sums of money, in the whole amounting to seven pounds, ten shillings to the said Richard, according to his several promises and assumptions aforesaid, as yet hath not paid, or in any wise contented; although to do this the said John afterwards, to wit, upon the 10th day of June, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at Preston aforesaid, by the said Richard was requested, but the same hitherto to him to pay or [149] content altogether hath refused, and still doth refuse, to the damage of the said Richard of 20l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said John, by John Robinson his attorney comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and as to the last promise and assumption aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid, above specified, the said John May saith, that he did not assume upon himself in manner and form as the said Richard above complains against him, and of this he puts himself upon the country, and the said Richard doth the like. And as to the first promise and assumption aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid above specified, the said John May saith, that the matter in the declaration aforesaid, above specified, is not sufficient in law to maintain him the said Richard to have his action aforesaid against him the said John, and that he to the said matter in the manner and form aforesaid declared hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of sufficient matter in the said declaration specified, as to the said first promise and assumption aforesaid, the said John May prays judgment, and that the said Richard may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against him.

And the said Richard, because that he above hath declared sufficient matter in law in his declaration aforesaid to maintain him to have his action aforesaid, as to the first promise and assumption aforesaid against him the said John, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said John doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the non performance of the said first promise and assumption, to be adjudged to him, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises, whereof the parties aforesaid, above have put themselves upon the judgment of the Court before that they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here, until the morrow of the Holy Trinity to hear their judgment, because that the said justices here thereupon, not as yet, &c. And as to the trial of the issue aforesaid, between the parties aforesaid, above joined by the country to be tried, the sheriff is commanded that he cause to come here at the said term, twelve, &c.

Assumpsit for money for enjoyment of land lies upon a special promise. 1 Lev. 179. 1 Sid. 150, 279, 323. 2 Keble 8. 1 Danvers 29, 7, 31. 3 Mod. 73. Hardress 336. 1 Term Rep. 178.

Assumpsit, in consideration the defendant having surrendered a copyhold estate, and a boone adinde spectan' to the plaintiff, which the plaintiff should permit the defendant to enjoy from the 10th of Aug. anno 33 Regis nunc till the first of May next following, that he promised to pay the plaintiff 50s. and shews, that he permitted, and the defendant had not paid the 50s. Also he declares upon a quantum meruit for the same. As to the quantum meruit, the defendant pleaded non assumpsit; and as to the other part demurs. The case was argued in Trin. term, when Pemberton was Chief Justice, and now again this term, Jones being Ch. Justice. For the defendant it was urged that here is a term for years, and a rent reserved, for which debt lies and not this action; for which was cited 1 Roll. Abr. 7, divers cases to this purpose; Cro. Cha. 343, Brett and Read, and 2 Lev. 204, Chapman vers. Southwick, 1 Sid. 279, Norton vers. Grobhamhow, 1 Roll. Abr. 9, and that Hale Chief-Justice was always of this opinion. On the other side for the plaintiff were cited Cro. Eliz. 118, Hunt versus Sone, Cro. Ja. 598, Dartnall versus Morgan, Cro. Cha. 114, Acton versus Simon, and Mansell's case cited in Brett and Read's case, Litt. Rep. 68, Wentworth versus Abraham. Cro. Eliz. 859, Clerk versus Palludy. And because this had been vexata quæstio, the Court took time to deliver their opinions; and accordingly it was so done by all the four justices, who all agreed that the action lay. For 1. An express promise shall be intended, and not a bare promise in law arising upon the contract, which all agree will not lie; and if non assumpsit had been pleaded, there must have been proof of an express promise. 2. There being an express promise it is collateral, and quasi a special agreement to pay the rent, of the same effect as an express covenant in a lease by deed. And as to the objection, non constat what a boon is, and therefore neither debt, nor assumpsit, nor ejectment will lie upon a lease thereof, it was answered, that be it what it will, it is belonging to the land, and that will support an action of debt, as where there is a lease of land and the stock of sheep. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.(1)

Plea upon stat. 30 Car. 2, for discharging of poor prisoners. Post, 190.

Debt upon an obligation dated 5 May, 31 Car. 2. The defendant confessed the action quoad terras, tenementa, & bona & catalla, wearing apparel, &c. excepted; but

(1) By the Irish Act 23 & 24 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 8, it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for all landlords, where the agreement is not by deed, to recover a reasonable satisfaction for the lands, &c. in an action on the case for use and occupation; and if on evidence on the trial of such action any parol demise, or any agreement not being by deed whereon a certain rent was reserved shall appear, the plaintiff in such action shall not therefore be nonsuited, but may make use thereof in evidence of the quantum of damages to be recovered.—The corresponding British Act is the 11 Geo. 2, c. 19.

pleads stat. 30 Car. 2, for relief of poor prisoners, which enacts, that all persons in prison, 29 May 30 Car. 2, for debt, damages, account, trespass upon the case, that have taken the oaths in the Act mentioned, shall be discharged secundum priorem actum inde fact', from imprisonment, and any debt &c. contracted before their discharge, giving notice to the creditors according to the statute, and that he was in prison the said 29th of May, and sued a certificate, and gave notice according to the statute, and was discharged Octob. 18, 31 Car. 2. Hereupon the plaintiff demurred: and 1. It was objected, that the debt was not within the statute, for it was not a debt at the time of stat. 30 Car. 2, but after, scil. 5 May 31. Sed non allocatur, for it was a debt before the discharge, and the statute discharges him of all debts, &c. contracted before the discharge. 2. The plea does not set forth why he was imprisoned; and it may be for a fine to the King, or some other thing, which the statute does not extend to; for the statute is not general to discharge all imprisonments, let the causes be what they will, but only where it was for the particulars in the Act mentioned; and it was said, that the defendant was never actually a prisoner, but obtained a certificate [152] fraudulently. The Court held this exception to the cause or matter for which he was imprisoned very material; but being assured by his affirmation that he was in prison the 29th of May, and for debt only, the Court gave him time to satisfy them herein, intending if they were satisfied to give him leave to amend his plea. Similis materia Trin. 36, *inter Houghton and Shelcross. One that lays a wager, when to be admitted a witness. Vide ante 118. 3 Term Rep. 31.

Assumpsit for 20l. had and received to his use, upon non assumpsit was tried by Nisi Prius before Jones Ch. Justice; and the case was: the plaintiff and one Ball were to play a fencing prize with several weapons, and the stakes, being 10l. apiece, were deposited in the defendant's hands, the winner to take all. The plaintiff having won brought this action against the defendant, who kept the stakes. The defendant produced one Bond a witness to prove that the plaintiff did not win. The plaintiff excepted against him, that he had laid a wager of 10l. with one Hicks, that THE DEFENDANT would win the prize. To this it was answered, that Hicks had acknowledged the wager lost, and had paid the money. Whereupon the plaintiff demurred; and now the whole matter being returned upon the postea, it was argued by George Strode for the plaintiff, that he who thus bets a wager cannot be a witness for the party on [153] whose side he lays. 2. That he is not to be admitted as evidence, though he confess the loss of the wager, and actually pay it; for if this trial should go contrary to his confession and payment, he may recover his money back again. Jones Chief Justice held, that laying a wager, or being a better, did not destroy the testimony of the witness, but went only to the credit of it. But the other three Judges contra: it is constant practice to set aside and not suffer bettors to be witnesses. But here, for as much as the party hath confessed the loss of his wager, and paid it, it shall be intended to be duly paid, and therefore he ought to have been admitted a witness; and because he was not admitted, judgment was given for the defendant.

Award to pay in vel ad domum of a stranger. 2 Lev. 6. 1 Salk. 74. Kyd on Awards 126.

Debt upon obligation, conditioned to perform an award. The defendant pleaded no award. The plaintiff replied, and set forth an award, that in or at the mansion of J. S. in College-Street in Bury the defendant should pay the plaintiff so much. The defendant demurred, and judgment was given for the plaintiff; for although J. S. be a stranger, the words being only to pay in or at the house, &c. he may go to the door of the house, and there pay it without being a trespasser, if he cannot prevail upon J. S. to give him leave to pay the money in the house.

BEELY against PARRY.

Tenant for years makes a lease for part of the term with covenants, and then grants his reversion; whether the covenants pass to the grantee, or remain with the grantor?

Covenant, and declares of a lease made by him to the defendant, November 1, 29 Car. 2, for sixteen years; and that the defendant covenanted not to build upon a certain parcel of the ground demised to him; and assigns for breach his building upon the said parcel. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff was possessed by virtue of a term for more than thirty years, made to him by the Mayor and Commonalty of London, and being so possessed demised to the defendant; and that after, but before the breach assigned, the plaintiff granted the reversion to J. S. to which grant he the defendant attorned: hereupon the plaintiff demurred generally; and the points intended were, 1. Whether the covenant pass by the grant of the reversion to the grantee; for then the action will not lie for the grantor, in whose name it is brought? or whether the covenant remain not with the assignor, and a right of action to sue thereupon only passes to the grantee by assignment, by virtue of the statute of Hen. 8, which is only in the affirmative, scil. that the grantee shall have an action upon the covenants; for if so, an action may be brought either by the assignor with whom the covenant remains, or by the assignee, to whom an action is given by the statute? But that both could not, was agreed; for a recovery by one shall bar the other, and the assignee shall not be twice charged: and it was said, that this being an express covenant, the party, to whom it is made, [155] may sue thereupon after assignment, as Batchelor and Gage's case, Cro. Car. 188, and Middlemore and Goodale's case, Cro. Car. 503. 2. Whether this covenant be not transferred with the land by the assignment at common law, as appurtenant to the estate, it being a covenant concerning the estate; and for this was cited a case between Harper and Burroughs, Mich. 29 Car. 2, 2 Lev. 206, where in covenant for non-payment of rent in the name of the grantee the Court would intend the action brought upon the reddendum, which is a covenant in law, and by the grant passes with the estate to the grantee at common law; and it was said that it would be inconvenient if such a covenant remained in the grantor after assignment, for then after assignment he may release it, as it was done in Middlemore and Goodale's case. For the defendant it was said, that though the words of the statute of Hen. 8, are affirmative only, that the grantee shall have an action upon the covenant, yet this in reason ought to imply a negative, that the granter shall not have an action thereupon; and not to subject the lessee to two actions by the assignment. But the Court delivered no opinion as to these points, because the assignment of the reversion being not pleaded to be by deed, it was void for that reason, notwithstanding the attornment. For this reason judgment was given for the plaintiff without regard to the other matters.(1)

[156] HILARY 34 AND 35 CHARLES II.

THE MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF LINN REGIS against TAYLOR.

Declaration. In trespass, quare clausum fregerunt, &c.

Norfolk, to wit.—James Taylor, late of Linn-Regis in the county aforesaid, labourer, John Julian, late of Linn-Regis, in the county aforesaid, labourer, Robert Pynner, late of Linn-Regis, in the county aforesaid, labourer, John Wilson, late of Linn-Regis, in the county aforesaid, labourer, and Ezekiel Goddard, late of Linn-Regis, in the county aforesaid, grocer, were attached to answer the Mayor and Burgesses of Linn-Regis, commonly called King's Linn, in the county aforesaid, of a plea wherefore with force and arms, the close of them the said mayor and burgesses at Linn-Regis they broke, and dug in their soil there, and the gravel cast thereout to the value of forty shillings, took and carried away, and other wrongs to them did, to the great damage of the said mayor and burgesses, and against the peace of the lord the now King, &c. And whereupon they the said mayor and burgesses, by Charles Turner and Edward Rolfe their attornies, complain that the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel, on the 10th day of April, in the 34th year of the reign of the lord the now King, with force and arms, &c. the close of them the said mayor and burgesses, to wit, one piece of land called the Shoar, abutting towards the west upon the great river called Linn Haven, at Linn-Regis broke, and in their soil, to wit, ten perches of earth there dug, and the gravel cast thereout, to wit, sixty tons of their gravel, to the value of twenty shillings, took and carried away ; and also that the said John, George, Robert, John, and Ezekiel, on the 10th day of May, in the 34th year of the reign of the lord the now King aforesaid, with force and arms, &c. the said close of the said mayor and burgesses, at Linn-Regis aforesaid broke, and in other soil, to wit, other ten perches of their earth there dug, and the gravel cast thereout, to wit, other sixty tons of their gravel, to the value of other twenty shillings, took and carried away, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon they say that they are prejudiced and have sustained damage to the value of one hundred shillings, and therefore they produce their suit, &c. &c.

[157] And the said John Taylor, George Julian, Robert Pyner, John Wilson, and Ezekiel Goddard, by George Wilson their attorney, come and defend the force and injury, when, &c. And as to the coming with force and arms, say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the country ; and as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid, above supposed to be committed, they the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel say, that the said mayor and burgesses, ought not to have their action aforesaid against them, because they say that the borough of Linn-Regis aforesaid is, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, hath been an antient borough, and that the Mayor and Burgesses of Linn-Regis aforesaid, for all that time were and as yet are one body corporate, and that within the said borough of Linn-Regis for the whole time aforesaid, there were and now are, sundry inhabitants and freemen of the said borough, who were as well proprietors as masters of ships, and that the said place called the Shoar, in which the trespass aforesaid, is supposed to be committed, is and for the whole time aforesaid, was a common place within the said borough, and within the haven, within the flux and reflux of the sea, there, and where for the whole time aforesaid, ballast for the necessary use of the ships coming there hath been used to be dug up and taken, and that by the digging up, taking and carrying away of the ballast aforesaid, from the place aforesaid, the said port is preserved and rendered more navigable and convenient for the reception and approach of ships there. And they the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel further say, that within the said borough there is, and is had, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there was and was had, a certain custom there used and approved, to wit, that every freeman of the said borough, and being proprietor or master of any ship or vessel, being or floating in the said port, by himself or his servants, for the whole time aforesaid, from time to time, and at all times hath been used and accustomed to have, dig and take in the said place in which, &c. so much ballast as hath been necessary for ballasting his ship or vessel so as aforesaid being or floating in the port aforesaid, and the ballast so for the use aforesaid, dug up and taken into such ship for the ballasting of the said ship to carry away, without paying any thing therefore to the said mayor and burgesses; and they the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel [158] further say, that the said Ezekiel Goddard, long before the said times in which, &c. and also at the said several times in which, &c. and always afterwards hitherto was, and as yet is a freeman of the borough of Linn-Regis aforesaid, and proprietor of a certain ship called The Expectation, in the said port of Linn-Regis at the said several times in which, &c. being and wanting ballast; whereupon he the said Ezekiel Goddard being as aforesaid a freeman of the said borough in his own proper right, and the said John, George, Robert and John, as the servants of the said Ezekiel, and by his command at the said several times in which, &c. into the said place in which, &c. entered, and in the soil there for ballast, for the necessary ballasting of the ship of the said Ezekiel aforesaid dug, and the gravel aforesaid cast thereout being ballast, took, and in the ship aforesaid, for the necessary ballasting thereof carried away, as they lawfully might; which are the same trespass whereof the said mayor and burgesses above now complain; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore they pray judgment, if the said mayor and burgesses ought to have their action aforesaid against them, &c.

And the said mayor and burgesses say that they by any thing before alledged, ought not to be precluded from having their action aforesaid: because they say that the said place in which the trespass aforesaid is alledged to have been committed, is and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, hath been parcel of the manor of Linn-Regis, commonly called King's-Linn, and that the Lord Philip and the Lady Mary, late King and Queen of England, in the right of the said Queen, long before the said several times in which, &c. were seized of the manor aforesaid, in their demesne as of fee, and so being seised thereof, the said King and Queen by their letters patent under their Great Seal of England, bearing date at Westminster, the 2d day of October, in the 4th year of their reign, for the consideration in the said letters patent specified, for themselves and the heirs of the said Queen, gave and granted among other things to the said mayor and burgesses, and to their successors, the manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances to have, hold, and enjoy the manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to the said mayor and burgesses and their successors for ever; as by the said letters patent produced here in Court, among other things more fully appeareth; by virtue of which grant, they the said mayor and burgesses, long before the said several times [159] in which, &c. and also at the said several times in which, &c. were and as yet are seised of the manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances, whereof the said place, in which, &c. so as aforesaid was and is parcel, in their demesne as of fee; and that they the said mayor and burgesses so as aforesaid, of the manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances, whereof the said place in which, &c. was and is parcel as aforesaid, being seised, they the said mayor and burgesses at sundry times after the grant aforesaid, so as aforesaid made, permitted and suffered sundry freemen of the borough aforesaid to dig up and take ballast in the said place in which, &c. for the necessary ballasting of their ships being in the port of Linn-Regis aforesaid; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore they pray judgment, and their damages to be adjudged to them, &c.

And the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel say, that the said plea of the said Mayor and Burgesses of the borough of Linn-Regis aforesaid, above by replying pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to maintain them the said Mayor and Burgesses of the borough of Linn-Regis aforesaid, to have their action aforesaid, against them the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the Mayor and Burgesses of Linn-Regis aforesaid, in this behalf, the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel as before pray judgment, and that the said Mayor and Burgesses of the borough of Linn-Regis aforesaid, may be precluded from having their action aforesaid against them, the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel, &c.

And the said mayor and burgesses, because that they above have alledged sufficient matter in law in their plea aforesaid, above by replying pleaded, to maintain them to have their action aforesaid against them, the said John, George, Robert, John and Ezekiel, which they the said mayor and burgesses are ready to verify; which matter they the said John, George, Robert John and Ezekiel do not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before pray judgment and their damages by occasion of the trespass aforesaid, to be adjudged to them, &c. And because the justices here will advise themselves of and upon the premises, whereof the parties aforesaid, have put themselves [160] upon the judgment of the Court before they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here, until from the day of Easter in fifteen days, to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon not as yet, &c.

MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF LINN-REGIS against TAYLOR.

Custom for freemen and proprietors of ships to dig ballast, good; though no corporation. Ante 85. Post, 190, 424, 425. Doug. 126, Cocksedge v. Funshaw. 4 Term Rep. 717.

Trespass for entering their close called the Shoar, and for digging and taking and carrying away their gravel there: the defendants justify for that Linn-Regis is an antient borough, time out of mind, &c. incorporated by the name of mayor and burgesses: and that there has been time out of mind, &c. divers freemen and proprietors of ships there, and a custom for every freeman and proprietor of a ship to dig gravel in the place where, being a common shoar, for the ballast of their ships, and thereby the shoar and the port have been meliorated; and that the defendant, being a freeman and proprietor of a ship did dig the gravel, and therewith ballasted his ship: the plaintiff replies, that the place where is, and time out of mind had been, parcel of the manor of Linn-Regis, whereof King Philip and Queen Mary being seised granted it to the mayor and burgesses; since which they have at their pleasure permitted divers freemen and proprietors of ships to dig gravel there for ballasting of their ships. To which the defendant demurs: and now it was argued, that the custom is laid in freemen and proprietors, who not being a corporation, or members thereof, nor persons of perpetual existence, the custom cannot be good, as the case in Dyer of Islebrewer's Park, a prescription in keepers for life is not; and so 6 Co. Gateward's case, for inhabitants to have common. But by the whole Court the custom here is good, it being for the maintenance of navigation, and so pro bono publico; and a custom is lex loci, and inherent in the soil whereto it is fixed for the service of every one that is qualified to use it; whereas prescription is (fixed) in the person, and therefore ought always to be laid in persons or estates of perpetual existence; but it is otherwise of customs, as the custom for fishermen to dry their nets on another's soil, and the custom of the hundred of Wicksworth in Derbyshire, to dig for lead in another's soil so far as the party can throw his mattock; whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff.

SEAL against CROWE.

Declaration in debt upon a writing obligatory.

Worcester, to wit.—John Crowe late of Bromsgrove in the county aforesaid yeoman, otherwise called John Crow of Bromsgrove in the county of Worcester yeoman, was summoned to answer William Seal of a plea that he render to him forty pounds which he owes to him and unjustly detains, &c. And whereupon the said William by John Harris his attorney saith, that whereas the said John Crowe, on the 23d day of January, in the 34th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at Bromsgrove in the county aforesaid, by his certain writing obligatory had granted that he was holden to the said William Seal in the said forty pounds, to be paid to the said William when he should be thereto requested, nevertheless the said John Crowe although oftentimes requested the said forty pounds to the said William hath not yet paid, but the same to him hitherto to pay hath refused and still doth refuse, whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced and hath sustained damage to the value of twenty pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c. and produces here in Court the writing aforesaid, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date of which is the day and year aforesaid, &c.

And the said John Crowe by William Bell his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. And prays oyer of the writing aforesaid and it is read to him, &c. also he prays oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it is read to him in these words:—The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above-bounden John Crowe, his heirs and every of them, for his and their parts and behalfs, shall and do in all things well and truly stand to, abide, observe and perform, fulfil and keep the award, order, rule, judgment and final determination of Obadiah Orford, of Bromsgrove aforesaid, gent. and Thomas Holliocke of Redditch, in the said parish of Tardebigg, gent. arbitrators indifferently elected and chosen as well on the part and behalf [162] of the above-bounden John Crowe, as on the part and behalf of the above-bounden William Seal, to arbitrate, award, order, judge, and finally determine of, in, and upon all and all manner of action and actions, cause and causes of action, suits, bonds, bills, quarrels, variances, trespasses, batteries, dues, debts, reckonings, accounts and demands whatsoever, at any time heretofore had, moved, committed and depending between the said parties, or either of them, so as the said arbitrators do make and declare their award in the premisses on this side, or before the 10th day of February next ensuing the date hereof; and if the said arbitrators cannot agree, nor any award shall make in the premisses, then if the said above-bounden John Crowe, his heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them, do well and truly stand to, perform, abide, fulfil and keep the award, umpirage and final determination of William Smith, of Boresley, in the parish of Allechurch, in the county aforesaid, gent. an umpire indifferently elected and chosen by the mutual consent of both parties, to arbitrate, award and finally determine of, in and upon all and all manner of actions, suits, bonds, bills, quarrels, differences, trespasses, batteries, dues, debts, reckonings, accounts and demands whatsoever, at any time heretofore had, moved, stirred or depending between the said parties, or either of them, so as the said umpire do make or declare his award in the premisses on this side, or before the 18th day of February next ensuing the date hereof, that then this present obligation to be void, and of none effect, or else to stand and abide in full force and virtue. Which being read and heard the said John Crowe saith, that the said William Seal ought not to have his action aforesaid against him, because he saith that the arbitrators aforesaid in the condition aforesaid mentioned after the making of the writing obligatory aforesaid, and upon or before the said 10th day of February in the condition aforesaid above specified did not make any award, order, rule, judgment or final determination between the said John Crowe and the said William Seal, of and upon the premises in the condition aforesaid above specified according to the form and effect of that condition; and the said John further saith that the said William Smith the umpire in the condition aforesaid [163] specified, and before the said 18th day of February in the said condition mentioned, to wit, upon the 16th day of February, in the 35th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at Bromsgrove aforesaid, took upon himself the burthen of the umpirage aforesaid, and there did arbitrate, order and adjudge between the parties aforesaid, of and upon the premisses in the condition aforesaid specified, to wit, that the said John Crowe, his executors, administrators or assigns should pay to the said William Seal, his executors, administrators or assigns, the sum of 12l. 10s. of the good and lawful money of England, upon or before the 13th day of March then next ensuing; and the said John Crowe in fact saith that the said John Crowe after the making of the umpirage aforesaid, to wit, upon the said 13th day of March, in the umpirage aforesaid mentioned, at Bromsgrove aforesaid, offered to the said William Seal the said 12l. 10s. which the said William Seal from the said John then and there refused to receive, and this he is ready to verify;

wherefore he prays judgment if the said William Seal ought to have his action aforesaid against him, &c. E. BYRCHE.

And the said William saith that he by any thing by the said John Crowe above in pleading alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid against him the said John, because he saith that well and true it is that the said William Smith did arbitrate, order and adjudge that the said John Crowe, his executors, administrators or assigns should pay to the said William Seal, his executors, administrators or assigns the sum of 12l. 10s. of the good and lawful money of England, upon or before the 13th day of March then next ensuing, in full satisfaction of all differences between the said William Seal and the said John Crowe, but the said William Seal further saith that the said John Crowe did not offer to the said William Seal the said 12l. 10s. in the manner and form as he the said John above by pleading hath alledged, and he prays that this may be enquired of by the country, &c. &c.
FR. PEMBERTON.

[164] And the said John saith, that the said plea of the said William Seal above by replying pleaded, and the matter in same contained are not sufficient in law to maintain the said William to have his action aforesaid against him, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said William in this behalf, the said John prays judgment, and that the said William Seal may be precluded from having his action aforesaid, &c. E. BYRCHE.

And the said William, because that he above by replying hath alledged sufficient matter in law to have his action aforesaid against the said John, which he the said William is ready to verify, which matter the said John doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit or receive the verification thereof, he the said William prays judgment and his debt aforesaid, together with his damages, to be adjudged to him, &c. FR. PEMBERTON.

Defendant pleads an umpirage, tender and refusal; plaintiff replies and shews the umpirage was in satisfaction of all controversies, and joins issue on the tender; the defendant demurs and argues that the replication ought to have concluded with an averment. Quære? 1 Danvers 556, 557. Ante 17, 28. Post, 293, 413. 1 Mod. 274. 1 Salk. 69, 70, 72. 1 Saunders 326, 327. 2 Keble 567. 1 Lutw. 281, 451, 525, 539, 540. Debt on obligation conditioned to perform an award. The defendant pleads, that the arbitrators made no award, but that the umpire made an umpirage that the defendant should pay the plaintiff such a sum at such a day and place, and that he tendered it accordingly, and the plaintiff refused to accept it. The plaintiff replies, that the umpire awarded it in [165] satisfaction of all controversies, and that the defendant non obtulit solvere, & hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam. The defendant demurs: and now it was argued for the defendant, that the plaintiff ought not to have concluded to the country, he having alledged new matter; viz. that the sum awarded was in satisfaction of all controversies, without saying the award was void, and by this means the defendant is deprived of the opportunity of his traverse thereto; and therefore the plaintiff cannot have judgment, because it does not appear to the Court upon this pleading, whether the award be good or void; and of this opinion were Jones Ch. Just. and Charlton after two arguments at the Bar. But Wyndham and Levinz on the contrary held, that the defendant had admitted the award to be good, by undertaking to plead performance thereof; and when the plaintiff has shewn such matter as proves the award to be good, the defendant shall not be admitted by traversing it to prove the award ill and void; but if the truth be, that the award was not in satisfaction of all controversies, and so an award of one side only, the defendant ought at first to have pleaded no award, but when he has pleaded it as a good award, and by the replication it appears to be so, he shall not afterwards be admitted to a traverse to prove it no award, for that would be a departure from his plea, and is as much as if he had pleaded, that there was an award made, and yet in his rejoinder should say there was no award; and so the matter hung, two Judges being against two.

Trespass for digging turfs in his soil. The defendant justifies by a grant of the former lord of the manor to J. S. for digging turfs there by J. S. and his heirs to be burned in his house and that J. S. granted the said house cum pertinentiis to the defendant and his heirs; and on long special pleadings it was questioned, whether the turbary passed by the words cum pertinentiis without being specially named; and Cro. Ja. 189, Beaudley versus Brooke was cited for an opinion that it should not pass; but by the whole Court, as common appurtenant may at this day be granted, so may it pass by the word appurtenances with the land to which it is appurtenant.

Case for saying, Thou art a forsworn man, and didst take a false oath against me before Justice Scawen, innuendo John Scawen a justice of peace; and after verdict for the plaintiff judgment was stayed: for by the whole Court, though to say, that one is forsworn before a justice of peace is actionable, yet here it does not appear that Scawen was a justice of peace, except by the innuendo which is not sufficient, 4 Co. 17, Rutliche's case; and it may be the name of a man is Justice Scawen.

[167] TRINITY TERM, IN THE THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

KIDDER against WEST.

The lessor of a house and garden, &c. cannot build on the garden.

Covenant, and declares on a demise of a messuage to the plaintiff, together with a garden, and latrinam, Anglice, an house of office, at the further end thereof; and that the defendant covenanted that the plaintiff should enjoy the premisses so demised; assigns a breach, that the defendant had erected on part of the garden a mansion-house, whereby the plaintiff could not have the use of the garden aforesaid, according to the form and effect of the demise aforesaid. The defendant pleads, that notwithstanding the building aforesaid the plaintiff could have the use of the garden aforesaid, according to the true intent of the demise aforesaid. Absque hoc that the building aforesaid did any way hinder the plaintiff from the use of the said garden, according to the true intent of the indenture aforesaid. The plaintiff demurs: and by the whole Court, the use of the garden is the use of all the garden, and not the use only to pass to the house of office, as was pretended by the defendant; and the traverse contains more than is alledged in the breach, viz. according to the true intent of the indenture aforesaid; and the Court cannot understand the true intent of the indenture, but only by the words of the indenture; and therefore they gave judgment for the plaintiff.(1)

TRINITY, 36 CHARLES II.

[168] WHELPDALE against WHELPDALE.

Count in dower. Protestation.

Cumberland, to wit.—Sarah Whelpdale, widow, who was the wife of John Whelpdale, Esquire, by Richard Grange her attorney demandeth against Andrew Whelpdale, Esquire, three messuages, one hundred and fifty acres of land, fifty acres of meadow, and eighty acres of pasture with the appurtenances in Penrith, as her dower of the endowment of the said John heretofore her husband, &c.

And the said Andrew by William Derisley his attorney comes and prays a view of the tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances, &c.

And the said Sarah saith the said Andrew ought not to have a view of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. because she saith the said John heretofore the husband of the said Sarah died seized of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. in his demesne as of fee, and this she is ready to verify; wherefore she prays judgment and her dower of the tenements aforesaid to be adjudged to her, &c.

And the said Andrew protesting that the said John, heretofore the husband of the said Sarah, did not die seized of any lands or tenements in Penrith aforesaid, as the said Sarah above hath alledged; saith that the said plea of the said Sarah above in the form aforesaid pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to repel him the said Andrew from having a view of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the said Sarah in this behalf, the said Andrew prays judgment and a view of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. to be adjudged to him, &c. And for cause of demurrer in law upon the said plea in this behalf, the said Andrew according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, shews to the Court here the cause following, to wit, that the said plea is badly concluded, and wants form in the conclusion thereof, not agreeing with the beginning thereof, to wit, [169] where it is said in the said conclusion, wherefore she prays judgment and her dower of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances to be adjudged to her, it ought to be said there, wherefore she prays judgment if the said Andrew ought to have a view of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c.

And the said Sarah because that she above by pleading hath alledged sufficient matter in law to repel the said Andrew from having a view of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances whereof, &c. which she is ready to verify, which matter the said Andrew doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment and her tenements aforesaid to be adjudged to her, &c.

Dower, and demands 3 messuages, where it should be the third part thereof. Counterplea of view how to conclude. 1 Lev. 117. Post 220. Stat. of West. 2, c. 48. 2 Inst. 481. Amendment after argument on a special demurrer. Ante 152.

Dower, and demands three messuages and fifty acres of land, &c. The tenant demands the view. The demandant counterpleads the view, because the husband died seised; & hoc parat' est verificare, & proinde petit judicium & dotem suum de tenementis predictis sibi adjudicari. The tenant by a protestando that the husband did not die seised, demurs, and shews for cause, that the counterplea is ill concluded: and now upon argument, Jones Chief-Just. being absent, Wyndham and Charlton held the counterplea good, nowithstanding the special demurrer; and Wyndham cited Rast. Entr. 239, and Old Entr. 109, two precedents, that the plea concluded as here. Levinz said, that an issue is there taken upon the counterplea without insisting on the conclusion, whereas here it is shewn for special cause of the demurrer; and the form is, petit judicium, and that the tenant de visu excludatur, as appears 14 H. 4, 33 b. and the counterplea is only a dilatory plea, and therefore it ought not to conclude peremptorily for a final judgment: also the said two justices ruled, the count should be amended; but Levinz to the contrary, that it ought not to be amended; for it is a meer ignorance of the clerk to demand the three entire messuages, where he ought to demand the third part only, and such ignorance is not amendable 8 Co. 159 a. by any of the old statutes, nor by any of the later statutes, it not being after a verdict.

[170] TYNDAL against HUTCHINSON.

Covenant for rent on an indenture; nil debet no plea. Com. Dig. Pleader. 2 V. 6. Ante 146. Post, 193.

Covenant on an indenture of lease, and assigns a breach in the nonpayment of rent, according to the covenant therein. The defendant pleads nil debet; and the plaintiff demurs generally; and on the first opening of the case it was adjudged, that nil debet is no plea in this case on the indenture, and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

PROCTER against BURDET.

Breach of covenants assigned as generally as the words of the covenant. 3 Mod. 69. Com. Dig. Pleader. C. 45. 1 Bac. Ab. 546.

Covenant brought by an apprentice against his master, and declares on the custom of London, whereby every apprentice is obliged by his covenants of apprenticeship, be he within age or of full age, and that he by indenture was put apprentice to the defendant, who covenanted to instruct him in his trade, and to find him meat, drink, lodging and apparel, and other necessaries; and that the defendant, being a woollen-draper, did on such a day depart from his house, and did not instruct the apprentice in his trade, nor find him meat, drink, and other necessaries. The defendant demurs generally, and now insisted that the breach was not well laid, for other necessaries is too general and uncertain. But the Court on the contrary held the breach to be certain, being in the very words of the covenant, and that by other necessaries is intended all small matters, as trimming, washing, &c. which would be too prolix to have been inserted; and the greater things being particularly assigned, he need not assign the small things so particularly, especially it being here assigned in the very words of the covenant; wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[171] WILLIAMS against LEWIS.

Words, I have a man will prove, &c. Ante 166.

Case for these words, I have an honest man in Langattock, who will prove that Williams said he had killed a man in Ireland, and buried him in the sands: and the plaintiff avers, that he never said so: after verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was insufficient, for that it is not averred that the plaintiff did not kill a man in Ireland, nor that there is any man in Langattock who would prove that the plaintiff so said. But non allocatur; for the words are not laid as spoken from the report of another person; for then it ought to be averred, that such other person did not so report; but here is alledged an undertaking by the defendant himself, that he had a man in Langattock who would prove that the plaintiff did say so, viz. That he had killed a man in Ireland, and buried him in the sands; and so there is a diversity: whereupon judgment was for the plaintiff.

MICHAELMAS 35TH CHARLES II.

BARWELL against KENSEY AND OTHERS.

Declaration. In trespass upon the case for the digging in the foundation of a house so near the plaintiff's messuage that the plaintiff's messuage fell down, &c. &c. 1 Mallory 195. 13 Ed. 1, c. 30.

London, to wit.—Thomas Kensey, late of London, vintner, Robert Fenwick, late of London, vintner, John Howard, late of London, carpenter, and John Fitch, late of London, bricklayer, were attached to answer Henry Barwell, Esq. of a plea of trespass on the case, &c. And whereupon the said Henry Barwell, by Samuel Moore his attorney complains, that whereas the said Henry on the 24th day of April, in the 34th year of the reign of the Lord Charles II. now King of England, &c. and long before, at London, to wit, in the parish of St. Dunstan in the West, in the ward of Farringdon Without, London, in a certain messuage, situate and lying in the parish and ward aforesaid, with his family lawfully did dwell, and his art and trade of a sadler, in the messuage aforesaid, and in the shop, parcel of the said messuage, then did use and exercise, and his habitation and the exercise of his art and trade of a [172] sadler in the said messuage and shop, parcel of the said messuage for the space of one year then next ensuing had prepared and intended to exercise, use and continue: he the said Henry Barwell then having lawful right and title to continue and inhabit in the messuage and shop aforesaid with his family, and there to use and exercise his art and trade for the whole time aforesaid, for the better support and maintenance of himself and his family by the exercise of his art and trade aforesaid. Nevertheless the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, not ignorant of the premises, but contriving and maliciously intending him the said Henry Barwell of the habitation of himself and his family in the messuage aforesaid, and also of the exercise of his art aforesaid, in the messuage and shop aforesaid, of the said Henry Barwell to hinder and deprive, upon the 24th day of April in the year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, the foundation of a certain house lying next to the messuage of the said Henry Barwell aforesaid, situate in the parish and ward aforesaid, did pull down and prostrate, and dug in the soil and foundation there lying contiguous to the messuage of the said Henry Barwell, so much and so near the foundation of the messuage aforesaid of the said Henry Barwell, and so much cast out the earth coming thereout, that by digging the soil and foundation aforesaid, and by the casting out of the earth coming thereout, great part of the messuage aforesaid of the said Henry Barwell, then and there fell to the ground, and the residue of the said messuage became disjoined, waste and spoiled, by reason whereof he the said Henry Barwell from his habitation aforesaid, with his family out of the messuage aforesaid, was compelled to depart, and from that time for the space of eleven months then next ensuing, out of the messuage aforesaid was compelled to continue, and sundry great sums of money, as well in and about the obtaining and providing another habitation for himself and his family for the whole time aforesaid, and the removal of him the said Henry Barwell and his family, and their goods and merchandizes as for the payment of the rent of the messuage aforesaid, so as aforesaid pulled down, for the eleven months aforesaid, was forced and compelled to lay out and expend: and also he the said Henry Barwell the whole use and exercise of his art and trade aforesaid, in the messuage and shop aforesaid, [being a shop [173] best known and to which sundry great men, and other subjects of the said lord the King were accustomed to repair to purchase saddles and other goods and merchandizes belonging to the said art and trade of the said Henry Barwell,] for the whole time aforesaid, entirely lost and was deprived of, to wit, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid: whereupon the said Henry saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of 300l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Thomas Kensey and Robert Fenwick, by Robert Bird their attorney, and the said John Howard and John Fitch, by Thomas Pargiter their attorney, come and defend the force and injury, when, &c. and say that the said Henry ought not to have his action aforesaid against them; because they say that heretofore before the day of the suing forth of the said original writ of the said Henry, to wit, in the term of St. Michael last past, the said Henry and one Susannah Barwell, spinster, impleaded the said Robert Bird, and them the said Thomas Kinsey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, and one John Stephens [now deceased] in his life-time, by the names of Robert Bird, late of London, vintner, Robert Fenwick, late of London, vintner, John Fitch, late of London, bricklayer, John Howard, late of London, carpenter, and John Stephens, late of London, &c. in the Court of the said King of the Bench here in a certain plea of trespass, upon which plea the said Henry and Susannah in the said term of St. Michael last past, by declaring against the said Robert Bird, and them the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard, John Fitch, and the said John Stephens in the said Court of the said lord the King of the Bench here by the said Samuel Moore their attorney, complained that the said Robert Bird, Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens, upon the 24th day of April, in the 34th year of the reign of the Lord Charles II. now King of England, &c. with force and arms, &c. in the soil of them the said Henry and Susannah, under the foundation of the house of them the said Henry and Susannah, situate in the parish of St. Dunstan in the West, in the ward of Farringdon Without, London, dug and the earth coming thereout cast out, by which digging of the soil and foundation aforesaid, under the foundation of the house aforesaid, and by casting out the earth coming thereout, [174] great part of the house of them the said Henry and Susannah fell to the ground, and the residue of the said house became disjoined, waste and spoiled, by reason whereof the said Henry and Susannah, not only the whole entire profit, advantage and benefit of the house aforesaid, for a great time, to wit, from the said 24th day of April, in the year aforesaid, until the day of the obtaining of the original writ of the said Henry and Susannah entirely lost and were deprived of, but also sundry goods and chattels of the said Henry and Susannah, to wit, one hundred and fifty saddles to the value of one hundred and fifty pounds; twenty dozen of bridles to the value of fifteen pounds; ten dozens of halters to the value of five pounds; five dozen of bits to the value of thirty shillings; five dozen of stirrups to the value of four pounds; five dozen of girths to the value of three pounds; five dozen of circingles to the value of five pounds, thirty pair of holsters to the value of three pounds; four yards of point lace to the value of four pounds; one bolster to the value of twenty shillings; thirty pounds weight of tin to the value of thirty shillings; four shirts to the value of fifty shillings; six ounces of silver to the value of thirty shillings; four dozen of glass bottles to the value of ten shillings; four hundred pound weight of iron to the value of forty shillings; four dozen of glasses to the value of thirty shillings; and four chairs to the value of forty shillings, by the fall of the house aforesaid, were broken, spoiled, and destroyed and became of no value to the said Henry and Susannah, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon they the said Henry and Susannah, said that they were prejudiced and had sustained damage to the value of five hundred pounds; and therefore then produced their suit, &c. And the said Robert Bird in his proper person, and the said Thomas Kensey and Robert Fenwick, by Theodore Walpole their attorney, and the said John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens, by the said Thomas Pargiter their attorney, then came and defended the force and injury, when, &c. and said that they were not guilty of the trespass aforesaid, as the said Henry and Susannah above complained [175] against them; and of this they put themselves upon the country, and the said Henry and Susannah did the like: therefore the sheriff was commanded that he should cause to come here from the day of St. Martin in fifteen days, twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognise, &c. because as well, &c. at which day here came the parties, &c. and the sheriff did not send his writ; therefore as before, the sheriff was commanded that he should cause to come here on the octave of St. Hilary, twelve, &c. to recognize in the form aforesaid, &c. at which day the jury between the parties aforesaid, for the plea aforesaid, was respited until the octave of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, then next ensuing, unless Francis Pemberton, Knight, Chief Justice of the lord the King of the Bench here assigned by the form of the statute, &c. on Saturday, the 3d day of February then next ensuing, had first come to the Guildhall of the City of London: and upon the said octave of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, came as well the said Henry Barwell and Susannah Barwell, by their attorney aforesaid, as the said Robert Bird in his proper person, and, &c. and the said Chief Justice before whom, &c. then sent here his record in these words:—Afterwards at the day and place within contained, before Francis Pemberton, Knight, Chief Justice of the lord the King of the Bench, Adam Baynes, gent. being associated to him according to the form of the statute, &c. came as well the within named Henry Barwell, Esq. and Susannah Barwell, spinster, as the within written Robert Bird, Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens by their attorneys within contained; and the jurors of the jury whereof mention is within made, being called, certain of them, to wit, John Mallary, Samuel Hoyle, Anthony Spencer, Roger Duncombe, Thomas Yates, Richard Elborough, Richard Chaplin and Hugh Norton, come and are sworn upon that jury, and because the residue of the jurors of that jury do not appear, therefore others of the bye-standers by the Sheriffs of London within written chosen for this purpose, at the prayer of the said Henry and Susannah, and by the command of the Chief Justice are newly appointed, whose names are affiled in the panel within written, according to the form of the statute in such case lately made and provided; and the jurors so newly appointed, to wit, Thomas Anger, John Harrison, Thomas Isles and John Warfield, being called, come; who being elected, tried and sworn to speak the truth of the matters within contained, together with the other jurors aforesaid, first impannelled and sworn, say upon their oath aforesaid, that the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens are guilty of the trespass within written, in the manner and form as the said Henry Barwell [176] and Susannah Barwell within complain against them; and they assess the damages of the said Henry and Susannah, by the occasion within written, besides their expences and costs by them about their suit in this behalf laid out to one hundred and twenty-one pounds, and for those expences and costs to fifty-three shillings and four pence; and the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, further say, that the said Robert Bird is not guilty of the trespass aforesaid, as the said Robert Bird within for himself by pleading hath alledged; therefore it was considered that the said Henry Barwell and Susannah Barwell, should recover against the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens, their damages aforesaid, to one hundred and twenty-three pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence, by the jury aforesaid, in the form aforesaid assessed; and also sixteen pounds, six shillings and eight pence to the said Henry Barwell and Susannah Barwell at their request, for their expences and costs aforesaid, by the Court here of increase adjudged; which said damages in the whole amount to one hundred and forty pounds; and that the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens, should be taken, &c. And that the said Henry and Susannah should be in mercy for their false clamour against the said Robert Bird; because that the said Robert Bird of the trespass aforesaid, by the jury aforesaid above was acquitted, and that the said Robert Bird should go thereof without day, &c. Afterwards, to wit, upon the 19th day of June, in the 35th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, came into Court here, the said Henry and Susannah, by John Hargrave their attorney, by special warrant to him in that behalf made, and acknowledge that they are satisfied of the damages aforesaid: therefore the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Fitch, John Howard and John Stephens, of the damages aforesaid should be quit, &c. as by the record and proceedings thereof in the said Court of the said lord the King of the Bench of Record remaining manifestly appeareth; and the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch say, that the said house in the record of recovery mentioned to be the house of the said Henry and Susannah, and the messuage aforesaid in the declaration of the said Henry above specified to be the messuage of the said Henry, are one and the same messuage and house and not another nor different, and that the said digging in the soil under the foundation of the house of the said Henry and Susannah, and the casting out of the earth coming thereout, by which digging of the soil and foundation, under the foundation of the said house, and the casting out of the earth coming thereout [177] great part of that house fell to the ground, and the residue of the said house became entirely disjoined, waste and spoiled in the record of recovery aforesaid mentioned; and the said pulling down and prostrating of the foundation lying next the messuage of the said Henry, and the digging of the soil and foundation there lying contiguous to the messuage of the said Henry, there so much and so near the foundation of the messuage of the said Henry, and the casting out of the earth coming thereout so much, that by the digging of the soil and foundation aforesaid, and by casting out of the earth coming thereout, great part of the messuage aforesaid of the said Henry fell to the ground, and the residue of the said messuage became entirely disjoined, waste and spoiled, whereof the said Henry above now complains are the same digging and casting out of the earth, and the same trespass, thing and matter, and not other nor different; and that the said fall to the ground of a great part of the said house, in the said record of recovery aforesaid mentioned, and the said fall to the ground of a great part of the said messuage, and the entirely disjoining, wasting and spoiling the residue of the said messuage, whereof the said Henry above now complains are the same fall, disjoining, wasting and spoiling, and not other nor different; and that the said Henry Barwell in the record of recovery aforesaid named, and the said Henry Barwell in like manner named in the writ and declaration now sued are one and the same person and not other nor different; and that the said Thomas Kensey, Richard Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, in the record of recovery aforesaid in like manner named, and the said Thomas Kensey, Richard Fenwick, John Fitch and John Howard, in the writ and declaration of the said Henry now sued and named are one and the same persons, and not other nor different; and that the damages aforesaid in the said first action above assessed and recovered, were in full satisfaction of all damages by the said Henry Barwell sustained by the occasion aforesaid in the declaration of his said last action mentioned, to wit, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore they pray judgment if the said Henry ought to have his action aforesaid against them, &c.

And the said Henry saith, that he by any thing by the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, above by pleading alledged, ought not to be precluded from [178] having his action aforesaid against them the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch; because he saith that the said plea by them the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, and the matter in the same contained are not sufficient in law to preclude him from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, to which he the said Henry hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient answer in this behalf, the said Henry prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the premises aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c. And for cause of demurrer in law to the said plea, the said Henry according to the form of the statute in such case lately made and provided, sets down and to the Court here shews the causes following, to wit, this that the said plea doth not answer directly but evasively to the matters aforesaid, above charged against the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch by the declaration of the said Henry; and it wants form.

And the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, because that they have alledged sufficient matter in law in their plea aforesaid above in bar pleaded, to preclude him the said Henry from having his action aforesaid against them the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, which they are ready to verify, which matter the said Henry doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before pray judgment, and that the said Henry may be precluded from having his action aforesaid against them, the said Thomas Kensey, Robert Fenwick, John Howard and John Fitch, &c. And because the justices, &c.

[179] BARWELL against KENSEY AND OTHERS.

A recovery in a former action by A. and B. pleaded to an action brought by A. alone, with some small variance. Ante 424. 3 Wils. 308. 6 Coke 7. Cro. El. 668. 4 Coke 94. 1 Salk 10, 11. Post, 248. Cro. El. 240.

Case, and declares, that whereas the plaintiff the 24th of April, 34 Car. 2, and long before, had with his family inhabited a messuage, and exercised his trade of a sadler therein, and had also designed and prepared to have exercised his said trade therein for one year then next following, for the better support of himself and his family, he having a legal right so to do, yet the defendants, being not ignorant of the premisses, but maliciously intending unjustly to hinder and deprive the plaintiff of his habitation, and also from the exercise of his said art in the said messuage, did on the said 24th of April, dig, &c. the soil and the ground lying contiguous to the said messuage so very much, and so near the substruction, Anglice the foundation, of the said messuage, that thereby a great part of the said messuage fell to the ground, and the residue thereof was spoiled and became wasted; whereby the plaintiff was compelled to leave the said messuage for 11 months then next ensuing, and to expend divers great sums for the procuring another messuage, and was deprived of and lost the entire use of his trade in the said messuage, being a good accustomed shop, to his damage 300l. during the said 11 months. The defendants plead, that in Mich. term last past the plaintiff and one Susan Barwell, spinster, prosecuted a former action against the defendants, and declared, that the defendants, April 24, 34 Car. 2, did with force and arms dig in the plaintiff's soil under the foundation of their house, by which digging great part of the same house fell to the ground, and the residue thereof became spoiled and wasted; and by reason thereof the plaintiffs not only were deprived of and lost the whole profit, commodity and advantages of the aforesaid house, from the aforesaid 24th day of April, 'till the suing out of the writ, but also divers of the plaintiffs goods, &c. here particularizing them, (being goods and wares of the sadler's trade) were broken and spoiled to the damage of 500l. and that thereupon the plaintiffs had a verdict and judgment for 140l. and satisfaction acknowledged thereupon, and the defendants aver, that the messuage and digging in the former declaration and in this declaration are all one, and [180] that the fall, spoil and wasting, both in that action and in this are all one; and that the now plaintiff is one of the plaintiffs in the former action, and the defendants in this and that action are the same persons, and that the damages given in the former action were given in full satisfaction of all the damages mentioned in this action; whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and the case was twice argued at the Bar, viz. in the last and the present term; and Jones Chief Justice held, that the recovery in the former action is no bar of this action for three causes, viz. 1. That the trespass in the former action and in this are not the same, and then the averment is repugnant and void; for in the former action the digging is laid to be in the plaintiff's soil and under the foundation of their house, but in this action it is laid to be so near the foundation of the plaintiff's messuage. 2. The former action was brought by two plaintiffs, and also for the throwing down of their messuage and spoiling their goods, and this is brought for one of them only and for the loss of his trade for 11 months, and in the other action the whole time does not extend above 6 or 7 months at most. 3. The averment that the damages in the first action were given in full satisfaction of all the damages demanded in this action is also repugnant and void. But Wyndham, Charlton and Levinz, held the contrary; and as to the first they said, this action is not only said tam prope, but in tantum, & tam prope substructionem effodit, and that in tantum substructionem effodit is a digging of the foundation itself, and that digging the foundation itself is without question the principal matter in both; for the messuage did not fall 'till the foundation itself was dug; for if it had sunk by digging near it, there would have been no time (opportunity) to dig the foundation itself, and that digging the foundation, and digging so much and so near the foundation are but several ways of expressing the same thing. As to the second they said, that in the first action the plaintiffs called the messuage their messuage, and in this action the plaintiff calls it his messuage, and yet it is but one and the same messuage, and so it is averred: and therefore it ought to be intended that they were jointenants, and that the former action was for spoiling their goods; and therefore although the plaintiff calls them his goods, yet they shall be intended goods in partnership in trade, and that the trade was joint. As to the third they said, that the averment of the damages in the [181] other action to be given in satisfaction of all damages in this action is not repugnant; for the words, quod perdidit totum commodum & proficuum of the messuage, include the trade therein, for by the falling thereof no trade could be used therein, and then he must of necessity provide another messuage both for his habitation and his trade, and so it is within the words totum proficuum & advantagium; also the jury in the other action might and must be presumed to have given damages for all that is laid in this action, viz. want of habitation and loss of trade in the messuage, as necessary consequents of the falling of the messuage; as in battery the jury always give damages for the cure, pain, loss of time, &c. as necessary consequents of the battery without special damages laid in the declaration. But suppose the jury ought not to have given damages for the loss of the trade in this messuage, yet since they have done it, and it is so averred, and judgment given thereon, the same is a bar in this action until it be reversed by attaint; and so it was in Palmer and Lawson's case in B. R. in assumpsit against an executor he pleads a judgment in debt against him on simple contract; though debt did not lie in that case, yet it was held, that the judgment was a bar of the assumpsit until it was reversed: and they said, it would be very mischievous to permit multiplying of actions on such niceties of varying from the former action. It is true, in the former the time does not exceed 7 months, and in this it is laid to be 11 months; but by the same reason he may bring a new action for 12 months more for the loss of his trade, &c. and so in infinitum, though all this matter was before the jury in the former action, and was without doubt considered of by them. But the Chief Justice strongly adhering to his opinion, no judgment was given until Pasch. 1 Jac. 2. And then Wyndham Justice being dead, and Street who succeeded in his place being of the same opinion as Wyndham was judgment was given for the defendant.

[182] NORTH against HOYLE.

Defence not necessary in a plea of antient demesne. Post, 240, 405. 1 Shower 386. But it is a cause of special demurrer. 1 Salk. 217. 4 Bac. Ab. 31.

In ejectment. The defendant venit & dicit, that the tenements are antient demesne tenements of the manor of Streiton. The plaintiff demurs generally: and now it was argued, that the plea was insufficient for default of a defence, Co. Lit. 127. The defendant cannot plead any plea before defence made; and divers precedents were shewn, that in pleas of antient demesne defence was made; but Rast. Entr. 58 and other precedents were shewn, where antient demesne was pleaded without defence, and particularly in Hill. 43 El. in C. B. Rot. 1807, and in a scire facias a defence is never made. Whereupon the Court said, that Co. Lit. is not absolutely to be so intended; for the precedents where antient demesne is pleaded, being sometimes with defence and sometimes without it, prove only that it may be pleaded with defence, but do not prove that it cannot be pleaded without it; and thereupon they ruled the plea good without defence.

[183] MICHAELMAS TERM, IN THE THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

TRINITY 36TH CHARLES II.

ROBINET against COBB.

Bill in the Common Pleas against an attorney. Imparlance. No award.

Heretofore as appears in the term of Easter last past, Roll 112, it is thus contained; be it remembered, that on the 16th day of April in this same term, came here into Court James Robinet, by Robert Bird his attorney, and exhibited to the justices here his certain bill against Thomas Cobb, gent. one of the attornies of the Court of the lord the King of the Bench here present here in Court in his proper person of a plea of debt, the tenor of which bill follows in these words, to wit: To the Justices of the lord the King of the Bench. London, to wit. James Robinet by Robert Bird his attorney, complains of Thomas Cobb, gent. one of the attorneys of the Court of the lord the King of the Bench present here in Court in his proper person, for this that the said Thomas unjustly detains and hath not paid to the said James one hundred pounds which he owes to him, for this to wit, that whereas the said Thomas on the first day of December, in the 35th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at London in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, by the name of Thomas Cobb of Saffron-Walden, in the county of Essex, gent. by his certain writing obligatory, acknowledged himself to be holden to the said James in the said 100l. to be paid to the said James when thereto afterwards he should be requested; nevertheless the said Thomas, although oftentimes requested, hath not yet paid the said 100l. to the said James, but the same to him hitherto to pay altogether hath refused, and still doth refuse; whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and [184] hath sustained damage to the value of 10l. and therefore he prays remedy, &c. And he produces here in Court the said writing, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid. Pledges to prosecute John Doe and Richard Roe.

And the said Thomas Cobb in his proper person comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and prays oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it is read to him in these words: The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above bounden Thomas Cobb, his heirs, executors and administrators for their parts and behalfs, do and shall in all things well and truly stand to, obey, abide, perform, fulfil and keep the award, arbitrament, final end and determination of Sir James Astrey, Knight, one of the Masters of the High Court of Chancery, arbitrator indifferently elected and named, as well on the part and behalf of the above bounden Thomas Cobb, as of the above named James Robinet, to arbitrate, award, order, judge and determine, of and concerning all, and all manner of action and actions, cause and causes of actions, suits, bills, bonds, specialties, judgments, executions, extents, quarrels, controversies, trespasses, damages and demands whatsoever, at any time heretofore had, made, moved, brought, commenced and prosecuted, done, suffered, committed or depending, by and between the said parties, or either of them, so as the said award be made in writing, and ready to be delivered to the parties in difference, or such of them as shall desire the same, on or before the last day of Hilary term next; then this obligation to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue: which being read and heard, the said Thomas prays leave to impart thereto here, until Friday next after the morrow of the Holy Trinity, and he hath, &c. the same day is given to the said James Robinet here, &c. And now here at this day, to wit, on the said Friday next after the said morrow of the Holy Trinity, here comes as well the said James Robinet by his attorney aforesaid, as the said Thomas in his proper person; and the said James prays that the said Thomas answer his bill aforesaid, &c. and the said Thomas as before defends the force and injury, when, &c. and saith that the said James Robinet ought not to have his action aforesaid against him, because he saith that the said James Astrey made no award, [185] order, arbitrament, final end or determination, between the parties aforesaid, of and concerning the premises in the condition aforesaid, above mentioned, before or upon the said last day of the said term of St. Hilary, next ensuing the date of the obligation aforesaid, and this he is ready to verify; whereupon he prays judgment if the said James ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said James Robinet saith that he by any thing before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid against the said Thomas, because he saith that the term of St. Hilary in the condition aforesaid above mentioned, began the 23d day of January in the year of our Lord 1683, and ended the 12th day of February then next ensuing, and that the said James Astrey the arbitrator aforesaid in the condition aforesaid named, having taken upon himself the burthen of the award, order, arbitrament, final end and determination of and upon the premises in the condition aforesaid above specified, after the making of the said writing obligatory, and before the said last day of the said term of St. Hilary next ensuing the date of the writing obligatory aforesaid, to wit, upon the 8th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1683, aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, made his award in writing of and upon the premises in the condition aforesaid of the writing obligatory aforesaid, above specified ready to be delivered to each of the parties aforesaid, which signed with the hand of the said James Astrey, the said James Robinet, produces here in Court, the date of which is the said 8th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1683 aforesaid, in the manner and form following, to wit. Whereas there have been several suits depending in the High Court of Chancery and at common law between the said Thomas Cobb and the said James Robinet, both of Saffron-Walden, in the county of Essex, gentlemen, and whereas also the said Thomas Cobb and James Robinet did refer the matters aforesaid, and all other matters in difference between them to the award and arbitrament of the said James Astrey, and did enter in bonds each to the other in the penalty of 100l. to stand to and perform such award, arbitrament and determination as the said James Astrey should make thereupon; and all matters in difference between the parties aforesaid being fully heard and deliberated upon before the said James Astrey by the [186] parties aforesaid and their friends, the said James Astrey by the writing aforesaid, did order and award that the said Thomas Cobb within one week next after the date of this award should pay to the said James Robinet, or to his order, the sum of 7l. 10s. of the lawful money of England, in full satisfaction of all demands whatsoever, and that upon the payment thereof each of them should seal and execute to the other of them a general release, as by the said writing of award more fully appeareth; and the said James Robinet saith that the said Thomas, although often requested hath not paid to the said James Robinet, or to his order the said 7l. 10s. or any part thereof, within one week next after date of the writing of award aforesaid, or afterwards hitherto according to the form and effect of the writing of award aforesaid; and the said James Robinet further saith, that after the date of the writing obligatory aforesaid, and before the end of one week next after the date of the writing of award aforesaid, no new cause of action did arise, was or happened between the said Thomas Cobb and James Robinet for any matter whatsoever; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore he prays judgment and his debt aforesaid, together with his damages by occasion of the detention of that debt to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Thomas saith, that well and true it is that the said James Astrey, the arbitrator in the condition aforesaid above named, after the date of the writing obligatory aforesaid, and before the said last day of the said term of St. Hilary next ensuing the date of the said writing obligatory, to wit, upon the said 8th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1683 aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, made his award in the manner and form aforesaid, as the said James Robinet above hath alledged; and further the said Thomas saith, that after the date of the writing obligatory aforesaid, and before the making of the writ of award aforesaid, to wit, upon the 6th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1683, at Walden in the county of Essex aforesaid, a new cause of action did arise, was and happened between them the said Thomas [187] and James, for this that the said Thomas on the 6th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1683 aforesaid, at Walden in the county of Essex, the said close of the said James Robinet did break and enter, and his grass to the value of ten shillings there lately growing with feet in walking, and with cattle did tread down and consume, and so the said Thomas saith that the said James Astrey the arbitrator aforesaid, made no award, order, final end or determination between the parties aforesaid, of and concerning the premises in the condition aforesaid above mentioned, before or upon the said last day of the said term of St. Hilary, next ensuing the date of the obligation aforesaid, according to the form and effect of the submission in the said condition specified, but the authority in the said submission in the said condition aforesaid contained did exceed; and this he is ready to verify; whereupon he prays judgment if the said James Robinet ought to have his action aforesaid, thereupon against him, &c.

And the said James Robinet saith that the said plea of the said Thomas above by replying pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said James Robinet from having his action aforesaid against the said Thomas, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify: whereupon the said James Robinet as before prays judgment, and his damages by occasion of the detention of his said debt to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Thomas because that the said matter by him above by rejoining alledged; [which he is ready to verify:] is sufficient in law to preclude the said James Robinet from having his action aforesaid against him the said Thomas, which matter the said James doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment, and that the said James be precluded from having his action aforesaid, &c. &c.

Award of a release of all demands in general, intended of demands till the submission, is good; but of all demands to the time of the award is void. Post 273, 274, 344, 239. 1 Roll. Kyd on Awards 164. 2 Term Rep. 645. Jesques le agard.

Debt upon an obligation dated 1° Decemb. 35 Car. 2, conditioned to perform an award, so that it be made &c. before the last day of Hilary term next ensuing. The defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies and shews an award made before the last day of the said Hilary term, viz. the 8th day of February de & super premissis, that the defendant within a week after the date of the award should pay to the plaintiff 7l. 10s. in satisfaction of all demands whatsoever; and that upon payment thereof each of the parties should release to the other all demands: and avers, that no new controversy or cause of action did arise within the week after the said award. The defendant rejoins, quod bene & verum est that the arbitrators made an award prout, but further said, that after the submission and before the award, viz. the 6th of February, a new cause of action arose to the plaintiff against the defendant, for that the defendant on the same 6th of February did break and enter the close of the plaintiff called Blew, whereof the arbitrators had notice, and so they made no award; whereon the plaintiff demurred. And now it was objected that the award was void; 1. Because it is for the payment of money in satisfaction of all demands generally, which extends to the time of the award made, and so it is beyond (or out of) the submission: and 2. That the release being general, refers to the time of the release given, and consequently shall release the last cause of action, which was not within the submission, and shall also release even the bond of submission. But upon argument it was resolved by the whole Court, that the award was good; and a difference was taken where the award is for a satisfaction till the award, or for a release till the award, this is ill; but when the award is general without being limited to any time, and the same is made de & super premissis (as here) this shall be intended till the time of the submission; and a release of all demands, &c. till the submission, shall be a good performance of the award: and for the first part of this difference were cited Cro. Ja. 352, Slainy against Wild. 10 Co. Moss against Beadle cited [189] in Osborn's case in 10 Co. 130, and 2 Roll. Mawe against Samuel. And for the other part of the difference, 1 Roll. A concord not pleadable, except executed on both sides. 9 Coke 78, 79. 1 Saunders 236, 298. Cro. Cha. 193. 6 Mod. 35. 1 Bac. Ab. 24. 1 Stra. 573.

Covenant brought upon an indenture, whereby the defendant covenanted to permit the plaintiff to receive 100l. per annum rent; whereof 60l. per annum was to be for payment of a debt; and the residue to be paid to the defendant, and assigns a breach in a disturbance by the defendant from the receipt of the rent. The defendant pleads a concord between the plaintiff and the defendant, that each of them should deliver his part of the indenture to the other to be cancelled into the hands of a third person; and that each party should be discharged of all actions upon the said indenture; and avers, that he the defendant did deliver his part to such third person, &c. The plaintiff demurred, and judgment for him; for concord is no plea if it be not executed on both sides.

Debt against the heir; no plea that the executor has assets. 1 Lev. 13, 26, 92, 232.

Debt on an obligation against the defendant as heir, who pleads, that administration to his ancestor was committed to J. S. who had taken administration, and had assets. The plaintiff demurred, and upon argument he had judgment; for the plaintiff hath election to sue the one or the other.(2)

A plea on the Statute for Discharge of Poor Prisoners. Vide ante 151. "Mes."

Assumpsit was brought, and the defendant pleaded the Statutes for Poor Prisoners, both of them briefly, and confounded them together, taking only the substance of each, and also pleads a summons and discharge by the justices, and demands judgment if against his person or necessary goods, &c. the plaintiff ought to have execution, or only against his lands and his other goods. The plaintiff demurs, and divers exceptions were taken to the plea, but all of them were over-ruled except one, viz. that where he pleads his imprisonment on the day mentioned in the statutes, he does not shew for what cause he was imprisoned, and may be it was for a fine to the King, or contempt, &c. which are not within the statutes; and although the cause of the imprisonment be shewn in the certificate, that is not sufficient, for it is not traversable, but it ought to have been shewn in the plea; and for this single cause judgment was given for the plaintiff generally. See the like matter before, page 151, Sanders against Tooth.

Custom of the manor not extended out of the manor. Ante 160. Post 424, 425.

Trespass for breaking his close called the Market-place, and erecting a stall there. The defendant justifies by the custom of the manor for all tenants to erect stalls there to sell their goods, and that the defendant being a tenant and a butcher, erected a stall to sell flesh; on which the plaintiff demurs. And 1. It was objected, that the plea was ill, because it is not said that the Market-place is within the manor, and then the custom of the manor cannot extend thereto; but hereto it was answered and allowed by the Court, that seeing it is said the custom of the manor is to erect stalls in pred' loco in quo, &c. this is a sufficient averment that the locus in quo is within the manor. 2. Objected, that the custom is to erect stalls [191] for selling their goods, and the plea is, that he erected a stall to sell flesh, and does not say his flesh: and it may be a stranger's flesh, as in Cro. Ja. 46, Burser against Martin, trespass for taking a horse from the person of the plaintiff; and because it was not said, his horse, judgment was given for the defendant. And so it was ruled to be done in this case. But (note) it seeming to be a hard case, the Court recommended it to the parties to agree to amend the plea, and to go to trial on the merits of the cause, which they accordingly did.

(1) Per Lord Mansfield. 1 Burrow 277.—Awards are now considered with great latitude and less strictness than they were formerly, and it is right that they should be liberally construed, because they are made by Judges of the parties own choosing; and he declared against critical niceties in scanning awards made by Judges of the parties own choosing.

(2) By the English stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14, and the Irish stat. 4 Ann. c. 5, the heir is made liable for the value of the land sold before action brought.

PHILIPS against THOMPSON.

S. C. Ante 69.

A bankrupt's goods not bound by the delivery of the writ to the sheriff on the new statute till the writ actually executed as to the commissioners, aliter as to the bankrupt. Ante 58, 59, 69. 1 Sid. 173. 2 Sid. 115. 2 Jo. 196. 1 Jo. 438. 1 Ventris 360, 137. 1 Lev. 13, 14, 17, 178. 2 Shower 103, 238.

Assumpsit as assignee of commissioners of bankrupt; and upon issue non assumpsit and special verdict, the case was thus; Watkins a tradesman was indebted to Thompson, and in Easter term, 28 Car. 2, Thompson obtained a judgment against him for 600l. and in a scire fac. thereupon, in Mich. 29 Car. 2, has the judgment revived, and 30 Sept. 30 Car. 2 a fieri fa. thereupon was delivered to the sheriff, and endorsed according to the new(1) statute in the morning of that day; and afterwards the same day in the evening Watkins having notice thereof leaves his house, and becomes bankrupt; and after that, viz. 10 Octob. in the same year the sheriff seized Watkins's goods, and sold them for 400l. and delivered the money to Thompson in execution for his debt, and after such delivery the commissioners assign the money to the plaintiff, and for it this action was brought: and two points were argued three times at the Bar, viz. once when North was Ch. Just. and twice afterward when Jones was Ch. Just. 1. Whether the goods were so bound(2) by their being delivered to the sheriff, that they could not be liable to the commissioners of bankrupt by Watkins's becoming afterwards a bankrupt. 2. Admitting they are liable, whether this action will lie for the money, or only trover for the goods? And at the first argument it was strongly urged at the Bar, that the goods were bound to answer the defendant's debt by the delivery of the fieri fac' according to the new stat'. For this is in a manner an execution served and executed within the stat. of 21 Jac. c. 19. And for this were cited Dy. 67 b. Stringfellow's case, Cro. Cha. 148, Audley v. Halsey, and Baily and Bunning's case, 1 Levinz 173. And of [192] this opinion were at first Wyndham and Charlton Justices: but afterwards all the Judges, viz. Jones Ch. Just. Charlton and Levinz, and also Street, (made a Judge in Wyndham's place, who was then dead) held, that the goods were subject to the commissioners of bankrupt, and were well sold by them even since the new statute as well as before, for that statute makes no difference in this case. But whereas before that statute the goods were bound to the plaintiff in the action from the teste of the writ, now they are not bound till the delivery of the writ to the sheriff; but how are they (then) bound? Why only so as the bankrupt himself cannot dispose of them, but not so but that the commissioners may dispose of them for the benefit of creditors by the express words of the statute of 21 Jac. c. 19, no execution of them being served and executed; and the delivery of the writ to the sheriff is not any execution thereof, admitting that it is thereby served; for the words of the statute 21 Jac. are served and executed; and so this case differs from Stringfellow's case, and from Audley and Halseys case; for there the extents were executed, though the execution was not compleated till the delivery: and the case of Baily and Bunning was resolved only in excuse of the bailiff, that he should be excused for executing the writ, and not that the goods were bound by the delivery of the writ. And as to the second point all the justices, except Levinz, held clearly, that the commissioners could not assign this money; for they had to do only with the bankrupt's goods, and this money, for which the goods were sold, was never the bankrupt's money, nor could he bring any action for it. But Levinz said, he believed that such actions had been brought for the money, and, as he remembered, it had been so in Bateman's case about 14 or 15 years since in the King's Bench, where trover was brought as well for the money as the goods. But he thought the action for the money could hardly be maintained in reason; and he consented with the others, that judgment should be for the defendant in this case, and so it was.

(2) Per le delivery des biens—but brief must be intended.

[193] AYLET against WILLIAMS.

In debt or covenant for rent on a deed not indented, nil habuit pleaded. Ante 146. Co. Lit. 47 b. Com. Dig. Pleader. 2 V. 14. 2 W. 48. Reply. Habuit, not shewing what estate, is ill. Cro. Ja. 315. 2 Salk. 562. 2 Ventris 252, 271, 1 Wilson 314. 3 Wilson 72.

Covenant upon a deed not indented, and declares on a lease of certain land to the defendant, rendering rent, with a covenant to pay it, and assigns a breach in non-payment of the rent. The defendant by protestation, that he did not enter nor occupy the land as the plaintiff had supposed, for plea says, that the plaintiff nil habuit in tenementis tempore dimissionis. The plaintiff replies, that habuit bonum titulum unde potuit dimittere. The defendant demurs generally; and on the first argument the Court held the replication ill for not shewing what title he had, according to Gyll v. Glass, Cro. Ja. 312, and this, though the deed was not by indenture: but then it was said, that the case of Gylls and Glass was in debt for rent, but this is in covenant, and collateral to the reservation of the rent; whereas in Gyll and Glass's case if no lease had been, no reservation could be: but there may be a collateral covenant to pay (as here) though no lease is made: but by the Court, it is all one; for if there be no rent, there cannot be any covenant to pay it, for the one must depend on the other; and so it was remembered to be adjudged in Caponhurst's and Caponhurst's case, 1 Lev. 45. Mich. 13 Car. 2, B. R. But the plaintiff perceiving the opinion of the Court to be against him prayed leave to discontinue, so that he might not lose his rent by this mispleading in the replication, but might bring a new action for it; which was granted him on payment of costs.(1)

CANNON against SMALLWOOD.

Declaration in trespass vi et armis for taking plaintiff's cattle and impounding them until payment of a fine.

Cumberland, to wit.—Alan Smallwood, late of Graystock in the county aforesaid doctor in divinity, John Robson late of the same in the county aforesaid gent. Adam Bird late of Penruddock in the county aforesaid yeoman, and John Harrison late of Graystock in the county aforesaid yeoman, were attached to answer John Cannon of a plea wherefore with force and arms the cattle of the said John at Graystock lately found without any reasonable cause they took and impounded, and them there so impounded until the said John had made a fine of three pounds and seven shillings with the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, for the delivery of his cattle aforesaid, did detain and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said John Cannon, and against the peace of the lord the now King, &c. And whereupon the said John Cannon by Lancelot Simpson his attorney complains that the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, on the first day of April, in the 35th year of the reign of the lord the now King, with force and arms, &c. at Graystock aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, a certain mare of the said John Cannon of the price of five pounds, and a certain gelding of the said John of the price of three pounds there found without any reasonable cause took and impounded, and them so impounded, until the said John Cannon had made a certain fine of three pounds and seven shillings with the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, for the delivery of his cattle aforesaid, did detain and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of ten pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

(1) But nihil habuit in tenementis is no plea to an assumpsit for use and occupation. —1 Wilson 314.

And the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison by John Mounsey their attorney come and defend the force and injury when, &c. and as to the coming with force and arms, and also to the whole trespass aforesaid, except the taking and impounding of the cattle aforesaid, and the detaining of the said cattle in pound, until the said John Cannon had paid sixty-two shillings and two pence, parcel of the said three pounds and seven [195] shillings, above supposed to have been committed, they say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the country; and the said John Cannon doth the like, &c. And as to the taking and impounding of the cattle aforesaid, and the detaining of them in pound, until the said John Cannon paid the said sixty-two shillings and two pence parcel of the said three pounds and seven shillings above supposed to have been committed, they the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison say that the said John Cannon ought not to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, because they say that before the said time in which the trespass aforesaid is supposed to have been committed, to wit, upon the 25th day of October, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, the said Alan at the County Court of one Leonard Dykes, Esquire, then being Sheriff of Cumberland aforesaid, held at Turpenhow, in the county aforesaid, before William Winder and John Brownrigg free suitors of the said Court, levied a certain plaint against one Benjamin Grainger, gent. the said John Cannon and one Robert Edmundson for the taking of the cattle of the said Alan, and the unjust detention of the said cattle against gages and pledges, and there then were pledges of prosecuting his plaint aforesaid, to wit, John Doe and Richard Roe, whereupon at that County Court aforesaid, held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, on the said day and year at the prayer of the said Alan,(1) it was given in charge to all and singular the bailiffs of the said sheriff by the said Court, that they should summon or that one of them should summon the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson, that they should be at the next County Court of the county aforesaid, to be held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the 15th day of November then next ensuing, to answer the said Alan of the plea aforesaid, and that they should have there that precept, and the same day was given to the said Alan there, &c. whereupon the said Alan then and there put in his place John Featam his attorney against them the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson in the plea aforesaid; by virtue of which precept one Thomas Grisdale, then one of the bailiffs of the said sheriff at the next County Court aforesaid, in the county of Cumberland aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, upon the said 15th day of November, in the said year last aforesaid, [the said Alan then and there in his proper person appearing, and in the due form of law presenting himself against the said Benjamin Granger, [196] John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson] returned the precept aforesaid to him in the form aforesaid directed in all things served and executed; and thereupon at the County Court aforesaid the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson, according to the warning to them made, in their proper persons appeared, and then and there in the County Court aforesaid put in their places Thomas Jackson their attorney in the plea aforesaid; and thereupon then and there

the said Alan Smallwood at the said Court in the plea aforesaid against them the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson, by declaring did say that the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson, upon the 27th day of October, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at the parish of Graystock, in the county of Cumberland, within the jurisdiction of the Court aforesaid, in a certain place there called Halling, took the cattle of the said Alan, to wit, eight oxen, four cows, one steer, and five heifers of a black colour, of the price of fifty-five pounds, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges, whereupon he said that he was prejudiced, and had sustained damage to the value of thirty-nine shillings, and therefore he produced his suit, &c. and John Doe and Richard Roe were pledges for prosecuting, whereupon afterwards, to wit, at the said County Court of Leonard Dykes, Esquire, then being sheriff of the said county as aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon, and Robert Edmundson had leave to imparl to the declaration aforesaid, until the next County Court of the county aforesaid, to be held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the 6th day of December from thence next ensuing, and then there to answer, &c. the same day then was given to the said Alan there, &c. at which next County Court aforesaid, being the first County Court of one Edward Hatsell, Esquire, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, on the said 6th day of December came as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert by their attorney aforesaid, and the said Benjamin Granger, John Cannon and Robert Edmundson in the said Court before the suitors aforesaid, then and there by their attorney aforesaid, defended the force and injury when, &c. and as the bailiffs of the most noble Henry Earl of Arundel well acknowledged the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. because they said that [197] the said place in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid was supposed to have been committed at the said time in which, &c. was the soil and freehold of the said most noble Henry Earl of Arundel, and because the cattle aforesaid at the said time in which, &c. were in the said place in which, &c. eating the grass of the said Henry Earl of Arundel then growing there, and doing damage there, they the said Benjamin, John and Robert as the bailiffs of the said Henry Earl of Arundel well acknowledged the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. so doing damage there, &c. whereupon afterwards, to wit, at the said County Court aforesaid last mentioned, before the suitors aforesaid, the said Alan had leave to reply to the said plea until the next County Court of the county aforesaid, to be held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, upon the 3d day of January from that time next ensuing, and the same day then was given to the said Benjamin, John and Robert there; at which next County Court aforesaid, being the second County Court of the last mentioned sheriff of the county aforesaid, held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, on the said third day of January, came as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert by their attorneys aforesaid, and the said Alan in the said Court before the suitors aforesaid, then and there to the plea aforesaid, by replying said that the said Benjamin, John and Robert, as the bailiffs of the said Henry Earl of Arundel, ought not to acknowledge the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said plea in which, &c. to be just; because the said Alan then said that the said Henry Earl of Arundel and all those whose estate the said earl had in the close aforesaid in which, &c. the fences in and about the close aforesaid have repaired, and have been accustomed and ought to keep in repair, from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary; and the said Alan further said that the fences aforesaid in and about the close aforesaid, at the said time of the taking of the cattle aforesaid, were broken, ruinous, and in decay for default of repair, whereby the cattle aforesaid into the close aforesaid in which, &c. at the said time in which, &c. for default of repair of the fences aforesaid escaped, and entered and were in the said place in which, &c. eating the grass growing therein, and there doing damage, and this he was ready to verify; wherefore he prayed judgment and [198] his damages by occasion of the taking and unjust detaining of his cattle aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c. whereupon afterwards, to wit, at the said County Court aforesaid last mentioned, held before the suitors aforesaid, the said Benjamin, John and Robert had leave to rejoin to the said replication until the next County Court of the county aforesaid, to be held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the 31st day of January from that time next ensuing; and the same day was given to the said Alan there, &c. At which next County Court being the third County Court of the said Edward Hatsell, Esquire, then being sheriff of the county aforesaid, held at Turpenhow aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, on the said 31st day of January came as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert by their attornies aforesaid; and the said Benjamin, John and Robert in the said Court before the suitors aforesaid, then and there by rejoining said that the fences in and about the said close in which, &c. at the said time in which, &c. were well and sufficiently repaired, without this that the fences in and about the said close in which, &c. were broken, ruinous, and in decay for default of repair, in the manner and form as the said Alan above by replying had alledged, and of this they put themselves upon the country, and the said Alan did the like; therefore at the prayer of the said Alan (1) it was given in charge by the said Court there to the said Adam Bird, then one of the bailiffs of the said Edward Hatsell, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, that he should cause to come there, to wit, at the next County Court, &c. to be held there, to wit, at Turpenhow aforesaid, upon the 28th day of February then next ensuing, twelve good and lawful men of the county aforesaid, by whom the truth of the matter might be the better known, and who neither to the said Alan, nor to the said Benjamin, John or Robert had any affinity, to make a certain jury of the country between the parties aforesaid of the plea aforesaid, because as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert, between whom the contention was, had put themselves upon that jury; and that he should have then there at the said next Court the names of the jury aforesaid and that precept, the same day was given to the parties aforesaid there by the said Court, &c. At which next County Court aforesaid, being the fourth County Court of the said Edward Hatsell, Esquire, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, [199] held at Turpenhow aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, the Judges of the said Court, upon the said 28th day of January, in the 35th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, came as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert by their attornies aforesaid. And the said Adam Bird, then bailiff of the said sheriff of the county aforesaid, did not return the precept to him thereupon directed, nor did any thing thereupon, therefore at the prayer of the said Alan (1) it was given in charge as before by the said Court to the said Adam Bird, then one of the bailiffs of the said Edward Hatsell, then being sheriff of the county aforesaid, that he should cause to come at the next County Court of the said Edward Hatsell, Esquire, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, to be held there, to wit, at Turpenhow aforesaid, upon the 28th day of March then next ensuing, twelve good and lawful men of the county aforesaid, by whom the truth of the matter might be the better known, and who neither to the said Alan, nor to the said Benjamin, John or Robert had any affinity, to make a certain jury of the country between the parties aforesaid of the plea aforesaid, because as well the said Alan as the said Benjamin, John and Robert, between whom, &c. and that he should have there at the said next Court the names, &c. and that precept. At which next County Court aforesaid, being the fifth County Court of the said Edward Hatsell, then being sheriff of the county aforesaid, held at Turpenhow aforesaid, before the suitors aforesaid, the Judges of the said Court, upon the 28th day of March, in the 35th year aforesaid, came as well the said Alan, as the said Benjamin, John and Robert, by their attorneys aforesaid, and the said Adam Bird, then bailiff of the said Edward Hatsell, then sheriff of the county aforesaid, at the said Court there returned the precept aforesaid to him thereupon directed in all things served and executed, together with the names of twenty-four good and lawful men of the county aforesaid, named in a certain panel to the said precept annexed, and certain of them, to wit, Thomas Thompson, John Jack, John Parker, Thomas Wilkinson, William Jack, John [200] Birkett, William Birkett, William Bank, John Jack, Leonard Fell, William Haskengh, and Thomas Strickett, being called in like manner came, who to speak the truth upon the premises aforesaid being elected, tried and sworn, said upon their oath that the said fences in and about the close aforesaid, in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid was supposed to be committed at the said time in which, &c. were broken, ruinous and in decay for want of repair, in the manner and form as the said Alan above by replying hath alledged, and they assessed the damages of the said Alan by occasion of the premises aforesaid, above his expences and costs by him about his suit in that behalf laid out,(1) and for those expences and costs to thirty-nine shillings. Therefore it was considered by the said Court, that the said Alan should recover against the said Benjamin, John and Robert his damages to twenty-three shillings and two pence by the jury aforesaid in the form aforesaid assessed; and (2) also to the said Alan at his request for his expences and costs aforesaid by the Court there of increase adjudged, which damages in the whole did amount to sixty two shillings and two pence, and that the said Benjamin, John and Robert should be in mercy, &c. upon which judgment afterwards and before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the 28th day of March, in the 35th year aforesaid, at Graystock aforesaid, at the prosecution of the said Alan, a certain precept in the nature of the writ of the lord the King of levari facias issued out of the said Court, sealed under the seal of the office of the said Edward Hatsell, sheriff of the county aforesaid, and to the said Adam Bird his bailiff of and within the county aforesaid directed, by which precept the said sheriff to the said Adam his bailiff gave in charge, that without delay he should cause to be levied of the proper goods and chattels of the said Benjamin, John and Robert sixty-two shillings and two pence, which were adjudged for the damages and costs which the said Alan Smallwood in the said action had recovered against them in the county aforesaid, which precept of levari facias in the form aforesaid made, afterwards and before the next County Court of the county aforesaid, to wit, upon the last day of March, in the 35th year aforesaid, at Graystock [201] aforesaid, on the behalf of the said Alan to the said Adam Bird then being one of the bailiffs of the said sheriff was delivered in the form of law to be executed, by virtue of which precept the said Adam as and being the bailiff of the said sheriff as aforesaid, and the said John Robson and John Harrison as the servants of the said Adam, and in his aid and by the direction of the said Alan, afterwards, to wit, at the said time in which, &c. to levy the damages aforesaid the cattle of the said John Cannon aforesaid took and impounded, and them there so impounded did detain until the said John Cannon the said sixty-two shillings and two pence in the form aforesaid recovered, to the said Adam the bailiff of the said Edward Hatsell, sheriff of the county aforesaid, for the use of the said Alan paid in satisfaction of the damages aforesaid, to have delivery of his cattle aforesaid, which sixty-two shillings and two pence the said John (3) Cannon afterwards and before the said next County Court aforesaid, to wit, upon the said first day of April, in the 35th year aforesaid, at Graystock aforesaid, paid to the said Alan for and in satisfaction of his damages aforesaid, which taking and impounding and detaining in pound of the cattle aforesaid, until the said John Cannon paid the said sixty-two shillings and two pence, are the same taking and impounding and detaining in pound of the cattle aforesaid until, &c. whereof the said John Cannon above against them complains, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray judgment if the said John Cannon ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said John Cannon as to the said plea of the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, as to the taking and impounding of the cattle aforesaid, and detaining them in pound, until the said John Cannon paid sixty-two shillings and two pence, the said John saith that he by any thing before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them, because he saith that the said plea by the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, is not sufficient in law to preclude the said John Cannon from having his action aforesaid thereupon [202] against the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison; to which the said John hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, the said John Cannon prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the trespass aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

(3) Adam Bird?

And the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison, because that they above by pleading have alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said John Cannon from having his action aforesaid as to the said taking and impounding of the cattle aforesaid, and the detaining them in pound until the said John Cannon paid the said sixty-two shillings and two pence, which they are ready to verify, which matter the said John Cannon doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether hath refused to admit the verification thereof, they the said Alan Smallwood, John Robson, Adam Bird, and John Harrison as before pray judgment, and that the said John Cannon may be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c. And because the justices will advise themselves of and upon the premises whereof the parties aforesaid above have put themselves upon the judgment of the Court, before they give their judgment thereupon, day is given to the parties aforesaid here until from the day of the Holy Trinity in three weeks to hear their judgment thereupon, because that the said justices here thereupon not as yet, &c. And as to the trial of the issue aforesaid between the parties aforesaid by the country to be tried, the sheriff is commanded that he cause to come here at the said term twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. because as well, &c.

After freehold pleaded in the County-Court they cannot proceed.
6 Mod. 117, 118, 119.

Trespass for taking and impounding his beasts until he paid 3l. 7s. &c. The defendant pleads as to all except the taking and impounding of the beasts until he paid 3l. 2s. and 2d. Not guilty; and as to that he pleads a suit in the County-Court brought by A. S. against the now plaintiff; whereto he (being then defendant) pleaded the freehold of the Earl of Arundel, and justified the taking as doing damage in the earl's freehold, whereto the then plaintiff pleads in bar of the conusance, that the earl ought to make the fences, and that for default of reparation the beasts escaped, &c. And thereupon issue was taken, that the fences were in good repair. The jury found they were out of repair, and assess damages besides costs and charges (but did not say what sum for damages) and for costs and charges 39*s*. Et ideo consideratum fuit, that the plaintiff should recover 1l. 3s. 2d. damages per jurator' in forma præd' assess. necnon pro misis & custagiis (but say not what sum) and yet conclude quæ in toto attingunt ad 3*l*. 2*s*. 2*d*. whereupon there issued out of the same Court a precept in nature of a fieri facias under the seal of the sheriff, whereby he commanded the defendant, being the bailiff, that he should cause the said 3l. 2s. 2d. to be levied: who by virtue of the said precept took the beasts and impounded them until the now plaintiff paid him the said 3l. 2s. 2d. which he paid to the recoverer; upon which plea the now plaintiff here demurred: and by Serj. Pemberton at the Bar divers exceptions were taken to the plea. 1. For that the verdict finds damages, but it does not appear to what sum, and yet concludes quæ in toto attingunt, &c. 2. The precept is in nature of a fieri fac', and yet the precept is quod levari faceret. 3. That the precept ought not to have been by the sheriff but by the suitors who are the Judges; but all those exceptions were overruled: for as to the two first they do not prove the judgment and execution void, but only voidable by a writ of false judgment; and in the mean time they are a good excuse to the bailiff, and pleadable by him; and as to the third, it is the constant practice for the sheriff, as minister of the Court, to award the precept. 4. It was objected, that the bailiff ought not to have paid the money to the plaintiff, but to have returned it to the Court; and as to this exception the Court did not well agree, for the precept being ita quod habeas denar' ill' ad reddend' to the plaintiff, some said, that so are the writs in this Court, and yet the sheriff, when he has levied it, pays it to the plaintiff; and if he does not do so, this Court often compels him thereto, upon motion. But on the other side it was said, that this was by permission of the Court, and not by force of the law; and that this Court often orders the sheriff to bring the money levied into Court, and not to permit the plaintiff to have it, of which power the Court would be deprived by this means; and Cro. Cha. 446. Girling's case, the sheriff could not plead execution of his writ without pleading the return thereof; and so are 21 H. 7, 22, and 2 Roll. 563, nu. 11, 12, 13. 5. It was objected, that the judgment was void, and coram non Judice, because after freehold pleaded the County-Court has no jurisdiction; for a freehold cannot be tried without writ. To which it was answered, that the freehold was not tried below, but arose on a collateral point; viz. whether the fences were in repair, &c. But per Cur' by this trial a charge upon the freehold is brought in question; and they have no power after freehold pleaded to proceed in the cause neither directly, nor collaterally: and therefore the proceedings here after that was pleaded were coram non Judice, and void: and upon this exception judgment was given for the plaintiff.

AYLESBURY against HARVEY.

In replevin avow and have a return, or justify and have no return. Com. Dig. Pleader. 3 K. 12. 4 Term Rep. 643.

Replevin brought of a silver-cup. The defendant justifies by a condemnation before the justices of peace on the Statute of Excise for not entering of strong-waters, and a warrant thereupon to levy 20s. fine set upon them. Whereupon the defendant took the cup, and detained it, until the 20s. was paid to redeem it. The plaintiff replies, that J. S. made him executor in 1666, and this cup he had, and yet has, as executor. The defendant demurs: and [205] now Pemberton for the plaintiff took exception to the plea and said, that the defendant in this replevin ought to have avowed, and not to have justified the caption. But the Court said he might do one or the other at his election; and the difference is only, if he justifies he cannot have a return, as he shall if he avows, which need not be in this case, because he has the cup again, Hill. 31 H. 6, pl. 1. Trin. 15 E. 4, pl. 8. Second exception, for that he pleaded the condemnation prout patet per recordum, whereas the justices are not in this case a Court of Record. Sed non allocat'. For 1. By the statute the justices are made judges of the matter. 2. By the Acts they may fine and imprison. It enacts, that no certiorari shall issue to remove their proceedings; and these are marks of a Court of Record, and the certiorari here is certiorari volentes de recordo coram vobis, &c. 4th exception, That the warrant was not pleaded with a profert hic in Cur'. But by the Court; 1. The statute does not require that the warrant be under hand and seal, but only in writing, and no writing is to be so pleaded, except it be a deed (sed quære;) also the sheriff's officers never plead their warrants with a hic in Cur' prolat', Rast. Entr. 341 b. 342 a. 606 a. And it was said, the reason was because of things executed, or estates determined the deed need not be shewn, as 6th Co. 30, in the end of Bellamy's case. Wherefore judgment was given for the defendant. Note, The Court did not regard the plea, that he had it as executor so long ago, but said they would intend the property altered notwithstanding the adhuc habet; for it would be very dangerous for officers, if such pleading should be allowed.

BARRET against TROTMAN.

General non-tenure not pleadable in a sci. fac' contra if special. Ante 55. 6 Mod. 266. 4 Bac. Ab. 424.

In a scire facias on a judgment in debt, J. S. being returned tertenant . . . Hunt his attorney, and pleads non-tenure. The plaintiff demurs generally, and had judgment; because a general non-tenure is no plea in this action, though a special non-tenure is, as, that he has only a term of years; also here is no Christian name for the attorney.

[206] THE KING against PIGET.

In a quare impedit by the King for simony, the patron need not be made a defendant. Ante 16, 83, 115. Post, 337. 7 Co. 106. Noy. 151. 2 Roll. Rep. 239. Cro. Ja. 651.

A quare impedit by the King against the incumbent, and makes title to the King upon a simoniacal contract by Francis late Earl of Shrewsbury, and one Stacy. The defendant pleads, that he is parson imparsonee by the presentment of Charles the now Earl of Shrewsbury, and demands judgment of the writ, for that the patron is not made a party therein. The plaintiff demurred, and judgment was given for him without argument, because the title to the patronage is not in question, but only the presentment hac vice, as was adjudged formerly in this Court between the King and the Archbishop of York, ante 10, which is entered Pasch. 32 Car. 2, Rot. 659, according to the case of the quare impedit, in Co. 7, fol. 106.

EVELIN against DAVIES.

Amerciament in the leet, not showing what sum. Amerciaments, by whom affeered.

Debt for amerciament in a leet, and shews, that the defendant was presented and amerced, which said amerciament was affeered by all the jurors to 40*s*. The defendant demurred generally: and per Cur', the declaration is not good; 1. Because it is not shewn to what sum the amerciament was made, and yet some precedents are so, as Rast. Entr. 553, &c. 2. The afferement ought to be by officers to be elected by the steward, and not by the jury; and they take a special oath to that purpose, as Hob. 122, Wilson against Hardingham is in both points; whereupon judgment was given for the defendant.

[207] HILARY TERM, IN THE THIRTY-SIXTH AND THIRTY-SEVENTH YEARS OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II. AND IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN OF JAMES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

What matters are discontinued, and what not, by the King's demise.

"Memorandum, that all the former part of this term Jones Chief-Justice was sick, and came not to Court, during which time little was done in Court. And towards the latter end of the term our most Gracious Sovereign King Charles the Second departed this life about twelve at noon: but news coming of his death approaching at seven of the clock that morning, some of the Judges of each Court hasted to Westminster to be sitting in Court to continue the term, but did little but hear some few motions, and so rose as soon as the King was dead, and the next morning all their commissions were renewed, and sealed all together at the Lord Chancellor's; but to preserve their seniority, each was sworn in the same order of seniority and priority as they stood before: and all judicial proceedings went on, except indictments and informations, and in them according to the resolution of the case of discontinuance of process by the King's death upon the statute of Ed. 6, 7 Co. 114. Such as had pleaded, and were ready for trial, pleaded de novo; and their trials were put off to the next term. But in case of actions of debt, qui tam, &c. upon penal statutes, a question being moved at the table in Serjeants-Inn in Fleet-Street, whether all the proceedings were fallen, except the informations or declarations, as in the other case? Most of the Judges were of opinion that they were not, because that is an action between party and party within the words of the statute of E. 6, and so resolved Cro. Cha. 10, in Farrington's case; and so I heard was the opinion of the Chief-Justice of the King's Bench, and the rest of the Judges of that Court, and did direct it should be so done there. But upon this occasion little of moment was done in the Common Pleas this term."

[208] LORD STURTON AND OTHERS against PIERPOINT.

Three plaintiffs; one of them is excommunicated, how to plead it.
Com. Dig. Abatement, E. 7.

Debt for rent by the plaintiffs, executors of the Lord Petre. Defendant pleads in abatement by pet' judicium de breve, &c. for that one of the plaintiffs is a popish recusant convict, and therefore quasi excommunicat' by the stat. 3 Jac. 1. To which the plaintiffs demurred. And now it was argued by Pemberton, that this disability in one of the plaintiffs is pleadable against all of them jointly, although they are executors, because none ought to keep company with an excommunicated person, Co. Lit. 134 a. But for the plaintiffs it was urged and resolved by the Court, that this ought not to have been pleaded in abatement by petit judicium de breve, because the writ is not abated thereby, but only suspended, and the pleading ought to be suspenderi non debet, as are Hill. 32, 33 Car. 2, Rot. 495. Mich. 33 Car. 2, Rot. 440, and Pasch. 37 Car. 2, Rot. 703, all of them in this Court.

[209] EASTER TERM, IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN OF JAMES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

BEDINGFIELD against ONSLOW.

Case by him in reversion, and trespass by tenant in possession for the same trespass. Post, 359, 360. 1 Mallory 195. 1 Salk. 19.

Case brought and declares, that he was seised in fee of a close, and the defendant possessed of another close next adjoining, between which closes ran a rivulet, and that the defendant stopped the rivulet, whereby he surrounded and drowned the plaintiff's close, so that the timber-trees (of the plaintiff's) viz. an hundred timber-trees of oak, and an hundred of ash became putrified, rotten, and perished. The defendant pleads, that one Studman long before the said time when, &c. and at the time when &c. was possessed of the said close by virtue of a lease to him thereof made by the plaintiff's father, and that he had paid to Studman 20s. which he had accepted in satisfaction of the said trespass. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs: and after arguments at the Bar, and on consideration of the books of 19 H. 6, 12. 12 H. 6, 4. 2 Roll. Abr. 551. Cro. Eliz. 55, Love against Piggot, it was resolved by Charlton, Levinz and Street, who only were in Court, that this was no plea; for the plaintiff in respect of the prejudice done to the reversion, may maintain an action; and also Studman in respect of the possession, and so another may in respect of the shade, shelter, and fruit of the trees, for the same trespass; and the satisfaction given to one is no bar to the other. But trespass during the plaintiff's term could not be had, it being founded merely on the possession.

Case for a vexatious suit without reasonable cause. 1 Salk. 14, 15. 1 Lev. 275. 1 Mod. 4. Co. Lit. 161 a. note 4.

Case for that the defendant wickedly intending and maliciously contriving ipsum minus rite prægravare, & tam per corporis imprisonament' quam alias labores & expensas, prætextu justitiæ & legis processus defatigare opprimere & depauperare & multipliciter prægravare & damnificare ex malitia sua prœhabit' tali die & loco, virtute cujusdam brevis de quo minus e Cur' Scaccar' sine aliqua rationabili causa arrestari & imprisonari subdole fraudulenter & injuste causavit, & in prisona detineri procuravit, until he gave a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment for 20l. in the King's Bench, Common-Pleas, or Exchequer, whereby he had and suffered damages to 40l. To this the defendant demurred generally; and now it was argued for the defendant, that no action lies for suing in a proper Court; for a man may mistake his own case, and think he has a good cause of action where it proves otherwise; and here the declaration does not say, that he knowing he had no cause of action sued, as it was in Freeman against Waterer, Hobart's Reports 267; and divers authorities were cited against the action, as Cro. Eliz. 794, an action lies not for suing in a proper Court, though he had no cause of action; and Cro. Eliz. 836, because it would deter the subjects from prosecuting their suits; and so is 2 R. 3, 9 b. by all the Judges of England; and 43 E. 3, Finchden's opinion, and Co. Lit. 161 g. to sue the King's writs is not actionable, be it by wrong or right; and the law has given a remedy against vexatious actions, viz. that the plaintiff being nonsuit or barred shall pay costs; and F. N. B. 43 G. and Co. Lit. ubi supra, this action lies not in any case, except in a replevin of a rent-service, and there because it amounts to a disseisin. But for the plaintiff it was argued, that the action lies as it is laid here; for it is said, the action was brought ex malitia prœhabita, & sine aliqua causa rationabili ipsum damnifi- care, which implies the knowing he had no cause of action; and this is confessed by the demurrer; and Styl. 379, and 451, was cited, that the opinion of Rolle was, that such [211] actions lie. And Mich. 21 Car. 2, B. R. Dowse against Swayne, case for that the plaintiff, not having cause of action above 40l. sued him, and caused him to be arrested and imprisoned for 500l. and Stribler against Jones and Waters in the same term and Court. Case for arresting him for 500l. where he had no cause of action, vel saltem non tantam causam actionis; and both were said to be laid falsly and maliciously, and judgment for the plaintiff. But note, both those judgments were upon verdicts. And here Charlton held totis viribus, that the action did not lie because the law had provided another remedy, viz. costs. But Jones Chief-Justice and Just. Street held, that the action lay for the unjust, causeless, and malicious vexation premeditated, all which are confessed by the demurrer. Levinz doubted, because it is not expressly said, knowing he had no cause of action; but he inclined, that the action lay, because the defendant had compelled the now plaintiff to give him a judgment for 20l. whereby he is deprived of his remedy by costs, &c. But it was adjourned, and so were two other causes the same term; the one between Slaiden and Haigh, and the other between Britnell and Haigh.

WRIGHTON against BROWNE.

When acts done in peculiars are void, or not.

Ejectment on the issue not guilty was tried at Bar, and a special verdict found, that the Rectory of Hemsworth in the county of York had been time out of mind, &c. parcel of the Prebend of Laughton in the Morn in the said county of York, and not within the diocese and province of York, but within the peculiar jurisdiction of the Prebend of Laughton in the Morn, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of York; and that the dean and chapter always time out of mind &c. have used to institute into the same church, it being a church with cure of souls; and that the said church being void, the Duke of Norfolk, as patron, in 1679 presented the defendant, who was instituted and inducted by the Archbishop of York, and read the articles, &c. and that the church so continued 18 months without another institution, and that afterwards the King presented the lessor of the plaintiff for lapse, who was instituted by the dean and chapter, and if the institution, &c. [212] by the archbishop was good, or not? was the sole question. And it was argued for the plaintiff, that it being a peculiar the archbishop had nothing to do therein, but his acts are meer nullities and void; and this is not like the case of administrations granted of goods in another's diocese, or where there are not bona notabilia, which are only voidable; and they relied much on the books 11 H. 4, 9, where are some such opinions; and 13 Co. 4, Porter against Rochester, where it is said, that all the power exercised by the archbishop in such cases was by his legantine power derived from the Pope; and Roll. Abr. tit. Presentm. 357, cited as a case in point, and urged, that there are many peculiars in the hands of lay-men, where neither the archbishop or bishop have any thing to do. But upon consideration of all the books and arguments, the whole Court unanimously agreed, that judgment should be given for the defendant. And Jones Chief-Just. delivered it in the name of all the others; and their reason was, that in all those cases of the clergy the archbishop had two concurrent jurisdictions, the one Ordinary with the bishop in his diocese, the other super-intendent throughout his province of things ecclesiastical, to correct, and also to supply the defects of the Ordinary; and therefore his acts are not void, because he has jurisdiction throughout the province; and it shall be intended to be done in default of the Ordinary, till the contrary appear upon examination; and therefore they are only voidable, but till avoided are good: and they likened it to the case of a sheriff who executes a writ within a franchise which is not void, because within the county, and derived out of it: and it is not like the case of peculiars exempted ab omni jurisdictione, as many are in the hands of lay persons, and where the Ordinary has no power of visitation, which cannot be intended in this case, viz. that a prebend in a cathedral church shall be exempted from the Ordinary's visitation; and for authority herein they relied on Fitzh. Quare Imped. 162, and Hob. 15, Sir Timothy Hutton's case.

[213] Trinity Term, in the First Year of the Reign of James II. In the Common Pleas.

Gilmore against Harris.

A. tenant for life, remainder to his first and other sons, &c. Remainder to B. and the heirs male of his body, with power to A. to revoke the uses to B. A. by deed omitting the words of his body revokes the uses to B. and appoints the like uses to him, also omitting the words of his body, subject to a charge, &c. This is a good revocation, and the new estate is also an estate tail.

Ejectment on issue not guilty, tried at Bar, and a special verdict. The case was; Edward Monford seised in fee, did by lease and release 27 and 28 Febr. 1675, convey the tenements in question to the use of himself for life, the remainder to trustees to preserve the contingent remainders, the remainder to his first and other sons and the heirs males of their bodies successively, the remainder to Simon Monford and the heirs males of his body, the remainder to the heirs males of the body of Sir Ed. Monford father of the said Ed. the remainder to the right heirs of Edward, with power for Edward by deed ensealed, &c. to revoke the uses limited to Simon and the heirs males of his body, and to limit new uses. And afterwards Edward Monford, March 2, eodem anno, reciting the deed of 28 Febr. and that he thereby had power to revoke all the uses limited to Simon Monford and his heirs males, omitting the words (of his body) he thereby revoked all the uses limited to Simon and his heirs males, omitting the words (of his body, &c.) again, and appoints the said estate in the said deed named to be to the said Simon Monford and his heirs males: provided that the said Simon pay to the wife of Edward 400*l.* and 600*l.* to his own executors within six months after his death. Edward dies without issue male, leaving Elizabeth [214] Harris the defendant's wife, his daughter and heir. Simon dies without issue, leaving Edward Monford, lessor of the plaintiff his brother and heir. And it was argued at the Bar for the plaintiff, that the revocation was good, notwithstanding the omission of the words of his body; for the recital of the deed is right in the date and names of the parties, and then the words heirs males ought to be intended such heirs males as are expressed in the deed, viz. heirs males of his body. But 2dly, They argued that the new limitation to him and his heirs males is a fee-simple. For 1. A limitation to a man and his heirs males in deeds is always a fee-simple, though it is otherwise in wills. 2. The deed of revocation being made within three days after the deed of settlement, it cannot be intended that he revoked the first estate to give himself the same estate by the new limitation, which he had by the first settlement. 3. The new limitation is subject to the payment of 1000*l.* which cannot be intended to arise out of an estate-tail. But it was adjudged by the whole Court for the defendant, be the revocation good, or not: for if it be good (as they held it was for the reasons alledged by the plaintiff) then the same words in the new limitation shall have the same construction which they had in the recital, and shall create a new estate-tail, and an estate-tail may in its creation be charged with the payment of money; for it is the will of the donor. Also the words in the new limitation are, the said estate in the said deed mentioned shall be to the use, &c. which said estate was an estate-tail: also he had no power to revoke more than an estate-tail, and out of the estate he cannot create a fee. And the whole intent appears in every particular to be to revoke the estate-tail, which was not subject to any charge; and to create a new estate-tail, subject to a charge of 1000*l.* and if the first estate be not revoked by reason of the omission of the words (of his body) in the recital, then the first estate is unrevoked, and the estate of Simon determined, and so the remainder in fee is vested in the defendant, the right heir of Edward; and therefore take this case either way, judgment ought to be given for the defendant; and so it was. (Sed quære legem. W. B.)

[215] THOMASON AND OTHERS against WOODS, ADMINISTRATOR.

Declaration in debt upon a writing obligatory. Joinder.

Norfolk, to wit.—Robert Woods, late of Kirby Beadon in the county aforesaid, yeoman, administrator of the goods and chattels which were Henry Wood's late of Kirby Beadon, the county of Norfolk aforesaid, husbandman, who died intestate, &c. was summoned to answer George Thomason, clerk, and William Moore of a plea that he render to them one hundred and sixty pounds which he unjustly detains from them, &c. And whereupon the said George and William, by Richard Starling their attorney say, that the said Henry in his life-time, to wit, upon the 31st day of May, in the year of our Lord 1677, at Catton by his certain writing obligatory, granted himself to be holden to the said George and William in the said one hundred and sixty pounds to be paid to the said George and William, when thereto he should be requested; nevertheless the said Henry, in his life-time, and the said Robert after the death of the said Henry, from the time of his death [to whom administration of all the goods and chattels which were the said Henry's at the time of his death; after the death of the said Henry at Catton aforesaid was committed]. Although often times requested, the said one hundred and sixty pounds to the said George and William, or to either of them have not yet paid, but the same to them to pay have refused, and the said Robert as yet doth refuse to pay the same to them: whereupon they say that they are prejudiced, and have sustained damage to the value of twenty pounds, and therefore they produce their suit, &c. And they produce here in Court the writing aforesaid, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date of which is the day and year aforesaid, &c.

And the said Robert by Cuthbert Brereton his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and prays oyer of the writing aforesaid, and it is read to him, &c. also he prays oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it is read to him in these words: the condition of this obligation is such; that whereas a marriage, by God's permission, is shortly intended to be had, and solemnized between the above bound Henry Woods, and Christian Beare of Towse aforesaid, single woman; now in [216] case the said marriage shall take effect, and that she the said Christian shall happen to survive and outlive the said Henry, then if the said Henry do and shall at the time of his death, leave and deliver unto or for the said Christian or her assigns in ready money, goods, chattels, wares or merchandizes, the full sum or value of eighty pounds of lawful English money, which she the said Christian, her executors, administrators or assigns, shall, and lawfully may from thenceforth peaceably and quietly have, hold and enjoy to the sole and proper use and behoof of her the said Christian, her executors, administrators and assigns for ever, without let, suit or molestation of any person or persons whatsoever; and in case the said Christian shall happen to depart this life before the said Henry, then if the said Henry in the life-time of the said Christian, do and shall permit and suffer her the said Christian at any time before her death, by writing, or by word of mouth, testified by two credible witnesses, to give away or dispose the sum of ten pounds of like money to such person or persons as she shall please; and if the said Henry, his executors, administrators or assigns, in case he outlive the said Christian, do and shall well and truly pay the said ten pounds to such person and persons as the said Christian shall as aforesaid give and dispose the same without fraud or covin, that then this present obligation to be void, otherwise to be in full force, effect and virtue; which being read and heard the said Robert saith that the said George and William ought not to have their action aforesaid against him; because he saith that the marriage between the said Henry Woods in his life-time and the said Christian Beare, after the making of the writing, aforesaid, to wit, upon the 6th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1677 aforesaid, at Catton aforesaid was had and solemnized, and that the said Henry after the marriage aforesaid, in the form aforesaid had, to wit, upon the 28th day of August, in the year of our Lord 1679, at Catton aforesaid, made his last will and testament in writing, and did make and ordain the said Christian his wife, his sole executrix of his testament aforesaid, and by his said last will did will and declare, that the said Christian his wife should pay and satisfy herself the said eighty pounds by the condition of the writing aforesaid, to be left and delivered to her as aforesaid; and the said Henry after the making of the writing aforesaid, to wit, upon the 10th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1681, at [217] Catton aforesaid, died possessed of sundry goods and chattels amounting to the sum of one hundred pounds and upwards, and the said Christian survived him, and after the death of the said Henry became possessed of the goods and chattels aforesaid, as executrix of the testament aforesaid, of the said Henry, to wit, at Catton aforesaid; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore he prays judgment if the said George and William ought to have their action aforesaid against him, &c. &c.

And the said George and William say that the said plea of the said Robert, above in bar pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude the said George and William from having their action aforesaid against the said Robert, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer in any manner; and this they are ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient answer of the said Robert in this behalf, the said George and William pray judgment and their debt aforesaid, together with their damages by occasion of the detention of the said debt to be adjudged to them, &c.

And the said Robert, because that he in his plea aforesaid, above hath alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said George and William from having their action aforesaid against the said Robert, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said George and William do not deny, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment, and that the said George and William may be precluded from having their action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c. and because the justices, &c.

[218] THOMASON against WOODS, ADMINISTRATOR OF WOODS.

Obligation to leave his wife 80l. Plea that he made her executrix, and left 100l. assets, and appointed her to pay herself is ill, not saying she administered or accepted thereof.

Debt on obligation, with condition, that the husband should leave his wife 80l. at his death, so that she might peaceably enjoy it to her own use. The defendant pleads that the husband made his wife executrix and left goods and chattels to the value of 100l. and by his will devised, she should pay herself. The plaintiff demurred and had judgment. For notwithstanding this devise the husband may have left debts due by him on securities of a higher nature, as judgments, statutes, &c. so that she might not be able to pay herself; and perhaps the husband's estate was so litigious, that it is best for the wife to renounce the executorship, and to permit the administration to be granted to another, and to bring debt on the obligation against such administrator, as she has here done.

DINGHURST against BATT AND OTHERS.

Formedon omits the name of one in whom a title appears, though he were never seised, is well. 8 Coke 88 b. Com. Dig. Abatement, H. 27.

A formedon in remainder was brought of lands which Anthony Abarrow gave to James Crane, to the use of Anthony Abarrow for his life, remainder to Dorothy the wife of the said Anthony, and to the heirs of the body of Dorothy by Anthony begotten; so that after the death of the said Anthony and Dorothy, and Alice their daughter, the lands ought to remain to Anthony Dinghurst the plaintiff (as son and heir of the said Alice) by form of the gift, &c. and so declares upon the gift; by virtue whereof Anthony Abarrow was seized for life, remainder to Dorothy and the heirs of her body by the said Anthony begotten; & quod post mortem prædict' Anthon' & Dorotheæ & Aliciæ eidem Anthonio Dinghurst petenti remanere debet. The tenant specially imparls with salvis sibi omnibus, &c. and after demands oyer of the original, and then pleads in abatement, that the said Alice had issue Lodowick her son and heir, who survived the said Dorothy and Alice, & hoc &c. from [219] whence, and for that the said Lodowick is not named in the writ, he demanded judgment of the writ. The demandant demurred generally; and now it was argued this term by Pemberton for the tenant, that the omission of any person who has any right shall vitiate the writ, though he was never seised, and cited 8 Co. 175, at the end of Buckmere's case, Hob. 51, 51. Bro. Omission 8, and to that opinion the Court inclined: but upon the importunity of George Strode, who cited Dyer 216. 44 E. 3, &c. to prove, that such persons as were never seized, need not be named, it was adjourned; and so it depended until Mich. 1 Jac. 2. And then it was argued again, and for the demandant were further cited 5 E. 3, 35, and 7 E. 3, 47, 48, as a case in point, viz. a formedon in remainder on a gift to R. and K. with remainder to F. in fee, and says that after the death of R. and K. (omitting F.) the said F. the demandant, as son and heir of F. so omitted, ought to have the lands, &c. and this was ruled to be good; for there cannot be an heir of F. except F. be dead; and in Hob. 51, those cases in E. 3 are held for good law; and in the Register 243 a. those cases of E. 3 are also said to be ruled good; and it is not there said, that they were not good, but only that the form in the register was better. And now it was further argued by Maynard for the demandant, that a view had been had in this cause, and that after a view no plea can be in abatement except such as arises upon the view. Hengham Mag. 50, 51. 41 E. 3, 29, 33. But in 8 E. 3, 55, the writ abated after the view for a matter apparent in the writ itself; and in 46 C. 3. A writ of cosenage abated after the view, because upon the writ itself it appeared, that no writ of cosenage but a writ of besayel lay in that case; yet in 40 E. 3, 35, 36, it is held, that after a view nothing can be pleaded in abatement, except what shall arise upon the view; but then it was moved for the tenant that this matter ought to be pleaded, and that though Maynard had brought the writ of view into the Court, and the return thereupon had in the case, yet that not appearing upon the same record, the Court ought to have no regard thereto; but now the greater part of the Judges inclined, that notwithstanding the said exceptions the writ was good, according to the books of 5 and 7 E. 3, supra. And if it were not, yet it is affirmed by the view, whereof the Court may take notice, the writ being returned hither, and made a record of this Court, though it be not entered on the same roll; and this [220] they may do without any plea pleaded; and judgment was to answer over, except cause shewn within a week.

Bernes and his Wife against Rich.

In dower. Counterplea of view, that the husband aliened to the tenant, but does not say feoffavit, &c. Ante 169. 2 Lev. 117.

Dower, unde nihil habet. The tenant demands the view. The demandant counterpleads, for that her husband alienated the tenements aforesaid to the tenant, & hoc, &c. The demandant demurred generally. And now it was argued by Pemberton, that the counterplea was not good, for she ought to have pleaded feoffavit; for by alienavit it does not appear what estate he aliened, and even a lease for years is an alienation. But the Court on the contrary held, that an alienation implies his whole estate; and the stat. Edw. 2, 48, ousts the tenant from the view of lands which the husband aliened to the tenant, or any of his ancestors; so that the plea here is in the very words of the statute, and good: and judgment was, quod respondeat ouster.

The King against Sir Oliver Butler in the House of Lords.

Scire fac. to repeal a patent, when it lies, or not. 2 Keble 465. 2 Saunders 174.

Error of a judgment in a scire facias in the Petty-Bag Office in Chancery, where by the scire fac' it was shewn, that the City of Rochester is an ancient city, and incorporated time out of mind by the name of citizens of Rochester, until 1 E. 4, when they were incorporated by the name of the mayor and citizens; and that the citizens till 1 E. 4, and from thence the mayor and citizens have had a market there held every Wednesday and every Friday, and tolls &c. and that they held the said city of the King by the fee-farm rent of 12l. per annum; and that the King by letters patents of the 7th of March last (reciting an inquisition on an ad quod dampnum, whereby it was found, that it would not be to the damage of the King, or of any other person, if the King granted a market in Chatham to Sir Oliver Butler the defendant, to be held every Tuesday) granted to the defendant a market to be held there every Tuesday, with all profits, &c. prout per [221] easdem literas patentes apparet: and whereas the town of Chatham is within a mile and half of Rochester, and whereas we are given to understand by the Mayor, &c. of Rochester, that the said writ ad quod dampnum was executed the same day it bears date, at the distance of thirty miles from Rochester, and without notice to the mayor, &c. surreptitiously and fraudulently in deceit of them; and that the grant to the defendant is to the damage, &c. of the City of Rochester, and of the market there; and that by reason thereof the said letters patents to the defendant are void: therefore the Sheriff of Kent is commanded to warn the defendant to appear to shew cause wherefore the said letters patents should not be cancelled. The defendant appears, and pleads, that the scire facias and the matter therein contained minus sufficien' in lege existunt ad ipsum ad respondend' compellend', quodq; ipse ad breve prædictum modo & forma præd' impetrat' necesse non habet, nec per legem terræ tenet' respondere, & hoc, &c. The Attorney-General replies, that the writ and the matter therein contained are good and sufficient in law to cause the said letters patents to be cancelled and vacated; and thereby is the demurrer joined. And upon arguing the case in Chancery, the Lord Chancellor Finch (being assisted by the then Ch. Just. North, and by Jones then a Judge in B. R. and now Ch. Just. of C. B.) gave judgment that the patent should be cancelled and vacated: whereupon Sir Oliver Butler brought error in the House of Peers: and after argument at the Bar there the Lords referred the matter to the Judges then attending in Parliament, viz. Gregory, Charlton, Levinz, Withers, Halloway and Walcot, who all unanimously agreed, that the judgment given in the Chancery ought to be affirmed; and accordingly they delivered their opinions seriatim to the Lords by their Lordships command, with their answers to the several objections which had been made for reversal of the judgment, viz. 1. That a sci. fa. does not lie to repeal such patents, because there is another remedy by the common law, i.e. by assize of nusance, quod permittat, &c. where the matter shall be tried by a jury and several Judges, and not by one Judge only, as it is in Chancery: to which they answered, that the King has an undoubted right to repeal a patent wherein he is deceived, or his subjects prejudiced, and that by sci. fa; as 2 E. 3, 34, a sci. fa. to repeal a patent for toll, 17 E. 59 b. of a market, 11 H. 4, 5, of a market, Dy. 197, 198. 3 El. 7 or 8, the [222] like precedents are cited, Dy. 276. 10 El. of Markets; and Staundf. Prerog. says, that it is jure Regio by the common law, and in none of the cases was it any question whether the writ would lie, but only of the manner of pursuing it, and other incident matters; and it is not unusual for the King to have his remedy, as well as the subject also; as in batteries, trespasses, &c. the King has a remedy by information and indictment, and the party grieved by his action. As to the second objection, that no ad quod damp' was necessary; that the patent might have been granted without it, and therefore, though it were surreptitious, it is not material. It was answered and resolved by all the Judges, that which is always done in pleading is necessary to be done; but it may be dispensed with by a non obstante; (quær.) for there the King takes notice, that it is not ad dampnum, &c. and yet if it be ad dampnum the patent is void; for in all such patents the condition is implied, viz. that it be not ad dampnum of the neighbouring merchants; and in this case it is confessed by the demurrer, that the patent is ad dampnum of Rochester, and was illy executed, and in deceit of the King. As to the third objection, that nothing here is positively alledged but with a dat' est nobis intelligi, so and so, &c. It was answered and resolved by the said Judges. 1. It is positively alledged, that concessio præd' est ad dampn' & depauperationem, &c. which is a sufficient cause to revoke the patent, if there were nothing more. 2. That all under the dat' est nobis intelligi is a sufficient allegation to put the party to answer, as in all informations in B. R. the form is, that the Attorney General, or coroner of the Court dat Cur' intelligi & informari, &c. As to the fourth objection, that the demurrer was not well joined, the defendant saying, that the writ was not sufficient to put him to answer, and the Attorney-General replying, quod bon' & sufficien' ad causand' literas patentes præd' cancellandi' & vacand'. It was answered and resolved by the said Judges, that it was sufficient to put the matter in judgment of the Court, and that it was well done of the Attorney-General to reply as he did, in order to have the event of his suit, viz. the patent cancelled. As to the fifth objection, that upon this demurrer a judgment in chief ought not to have been given, but only a respondeas ouster, it was answered and resolved by the said justices, that the sci. fac. shewing sufficient matter to have the patent cancelled, and the defendant having confessed it by his demurrer, he shall not by the [223] manner of his demurrer alter the judgment of the Court; for if so, it would be in his power to procure a delay for himself; but the matter in the sci. fa. appearing sufficient, and not denied by any plea of the defendant, but confessed by his demurrer, a judgment peremptory in Chancery ought to be given, and not a respondeas ouster; and so was it done in the case 17 E. 3, 59 b. and lately in a scire fac' in B. R. between Cole and Green, 1 Lev. 312, by Hale Ch. Just. and the whole Court; where in a scire fac' upon a judgment in waste upon the damages recovered, the defendant demurred partly in abatement, and partly in bar, and yet the Court gave judgment in chief. To the sixth objection, that there ought to have been an office found before the scire facias issued, for that a sci. fac. is a judicial writ, and ought to be founded upon a record; it was answered and resolved by the Judges, that true it is, a sci. fac. ought to be founded on a record, and so it is here; for the patent is a record in Chancery, upon which this sci. fac. issued, and it is a sufficient record whereon to found it, as appears by the precedents before cited; but where the sci. fac. is brought for the forfeiture of a patent, or other thing in another Court, there ought to be found an office in such other Court, before the sci. fac. issues, except the forfeiture appears of record in the same Court whereupon to found the scire fac'; and where the office is found, the King shall seize presently upon the office (found); but where the scire fac. is founded on the patent itself, as here, the King cannot seize till the forfeiture or other defect of the patent be tried upon the scire fac' as is 11 H. 4, 5. And at last all the said Judges agreed, that by the demurrer in this case it is confessed, that the ad quod dampnum was deceitfully executed, and that the patent was ad dampnum & deparperationem of Rochester and their market; and therefore the judgment in Chancery ought to be affirmed, which the Lords in Parliament did accordingly. But afterwards, as I heard, the defendant sued another writ of ad quod dampnum, and took a new patent, which was granted because a market at Chatham was very convenient, if not (absolutely) necessary in respect of navigation, and the shipping and stores, and the labourers about the shipping there.

BODLE against WILKINS.

Declaration in trespass vi et armis for taking two hats.

Sussex, to wit.—John Wilkins, late of Grombridge, in the county of Kent, innholder, was attached to answer Thomas Bodle of a plea wherefore with force and arms the goods and chattels of the said Thomas to the value of one hundred shillings at East Grinstead, in the county of Sussex aforesaid, lately found he took and carried away, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Thomas, and against the peace of the lord the now King, &c. And whereupon the said Thomas by John Awcock his attorney complains that the said John Wilkins, on the 10th day of January, in the 35th year of the reign of the lord the now King, at East Grinstead aforesaid, with force and arms, &c. the goods and chattels of the said Thomas following, to wit, two hats to the value, &c. there lately found took and carried away, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon the said Thomas saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of ten pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said John Wilkins by Richard Bell his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. And as to the coming with force and arms, and also the whole trespass aforesaid, except the taking and carrying away of the said two hats in the declaration aforesaid above supposed to be committed, saith that he is not guilty thereof, and of this puts himself upon the country. And the said Thomas Bodle doth the like. And as to the taking and carrying away of the said two hats in the declaration aforesaid above supposed to be committed, the said John saith that the said Thomas ought not to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, because he saith that one Philip Packer, Esquire, long before the said time in which the taking of the said two hats is supposed to be committed, and at the said time in which, &c. was seized and now is seized of the manor of Grombridge with the appurtenances in the county of Kent, [whereof the town of Grombridge in the said county is, and at the said time in which, &c. and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, was parcel] in his demesne as of fee, and so being seized thereof the said Philip and all those whose estate the said Philip now hath, and at the said time in which, &c. had, of and in the manor aforesaid with the appurtenances have [225] had and held, and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, have been used and accustomed to have and hold a certain fair in the town of Grombridge aforesaid, in the county of Kent aforesaid, on every 14th day of September annually, and in every year, as belonging and appertaining to the manor aforesaid with its appurtenances. And the said Philip and all those whose estate the said Philip now hath, and at the said time in which, &c. had, of and in the said manor with the appurtenances have had and received, and have been used and accustomed to have and receive from every hatter who hath had one stall in any such fair, for his standing to sell hats in the said fair, two shillings and six pence of the lawful money of England for his standing in such stall to sell hats there, and if any such hatter hath refused to pay the said two shillings and six pence for his standing in such stall to sell hats in such fair, then the said Philip and all those whose estate the said Philip now hath, and at the said time in which, &c. had, of and in the manor aforesaid with the appurtenances, from the whole time aforesaid have been used and accustomed by their bailiffs and servants for the time being, to take and distrain the goods and chattels of such hatter refusing to pay the said two shillings and six pence, found within the manor aforesaid, and the same to detain in their possession until the said two shillings and six pence should be paid. And the said John Wilkins further saith that the said Philip of the manor aforesaid with the appurtenances so as aforesaid being seized, upon the 14th day of September, in the 35th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, had and held one fair in the said town of Grombridge, in the said county of Kent, and that the said Thomas Bodle, then and there being a hatter, on the said 14th day of September, in the 35th year aforesaid, had one stall in the said fair for his standing to sell his hats in the said fair, and sold sundry hats in the stall aforesaid during the time of the said fair, whereby two shillings and six pence became due and payable to the said Philip by the said Thomas for his standing in the stall aforesaid to sell hats in the said fair, whereof the said John Wilkins as the servant of the said Philip and by his command then and there gave notice to the said Thomas, and then and there requested the said [226] Thomas to pay to the said John Wilkins for the use of the said Philip the said two shillings and six pence, to do which the said Thomas Bodle then and there refused, whereupon the said John Wilkins as the servant of the said Philip and by his command afterwards, to wit, upon the said 14th day of September, in the 35th year aforesaid, the said two hats in the declaration aforesaid specified, found within the manor aforesaid, to wit, in the said town of Grombridge in the said county of Kent took and carried away, in the name of a distress for the said two shillings and six pence, to the said Philip by the said Thomas so as aforesaid due and unpaid, as it was lawful for him to do, which is the same taking and carrying away of the said two hats, whereof the said Thomas above now complains; without this that the said John is guilty of the taking or carrying away the said two hats, or of either of them, at East Grinstead aforesaid, in the said county of Sussex, or at any other place within this kingdom of England, without the said town of Grombridge, in the said county of Kent, and this the said John is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said Thomas ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said Thomas Bodle as to the said plea of the said John Wilkins as to the taking and carrying away of the said two hats above alledged to be committed, saith that the said plea and the matter in the same contained are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said Thomas from having his action aforesaid thereupon against the said John, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the said John in this behalf, the said Thomas prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the taking of the said two hats to be adjudged to him, &c. And for cause of demurrer in law in this behalf, the said Thomas according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, shews to the Court here the cause following, to wit, that the said plea doth not answer to the declaration aforesaid, &c.

And the said John Wilkins, because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law in his plea aforesaid above pleaded, to preclude the said Thomas from having his action aforesaid against him the said John, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said Thomas doth not deny nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether had refused to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment, and that the said Thomas may be precluded from having his action aforesaid, &c. And because the justices, &c.

Justification in trespass by quæ est eadem with traverse of the place, but not of the time, is good. 1 Ventris 184. 2 Jo. 146. Nel. Lut. 299, 300, 469. 1 Bulst. 138. Cro. Cha. 228. 1 Saund. 85. Ante 92. 1 Lev. 307. 20 Vin. Ab. 570.

Trespass for taking two hats of the plaintiff's at Eastgrinsted in Sussex, Jan. 10, 35 Car. 2. The defendant justifies for stallage in a fair by prescription at Grombridge in Kent, held Septemb. 14, 35 Car. 2, for that the plaintiff had refused to pay the stallage, quæ est eadem, &c. absque hoc that he is guilty of the taking any where out of the fair aforesaid. The plaintiff demurs specially because the said plea does not answer the declaration. And now it was argued by Birch, that the traverse was not good, because he does not traverse any other time as well as any other place. But per Cur'. The conclusion, quæ est eadem with a traverse of the place is good without traverse of the time; and judgment was for the defendant.

MALLOCKE against EASTLY.

No property of deer in a park, except tame and reclaimed. Ante 28. 18 Vin. Ab. 64.

Trespass quare duas damas ipsius the plaintiff, in a certain close of the plaintiff's called the Park, he took and carried away. The defendant demurred generally, and judgment was given for him, for that the plaintiff says damas ipsius, and none can have property in deer, except they are tame and reclaimed, although they are in a park, 7 Co. 89. But here it does not appear that they were in a park, but only in a certain close called the Park.

[228] PAYNE against BRIGHAM.

Trespass for spoiling his grass, and carrying away the plaintiff's hay, &c. Defendant pleads not guilty as to all except spoiling the grass, &c. and as to that justifies for tythes, the plaintiff traverses the quantity of the hay set out for tythe, this is held ill upon demurrer. 9 Viner Ab. 63.

Trespass for breaking his close called Brigham's Mead, and spoiling his grass pedibus ambulando, & cum equis & plaustris, and taking his grass cut by the plaintiff to such a value, and taking and carrying away the plaintiff's hay, viz. five cartloads of hay, to the value, &c. The defendant as to all, except breaking the close and spoiling the grass pedibus ambulando, & cum equis & plaustris, pleads not guilty; and as to them he justifies; for that he is seized of the tithes of hay ex eodem clauso pro- venien'; and for that the hay, viz. the five cartloads of hay aforesaid, were cocked separately for the tithes of the said hay, he entered the said close to carry away the said hay, and (so) pedibus ambulando, & cum equis & plaustris, &c. he spoiled the grass, doing as little damage as he could, quæ sunt eadem, &c. The plaintiff replies, that the defendant took the grass cut by the plaintiff, and made it into hay upon the land, and carried it away, and (so) five cartloads of the plaintiff's hay, in the declaration mentioned, he took and carried away. Absque hoc, that there were five cartloads of hay in the said close separated for tithes, as the defendant has pleaded: whereupon the defendant demurs specially, for that the plaintiff had traversed the quantity of hay separated for tithes, which is not traversable, and of that opinion was the whole Court; for the defendant having pleaded not guilty as to all but spoiling the grass, and justified that by entering and taking his tithes of hay, this is good, whether the tithes were loaden in one or two carts; and it was lawful for the defendant to make the hay upon the land, after it was separated. And judgment was for the defendant by the whole Court.

EDWARDS AND OTHERS against MORGAN.

Declaration in covenant by the grantee of the reversion against the lessee for rent in arrear after the grant. Profert.

Hereford, to wit.—Thomas Morgan, late of Wigmore, in the county aforesaid, gent. was attached to answer John Edwards Knight, and Richard Deerham Knight and Baronet, in a plea of breach of covenant, and whereupon they the said John and Richard by Francis Edwards their attorney complain, that whereas the most noble Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck widow, upon the 11th day of April, in the 27th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, was seized in her demesne as of fee of and in a certain park called Radnor Park, containing by estimation 100 acres or thereabouts, and of and in one messuage situate and being in a certain place called the Crosse, in the county aforesaid, with the appurtenances, and so being seized thereof, upon the same day and year, by a certain indenture made at Wigmore aforesaid, between the said viscountess by the name of Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck widow, late the wife of the late most noble Robert Viscount Purbeck, Baron of D. deceased, otherwise called Robert Danvers, otherwise Villiers, Esquire, of the one part, and the said Thomas Morgan by the name of Thomas Morgan, of the parish of New Radnor, gentleman, of the other part, which other part of which indenture, sealed with the seal of the said Thomas Morgan, they the said John and Richard bring here into Court, the date of which is the said day and year aforesaid, for the consideration in the said indenture mentioned, had demised, granted, and to farm let to the said Thomas Morgan the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances, and all ways, easements, waters, profits, commodities, and appurtenances whatsoever, to the said park and land belonging or in any wise appertaining, or with the same used or enjoyed, as part, parcel or member thereof, or of any part thereof; [except and always being reserved from the said demise and grant to the said viscountess, her heirs and assigns, all and all manner of woods, underwoods, timber, and other trees there standing, growing and being, or which from that time afterwards during the term by the said indenture granted should stand, grow and be in and upon the before demised premisses, or any part thereof], to have and to hold the said [230] park, lands and messuage, and all the other premisses by the said indenture demised or mentioned or intended by the said indenture to be demised, with the appurtenances, [except the before excepted] to the said Thomas Morgan, his executors, administrators and assigns, from the 26th day of March then last past, before the date of the said indenture, for and during and until the full end and term of sixteen years from that time next ensuing fully to be compleated and ended, yielding and paying therefore yearly and every year during the said term to the said viscountess, her heirs and assigns, the rent or sum of thirty-eight pounds of the lawful money of England, at the two usual feasts or days of payment in the year, to wit, at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, and of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, at or in the gate of the church of Old Radnor, by even and equal portions, and the said Thomas by the said indenture, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, did covenant, promise and agree with the said viscountess, her heirs and assigns, that he the said Thomas Morgan, his executors, administrators and assigns, or some of them, from time to time and at all times during the said term, well and faithfully would pay or cause to be paid to the said viscountess, her heirs and assigns, the said rent of thirty-eight pounds, at the days and place appointed for the payment thereof, according to the true intent of the indenture aforesaid, as by the said indenture among other things more fully appears and is manifest: by virtue of which demise the said Thomas into the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances entered, and was and as yet is thereof possessed; and the said Thomas so being thereof possessed, and the said Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck of the reversion of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances being seized as aforesaid in her demesne as of fee, the said Elizabeth afterwards, to wit, upon the 25th day of February, in the 28th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at Wigmore, in the county aforesaid, by her certain indenture between the said Elizabeth, by the name of the most noble Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck, sometimes called Elizabeth Danvers, otherwise Elizabeth Villiers, widow, of the one part, and the said John Edwards and Richard Deerham, by the names of John Edwards, of Heathouse, in the county of Salop, gent. and Richard Deerham, of Lincoln's-Inn, in the county of Middlesex, esquire, of the other part, which other part of which indenture, sealed with the seal of the said Elizabeth [231] Viscountess Purbeck, they the said John and Richard bring here into Court, the date of which is the said day and year, for the consideration in the said last recited indenture contained, did grant to the said John Edwards and Richard Deerham among other things, the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, and rents of the tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to have and to hold to the said John and Richard, their heirs and assigns, as by the said last recited indenture among other things more fully appears and is manifest; to which grant of the reversion of the tenements aforesaid by the said Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck to the said John and Richard as aforesaid made, the said Thomas Morgan of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances to him as aforesaid demised in the form aforesaid being possessed, to the said John and Richard afterwards, to wit, upon the 25th day of March, in the 29th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at Wigmore aforesaid, did attorn and agree; by colour of which grant and attornment aforesaid, they the said John and Richard were seized of the reversion of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances, to the said Thomas in the form aforesaid demised in their demesne as of fee; and the said John and Richard say, that although the said Elizabeth from the time of the making the indenture of demise aforesaid, until the making of the said indenture of grant of the reversion aforesaid, to the said John and Richard made as aforesaid; and they the said John and Richard, after the making of the said recited indenture of grant of the reversion aforesaid, all and singular the covenants, grants and agreements in the indenture of demise aforesaid contained, on the part of the said Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck and her assigns to be performed, well and faithfully have performed, fulfilled and kept, according to the form and effect of the said recited indenture of demise, in fact the said John and Richard say that the said Thomas, after the making of the said indenture of assignment of the reversion aforesaid, to the said John and Richard made as aforesaid, did not pay to the said John and Richard thirty-eight pounds of the said annual rent to the said John and Richard, for one year ended at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, in the 34th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, being in arrear and unpaid. And so they the said John and Richard say, that the said Thomas his covenant aforesaid hath not kept, but hath unjustly broke it, and the same with them to keep [232] hitherto altogether hath refused and still doth refuse, to the damage of the said John and Richard of fifty pounds, and therefore they produce their suit, &c.

And the said Thomas Morgan by William Phillips his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and saith that the said John and Richard ought not to have or maintain their action aforesaid thereupon against him, because he saith that before the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said John and Richard, to wit, upon the 8th day of February, in the 33d year of the reign of the said lord the now King, at Wigmore, in the county aforesaid, he the said Thomas assigned his entire right, estate, title, interest, and term of years of and in the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances then to come and unexpired unto one David Powel, by virtue whereof the said David afterwards, to wit, upon the day and year aforesaid, into the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances entered, and was and as yet is thereof possessed, and that at the said time of that assignment there was no rent in arrear and unpaid, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said John and Richard ought to have or maintain their action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said John and Richard say that the said plea by the said Thomas Morgan above in bar pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude them the said John and Richard from having their action aforesaid against the said Thomas Morgan, and that they to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land to answer in any manner, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient answer, they the said John and Richard pray judgment and their damages by occasion of the premises to be adjudged to them, &c.

And the said Thomas, because that he above hath alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said John and Richard from having their action aforesaid against him, which he is ready to verify; which matter the said John and Richard do not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment, and that the said John and Richard may be precluded from having their action aforesaid, &c. And because the justices, &c.

Covenant for rent lies against a lessee after assignment of the term by grantee of the reversion. 1 Sid. 338, 339. Cro. Ja. 309. Cro. Cha. 579. 6 Viner Ab. 412. 1 Bac. Ab. 536. 2 Bac. Ab. 18.

Covenant for non-payment of rent, and declares, that the Lady Purbeck was seized of the place where, &c. and demised to the defendant, who covenanted to pay the rent; and that afterward the said lady by indenture, for considerations therein mentioned (which indenture ille profert in Cur', but it was not entered in hæc verba) granted the reversion to the plaintiff in fee, whereto the defendant attorned, and for rent arrear this action is brought in the county where the lands lie, as it ought. The defendant pleads, that such a day he assigned his term, before the plaintiff had any interest therein, but does not plead any acceptance of the rent by the plaintiff from the assignee, nor any notice of the assignment. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs generally: and the opinion of the Court was, that the action well lies against the lessee of the term by the grantee of the reversion, (it being an express covenant) after the assignment, Cro. Cha. 188, Batchelor versus Gage, and Keigley versus Buckley in B. R. and Thursby and Hall vers. Plaint, 1 Lev. 219, though notice and acceptance of the rent had been pleaded. But then for a fault in the declaration the judgment was staid, viz. for that the plaintiff does not mention to whose use the grant of the reversion was, nor any certain consideration, but only the consideration in the indenture mentioned, and it does not appear what that was.

[234] MICO against MORRIS.

Judgment in Inferior Court for a matter out of their jurisdiction is void. 1 Lev. 50, 69, 96, 104, 137, 153, 208, 209. 7 Viner Ab. 33.

Assumpsit brought in London for depasturing a horse in com' Essex'. The defendant pleads in bar a former action brought in the Sheriff's Court of London for the same depasturing, and judgment there for the defendant. The plaintiff replies, that the cause of action arose in Essex out of the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Court.

To which the defendant demurs generally: and per Cur', the plea in bar is ill; for if the Sheriff's Court there holds plea of a matter out of their jurisdiction, their judgment is void, and cannot be executed. But Charlton said, if the judgment in London had been given for the plaintiff, it would have been a bar here, because he had recovered, and had a judgment for him; yet quære of that matter.

BLEMERHASSET against PIERSON.

Defeasance of a duty due by obligation cannot be without deed, which a writing under hand does not imply. 7 Viner Ab. 496. Com. Dig. Defeasance, C.

Debt on obligation conditioned for payment of several sums at several days. The defendant pleads payment of all the sums due before such a day, at which day the plaintiff by his writing (which the defendant brought into Court signed with his hand) agreed to defer the payment of the residue till another day not yet come, The plaintiff demurs generally, and judgment was given for him; for the action being founded on a deed, no defeazance can be made thereof afterwards without deed; and a writing under hand does not imply a deed.

[235] YATES against PLAXTON.

Original in one county declared on in another county is good against the party, not against the bail. 2 Viner Ab. 507. 1 Bac. Ab. 215.

A scire fac. was against the bail of Hall. They plead, that the original was laid in com' Ebor'; in which action so laid no judgment was against Hall, but that the judgment upon which the sci. fac. is brought was had against the said Hall on an action laid in the county of the City of York, in which case in respect of the jurisdiction of the county the bail are not liable. The plaintiff replies, that upon the original laid in the county of York he sued a capias to the Sheriff of the county of York, with intent to declare according to the course of the Court against the said Hall in the county of the City of York, and thereupon such proceedings were had that he recovered against Hall: in which case, according to the course of the Court, the action being between the same parties for the same damages, the bail by the course of that Court are liable. The defendants pleaded protestando, that by the course of the Court the plaintiff cannot have a capias in any other county than where the original is laid: and if he might have such capias, yet he cannot declare in another county, but by such varying of the county the bail shall be discharged, for plea says, that no judgment was given against Hall upon the original laid in com' Ebor', but the judgment was given upon the declaration in com' Civitat' Ebor' after the bail entered into, absq; hoc quod in isto casu licet talis recuperatio habeatur in consimili vel eadem actione inter easdem partes, & pro iisdem dampnis, the bail should be according to the course of the Court liable for the damages recovered, & hoc parat' &c. prout Cur' consideravit. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs specially, because the traverse is of matters in law, and of matter not traversable: and now it was said by Stringer for the defendant, that this matter is triable by the Court, and the traverse concludes prout Cur' consideraverit, and therefore it was well. But the Court inclined, that the traverse was ill, and said the pleading was strange; yet upon examination of the prothonotaries they affirming that though by the course of the Court the plaintiff might [236] declare in other Courts against the same parties, and the judgment thereupon would be good, yet by such variation of the county the bail is discharged, and not liable to the damages on the new declaration; whereupon it now appearing on the whole matter that the plaintiff had no cause to have had the scire fac' ruled, judgment was given for the defendant.

[237] MICHAELMAS TERM, IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN OF JAMES II. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

THE MAYOR, ALDERMEN AND BURGESSES OF SCARBOROUGH against BUTLER.

Debt to an old corporation, they are incorporated by a new name, and recover by their new name. Post, 243.

Assumpsit, and declares, that time out of mind, &c. till Aug. 2, 36 Car. 2, they were a corporation by the name of bailiffs, &c. of Scarborough; and that then the King incorporated them by the name of mayor, aldermen, &c. and that 1 Aug. 36 C. 2 the defendant was indebted to the bailiffs of Scarborough in 60l. 12s. 2d. received to their use; and being so indebted, promised to pay; and that afterwards, viz. May 8, 1 Jac. 2, the defendant being indebted to the mayor, bailiffs, &c. accounted with them for the money by him received to their use; and upon the account he was found in arrear 60l. 12s. 2d. and promised to pay it. The defendant as to the second promise pleads non assumpsit, and issue was on that promise; and as to the first promise he pleads, that afterwards, viz. May the sixth, 1 Jac. 2, they accounted, and on the account he was found in arrear to them (allocatis allocandis) in 14l. only, which he tendered, and they refused, and pleads always ready, and brings in the money, &c. The plaintiff hereto replies, quod bene & verum est that they accounted, but that upon the account the defendant was found in arrear 60l. 12s. 2d. absq; hoc, that upon the said account he was found in arrear 14l. only, on which issue was also joined, and both issues were found for the plaintiff, and entire damages given to 60l. 12s. 2d. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment by Pemberton, that it appears by the plaintiff's confession in his replication, that [238] there was an account upon the first 60l. 12s. 2d. due on the first promise for money had and received, &c. whereby the action and the duty was extinguished by the account, and the action ought to be brought upon that only, and the damages being intire upon both promises, the plaintiff could not have judgment; upon which the judgment was staid, and the Court directed to be attended with books, &c. and at another day in the same term it was argued for the defendant, that a promise by parol may be discharged by parol, Cro. Cha. 383, Langden v. Stokes, Cro. Ja. 483, Hartford v. Pile, and ibid. 160, the opinion of Justice Haughton, Sty. 8. 2 Leon. 214, so here the first promise is discharged by the account, and the promise thereupon. But the whole Court were contrary; they agreed on a promise merely executory of both parts, as the cases cited before are; any thing may be discharged by parol; as if I promise you 5s. if you will go to Paul's, before you go I may discharge you from the going, and thereby the other shall be discharged from paying the 5s. for no debt was due before the going, nor any thing executed either by the one, or the other; but in the case at Bar there was a debt due and executed in the plaintiffs, and that could not be discharged without a release; also the new promise upon the account is only a chose in action, and one chose in action cannot be discharged by another chose in action of the same nature, as one obligation is not discharged by acceptation of another obligation instead thereof; wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff: and here it appears, that the debt due to the first corporation remained due to the new after the names changed by the letters patents; but no doubt was made thereof.

BARNES against HARVEY.

After no award pleaded, the plaintiff may reply the award, without saying where made.

Debt on an obligation dated 18 Jun. 1684, for performance of an award, or an umpirage. The defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies and confesses no award, but says, that the umpire Aug. 18, (being the day given him by the submission) made and delivered to the defendant at his [239] house, (being the place appointed by the submission) an umpirage, but does not say where he made the umpirage, whereby he awarded, that the defendant should seal to the plaintiff two obligations, each of the penal sum of 10l. the one conditioned for the payment of 5l. on the 24th of December next after, and the other for payment of 5l. on the first of May then also next after the date of the said writing of arbitration, and should give each to the other general releases of all things, &c. which had been, or then were had, moved, &c. between the parties aforesaid; which releases and bonds should be sealed and delivered the first of December then next following at D. before three in the afternoon of that day, and assigns a breach in not making the said two obligations. Whereupon the defendant demurs. And now it was argued for the defendant, that the replication was ill, not having shewn where the umpirage was made, which matter is traversable. But per Cur'. This cannot be objected now after no award or umpirage has been pleaded; for if he shews any thing to prove the umpirage void, as that it was not made according to the submission, or not delivered, &c. this would be a departure, and tantamount, that tho' an award was made, it was void, which is not to be permitted. 2. It was objected, that the releases awarded to be made of all things which had been or then were had, moved, &c. And the word then refers to the next antecedent, i.e. 1 May, and then it is a release of more than is submitted, and shall release the submission bond, and no other thing is awarded to the defendant, and so the award is void. But per Cur', This cannot be referred by the word then to the first of May; for the last clauses are to be done on the first of December, which is before the first of May next after the submission; yet per Cur' the tunc in the last clause seems to refer to December next following, and then the objection is the same; and therefore they gave judgment for the defendant, except cause were shewn the first day of the next term.

[240] HAMPSON against BILL.

Excommunication pleaded without a defence is ill. Ante 182. Cro. Cha. 311. 1 Lut. 7. 2 Lut. 1590.

Debt on an obligation; the defendant by T. Tooke, his attorney, venit & dicit, that the plaintiff to his writ respondere non debet, and pleads an excommunication certified against him by commissioners delegats. The plaintiff demurs, and the plea was adjudged ill for two causes; 1. For that it is venit & dicit, without any defence (viz. defendit vim & injuriam, &c.) made. 2. The pleading respondere for responderi is not good. Wherefore in this cause, as well as two others between the same parties the same day, judgment was given, quod respondeat ouster.

BEAYNE against BEAL.

Trial, when to be as the parties agree, and when as the law directs. 16 Viner Ab. 381. 5 Bac. Ab. 330.

Debt on a bill obligatory, whereby the defendant obliges himself to the plaintiff in 40l. to be paid to him, if he (the defendant) did not deliver to the plaintiff a piece of plate, which the plaintiff being treasurer at a horse-race had delivered to the defendant, on a supposal that the defendant's horse called Cripple had won it, if within three months after the date of the bill it appeared before the Lord Brudenel, and others in the bill named, that Cripple was not the proper horse of the defendant for one month before the race, or that the said horse had run any race before. And the plaintiff averred, that within three months after the date of the bill it sufficiently appeared before the Lord Brudenel, &c. by three credible witnesses, viz. A. B. and C. examined by the Lord Brudenel, &c. that the said horse called Cripple was not the proper horse of the defendant, and so had the Lord Brudenel, &c. declared, and as far as they could had ordered the defendant to deliver the plate to the plaintiff, which he had refused to do, whereby an action accrued for the 40l. The defendant pleads, that the horse called [241] Cripple was his proper horse at the time of, and a month before, the race. The plaintiff replies, protestando, that it was not the proper horse of the defendant, for plea says, that within three months after the date of the bill it sufficiently appeared before the Lord Brudenel, &c, that Cripple was not the proper horse of the defendant, and this they had declared as aforesaid, & hoc, &c. The defendant rejoins, that Cripple was his proper horse, and that it did not sufficiently appear, &c. within the three months, &c. that the said horse was not the proper horse of the defendant. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs specially, for that the rejoinder is a departure from the bar: and now upon argument it was resolved by all the Judges, that the plea in bar is insufficient, and did not answer the declaration; for when the parties had particularly agreed in what manner it should be made to appear, and before what persons, the matter should be so determined, and not by trial on an action or otherwise, as it should have been, if the condition had been general, i.e. to make it appear. 2. The rejoinder is a departure from the bar; (1) and if the last part of the rejoinder by the omission of the words before the Lord Brudenel, &c. this had not been sufficient; for the appearing generally is not the point in question, but the appearing before the Lord Brudenel, &c. and that is exclusive of other appearings. Wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

CLERK against THE GOVERNOR AND COMPANY OF TAYLORS OF EXETER, IN THE EXCHEQUER-CHAMBER.

S. C. 2 Shower 345 to 364.

Bond that one shall not use his trade in a certain place is void, so is a promise or covenant without good consideration. Style 111. Al. 67. 1 Jo. 13. 2 Bulst. 136. Cro. Ja. 326, 596. 3 Leon. 219. 11 Co. 53 b. 1 Danvers 42, pl. 6. 2 Danvers 19, pl. 5. 2 Saunders 155, 156. 1 Viner Ab. 295. 20 Viner Ab. 327. Auterment d'un assumpsit, sur bon consideration.

Error of a judgment in B. R. in debt upon an obligation conditioned, that the defendant should not use the trade of a taylor in Exeter. Whereto the defendant pleads there, that he was an expert taylor, and skilful in the art thereof; and the defendants, pretending that none who was not a member of their corporation ought to use that trade there, did many ways vex and trouble him; and he, to prevent such vexation, gave to them the said obligation, which is contrary to law, and void. The plaintiffs there replied, that the defendant sealed and delivered the said [242] obligation as his deed; and it was adjudged in B. R. that the obligation not restraining the trade generally, but only in a particular place, viz. Excester, was not void. Whereupon the defendant there brought a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, and the error assigned was only in point of law, viz. whether the said obligation was void? And after divers arguments in Trinity term and this term, and also in the following Hilary term, it was held by all the Judges, that the judgment in B. R. was erroneous, and the obligation void, for which they in Hilary term following reversed the judgment; and the principal reason was, that it being a penal obligation for restraining the exercise of a trade, though it was in a particular place, it is void; otherwise if it had been on an assumpsit for a good consideration not to use a trade in a particular place, because in such cases all being to be recovered in damages, it is in the power of the jury to assess the damages, on weighing the consideration of the promise and the mischief to the party promising; but in this case the whole penalty is to be forfeited, let the consideration be what it will, and let the offence be never so small; as in the case of an infant, a bond or bill for necessaries is void, but an assumpsit is good; and some Judges held, that a covenant or promise to pay a certain sum if he use his trade is ill, because that is a debt for which an action of debt will lie; but a promise upon a good consideration, as for transferring his trade and shop, that he shall not use the trade in the town where he ought to use it, they allowed to be good, because all is uncertain, and is to be ascertained by the jury which tries the cause, viz. of what value the consideration is, and what damage the use of the trade is to the party to whom the promise is made: and for authorities were cited 2 H. 5, 5 b. the opinion of Hull, which they said is good law, and was never denied in case of an obligation to restrain a trade in any particular place, or for a particular time, as there for six months: but promises in such cases have been divers times allowed to be good, as

(1) The French is—Et si le dernier part del rejoynder per le omission des parols devant le Seignior Brudenel, &c. The meaning seems to be, that though the latter words of the rejoinder had been omitted, it would not have made the rejoinder good.

All. 67, the case of Pragnell and Glass, Mar. 77, 193, an assumpsit held good, but an obligation void in such cases, and Mo. pl. 255. Obligation not to use a trade in Nottingham, void; and ib. pl. 377. Obligation not to use a trade in Monm. void. Ow. 143. Obligation conditioned not to use a trade in Kent, void; 2 Leon. 210, the like obligation held void, but 596, an assumpsit upon a good consideration held good, and Noy. 98, the same case; so 2 Roll. Rep. 20, and Sty. 111, [243] Pragnell against Goffe, it was the consideration which made the promise good, All. 67, accords, and 2 Keb. 377, Tresby vers. Arrowsmith, the roll whereof was brought into Court, and is entered Pasch. 20 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 66, an obligation that he should not use a trade in Chichester adjudged void; and in Hil. term following the judgment of B. R. in this case was reversed by the unanimous consent of all the Judges.

ADNEY against VERNON.

Judgment in an Inferior Court pleaded briefly. 1 Saunders 74, 75. 2 Lev. 50, 69, 96, 153. Ante 237. Post, 404. 2 Levinz, 181. 20 Viner Ab. 155.

Trespass for taking the plaintiff's goods. The defendant justifies for that time out of mind, &c. till 2 Jac. 1, there was a Court in Worcester, held coram ballivis, and from thenceforward coram majore, &c. and pleads a plaint levied there in debt, and a count thereupon, that the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff, infra jurisdict' Cur' promised, &c, whereupon taliter processum fuit, that afterward, viz. 2 Octob. 34 Car. 2, consideratum fuit, &c. And so justifies by a warrant upon this judgment. The plaintiff replies de injuria sua propria absque tali causa, absq; hoc quod habetur aliquod tale recordum. The defendant rejoins, quod habetur tale recordum, and at the day brings in the record, whereby it appears the judgment was given the 25th of December, 34 Car. 2, and if he had failed of the record, was the question: for it was argued for the defendant, that seeing the record produced agreed with the record pleaded in the entry of the plaint, and in all other things, except the day of the judgment given, it was no such variance as would make a plea faulty, seeing it is a sufficient record, by virtue whereof and of the warrant thereupon the defendant took the goods: but as to that the Court gave no judgment; but they gave judgment against the defendant for other matters in the plea, viz. 1. He pleads the Court to be held time out of mind, &c. before 2 Jac. 1, coram ballivis, and from thence coram majore, &c. and does not shew any grant, &c. for the alteration thereof; and then the Court held before the mayor, &c. was without any authority, and the judgment void. 2. It is not shewn in the plea, that the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, and then the judgment is coram non Judice, and void. It is true in the [244] declaration set forth in the plea here, it is said to be infra jurisdictionem Curie, but that is not sufficient, for that is traversable, but the matter in the declaration there is not traversable here, but only that which is alledged in the plea here: and upon those exceptions to the plea judgment was given against the defendant; though they agreed the replication to be ill, by reason of the double traverse, yet the declaration being good, and the plea ill,(1) though the replication does not shew that the plaintiff had (no) cause of action, he ought to have judgment.

HOWE against BEECHE.

S. C. 1 Danvers, 67.

Assumpsit, if he would use his labour and pains and finish such a business, &c. after part done, the defendant forbids him from proceeding further, the plaintiff shall have his action for the whole, and the jury shall give the value of the business done. 2 Rol. Rep. 19, 39, 459. 1 Rol. Ab. 32 A. Cro. Ja. 483. Yel. 22. 1 Jo. 179. 1 Lev. 3. 1 Bac. Ab. 180. Ante 238.

Error in the Exchequer-Chamber of a judgment in B. R. where the plaintiff declared, that the defendant in consideration that the plaintiff would solicit a business which the defendant had with Gillingham, and put an end thereto to pay him 100l.

(1) Et le replication ne monstrant, &c.

and that the plaintiff did solicit it, and had therein employed much of his care and pains, but before he could put an end thereto, the defendant countermanded him; whereupon judgment was by default, and upon a writ of enquiry 100l. damages found, and judgment for the plaintiff in B. R. and thereof error was brought. And it was assigned, that the action does not lie for the 100l. for such an employment is always countermandable; and if the plaintiff had employed his labour, and had in part done the business before the countermand, he might have a quantum meruit for what he had done, but not an assumpsit for the whole: to which it was answered and agreed by the Court, that though the employment was countermandable, yet if after part of the business done the defendant countermands it, the plaintiff shall have his action for the whole; and upon the trial the jury shall give so much in damages as they find the business deserves; and although here it was not finished, yet that was by the defendant's own default; and perhaps when all the pains and labour to finish it are passed, the defendant would countermand it in order to finish it himself without any labour or pains, thereby to defeat the plaintiff of his recompence: and after the case had been twice argued in the Exchequer-Chamber, the judgment was affirmed.

[245] WHITWICK against HOVENDEN.

Action laid, and outlawry in London, on reversing the outlawry the plaintiff may declare in another county, be the action local or transitory. Ante 235.

Trespass for taking and detaining his beasts until he made a fine, and laid the action in Sussex. The defendant pleads, that the cause of action did not accrue within six years before suing of the writ. The plaintiff replies, that at another time he brought an original in battery in London, intending when the defendant had appeared to have declared for this trespass, and that the defendant was outlawed in London, and that within such a time after the reversal of the outlawry he declared here. The defendant demurred, and now for the defendant it was insisted, that the original being laid in London, he could not in his action declare in another county, though the cause of action be transitory. But upon information by the prothonotaries, that the course of the Court is, that although the original be laid in London for expediting the outlawry, yet when the defendant comes in, the plaintiff may declare against him in any other county, be the action local or transitory: and the statute 21 Jac. 16, gives to plaintiffs generally a power to commence a new suit within the year after the outlawry reversed; and that so he may do so in this case to warrant his declaration within the course of the Court, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

NORRIS against SPICER.

Obligation to pay at D. Plea of payment secundum conditionem, not saying at D. is not good on a special demurrer.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to pay a sum of money at D. such a day. The defendant pleads payment at the day secundum effectum condition' prædict'. Upon which the plaintiff demurs specially, for that he does not say where he paid it, so that no venue can be had thereof. To which it was said by Pemberton, that the condition being to pay it at D. the plea that he paid it according to the condition necessarily implies it was paid at D. But per Cur'; It is at least formal [246] pleading to say he paid it apud D. prædict; and the plaintiff having demurred specially for that cause, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

HENT against BURTON.

Debt, or assumpsit, &c. and declares adhuc, &c. which refers to a time since the original, yet good. Post, 345, 346, 4 Mod. 152, 153. 1 Ventris 264. 2 Lev. 13, 176. 1 Ventris 135, 362. 2 Jo. 87, 149. 1 Ld. Ray. 576.

Covenant upon an indenture of lease, whereby the defendant demised to the plaintiff a messuage, and covenanted that he should enjoy it, and assigns a breach that the defendant had erected another messuage so near it, that thereby the lights of the plaintiff's messuage, were, & adhuc existunt, greatly darkened and overshadowed. After a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment by Lutwyche, that adhuc existunt refers to the time of the declaration, and so damages are given for a thing after the original, which is always fifteen days at least before the declaration, and declarations in this Court are always upon originals, and the original is recited in them, viz. quod the defendant attachiat' vel summonit' fuit to answer the plaintiff; and the damages cannot be given for any thing after the commencement of the action, and that is the original in this Court; and cited Harbin against Green, Hob. 189, and 2 Saund. 169, Hamilton v. Vere, where damages being given for a matter after the original commenced, the judgments were staid, and in this case judgment was staid for the Court to have books, and to consider the cases cited; and at another day the same term the case was argued by Pemberton for the plaintiff, and Lutwyche again for the defendant; and upon their arguments judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court; and as to the cases cited, the one was for ten years after the action, and the other was for three years at least, whereas here could not be above fifteen days at most, and de minimis non curat lex; also perhaps the defendant appeared gratis without any original, and then the action commences by the declaration, and the recital of summonitus, &c. in the declaration is only form, and is always used in this Court, though no original is sued; and if this judgment should be stayed for this cause, it would overturn many of the proceedings of the Court; for in debt upon an obligation the declaration is [247] summonit' &c. and afterwards it says nondum solvit, sed ill' solvere contradixit, & adhuc contradicit, unde dicit quod deteriorat' est, & dampnum habet; where the adhuc contradicit and the dampnum habet are in the present tense as here, and the damages are general as here; and so it is in assumpsits and other actions, and yet always held good.

GARDNER against HELVIS.

In case for words interpreted, a former action without such an interpretation pleaded in bar. Ante 30, 68. 4 Bac. Ab. 11, 513. 1 Viner Ab. 543.

Case for these words of the plaintiff, being an alderman of Norwich, and a justice of the peace there, He is a rascally alderman, a factious alderman, a lampooner; and avers, that a lampooner is there well understood to be a libeller. The defendant pleads in bar a former action brought by the plaintiff for the same words, and laid in the same manner as here (saving that in the former action no interpretation is given of the word lampooner) in which action the plaintiff was barred. Whereupon the plaintiff demurred. And it was now argued by Bedingfield the King's Serjeant, that by reason of the interpretation of the word lampooner in this action, this is another action than the former, and therefore the bar in that is no bar in this. But by the Court: the plaintiff having been once barred in an action for the same words, he shall not entitle himself to a new action by a new interpretation of a new word; and they gave judgment for the defendant.

MICHAELMAS, 1 JAMES II.

[249] TITUS against PARKINS.

Declaration in replevin. Gilbert upon Replevin, 216.

Hertford, to wit.—William Parkins, late of Bushy in the county aforesaid, knight, was summoned to answer Silas Titus, Esquire, of a plea, wherefore he took the cattle of the said Silas, and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges, &c. And whereupon the said Silas by John Warburton his attorney, complains that the said William, upon the 18th day of May in the 1st year of the reign of the Lord James II. now King of England, &c. at Bushy, in a certain place there called Merry Hill Grounds, the cattle of the said Silas, to wit, thirty-six wether-sheep, twelve ewe-sheep, and eight lambs took and them unjustly detained against gages and pledges, until, &c. whereupon the said Silas saith that he is prejudiced, and hath damage to the value of ten pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said William Parkins by Redmond Baldwin his attorney, comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and the said William in his own proper right well avows, and as the bailiff of Algernon Earl of Essex well acknowledges the taking of the cattle aforesaid in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. because he saith that the said place in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be, contains, and at the said time in which the taking of the cattle aforesaid is supposed to be, did contain in itself two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in Bushy aforesaid; which two acres of pasture with the appurtenances are and at the said time, when, &c. were the soil and freehold of them the said William and Algernon Earl of Essex, and because the cattle aforesaid, at the said time, when, &c. were in the said two acres of pasture, eating up the grass then growing therein, and doing damage there, the said William in his own proper right well avows, and as the bailiff of the said Algernon Earl of Essex well acknowledges the taking of the cattle aforesaid, in the said place in which, &c. and justly, &c. so doing damage there, &c.

And the said Silas saith that the said William Parkins for the reason before alledged, the taking of the cattle aforesaid, in the said place in which, &c. ought not in his own proper right to avow, and as the bailiff of the said earl to acknowledge just; because he saith that the said two acres of pasture in which, &c. are and at the said time when, &c. [250] and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, were parcel of the manor of Bushy, and customary land of the said manor, and also demised and demiseable by copy of the rolls of the court of the said manor for the time being, to any person or persons willing to take the same in fee-simple or otherwise, at the will of the lord or lords, according to the custom of the said manor; and the said Silas further saith, that the said earl and William before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the 21st day of April, in the 1st year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, then being the lawful lords of the manor aforesaid, they the said earl and William afterwards, and before the said time when, &c. to wit, upon the said 21st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, at the court of them the said earl and William of their manor aforesaid, then held for the said manor, within the manor aforesaid, at Bushy aforesaid, in the said county of Hertford, by one Thomas Smith, gentleman, then their steward of the court of the manor aforesaid, by copy of the rolls of the court of the said manor, granted the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in which, &c. among others to the said Silas, to have and to hold to the said Silas his heirs and assigns for ever, at the will of the lords according to the custom of the said manor; and the said Silas according to the custom of the said manor, then and there was admitted tenant thereto, by virtue of which grant and admission the said Silas before the said time in which, &c. into the said two acres of pasture, with the appurtenance in which, &c. among others entered, and as yet is thereof seised in his demesne as of fee at the will of the lords, according to the custom of the said manor; and the said Silas so being thereof seised, the said Silas before the said time in which, &c. put his cattle aforesaid into the said two acres of pasture, in which, &c. to eat up the grass then growing therein, and his said cattle were in the said two acres of pasture in which, &c. eating up the grass then growing therein, until the said William Parkins on the said 18th day of May, in the 1st year aforesaid, at Bushy aforesaid, in the said two acres of pasture, called Merry Hill Grounds, in which, &c. took the said cattle of the said Silas, and them unjustly detained, against gages and pledges, until, &c. as the said Silas above against him complains; and this he is ready to verify; wherefore because the said William Parkins, the taking of the [251] cattle aforesaid above hath confessed; the said Silas prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the taking and unjust detaining of the cattle aforesaid, to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said William saith, that well and true it is that the said two acres with the appurtenances in which, &c. are, and at the said time when, &c. and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, were parcel of the said manor of Bushy, and customary lands of the said manor, and also demised and demiseable by copy of the rolls of the court of the said manor, by the lord or lords of the said manor, or by their steward of the court of the said manor for the time being, to the person or persons willing to take the same in fee-simple or otherwise, at the will of the lord or lords according to the custom of the said manor; and that the said earl and William Parkins before the said time, in which, &c. to wit, upon the said 21st day of April, in the 1st year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, were the lawful lords of the said manor; and that the said earl and William then being lords of the said manor, the said earl and William afterwards and before the said time when, &c. to wit, upon the said 21st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, at Bushy aforesaid, in the county of Hertford aforesaid, by the said Thomas Smith, then their steward of the court of their manor aforesaid, by copy of the rolls of the court of the said manor, granted the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in which, &c. among others, to the said Silas Titus, to have and to hold to the said Silas Titus, his heirs and assigns for ever, at the will of the lords, according to the custom of the said manor, and that the said Silas, according to the custom of the said manor, then and there was admitted tenant thereto, and that by virtue of the grant and admission aforesaid, he the said Silas before the said time when, &c. into the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances, in which, &c. among others entered, and was thereof seised in his demesne as of fee at the will of the lords, according to the custom of the said manor, as the said Silas above by pleading hath alledged, but the said William Parkins further saith, that the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in which, &c. together with other lands and tenements in the said copy mentioned, and by the said copy to the said Silas his heirs and assigns granted, and to which the said Silas was as aforesaid admitted, at the said time of the admission of the said Silas aforesaid, were of the clear yearly value of twenty-eight pounds, and that the said earl and William by the said [252] Thomas Smith, at the said full court of the manor aforesaid held within the manor aforesaid, on the said 21st day of April, in the 1st year of the reign of the said lord the now King aforesaid, the said Thomas Smith, then as aforesaid, being the steward of the said earl and William, then lords of the manor aforesaid, of their said court of the manor aforesaid, after the said admission of the said Silas to the said two acres of pasture, in which, &c. and to the said other lands and tenements by the copy aforesaid to the said Silas granted, then and there did assess and appoint the sum of thirty-five pounds for the fine for the said grant to the said Silas for the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in which, &c. and the other lands and tenements aforesaid, by the copy aforesaid, in the form aforesaid granted, to be paid by him the said Silas to the said earl and William, being as aforesaid lords of the manor aforesaid, upon the 1st day of May then next ensuing at the porch of the parochial church of Bushy aforesaid in the said county of Hertford, and that the said Silas then and there, to wit, at the manor aforesaid, of all and singular the premises had notice; and the said William further saith that the fine aforesaid, for the lands and tenements aforesaid, by the copy aforesaid, in the manner and form aforesaid, granted to the said Silas, was a reasonable fine; and that the said Silas Titus although he had notice of the premises aforesaid, from the lords aforesaid, of the manor aforesaid, at the court aforesaid, held as aforesaid, at the manor aforesaid, upon the said 21st day of April, did not pay to the said earl and William, lords of the manor aforesaid, or to either of them, the sum of thirty-five pounds for the fine aforesaid, in the form aforesaid assessed, upon the said first day of May then next ensuing the admission of the said Silas, at the said porch of the parochial church of Bushy aforesaid, but the said thirty-five pounds to the said earl and William then and there to pay wholly did deny and refuse, and as yet doth refuse, whereby the said Silas hath forfeited to the said earl and William, being as aforesaid, the lords of the manor aforesaid, whereof, &c. his entire right, estate, title and interest of and in the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances in which, &c. parcel of the said other customary lands and tenements in the grant aforesaid; after which forfeiture in the form aforesaid made, and before the said time, when, &c. the said earl and William, being as aforesaid, lords of the manor aforesaid, into the said two acres of pasture [253] with the appurtenances, in which, &c. entered, and were and as yet are thereof seised as of fee; and because the cattle aforesaid, after the entry aforesaid, to wit, at the said time when, &c. were in the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances, in which, &c. eating up the grass then growing therein, and doing damage there, the said William as before in his own proper right well avows, and as the bailiff of the said earl well acknowledges the taking of the cattle aforesaid, in the said place, in which, &c. and justly, &c. so doing damage there, &c. and this he is ready to verify; wherefore as before he prays judgment and a return of the cattle aforesaid, together with his damages, expences and costs by him about his suit in this behalf (1) laid out, according to the form of the statute in such case thereupon lately made and provided, to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Silas by protesting that the said sum of thirtyfive pounds for the fine aforesaid for the said lands and tenements by the copy aforesaid, to the said Silas, in the manner and form aforesaid granted, was not a reasonable fine as the said William above by pleading hath alledged, for plea the said Silas saith, that within the manor there is had, and also from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there was had such other custom used and approved of within the said manor for the whole time aforesaid, to wit, that such person or persons who should be admitted tenant or tenants to any customary lands or tenements of the said manor by copy of the rolls of the court of the said manor should pay, and ought and had been accustomed to pay to the lord or lords of the said manor for the time being, for a fine for his or their admission to such customary lands or tenements, such sum of money as the said lands or tenements were worth by the year at the time of such admission, and no more. And the said Silas in fact saith, that the said two acres of pasture with the appurtenances, in which, &c. together with the said lands and tenements in the said copy mentioned, and by the said copy to the said Silas and his heirs granted, and to which the said Silas was as aforesaid admitted, at the said time of the admission of the said Silas to the same were worth, and as yet are worth by the year twenty-eight pounds, and no more. And the said Silas further saith, that at the time of his admission aforesaid, to the tenements aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to wit, at the said court of the manor aforesaid, held [254] within the manor aforesaid, upon the said 21st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, he the said Silas was ready, and offered to pay to the said William, then one of the lords of the said manor, then and there being present in his proper person, such a sum of money as the said customary tenements with the appurtenances were worth by the year, at the time of the admission of the said Silas to the same, to wit, twenty-eight pounds of the lawful money of England; which twenty-eight pounds the said William, then and there, did wholly refuse to accept or receive from the said Silas; and this he is ready to verify: whereupon as before, he prays judgment and his damages, by occasion of the taking and unjust detention of the cattle aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said William Parkins saith, that the said plea of the said Silas above rejoining pleaded, and the matter therein contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said William from having his avowry and cognizance aforesaid, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, the said William [as before] prays judgment and a return of the cattle aforesaid, together with his damages and expences, by him about his suit in that behalf (1) laid out, according to the form of the statute in such case thereupon lately made and provided. And for cause of demurrer in law to the said plea, the said William, according to the form of the statute in such case lately made and provided, sets down and shews to the Court here the following cause, to wit, that the value of the land remains in estimation, and the custom aforesaid, by the said Silas above in pleading pretended and alledged, is uncertain, insufficient, and void in law.

And the said Silas because that he hath alledged sufficient matter in law in his plea aforesaid, above by rejoining pleaded to preclude the said William from having his avowry and cognizance aforesaid, which he is ready to verify, which matter the said William doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, as before prays judgment and his damages by

In replevin, the defendant avowed for damage-feasant in the freehold of him and the Earl of Essex. The plaintiff in bar of the avowry pleads, that the land is copyhold, and pleads an admittance of himself thereto by the defendant and the Earl of Essex. The defendant replies, that the copyhold was of the yearly value of 28l. and a fine was set at 35l. and for non payment an entry and forfeiture. The plaintiff rejoins, a custom for a fine of a year's value, and that he tendered the value, viz. the 28l. which was refused. Whereupon the defendant demurs specially, because the value consists only in estimation, and is uncertain, and that the custom alledged is uncertain, and wants form. And the sole question argued at Bar was, whether a custom to pay for a fine certain a year's value of the land at the time of the grant be good? for it was objected, that the year's value is uncertain, being at some times more, at other times less; and a person will give more rent at one time than another: so that the matter is wholly uncertain. But per Cur', it is certain enough, and issuable, and it is triable by jury, whether it be of such a yearly value, or not; and therefore the custom is good: and judgment was for the plaintiff.

THE KING against HUNTER.

Two men quarrelling, one casts a pot at the other, who instantly kills him with his sword. The pot is a weapon drawn within the statute of (1) the 1st Ja. 1, c. 8. Kelynge 55, 119. Foster C. L. 274, 295. 3 Bac. Ab. 672. 5 Bac. Ab. 320. 1 Hawkins P. C. 116, 125. 9 Coke 65. 2 Stra. 766. 2 Ld. Ray. 1485. 5 Burrow 2796. Leach C. C. 151, 156.

Memorandum, this term on a special verdict found at Newgate Sessions in the Old Baily, London, a matter was referred to all the Judges of England by the King's command, and it was argued before them at Serjeants-Inn, Fleet-Street, and was thus: David Hunter was indicted on the statute, 1 Jac. 1, against Stabbing, for the killing of Adrian de Loy, not having any weapon drawn: and on not guilty, the jury found that the year, day, and place in the indictment, Hunter called de Loy lying sot; who thereupon called Hunter Scotch dog: whereupon Hunter struck de Loy on the face with the back of his hand. Thereupon de Loy attempted to draw his dagger [256] at Hunter, but was prevented by the company there present. Whereupon de Loy threw a pot at Hunter, but missed him; whereupon Hunter with his sword gave de Loy the wound whereof he died. And if upon the whole matter Hunter be ousted of his clergy by the statute, was the question. And on hearing the counsel of both sides, it was held by Herbert Chief Justice of B. R. Jones Chief Justice of C. B. Gregory Baron of the Exchequer, Halloway a Judge of B. R. Charlton and Street of C. B. that he was ousted of his clergy, and yet divers of them admitted that the pot, as long as it was in his hand, was a weapon drawn; but when he had thrown it out of his hand without hurt done, and it was out of his

(1) The corresponding Irish Act is the 7th Will. 3, c. 11.—The enacting words of which are—1st section. That every person, &c. who shall stab or thrust any person or persons that hath not then any weapon drawn, or hath not then first stricken the party which shall so stab or thrust, so as the person or persons so stabbed or thrust shall thereof die within the space of six months then next following, although it cannot be proved that the same was done of malice fore-thought, yet the party so offending, and being convicted, &c. shall be excluded from the benefit of clergy, &c.

2d section. Provided that the said Act shall not extend to any person killing another se defendendo, or by misfortune, or in any other manner than as aforesaid, or in preserving the peace, [unless willingly and under colour thereof,] or in correcting a child or servant.

reach, he had no weapon drawn at the time he received his death's wound. And they took the words of the statute, not then having a weapon drawn, to refer only to the time of the wounding. But Mountague Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Levinz a Judge of C. B. Withins and Wright Judges of B. R. and Nevil puisne Baron of the Exchequer, held the contrary, and that the word then in the statute is to be referred to the time of the fighting or controversy, and not to the immediate instant of the wounding: and it seemed unreasonable to them, that one having a weapon drawn at one time during the controversy, and having done all the mischief he can with it, should be within the statute, which they conceived was made on the first Union of Scotland to prevent the sudden killing of men without provocation or defence. Now here de Loy (who had a dagger, and which he offered to draw, and which he had still about him) had cast the pot (which they agreed was a weapon drawn) at the other, and was thereupon instantly wounded by him. Suppose two men are fighting, and the one lets fall his sword, or it be beat out of his hand, and he is at the instant wounded; or suppose, that in the combat he darts his sword at the other, who instantly wounds him, whereof he dies, shall the other be ousted of clergy? Or if one having a pistol discharges it at the other, who beats it out of his hand, or he let the pistol fall, and the other wounds him, shall he be ousted of clergy? Here de Loy threw the pot mischievously and dangerously enough at Hunter, if it had hit him; and that he had it not in his hands at the time of the wound given, that was his own fact, and like the case of darting the sword, or shooting off the pistol, [257] and afterward throwing it at another; and therefore they held he ought to have his clergy. Baron Atkins was absent; and the Recorder being of opinion with the five last Judges, he reported it to the King, who was himself also of the same opinion. Whereupon the prisoner had his clergy.

Memorandum, that two days before the end of this term I received a supersedeas under the Great Seal, signifying the King's Royal pleasure to discharge me from the office of a Judge, whereto I most humbly submit.

Master or part-owners of a ship responsible, but all the part-owners to be joined. 2 Lev. 27. 2 Saunders 115, 116. 3 Mod. 322. 1 Salk. 10. 1 Bulst. 16. Post. 352, 362. 6 Mod. 181. 6 Term Rep. 370.

Case against the defendants proprietors of a ship, wherein goods are usually transported for hire; and that the plaintiff loaded goods on board the said ship to be carried for hire from London to Topsham in Devonshire; and that the defendants received them and undertook to carry them to Topsham, but that they not being careful therein, but neglecting their duty, did so carelessly place and carry the goods, that though the ship arrived safely at Topsham, yet the goods were spoiled: and on not guilty the jury found a special verdict, viz. that ten other persons besides the defendants are proprietors and part-owners of the ship; that the ship had a master placed in her by the part-owners, who had 60l. wages for every voyage between Topsham and London; that the goods were delivered to the master, none of the part-owners being present, and that no contract was made with them or any for the plaintiff, that the ship should arrive safe at Topsham, but that the goods were spoiled by negligence, &c. And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff; and if not, for the defendant. And two questions were made in this case. 1. Whether the proprietors are chargeable, no contract being made with them, for that here was a master who was chargeable in respect of his wages, as in the [259] case of Mors and Slue, 1 Ventris 190, 238, lately adjudged in this Court. And as to this point Holt (now Ch. Just.) held clearly, that though the master be chargeable in respect of his wages, so are the proprietors also (in respect of the freight, which they received for the carriage of the goods) at the plaintiff's election. 2. Whether the action lay against the defendants only, it appearing there are other part-owners, who are not made defendants: and he held, that the action did not lie, except it were brought against all the part-owners; for they are all chargeable in respect of their (joint) profit made by the carriage, and that in point of contract upon their (joint) undertaking, be it either expressed or implied: and they are not chargeable as trespassors, for then one of them might be charged alone, but in point of contract upon their receipt of the goods to be carried for hire, and so has the plaintiff laid it in his declaration, viz. that they undertook to carry them, &c. Sed Cur' advisare vult. But afterwards (as Justice Dolben told me) judgment was given for the defendants for that cause. Levinz was of counsel for the plaintiff.

Ejectment of lands in Wigginton in Yorkshire, on a demise by Dorothy Hewly heir of Christopher Hewly, who being seised of the lands in question in fee made his will in these words; I devise to my wife (now the wife of Wivell the defendant) 600*l. to be paid to William Weddal, and it is for the full payment for the lands I purchased of him* (being the lands in question) and are already stated in part of a jointure to my said wife during her life, being of the value of 67*l. per annum; that of Wiston, York and Malton, the lands there amount to* 63*l. per annum, in all* 130*l. per annum, being also stated on my wife, in full of her jointure.* But the lands in Wigginton were not settled on the wife: and whether they should pass by the will to her for life? was the question: and it was resolved by Pollexfen Ch. Justice, Rooksby and Ventris Justices, that they should not pass by the will. Here are no words of devise to pass them, nor does any intent appear that she should have them [260] by the will, but only a mistake that he had settled them before, but no devise or intent appears by the will that she should have them; and therefore they cannot pass by implication, as in the case of H. 7, where a man devised his lands to his heir after his wife's death, there the wife shall have them in the mean time, for there the lands are devised, and to the heir, but not until after the wife's death; and therefore the heir is not to have them until her death, and so she shall have them in the mean time by implication; but in this case the lands are not devised at all, only he declares they are already settled on his wife, wherein he is mistaken, and this shall not be expounded a devise to the wife by implication. But Justice Powel held the contrary; for here appears an intent that the wife should have them, and though he be mistaken in the means or way that she should take them by, viz. the settlement, yet she shall have them by such way as she may take, viz. by the will, rather than his intent should be frustrated. But on the opinion of the other three Judges judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz of counsel with the plaintiff.

FOWKES against JOYCE.

S. C. Lutw. 1161 to 1165. 2 Ventris 50. Nelson's Lut. 364.

Cattle bringing to London were by leave lodged in a close, they are distrainable for rent. 2 Saunders 289. 5 Mod. 360, 362. Co. Lit. 47 a. Note 14, 47 b. Note 3. 3 Bur. 1498. 1 Blac. Rep. 483.

In replevin, on a special plea and demurrer, the case was; the defendant Joyce was seised of the George-Inn in Barnet, and demised it and close where the distress was taken to Willis for years, rendering rent. The plaintiff was a drover, and bringing the beasts to London, ad proficuum suum inde faciend' (for so is the pleading, and it is not said ad mercatum) by consent of the defendant, and by license of Willis the lessee, put his beasts in the place where, &c. to feed for a night, and the defendant the landlord distrained them for his rent arrear: and if he might lawfully do so? was the question: and no advantage was taken of its being an inn. 1. For that though it was let as an inn, yet it did not appear that it continued so at the time of the distress. 2. For that it does not appear by the pleadings that the close belonged to the inn, though demised therewith. 3. For that the plaintiff did not insist on the privilege of an inn, but only that the cattle were put [261] in by consent of the landlord Joyce, the defendant, which was held to be frivolous; for it was held without any doubt, that if the lessor consented that a stranger should put his beasts in the lands demised, by license of the lessee, yet the landlord may distrain them for his rent, notwithstanding such consent. But the principal question was, that those beasts being bringing to London, and so supposed to be for provision for this great city, whether it was lawful for the landlord to distrain them for rent due for a close wherein they are lodged only for a night in their way? And in the foregoing Michaelmas term, when this question was first argued, Justice Lutwyche held strongly that they were not distrainable for this reason, and grounded his opinion on Cro. Eliz. 549, 599, where one sending wool to a spinner's house to be spun, the spinner having no weights sent it to a neighbour's house to be weighed, where the landlord distrained it for the rent of the house: resolved, that this wool concerning trade was not distrainable, though not then in the spinner's house, but at a neighbour's to be weighed; and to this opinion Herbert Chief Justice inclined. But now Pollexfen Chief Justice, and the whole Court gave judgment for the avowant; for it is not reason that the beasts coming to this city from all remote parts of the realm should be priviledged against the distress of all landlords for their rent through all the way they come. Note, No notice was taken of the pleading, that the beasts were bringing ad profic' inde faciend', and not said ad mercat', but by the opinion of the Court that seemed to be admitted.

Assumpsit by the plaintiff, executor of her husband, lord of the manor of Burbon, for a copyhold fine set by the husband in his lifetime, upon the defendant for his admittance. And upon non assumpsit and verdict for the plaintiff judgment had been stayed, and twice argued on this point, whether an assumpsit would lie for a copyhold fine [262] on an assumpsit in law? And now it was held by Holt Chief Justice, that it would not lie, it being a duty arising out of an inheritance, a custom, and a tenure, and therefore not fit to be thrown (as he termed it) into a declaration in assumpit. But Dolben, Gregory and Eyre were contrary, and cited Sir Robert Howard's case lately adjudged in this Court, that an assumpsit lies for the profits received by one who claims a title to an office: and the case of The Mayor, &c. of London against Gorry, assumpsit for the scavage on the promise in law, yet they have an inheritance in the scavage; and here the fine is set, and does not depend on the inheritance, but is a fruit fallen, as escuage, for which the executors of the lord may have an action, Co. Lit. 47 b. Wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff by the said three Judges: and also in another cause at the same time for the same executors for another copyhold fine.

Arbitrators elect an umpire who refuses, and then elect another, which last election is good. 1 Levinz 285. 1 Keble, 790, 823, &c. 2 Jones 168. 1 Mod. 275. 2 Saund. 129, 130. 3 Term Rep. 592. Note b. Kyd on Awards, 56.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to perform an award, ita quod, &c. and if the arbitrators did not make any award, that they elect an umpire to make an umpirage, ita quod, &c. The defendant pleads, that the arbitrators made no award, and that they did not elect an umpire. The plaintiff replies, that the arbitrators made no award, and that they elected an umpire, who refused; and that they elected another umpire, who made an umpirage, and shews what it was, and assigns a breach. The defendant demurs; and it was argued several times at Bar, and the sole question was, whether after the arbitrators had elected one umpire, and he refuses, if they could elect another umpire afterward? or whether their power was so determined, that they could not elect another? And Pollexfen Chief Justice held their power determined, and their election of another umpire void; for it is agreed by the pleadings, that they had elected one umpire, and if so, that proves their first election was not void, and then they could not elect another; for authorities once executed are determined? But Powel, Rokesby and Ventris Justices to the contrary; that the first nomination or election became void by his refusal, as if he had never been elected, and cited Coppin and [264] Hurnard's case in Saund. Rep. 129, and Pal. 289, a sheriff makes an insufficient execution, he may make another, Hob. 167, and Cro. Eliz. 7, insufficient acts are no acts in law; and by the opinion of the said three Judges judgment was given for the plaintiff.

DOUSE against EARLE.

S. C. 2 Ventris 126, 127.

Covenant by a tenant to erect three houses, and them to keep in repair, and the said premises and the houses thereupon to be erected, to deliver up sufficiently repaired at the end of the term; this covenant extends to all houses erected upon the premises before the end of the term. Skinner 121. 8 Co. 94. 10 Co. 47. Cro. Ja. 47. Godb. 308. Palm. 335. 1 Roll. Rep. 356, 358. 1 Bulstr. 193. Cro. El. 795. Ray. 163. 1 Rol. Ab. 610. 1 Bac. Ab. 540.

Covenant, and declares, that John Earl of Clare, Decemb. 9, 1647, demised to Gale three messuages for 41 years, and Gale covenants to pull them down, and erect three others in their place; and also from time to time during the term, to maintain the messuages so agreed to be erected in sufficient repair; and also to repair the pavements, sinks, widraughts, &c. Ac dicta dimissa premissa ac domos superinde fore erect' & earum quamlibet ad finem termini sufficienter reparat' deliberaret to the said earl, his heirs and assigns, and he derives the reversion for a thousand years to the father of the plaintiff, who by his will devised the term of a thousand years to the plaintiff for his life, the remainder to his son, and the heirs males of his body; and that the plaintiff by the devise was possessed of the said term for a thousand years, and then derived down the term of forty-one years to the defendant, as executor to Gale, and then assigns a breach, that the defendant permitted one messuage erected on the premisses to fall quite down, and had also permitted four messuages erected on another part of the premisses to be out of repair in the tiles and windows, and so left them at the end of the term. The defendant pleads, that Gale took down the three messuages, and erected three others, which the defendant left in repair; and as to the other messuages, that he left them in sufficient repair. And now the question was, when the lessee agreed to erect three messuages, and to leave them in repair, and he erects five, if in this case he shall be obliged to keep all the five messuages in repair? and per tot' Cur' he shall in this case be bound to repair all the five messuages, and to leave them in repair; for though in the first covenant he be obliged only to [265] repair the messuages so agreed to be erected, which were three, during the term, yet by the last covenant he is bound dicta dimissa ac domos superinde erect' (not agreed to be erected, but superinde erect. indefinitely) which extends to all the houses which should be erected on the premisses before the term (expired,) whether they were agreed to be erected, or not; also this last covenant is to leave them in repair at the end of the term: and they held, if a man took a lease of a messuage and land, and covenants to leave the demised premisses in good repair at the end of the term, and he erects another messuage on part of the land, besides that which was there before, he shall be bound to keep and to leave the messuage, by himself so newly erected, in repair, as well as the other, vid. Hob. Darcy against Askwith. And also here, whereas the plaintiff says that he was possessed by virtue of the will for the term of a thousand years, and the devise is to him for his life only, the remainder to his son and the heirs males of his body, the Court held it well; for the remainder to his son is only a contingent, supposing any remainder of a term can be; for every estate for life is in supposal of law of greater continuance than any estate for years, and therefore the whole term is in the father during his life, and the remainder to the son is but a possibility; and by all the justices, viz. Pollexfen Chief-Just. and Powel, Rokesby and Ventris, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[266] EASTER TERM, IN THE SECOND YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

PROTHONOTARY WINFORD against WOLLASTON.

Action for disturbing one of a way, which he ought to have, use and enjoy, held good, although no title by prescription shewn. 6 Mod. 312, 313. Ante 133. Com. Dig. Pleader. C. 39. 3 Mod. 48. 2 Levinz 148.

Case, and declares, that for four years last past he was seized in fee of a parcel of land adjoining to the field of the defendant, called Brambleburg, and being so seized, he, during the time aforesaid, ought to have, enjoy and use a certain way through a certain gate of the defendant's in Brambleburg to a close of the plaintiff, &c. Notwithstanding which the said defendant machinans ipsum impedire de usu viæ prædict' 17 Julii anno regni Regis nunc primo, januam præd' cum sera & catena obstruxit, & adhuc obstruit, per quod, &c. Judgment was for the plaintiff by default, and a writ of enquiry of damages: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the plaintiff had not shewn any title by prescription, or otherwise, and therefore not good: and the case of St. John and Moody was after verdict, and therefore is no authority for this case. But Pollexfen and the whole Court on the contrary held, it was not substance, but only form, and was well enough on a judgment by default and a general demurrer without special cause shewn; and some of them held it good in all cases, although shewn for cause upon the demurrer, and gave judgment for the plaintiff: and afterwards in another cause between Warren and St. Hill, such a declaration was adjudged good upon a demurrer. Levinz of counsel for the defendant in both causes.

S. C. 4 Mod. 44. 2 Ventris 184.

Arrears of rent on a lease parol determined, are payable by executors before obligations. 5 Coke 82. Cro. Eliz. 409. 2 Saunders 49. 1 Mod. 175. 3 Mod. 115. Vaughan 94, 95. Keilw. 74. 1 Sid. 21. Ante 57. 1 Vernon 290. Swinburne 457.

Debt for rent on a lease parol for three years from Septemb. 28, 1685, rendering 90l. per annum rent, and for 270l. rent, due at Michaelmas 1688, the action was brought after the term ended against the defendant executor of the lessee, who pleads an obligation entered into by the testator, and says he had not assets above 5l. which are not sufficient to satisfy the debt due by the obligation. The plaintiff demurs, and the question was, whether the rent on a lease parol, and the term being ended, be payable before a debt by obligation? and it was argued for the plaintiff, that the rent being due upon a real contract, although it was by parol, is of a higher nature than the obligation. But for the defendant it was said, that the term being ended, the arrears are become merely personal; otherwise perhaps, if the lease had remained in being, because then the plaintiff might have distrained for it. The authorities cited were Styl. 2, 61, 38. Roll. 1 Abr. 927, lit. S. nu. 2 & 3. 11 H. 4, 79 b. 13 H. 4, 9. None of which came up directly to this, nor is any authority to be found in the books direct in the case, which the Court admired, being a case which often happened. Pollexfen Chief-Justice inclined for the plaintiff, for the defendant could not wage his law, which proves it not to be merely personal. Powell Justice inclined to the difference, where the lease parol is determined, or not? and it was adjourned. But afterward judgment was given by the whole Court for the plaintiff, on which a writ of error was immediately brought in B. R. and in Trin. 3 W. & M. the judgment was affirmed by Holt Chief-Justice and the whole Court, who held, that the contract remains in the realty, though the term was determined. Pemberton for the plaintiff. Levinz for the defendant.

Case lies for dilapidations by a parson, &c. Post, 413. 2 Viner Ab. 17. 8 Viner Ab. 482. 2 Term Rep. 630.

Case by a parson for dilapidation against his predecessor, and declares, that the defendant being a parson accepted another benefice, and left the houses (of the former) out of repair; and the custom of the realm was, that in such a case he ought to pay to the successor tant' denar' sum' quant' sufficiunt ad reparand', and the repairs amounted to so much, which the defendant had not paid. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action did not lie, and of that opinion was Pollexfen Ch. Just. who tried the cause at Warwick Assizes, and continued still of the same opinion; for he said it was merely suable in the Ecclesiastical Court: but for maintaining the action were cited at the Bar Degg's Parsons Ley, part 1, c. 8, pag. 79, where it is said that many such actions had been maintained, and also cited Hill. 18 H. 8, Rot. 306. Hill. 15 Jac. 1, Rot. 474. Mich. 12 H. 8, Rot. 730. But upon searching the rolls no judgment was given in any of those cases, though in some of them a verdict, and divers continuances were entered. But Mich. 3 Jac. 2, C. B. Rot. 332, between Day and Hollington, in the like case, judgment was for the plaintiff upon a demurrer. But now the Court inclined to the opinion of the Ch. Just. Pollexfen, yet ordered the cause to be put in the paper to be further argued: and afterward in Trinity term, Pollexfen and Ventris being dead, the case was again argued before Powell and Rokesby, and they gave judgment for the plaintiff, Levinz being counsel for the plaintiff.

Assumpsit against the defendant as administratrix, she pleads a statute unpaid, the plaintiff replied that an extent and liberate were sued on the statute, and lands delivered thereon; the defendant rejoins, that the sheriff was removed from his office, whereby the return was void; to which plaintiff demurs generally, and has judgment. Assumpsit against the defendant, as administratrix of her husband, for 20l. 10s. The defendant pleads, that the intestate was bound in a statute of 2000l. to Cardel for a true and just debt, remaining unpaid. The plaintiff replies, that Cordel sued an extent and a liberate on the statute, and had lands delivered and accepted by him, and the return of the writ thereupon, prout patet per recordum. The defendant rejoins, that the sheriff, who returned the writ, was removed from his office, whereby the return was void. The plaintiff demurs generally, and had judgment; for per Cur', Cordel by his acceptance of the lands on the liberate was concluded to have any other execution against the goods of the deceased, and so the administratrix is not chargeable upon this statute. Vid. Fitz. Execution 84. Cro. Ja. 694, and 15 H. 7, 15, 16, Delenham's case; and this very point was lately resolved in this Court between Johnson and Young, by reason of the presumption, that by the acceptance of the lands the statute was satisfied; and as to the plea, that the sheriff was removed before the return made, that is contrary to the record, and is not receivable; wherefore the plaintiff had judgment.

HILARY, 1 WILLIAM AND MARY. IN B. R.

KNIGHT AND ANOTHER, EXECUTORS OF KNIGHT, against COLE AND HIS WIFE, EXECUTORS OF LAWFORD.

Writ of scire facias. Return.

England, to wit.—The lord the King and the lady the Queen have given in charge to the sheriffs of the City of Bristol their close in these words, to wit, William and Mary by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France and Ireland King and Queen, defenders of the faith, &c. to the Sheriffs of the City of [270] Bristol greeting. Whereas John Knight, Knight, William Eyre, Esquire, and John Knight, Esquire, lately in the Court of the Lord Charles the Second late King of England, before the late King himself, by bill without the writ of the said late King and by the judgment of the said Court, recovered against John Lawford, Esquire, otherwise called John Lawford, of the City of Bristol, Esquire, six thousand pounds of debt, and also sixteen pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence for their damages, which they sustained as well by the occasion of the detention of that debt, as for their expences and costs by them about their suit in that behalf laid out, whereof he is convicted, as appears to us of record. And afterwards, to wit, upon the first day of March, in the 36th year of the reign of said Lord Charles the Second late King of England, &c. the said John Knight, Knight, and William Eyre, Esquire, at the City of Bristol aforesaid, in the county of the said city, died, and the said John Knight, Esquire, survived them; and afterwards, to wit, upon the 1st day of June, in the 36th year of the reign of the said Lord Charles the Second late King of England, &c. aforesaid, the said John Knight, Esquire, at the City of Bristol made his last will and testament in writing, and by the said will constituted John Kent, Thomas Knight, Esquire, and William Doning, merchant, executors thereof, and afterwards there died, [the debt and damages aforesaid, upon the judgment aforesaid, or any part thereof, then and there not being satisfied], after whose death the said John Kent, Thomas Knight, and William Doning took upon themselves the burthen of the execution of the testament aforesaid, and the said testament proved in the due form of law. And afterwards, to wit, upon the first day of September, in the year of our Lord 1688, the said John Kent at the City of Bristol aforesaid, in the county of the said city died, and the said Thomas Knight and William Doning survived him; and afterwards, to wit, upon the first day of October, in the year of our Lord 1688 aforesaid, he the said John Lawford at the City of Bristol aforesaid, in the county of the said city, made his last will and testament in writing, and by his said will constituted his daughter Mary then and as yet the wife of Thomas Cole, Esquire, sole executrix thereof, and afterwards there died, [the debt and damages aforesaid or any part thereof not being satisfied] after whose death the said Mary took upon herself the burthen of the execution of the testament aforesaid, [271] and the said testament proved in the due form of law. And now on the behalf of the said Thomas Knight and William Doning in our Court before us, we have understood that although the judgment aforesaid is given, nevertheless execution of the debt and damages aforesaid as yet remains to be made; whereupon the said Thomas Knight and William Doning have besought us to grant them their proper remedy in this behalf; and we being willing that that which is just in this behalf should be done, command you that by good and lawful men of your bailiwick you make known to the said Thomas Cole and Mary, that they be before us at Westminster on Saturday next after the octave of St Martin, to shew if they have or know any thing to say for themselves; wherefore the said Thomas Knight and William Doning ought not to have execution against the said Thomas Cole and Mary of the debt and damages aforesaid, of the goods and chattels which were the said John Lawford's at the time of his death, in their hands to be administered according to the force, form and effect of the recovery aforesaid, if it shall seem expedient to them, and further to do and receive what our Court before us concerning them then and there shall consider in this behalf, and have there then the names of those by whom you shall make known to them, together with this writ, witness John Holt, Knight, at Westminster, the 6th day of November, in the 1st year of our reign. HENLY.

At which day before the lord the King and the lady the Queen at Westminster came the said Thomas Knight and William Doning in their proper persons: and the sheriffs of the City of Bristol, to wit, John Bubb, Esquire, and John Blackwell, Esquire, upon the writ aforesaid return that they the said sheriffs by Daniel Jones and Richard Edwards good and lawful men of their bailiwick, have made known to the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife, that they should be before the lord the King and the lady the Queen at the day and place in the said writ contained, to shew in the form aforesaid, &c.

And the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife on the fourth day of plea being solemnly called come by Andrew Innys their attorney, and say that the said Thomas Knight and William Doning ought not to have their execution aforesaid, upon the debt and damages aforesaid thereupon against them, because they say that the said William Doning before the day of the issuing of the writ of scire [272] facias, to wit, upon the 29th day of May, in the first year of the reign of the Lord William and the Lady Mary the now King and Queen of England, &c. at the City of Bristol aforesaid, in the county of the said city, by his certain writing of release, sealed with the seal of the said William Doning, which they the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife bring here into Court, the date of which is the said day and year, acknowledged that he had received upon the day of the release aforesaid, of and from the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife, executrix of the last will and testament of John Lawford, Esquire, deceased, the sum of five pounds being a legacy given to the said William Doning by the said John Lawford in and by his last will and testament, and therefore the said William Doning did remise and release the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife of and from the said legacy, and of and from all actions, suits and demands whatsoever, which the said William Doning had had or then had against the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife, executors and administrators, or executor or administrator of the said John Lawford deceased, for any matter or cause whatsoever, from the beginning of the world until the day of the date of the said release, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray judgment, and that the said Thomas Knight and William Doning may be precluded from having their execution aforesaid for the debt and damages aforesaid against the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife.

J. POWEL.

And the said Thomas Knight and William Doning say that the plea aforesaid by the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife above pleaded, and the matter therein contained are not sufficient in law to preclude the said Thomas Knight and William Doning from having their execution aforesaid against the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife, for the debt and damages aforesaid, according to the force, form and effect of the recovery aforesaid; to which plea and the matter therein contained, the said Thomas Knight and William Doning have no necessity, neither are they bound by the law of the land in any manner to answer, and this the said Thomas Knight and William Doning are ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, the said [273] Thomas Knight and William Doning pray judgment and the debt aforesaid, together with their damages, by occasion of the detention of that debt, to be adjudged to them, &c. HENRY TRINDER.

And the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife say that the said plea by them the said Thomas Cole and Mary in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded, and the matter therein contained, are good and sufficient in law to preclude them the said Thomas Knight and William Doning from having their execution aforesaid against them the said Thomas Cole and Mary his wife for the debt and damages aforesaid, which plea and the matter therein contained the said Thomas Cole and Mary are ready to verify and prove, as the Court, &c. And because the said Thomas Knight and William Doning to the said plea do not answer, nor the same in any manner hitherto do deny, the said Thomas Cole and Mary pray judgment of the writ aforesaid, and that the said writ may be quashed, &c. But because, &c.

KNIGHT AND ANOTHER, EXECUTORS OF KNIGHT, against COLE AND HIS WIFE EXECUTORS OF LAWFORD.

General words in a release restrained by the particular occasion. 1 Lev. 99, 101, 235. 2 Lev. 210, 214. 1 Ventris 314. 2 Shower, pl. 32. 1 Mod. 99. 1 Sid. 141. Carth. 119.

The plaintiffs, executors of Knight, bring a scire facias against the defendants, executors of Lawford, upon a judgment of 6000l. obtained by Knight the testator against Lawford the testator. The defendants plead in bar a release by Doning, one of the plaintiffs, to Cole, one of the defendants, which is entered in hæc verba, I acknowledge to have received of T. Cole the sum of five pounds given me for a legacy by Lawford, [274] and release to him all actions, suits and demands whatsoever, which I against him, as executor of Lawford, have, or may or can have for any matter whatsoever. The plaintiff demurs; and now it was argued for the defendant, 1. That a release by an executor of all demands will release demands which he has as executor, as well as those he has in his own right, 2 Roll. Abr. 409 a. sect. 1, ibid. 404, lit. p. sect. 1. And if an executor grants omnia bona sua, it passes goods he has as executor, Cro. Eliz. 164. Gillam's case, Cro. Ja. 318. Arnold versus Bidgood, Cro. Eliz. 759. And it is a rule in Altham's case, 8 Co. Rep. 154 b. when the words are particular in the commencement, and general words follow, the operation of the deed shall be upon the general words; otherwise, if the words are general in the commencement, and particular in the conclusion; and in this case the general words are in the conclusion. But for the plaintiff it was argued, that by the release itself it appears that it was made for a particular purpose, viz. for discharging the legacy of 5l. and this particular purpose shall restrain the generality of the words; and it cannot be imagined that any one upon the payment of a legacy of 5l. would discharge a debt of 6000l. due by a judgment, and cited Dyer 240 a. 255 a. Hob. 275. Hetl. 15, whereto Dolben and Eyre inclined upon the first argument; and Eyre cited 2 Rol. Abr. 409, lit. A. sect. 3. But Holt said, that that was only a quotation by Tanfield, and the case is not to be found in any book, but inclined, the words all demands should be intended all that he could have in his own right, as if he had said, all his actions and demands; and he said, that an executor by a grant of all his goods did not pass goods which he had as executor, Cro. Eliz. 6, but he said it was a case of general concernment, and therefore it was adjourned to be further argued. But afterward, as I heard, judgment was given for the plaintiff, and that the general words of the release should be restrained by the particular occasion, and should only release the legacy of 5l. Levinz for the defendant, Shower for the plaintiff.(1)

MORDANT ADMINISTRATOR OF LADY THOROLD against THOROLD BART.

S. C. 1 Salk. 252. 1 Shower 97. 3 Mod. 281.

A sci. fac' to have damages and costs taxed in a writ of dower after the death of the demandant, before writ of enquiry and final judgment, doth not lie. Noy 126. 9 Viner Ab. 288, 295. 10 Viner Ab. 553. 11 Viner Ab. 132.

A scire fac. on a judgment in dower obtained by the Lady Thorold against the defendant to have the value of the damages, mesne profits, costs and waste, from the time of the husband's death, which in value amounted to 670l. which judgment was removed by writ of error out of C. B. into B. R. and there affirmed, after which the lady died, and administration was committed to the plaintiff, who brought this writ against the defendant, to shew cause wherefore the plaintiff should not recover the damages, &c. and the costs in the writ of error. The defendant pleads, that no damages, &c. were adjudged to the lady in her life-time for the damages, mesne profits, &c. nor for the costs in the writ of error. And now it was argued for the plaintiff, that although the damages, costs, &c. were not assessed in the lady's life-time, by reason of the defendant's delay, &c. yet they were due and vested in her (viz. the right to have them) by the judgment, and therefore they shall go to the administrator, who shall have them taxed upon this writ; and the rather in this case since by the statute 16 & 17 Car. 2, cap. 2, sect. 3, no judgment after verdict in dower shall be stayed till bail found to answer the costs and damages. Whereto it was answered, that the statute does not concern this case, for it appears not, that the judgment in dower was upon a verdict, nor is the bail sued in this case; and if the judgment had been upon verdict, it should not extend to this case; for the statute was made only to secure the costs for delay in the writ of error in such manner as they were before secured by the statute 3 Jac. 1, c. 8, in personal actions. But there damages are given in satisfaction of an injury, which is in nature of a trespass, and die with the person, where the person dies before the judgment perfected. And to this opinion the Court inclined: and Dolben remembered the case of Aleworth and Roberts in this Court, Mich. 13 Car. 2, where after judgment in dower and a writ of seisin executed the tenant died, and the demandant brought a scire fac. against the heir and tertenant to have the damages enquired of: and it was adjudged it did not lie. But this being a new case, the Court would advise. Pemberton for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

[276] CLERK against TUCKET AND STAPLEDON.

HILARY, 1 WILLIAM AND MARY. IN C. B.

Declaration in trespass vi et armis. Demurrer. Joinder. Continuance.

City of Exeter, to wit.—John Tucket, of the City of Exeter, in the county of the said city, hosier, and William Stapledon, late of the City of Exeter, in the county of the said city, woolcomber, were attached to answer Thomas Clarke of a plea wherefore with force and arms the house of the said Thomas, at the City of Exeter, in the county of the said city they broke, and the goods and chattels of the said Thomas, to the value of 20 shillings there lately found took and carried away, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said Thomas, and against the peace of the lord and lady the now King and Queen of England, &c. Whereupon the said Thomas by John Northmore his attorney complains that the said John Tucket and William Stapledon, on the 22d day of October, in the first year of the reign of the lord and lady the now King and Queen of England, &c. with force and arms, &c. the house of the said Thomas, to wit, his mansion house at the City of Exeter, in the county of the said city broke, and the goods and chattels, to wit, fourteen pewter plates of the said Thomas to the value, &c. there lately found took and carried away, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of forty pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said John and William by Thomas Ford their attorney come and defend the force and injury when, &c. and as to the coming with force and arms, or whatever that is against the peace of the said lord the now King and the said lady the now Queen, they say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the country; and the said Thomas doth the like. And as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid above supposed to have been committed, the said John and William say that the said Thomas ought not to have or maintain his action aforesaid thereupon against them, because they say that long before the said time in which, &c. Edward the Fourth late King of England by his letters patent, sealed with his Great Seal of England, which they the said John and William [277] produce here in Court, the date of which is at Westminster, upon the 16th day of November, in the sixth year of his reign, of his especial grace and with a view to charity, and for the especial devotion which he had and bore in his mind to the most holy prophet John the Baptist, granted for himself, his heirs and successors, to his beloved liege men of the Mystery of Taylors within the City of Exeter, that they in the said city one guild or company in honour of the said St. John the Baptist of the men of the said mystery and others might unite, found, create, erect and establish, and the said guild or company so united, founded, created, erected and established, might have, hold and enjoy the same to them and their successors, to endure to future times for ever; and that they might encrease and augment the said guild or company, as often as and whenever it should seem to them to be necessary and convenient. And that the men of the said guild or company for the honour of St. John the Baptist in every year might have, hold and exercise the said Guild or Company of Taylors, and of the other persons whom they should will to receive into the company aforesaid; and might elect, have and make one master and four wardens of themselves as often as it should seem good to them, or as there should be occasion, for the government, wardship and rule of the said company for ever, as it should seem good to them. And that the said master and wardens in every year might appoint one livery for the cloathing of the brothers and sisters of the said company. And that the said masters and wardens might make their meetings and assemblies in the places of the said city convenient to them, and there might hold and keep in a laudable manner their feast of meat and drink at the said Feast of St. John the Baptist, and there might make orders between themselves, as it should seem to them to be more necessary and convenient, for the better government of the company aforesaid for ever. And further the said late King of his further grace did will and grant for him and his heirs, that the said master and wardens and their successors should be perpetual, and that the said company should be in itself an entire and corporate company, and that the said Company of Taylors of St. John the Baptist in the City of Exeter, and the said Master and Wardens of the Company of Taylors of St. John the Baptist in the City of Exeter thereafter should be named and called the Master, Wardens and Company of Taylors of St. John the Baptist in the City of Exeter. [278] And the said masters and wardens and their successors and also the company aforesaid did incorporate to endure for ever; and them did make as one body, and them did declare, accept and approve to be one body, and also that they should be held to be one body, and that they should have a common seal, and also by the name of the Master, Wardens and Company of Taylors of Exeter for ever might plead and be impleaded, as by the said letters patent among other things more fully is manifest and appeareth. And the said John and William further say that the said Master and Wardens of the Company of Taylors of Exeter afterwards and before the said time in which, &c. to wit, at a certain assembly of the said Master and Wardens of the Company of Taylors of Exeter aforesaid, held at the said City of Exeter, the 26th day of March, in the 21st year of the reign of the Lord Charles the Second late King of England, &c. among other things for the good and wholesome government, quiet and prosperity of the company aforesaid, did ordain and establish, that if any person who should be master or chief warden of the corporation aforesaid, at any assembly of the said company, should revile, abuse, or use any scurrilous or opprobrious discourse towards the master or any of his brethren of the said company, the said discourse being duly proved, should forfeit and lose six shillings and eight pence, and that all and every other person and persons of the said company who should revile, abuse or use any scurrilous, opprobrious, or unhandsome discourse towards the said master, wardens, or any of the council of the said company, he should forfeit and lose three shillings and four-pence, and that the fine or fines aforesaid should be levied and recovered by distress, by warrant under the common seal of the corporation aforesaid, and by the sale of the goods distrained, first giving to the person or persons so offending notice of such fine or fines for the space of four days before the levying thereof, by a demand thereof by a warden of the company aforesaid, or by the beadle of the company aforesaid. Which ordinances and rules among other things afterwards, to wit, upon the said 26th day of March, in the 21st year aforesaid, at the City of Exeter aforesaid, in the county of the said city, by John Vaughan, Knight, then Chief Justice [279] of the Bench, and John Archer, Knight, then one of the justices of the Bench aforesaid, justices of the said lord the King, assigned to take Assizes in the county of the City of Exeter aforesaid, were examined and approved according to the form of the statute in such case lately made and provided. And the said John and William further in fact say that the said Thomas Clark, upon the said 22d day of October now last past, and for the space of divers years then last past, and always afterwards hitherto was and as yet is a member, freeman and one of the said company, to wit, at the City of Exeter aforesaid: and that after the making of the ordinance aforesaid, and notice thereof by the said Thomas then and there had, and before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the 5th day of July now last past, at the City of Exeter aforesaid, in the county of the said city, at a certain assembly of the said Mayor and Wardens of the Company of Taylors of Exeter aforesaid, and of the company aforesaid, at the common hall of the said company then and there had and held, and the said Thomas then being a member, freeman and one of the said company, came to the said common hall of the said company within the said city, and then and there with very many scoffing, opprobrious and scurrilous discourses and clamours did revile and abuse the master and wardens of the company aforesaid then and there being assembled, and openly, publicly and contemptuously then and there in the presence and hearing of very many persons then and there present and hearing, concerning the said master and wardens of the said company then and there assembled, did say and with a loud voice did assert these words following, to wit: The masters [meaning the said master and wardens] are all a company of pickpocket rogues, let them kiss my arse, I [meaning the said Thomas] care not for any of them. And if any of the masters and wardens [meaning the said master and wardens] dare to come to my house [meaning the house of the said Thomas] I will knock out their brains, to the great disturbance of the said master and wardens, and of all others then and there being assembled, and in violation of the ordinance aforesaid; whereupon the said Thomas for his said offence in the premisses forfeited and lost three shillings and four-pence, according to the form and effect of the ordinance aforesaid, whereof the said Thomas then and there had notice, [280] and then and there was requested by the said John Tucket, then one of the wardens of the company aforesaid, to pay the said three shilllings and four pence, which to do the said Thomas then and there, and for the space of six days from that time next ensuing did refuse and neglect; and thereupon the said Master and Wardens of the Company of Taylors of Exeter aforesaid afterwards and before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the 6th day of August now last past, at the City of Exeter aforesaid, by their certain warrant in writing, sealed under their common seal, and to the said John then warden, and to the said William Stapledon then beadle of the said company directed, did command the said warden and beadle to levy the said three shillings and four pence of the goods and chattles of the said Thomas; whereby the said John and William at the said time in which, &c. into the said house of the said Thomas in the declaration aforesaid mentioned, through the door of the said house then and there being open, did enter, and then and there the goods and chattels aforesaid took in name of a distress, for the said three shillings and four pence so as aforesaid forfeited, and then being in arrear and unpaid, as it was well and lawful for them to do; which is the said trespass as to the entering of the house aforesaid, and the taking and carrying away of the goods and chattels aforesaid, whereof the said Thomas above now complains, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray judgment if the said Thomas ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said Thomas Clark saith that the said plea of the said John Tucket and William Stapledon, as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid above in bar pleaded, and the matter therein contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude him the said Thomas Clark from having his action aforesaid against the said John Tucket and William Stapledon; and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient answer in this behalf the said Thomas Clark prays judgment, and his damages by occasion of the trespass aforesaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said John Tucket and William Stapledon, because that they above have alledged sufficient matter in law to preclude the said Thomas Clark from having his action aforesaid against them, which they are ready to verify; which matter the said Thomas Clark doth not deny, nor to the same in anywise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, pray judgment, and that the said Thomas Clark may be precluded from having his action aforesaid, &c. And because the justices, &c.

Bye-law to levy fines by distress and sale of goods, ill. 5 Coke 64. Carth. 482, 483. Com. Dig. Bye-law C. 7, D. 2, E. 2.

Trespass for entering his house and taking ten pewter-plates, value 20s. The defendant pleads an incorporation of the Taylors of Exeter by patent, 6 E. 4, with power to make by-laws and a by-law made by them, that if any member spoke any scurrilous or disgraceful language to another member of the company at any meeting or assembly of the said community, he should forfeit 3s. 4d. to be levied by distress and sale of his goods, and that the plaintiff at an assembly of the said company said, The masters of the company are a company of pickpocket rogues, let them kiss my arse, I care not for any of them; and if any of them dare come to my house, I'll knock out their brains. Whereby he forfeited 3s. 4d. and for non-payment thereof upon demand the defendant, as beadle of the company, by their warrant under the common seal for levying the 3s. 4d. by distress and sale of goods, entered into the house and took the plates in name of a distress, quæ est eadem, &c. Upon which the plaintiff demurs generally; and now it was argued, that the distress of ten several plates of the value of 20s. for 3s. 4d. without protestation as to the value (of each) is not good, 42 E. 3, 26 a. Bro. Distress 41 and 88. 2. It is not said that they sold them, or what became of them, or if they sold them what is become of the overplus. 3. This by-law to levy by distress and sale of goods is illegal, though to levy by distress is good by Clark's case, 5 Co. 64 a. but by distress and sale is not good, Co. Lit. 145 b. A lease with power to distrain and retain against gages and pledges is ill. The Court [282] did not speak much to any of the exceptions, except the third; and as to that they all held the by-law void in toto, viz. as to the levying by distress and sale, and thereupon principally they gave judgment for the plaintiff on the argument of Levinz for the plaintiff, and Tremain, now made King's Serjeant, for the defendant.

Assumpsit upon a promise 1 Jun. 1 W. & M. The defendant pleads non assumpsit within six years before suing the original writ; on which the plaintiff demurs: and now it was argued for the plaintiff, that this plea, although it was the usual way of pleading before the stat. 1 W. & M. whereby it is enacted, that from the 10th of December (which was the day that King James departed, till the 12th of March, 1688, when the now King assumed the government) shall not be accounted any part of the time within which any person by virtue of the Statute of Limitations might bring his action, but that he shall have so much allowance of time as from the 10th of December to the 12th of March for bringing his action. Which time containing 92 days, therefore the plea now ought to have been pleaded non assumpsit infra six years and 92 days. And so it had been (usually) pleaded since the statute. But the whole Court held the plea to be good, and they would not alter the former way of pleading: but if the case had been so, that though he had not promised within six years but had promised within six years and 92 days, that should have come in by the replication.

Ejectment upon the demise of Charles Leach, and on not guilty and a special verdict, the case was thus: Nicholas Leach being tenant for life, remainder to Sir Simon Leach in tail. Nicholas Leach makes a deed of surrender to Sir Simon before the birth of any son of Nicholas, and afterward had a son, viz. Charles the lessor of the plaintiff. Nicholas keeps the deed of surrender in his hands, and Sir Simon had no knowledge of it till five years after the said son's birth. But as soon as he had notice of it, he accepted it, and entered on the lands; after which Nicholas dies, and Charles the son brings the ejectment: and whether the contingent remainder was destroyed by this surrender? was the question. And after divers arguments, Pollexfen Ch. Just. Powell and Rokesby Justices, held, that the estate did not pass by the surrender till the acceptance of it; and for this they relied much on the constant form of pleading surrenders, wherein always the precedents are not only to plead the surrender, but also with an acceptance, viz. that the surrenderee agreed thereto, except one or two in Rastal; and divers other authorities were cited in the case pro & con, and that then the surrender not taking effect, nor the estate for life merged before the birth of the son, he had a good title. 2. The said three Judges held, that the acceptance afterward should not so relate to the making of the deed, as to cause the estate to pass ab initio, and so by relation to make it a surrender before the son's birth, so as to destroy his estate; for that would be to make a relation work to the prejudice of a third person, and relations do always make acts good only between the parties themselves, but not to prejudice strangers, as 3 Co. Butler and Baker's case. But Justice Ventris to the contrary held, that the estate vested immediately by the making the deed of surrender; but to be divested by the surrenderee's refusal to accept it afterwards, but that till such refusal the estate was in the surrenderee; and divers cases were cited on that side [285] also: and he also held, that if it did not vest at the first by the delivery of the deed of surrender, yet by the acceptance afterward it should be by relation a surrender from the beginning, and so destroy the contingent remainder to Charles the son born afterwards; and this relation does no wrong to a third person, for Charles was not a person in esse when the surrender was first made. But by the opinion of the other three judgment was given for the plaintiff, upon which error was brought in B. R. and in Hill. 3 W. & M. the judgment given in C. B. was affirmed by the whole Court. But afterwards the defendant brought error thereof in the House of Peers; and in December, 1692, on hearing of the Judges there, they all continuing in their former opinion, (except Sir Robert Atkins Chief Baron, and then speaker of the House of Peers) the judgment was reversed by the Lords in Parliament, the said Sir Robert Atkins and Mr. Justice Ventris concurring with them as before. Debt against Richard Rowden, as heir to his father, upon an obligation made by the father. The defendant pleads riens by discent from his father, issue thereon, and a special verdict finds, that the defendant's father was seised in fee of lands, and settled them to the use of himself for life, remainder to John his son in tail, remainder to the right heirs of the father; that John the father died, and the reversion descended to John the son, and that John the son being seised of the estate-tail and of the reversion in fee died seised, whereby the estate-tail and the reversion in fee descended to John his son, i.e. the grandson of the first John; and John the grandson died without issue, and the tenements descended to the defendant, who was heir to all the said three Johns, and he entered: and whether he should be charged in respect of those lands as heir to John his father, or as heir of the grandson, heir of his father, heir of the obligor, or immediately as he is the son and heir of his father the obligor? (was the question). For here the reversion descended to John the son, and also to John the grandson. But for the plaintiff it was argued, that they were not actually seised by virtue of the reversion, but only of the estate tail; and that the reversion descended to them as a reversion, of which, though they were seised by the [287] said descents, yet they were not actually seised thereof by the descents, but the actual seisin was only of the

(1) After the judgment of reversal in Parliament in this case, the plaintiff brought a new ejectment in B. estate-tail; and the defendant in claiming this reversion ought to claim it by descent from his father, for by Co. Lit. 11 b. he who will make himself heir to any land ought to make himself heir to him who was last actually seised of the land, who in this case was John the obligor; and as he ought to claim the land as heir to him, so ought he to be charged as heir to him; and they also cited 8 E. 3, 13. Co. Lit. 14 b. F. N. B. 212 f. Co. Lit. 11 b. in case of a warranty; and Cro. Cha. 151, Jenk's case is not contrary; for there the land itself descended from one heir to another, and they were actually seised, and therefore ought not to be charged immediately as heir to the obligor, but mediately as heir from one heir to another. But on the defendant's side it was argued, that the reversion in fee is assets in whosesoever hands it comes, upon such a general plea, as riens per discent, if he does not aid himself by special pleading; which proves that the reversion is descended, and is actually in the party to whom it is descended; and they cited 6 H. 4, 1, where a seigniory descended, which as a seigniory could not be assets, but if afterwards a tenancy escheats, that shall be assets; so here the land coming in the possession, instead of the reversion, is assets; and that Jenk's case in Cro. Cha. 151 was an authority in point. But the Court upon the first argument inclined for the plaintiff, and Gregory and Eyre Justices denied that upon generally pleading riens per discent a reversion in fee shall be adjudged assets to charge the heir; and they said that constant experience was to the contrary: and it was adjourned. But in Hilary term following judgment was given for the plaintiff by the opinions of Holt Ch. Justice, Dolben and Gregory. But Justice Eyre was then against the judgment. [288] In Chancery.

The King and Queen against Manlove, Warden of the Fleet.

Warden of the Fleet forfeits his office by two voluntary escapes.

It was found by inquisition on a writ issued out of Chancery, that the wardenship of the Fleet is an antient office, and the warden an antient officer, who time out of mind has had the custody of all prisoners committed by the Courts of Chancery, Common Pleas and Exchequer; and that the 19th of March, 1689, Richard Manlove was, and yet is, warden of the prison of the Fleet, and that such a day he voluntarily permitted Nicholas Stephens in execution in his custody to escape; and that at another day he voluntarily permitted Henry Slaughter also in execution to escape; and found divers other misdemeanors by him committed in the said office; and all this was done at the prosecution of one Colonel Lugton, with intent to procure a grant of the office by the King to himself. To which inquisition divers exceptions were taken: but the principal was, that it was not found by the inquisition what estate Manlove had in the office; for although those two voluntary escapes were agreed to be a forfeiture of the office, yet if the fee of the office be in another, and Manlove has only an estate for life, as the truth is, the forfeiture of Manlove is only a forfeiture of an office for life, and that is to him in the reversion, and not to the King, 39 H. 6, 32. Poph. 119, the case of the Earl of Pembroke, and so was the case of the Lady Broughton lately, who had the custody of the prison of the Gatehouse at Westminster under the dean and chapter, who being convicted of a forfeiture before Hale, it was resolved by him and all the Judges of B. R. that the forfeiture belonged to the dean and chapter, and not to the King. And of that opinion was the now Lord Keeper, and the two Chief Justices Holt and Pollexfen, whom he called to his assistance, and quashed the inquisition.

An archdeacon for money grants the office of register, it is a forfeiture to the King, and not to the bishop. Ante 262. 2 Lev. 245. Ante 288. C. L. 284 a. 2 Salk. 468.

Assumpsit for money had and received to his use; and upon non assumpsit and a special verdict found before Pollexfen Chief Justice at Guild-Hall, the case was this; the archdeacon being within the patronage and diocese of the Bishop of Lincoln, for 100l. granted the office of register of the archdeaconry to Ince and Ince for their lives; they died, and the archdeacon granted the office to the plaintiff for life, to whom also the King granted it, without office found, and the Bishop of Lincoln granted it to the defendant, who received the money arising by the profits. Whereupon the plaintiff brought his action; and therein three points were moved. 1. Whether by the sale of the office it was a forfeiture of the office, and a disability upon the archdeacon to grant it again upon the statute of E. 6? And it was agreed by the whole Court without difficulty, that it is an office within the statute, being an office concerning the administration of justice, according to Dr. Trevor's case, Cro. Ja. 269. But the second point was of greater difficulty, viz. whether the King should have the disposal of the office upon the forfeiture thereof, or the bishop within whose diocese it is? And it was argued for the defendant, that the bishop should have it, who had the care and superintendency of the whole diocese, and the whole is derived from him, viz. both the archdeaconry and the office of registry; [290] and the archdeacon is only a minister under him to discharge a part of that care which the bishop has over the whole diocese, and therefore the bishop ought to have the provision and disposal of it where the archdeacon is disabled by the statute; and although where statutes give forfeitures, generally it shall be intended given to the King, yet when the forfeiture is prejudicial to any particular person, that person shall have the forfeiture, and not the King, as in the case of a forfeiture of the treble value for tithes substracted by force of a statute of the same King Ed. 6, Co. Litt. 159 a. But on the other side it was argued, that the King is Supreme Ordinary, and has the care over the whole Church of England, and the bishops themselves are under him; as the leet is derived out of the sheriff's torn, yet if it be forfeited, it is forfeited to the King, and not to the sheriff; and of that opinion was the whole Court, viz. Pollexfen, Powell, Rokesby and Ventris; and therefore the plaintiff had a title by the King's grant, though none by that of the archdeacon. 3. It was argued for the defendant, that if the King had the right, yet he could not grant it before office found. Whereto it was answered, and also resolved by the whole Court, that the King may grant it without any office found; for that no estate or interest in the office is forfeited, either of the archdeacon, or of the register; nor is any freehold to be divested out of him, and vested in the King. But the office is (only) become void, and by the disability of the archdeacon, the power to suppy the office of register is in the King, as 20 E. 4, 11 a. wherefore they unanimously gave judgment for the plaintiff. Pemberton and Levinz for the defendant, Birch and Serjeant Powell for the plaintiff.

Whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and it was now resolved by the whole Court, 1. That here being two considerations expressed, viz. affection and money, the deed might operate either as a bargain and sale, if enrolled, or as a covenant to stand seised, if duly [292] pleaded, according to Styl. 204. Watts versus Dixe, 7 Co. It was resolved by the whole Court, that the plea, that there being no attornment or any other execution had thereupon, and thereupon pleading the special matter, and leaving the determination of the law to the Court, was impertinent and idle. 3. It was resolved by Powell, Rokesby and Ventris, Justices, that the pleading by the words of the deed, dedit, concessit, &c. was sufficient, and the Court shall adjudge thereupon, according to what the law will construe upon such words; and those words shall amount in this case to a covenant to stand seised to the use of the son, as 8 Co. Rep. Fox's case, where the plea is, that he demised, granted, and to farm let for years, and yet the Court there adjudged it to amount to a bargain and sale for years by way of use; but they agreed that the avowant here might have pleaded it as a covenant to stand seised of the rent to the use of him and his heirs, and said it had been the neater pleading; but as it is, they ought to adjudge according to what the law will operate upon the words. But Pollexfen Chief Just. held the contrary; and that the pleading by the words of the deed was altogether ill, and that the avowant ought to have pleaded it at his peril, so as he would use it, viz. that the father covenanted to stand seised to the use of him and his heirs; and he resembled it to the case where there are in deeds these words, give, grant, release and confirm, there the party in pleading ought to rely on one of them only; and for that it was not so done here, he held that judgment ought to be given for the avowant. [293] WATTNOUGH against HOLGATE.

Replication stating an award that defendant should pay 15l. at or before the 1st of December next, and that he did not pay upon the 1st of December only, is held bad upon demurrer. 2 Saunders 420, 421. 1 Ventris 38. 2 Brownlow 273. 1 Lut. 550, 570. Nel. Lut. 178. 1 Saunders, 326, 327. Kyd on Awards 202. Com. Dig. Pleader. C. 46.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned to perform an award. The defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies an award, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 15l. at or before the first of December next following; and assigns a breach, that the defendant did not pay the 15l. upon the said first of December: whereto the defendant demurs generally, and judgment was for him; for although he did not pay it upon the said first of December, he might have paid it before the said first of December; and although payment before the day is a good payment at the day, where the payment at the day is pleaded, yet in pleading the parties ought to pursue the words of the condition. MAYOR, &C. OF OXFORD against WILDGOOSE.

Bye-law, that if any be duly elected chamberlain and refuse, he shall forfeit, &c. this bye-law is void, for it ought to have been if any citizen, &c. should be elected. Com. Dig. Bye-law. C. 2.

Debt was brought, and declares, that the City of Oxford is an antient city and a corporation, by the name of mayor, &c. and that time out of mind they have used to make bye-laws for the good government of the city, and the citizens and burgesses, and to elect a chamberlain of the burgesses aforesaid yearly for a year, and that Aug. 19, the first year of the present King, they made a bye-law, that if any person should be duly elected to be chamberlain, and should refuse to undertake the said office, he should forfeit 10l. to the mayor, &c. and then shews, that Sept. 30, in the said first year, the defendant was according to the custom aforesaid duly elected into the said office, he being a citizen and freeman of the city aforesaid; and that he refused to accept it, whereby the action accrued for the said 10l. Upon which declaration the defendant demurred, and judgment was given for him by the whole Court; for the bye-law to elect aliquam personam is void, for thereby they might elect any stranger to be their chamberlain, and the words foret debite electus will not cure it, for that extends only to the manner of the election, but not to the persons [294] to be elected; and although it is said that they elected the defendant being a citizen and freeman, that is only the execution of the bye-law, but will not make the bye-law good which is void in itself; for it ought to have been, if any citizen or burgess shall be elected, and refuse, he shall forfeit 10l. to the mayor, &c. Debt for rent, and declares on a lease made by the plaintiff to J. S. who made J. D. his executor, who assigned the term to the defendant. The defendant pleads, that before any rent arrear he assigned the term to J. G. but does not plead any notice thereof, nor any acceptance of the rent from him by the plaintiff. Upon which plea the plaintiff demurs; and it was adjudged for the plaintiff by Pollexfen Chief Justice, and Rokesby Justice, against Powell Justice, who held, that the privity of the contract being altered by the assignment of the executor before any rent due, as well as the privity of the estate by the assignment of the assignee of the executor, there remained nothing to support the action. Pollexfen Chief Just. and Rokesby held, that till notice of the assignment it was no compleat assignment so as to destroy the privity of the estate; for until notice he remained tenant as to payment of the rent; as in the case of lord and tenant, if the tenant makes a feoffment, he yet remains tenant as to the avowry till notice of the feoffment and tender of the arrears; and for authorities they cited Penant's case, 3 Co. MICHAELMAS, 2 WILLIAM & MARY.

HORTON against COGGS.

Declaration upon a note payable to the bearer. Custom of London. Issue.

London, to wit.—John Coggs, late of London, goldsmith, was attached to answer Edward Horton of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And whereupon the said Edward by Thomas Goodall his attorney complains, that whereas the City of London now is and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary hath been an antient city; and whereas also at London aforesaid, to wit, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, there is had and from the whole time aforesaid there was had a custom used and approved, to wit, that if any merchant or goldsmith of the city aforesaid, or any other person by way of merchandize at London aforesaid, trading and using traffick, made any bill or note in writing, his name being thereto subscribed, and by such bill or note promised to pay to any other person in such bill or note named or to the bearer upon demand any such sum of money in such bill or note mentioned; and if such bill or note by such person named in the same to whom the payment thereof was appointed to be made was assigned or delivered to any other person, to receive the said sum of money to the proper use of such other person, and if such other person to whom such assignment or delivery was made, hath carried and shewn such bill or note to such merchant, goldsmith, or other person so making the same, and hath requested him to pay such sum of money to him the said bearer, then such merchant, goldsmith, or other person making such bill or note, from the said time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, hath been liable, and hath been accustomed to be liable to the payment of such sum of money, in such bill or note mentioned, to such person who hath so carried and shewn the same, and hath requested such payment to be made to him; and the said Edward further saith that the said John, upon the 1st [297] day of October, in the 4th year of the reign of the Lord James late King of England, &c. and long before and continually afterwards hitherto hath been a goldsmith of the said city, and a person by the way of merchandize at London aforesaid trading and using traffick, to wit, in the parish and ward aforesaid; and the said John so being a goldsmith, and trading and using traffick as aforesaid, upon the said 1st day of October, in the 4th year of the reign of the Lord James late King of England, &c. aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, made his certain bill or note in writing, his name being thereto subscribed, and by the said bill or note promised to pay to one William Barlow, Esquire, or to the bearer upon demand, the sum of fifty-five pounds; and that afterwards, to wit, upon the 20th day of October, in the 4th year of the reign of the Lord James late King of England, &c. aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, the said bill or note was delivered by the said William Barlow to the said Edward Horton for good consideration, [to wit, in satisfaction of the like sum of fifty-five pounds to him the said Edward by him the said William then due] to receive the said sum of fifty-five pounds in the said bill or note mentioned to the proper use of the said Edward. And the said Edward afterwards, to wit, upon the 31st day of January, in the 1st year of the reign of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, the said bill or note carried and shewed to the said John, and to him gave notice of the said delivery thereof by the said William to the said Edward in the form aforesaid, and then and there requested the said John thereupon to pay to the said Edward the said sum of fifty-five pounds in the said bill or note mentioned, whereby the said John according to the custom aforesaid, became liable and was liable to the payment of the said fifty-five pounds upon the said bill or note to the said Edward; and so being liable the said John afterwards, to wit, upon the said 31st day of January, in the 1st year, &c. aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and [298] ward aforesaid, in consideration of the premisses upon himself assumed, and to the said Edward then and there faithfully promised, that he the said John the said fifty-five pounds to the said Edward would well and faithfully pay and content; and although the said Edward at the said time of the shewing of the said bill or note to the said John as aforesaid, and always afterwards was ready and offered to deliver to the said John the said bill or note upon payment by the said John to the said Edward of the said fifty-five pounds, and the said bill or note to the said John upon payment of the said sum of money to the said Edward as yet is ready to deliver. Nevertheless the said John his promises and assumptions aforesaid not regarding, but contriving and fraudulently intending the said Edward in this behalf craftily and subtilly to deceive and defraud, the said fifty-five pounds or one penny thereof to the said Edward [although thereto afterwards upon the 1st day of February, in the first year, &c. aforesaid, and often afterwards at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, by the said Edward he the said John was requested] hath not paid, nor in any wise hath contented him for the same; but the same to him to pay hitherto hath refused, and as yet doth refuse, to the damage of the said Edward of one hundred pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said John by John Waring his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and saith that he did not assume upon himself in the manner and form as the said Edward above complains against him, and of this he puts himself upon the country, and the said Edward doth the like; therefore the sheriff is commanded that he cause to come here from the day of St. Michael in one month twelve, &c. by whom, &c. who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. because as well, &c.

[299] HORTON against COGGS.

The custom to pay a note payable to the bearer held to be too general. Molloy, lib. 2, c. 10, § 17, 19, &c. Com. Dig. Action on the Case upon Assumpsit. A. 2.

Assumpsit, and declares of a custom in London, that if any merchant, or other person merchandizing in London, makes a note in writing under his hand, and thereby promises to pay any sum of money therein mentioned to the person therein named, or to the bearer; and if the person named in the note, to whom by the note it is promised to be paid, shall assign or deliver it to another person to receive it to his own use, and he carries it to the drawer of the note, and requests him to pay it to him that brings it, that then the person who makes the note is chargeable to pay it to the bearer; and that the defendant being a goldsmith made such a note, thereby promising to pay 55l. to William Barlow, or the bearer: and that Barlow delivered the note to the plaintiff to receive the money to his own use, in satisfaction of the said 55l. due to him by Barlow, and that the plaintiff carried and shewed it to the defendant, and requested him to pay the 55l. which he had not done; so that by the custom he became chargeable, and being so chargeable, promised to pay: and after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that this custom to pay to the bearer was too general; for perhaps the goldsmith before notice by the bearer had paid it to Barlow himself (which at the Bar was said to be the truth of the case). And of that opinion after divers motions were Pollexfen, Powell and Rokesby, (Ventris dying in the last vacation;) though upon the trial of the cause before Pollexfen at the Guild-Hall he then held, that the action well lay, this matter having been objected at the said trial. HILARY II. WILLIAM AND MARY.

[300] HAIGHT against LANGHAM AND WIFE.

Debt. Declaration in debt against the heir, with whom one of the executors is joined. Plea. Oyer.

London, to wit.—Lucas Langham, late of London, haberdasher, and Susannah his wife, sister and heir of Thomas Bostock of London, gentleman, were summoned to answer John Haight of a plea that they render to him two hundred and sixty pounds which they owe to him and unjustly detain, &c. And whereupon the said John by Francis Leigh his attorney, saith, that whereas the said Thomas in his life-time, the brother of the said Susannah, whose heir she is, to wit, upon the 21st day of November, in the 36th year of the reign of the Lord Charles II. late King of England, &c. at London in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, by his certain writing obligatory, granted himself to be holden to the said John in two hundred and sixty pounds to be paid to the said John, when thereto he should be requested, and to the payment thereof well and faithfully to be made, the said Thomas bound himself and his heirs by the said writing; nevertheless the said Thomas in his life-time and the said Lucas and Susannah, the sister and heir of the said Thomas, although oftentimes requested, the said two hundred and sixty pounds to the said John have not yet paid, but the same to him to pay have refused, and the said Lucas and Susannah still do refuse to pay, whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of twenty pounds, and therefore he produces his suit, &c. and he produces here in Court the writing aforesaid, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date of which is the day and year aforesaid, &c.

And the said Lucas and Susannah, by George Wheeler their attorney, come and defend the force and injury, when, &c. and pray oyer of the writing aforesaid, and it is read to them, &c. also they pray oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it is read to them in these words: The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above bound Thomas Bostock, his heirs, executors or administrators, shall and do well and truly pay, or cause to be paid unto the above named John Haight, his executors, administrators or assigns, the sum of 137l. 16s. of good and lawful money of England, on the 22d day of November, which shall be in the year of [301] our Lord God 1685, then this obligation shall be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue; which being read and heard the said Lucas and Susannah pray judgment of the writ aforesaid, because they say that the said John heretofore, to wit, in the term of St. Michael last past, in the Court of the lord the King, and of the lady the Queen of the Bench here, to wit, at Westminster impleaded the said Lucas, and one Thomas Hull and Penelope his wife, and Robert Raworth as executors of the testament of the said Thomas Bostock, by the names of Thomas Hull, late of London, gent. and Penelope his wife, relict and executrix of the testament of Thomas Bostock, gent. deceased, and lately called Thomas Bostock of London, gent. Robert Raworth late of London, haberdasher, and Lucas Langham, late of London, haberdasher, executors of the testament aforesaid of the said Thomas Bostock, together with the said Penelope, of a plea of debt for two hundred and sixty pounds of and upon the writing obligatory aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid above specified; and whereupon the said John, then by declaring against the said Lucas, and the said Thomas and Penelope, and Robert, of and in the said plea by the said Francis Leigh, then his attorney said, that whereas the said Thomas Bostock in his life-time, to wit, upon the 21st day of November, in the 30th year of the reign of the Lord Charles II. late King, &c. at London, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, by a certain writing obligatory granted himself to be holden to the said John in the said two hundred and sixty pounds, to be paid to the said John when thereto he should be requested; nevertheless the said Thomas Bostock in his life-time, and the said Penelope whilst she was sole, Robert and Lucas, and the said Thomas Hull and Penelope after the espousals between them celebrated, Robert and Lucas after the death of the said Thomas Bostock, although oftentimes requested, the said two hundred and sixty pounds to the said John had not paid, and the same to him to pay had refused, and the said Thomas Hull, Penelope, Robert and Lucas then did refuse to pay, and therefore he said that he was prejudiced and had sustained damage to the value of twenty pounds, and therefore he then produced his suit, &c. and produced here in Court the writing aforesaid, which testified the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date of which is the day and year aforesaid, &c. And the said Lucas [302] by George Wheeler then his attorney came and defended the force and injury, when, &c. and prayed oyer of the writing aforesaid, and it was read to him; also he prayed oyer of the condition of the said writing, and it was read to him in these words: The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above bound Thomas Bostock, his heirs, executors or administrators, shall and do well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, unto the above named John Haight, his executors, administrators or assigns the full sum of 137l. 16s. of the good and lawful money of England, upon the 22d day of November, in the year of our Lord God 1685, then this obligation to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue; which being read and heard the said Lucas saving and reserving to himself all and all manner of exceptions, advantages and allegations whatsoever, as well to the writ as to the declaration aforesaid, prayed leave to imparl thereto here until the octave of St. Hilary in this same term, and he had, &c. and the same day was given to the said John here, &c. as by the record and proceedings thereof, in the said Court here remaining more fully appeareth; and the said Lucas and Susannah in fact say, that the said plea against the said Lucas and the said Thomas Hull, Penelope and Robert, as executors of the said testament of the said Thomas Bostock, as aforesaid prosecuted in the said Court here, as yet depends undiscussed, undetermined, and not discontinued; and this they are ready to verify: wherefore they pray judgment of the said writ against the said Lucas and Susannah, as the sister and heir of the said Thomas Bostock, in the form aforesaid sued out and now prosecuted, the other plea aforesaid pending against the said Lucas, and the said Thomas Hull, Penelope and Robert, as the executors of the said testament of the said Thomas Bostock for the said cause; with this, that the said Lucas and Susannah will verify that the writing obligatory aforesaid, for and upon which the said John against them the said Lucas and Susannah as the sister and heir of the said Thomas Bostock, above in the form aforesaid now complains, and the said writing obligatory for and upon which the said John in the other plea aforesaid, against the said Lucas and the said Thomas Hull, and Penelope and Robert, as the executors of the said testament of the said Robert Bostock, heretofore in the form aforesaid, hath declared are one and the same writing obligatory, and not other nor different, &c.

[303] And the said John saith, that the said plea of the said Lucas and Susannah above pleaded for quashing of the original writ of the said John, and the matter in the same are not sufficient in law to quash the said writ, or to preclude the said John from having his action aforesaid against them, and that he to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient plea of the said Lucas, and the said Susannah in this behalf, the said John prays judgment, and that his writ aforesaid may be adjudged good, &c.

And the said Lucas and Susannah, because that they above have pleaded sufficient matter in law for quashing of the said writ of the said John, against them the said Lucas and the said Susannah, as the sister and heir of the said Thomas Bostock, now sued out; which they are ready to verify: which matter the said John doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, pray judgment and that the said writ for the reason by them before alledged may be quashed, &c. And because the justices, &c.

HAIGHT against LANGHAM AND HIS WIFE.

Debt upon an obligation against husband and wife—the wife being heir to J. S.—they plead in abatement another action against the husband and others as executors of J. S. Respondeas ouster awarded. 11 Viner Ab. 249. 14 Viner Ab. 264.

Debt upon obligation against them, as the wife was heir to Bostock. The defendants plead in abatement another action depending against the husband and others, as executors of Bostock. The plaintiff demurs, and it was argued for the defendant, that the plea was good; for admitting that the plaintiff could charge either the heir or executors at his election, or both severally, and recover part against the one, and [304] the residue against the other, yet he cannot charge one and the same person as heir, and also as executor, at the same time; for by that means he might have two judgments at the same time for the same thing, of which the defendant cannot have any remedy by audita querela; for he cannot alledge that matter for his relief in an audita querela, because he might have pleaded it in abatement. But where an action is against one person as heir, and another action against another person as executor, and he recovers two judgments, and after he has levied the debt upon one of them, he endeavours to levy it again on the other, there he shall be aided by audita querela, because he could not have pleaded it in abatement; and of that opinion was Pollexfen Chief Just. upon the first argument in this term. But Powell Just. held the contrary; for that seeing one and the same person represented as well the heir, as the executor, it is all one as if it were in divers persons; Rokesby being at that time silent. But afterward in Trinity term, Pollexfen being dead, judgment was given by Powell and Rokesby Justices, that the defendant should answer over. Levinz of counsel with the defendant.

HAIGHT against LANGHAM, HALL, &C. EXECUTORS OF BOSTOCK.

Debt on obligation against J. S. as executor, he pleads another action against him, as heir. [Note, The heir of the executor, or both, are chargeable on the obligation of their ancestor.] Respondeas ouster awarded.

Debt against them as executors of Thom. Bostock upon the obligation supra. Langham pleads in abatement another action pending against him and his wife as she was heir. The plaintiff demurred, and the Judges differed in opinion, ut supra. And it was adjourned to be further argued. See 36 E. 3, 36, 38, two writs brought for the same thing, each was pleaded in abatement to the other, and both abated; see the like opinion, 9 H. 6, 51, ad id. & 39 H. 6, 38, & Co. 5, Sparry's case. The reason of the abatement of writs is not only because the party shall not be twice charged, but also that he shall not be twice vexed for the same debt: and note, the obligee may charge the heir or executor at his election, or both of them, if one is not sufficient. See 1 And. pl. 13, the heir charged though the executor had assets. Fitz. Execution 163, out of 19 R. 2, the like Dyer 204, in debt against [305] the heir, it is no plea that the executor had assets; but on the contrary see 7 H. 4, 2. Debt lies not against the heir till the sheriff returns that the executor has not assets; and 2 Co. Inst. 233, and 7 E. 4, 13 a. an opinion that debt does not lie against the heir, if the executor has assets: and afterwards in Trinity term following judgment was given as in the foregoing case, to answer over. Levinz of counsel for the defendant.

HOLMS against SELLER.

Articles that one shall have and use a way amounts to a grant of the way. 5 Term Rep. 163.

Debt upon an obligation of 20l. conditioned for performance of articles, whereby the defendant granted and agreed with the plaintiff, and his heirs and assigns, that it should be lawful for them at all times afterwards to have and use a way by and through a close of the defendant; in consideration whereof the plaintiff granted and agreed to pay to the defendant 20s. at the signing of the articles, and 6d. per ann. to him, his heirs and assigns, and also to repair the gate between the closes of the plaintiff and the defendant: and the defendant covenants, that John Seller his son, when he attained the age of 21 years, should confirm it. The defendant, after the articles set forth, ut supra, pleads, that John Seller the son had not yet attained the age of 21 years, and that he had performed all the residue. The plaintiff replies, that J. Seller, jun. since the said articles (then being the defendant's tenant, and farmer of the close in quo, &c.) had obstructed the way so granted to the plaintiff, as aforesaid. The defendant demurs; and now upon argument it was resolved by Pollexfen and Rokesby only in Court, 1. That it was a good grant of the way, and not only a covenant for the enjoyment, as was objected; but 2. It was resolved that the replication was ill, in not shewing that J. S. the son had a title to stop it; and then it is only a trespass, for which the plaintiff may have his remedy by action of trespass, but cannot have (1) covenant against the covenantor upon the covenant; and perhaps the son, though within age, and farming the close of his father, might have a better title than himself. Whereupon judgment was given for the defendant.

[306] TRINITY TERM, IN THE THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

BARRINGTON against CRANE.

The father covenants to levy a fine, and that the son shall stand seised to the use of the father until the marriage, and after the marriage to the use of the son in tail, the marriage was had, but no fine was levied, held that no use arose upon the deed, but that it rested only in covenant. Ante 126. Post 370, 371. 1 Mod. 175. 2 Jo. 105. 2 Lev. 213, 225. 1 Ventris 372. 2 Ventris 260, 266, 318. 22 Viner Ab. 214, 282.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty and special verdict the case was; one Cotteril being seised in fee of the tenements in question, in consideration of the marriage of his son, and of a marriage-portion, June the 8th, 1723, covenanted to levy a fine to his son, and that the son should stand seised to the use of the father and his heirs till the marriage should be had; and after the marriage to the use of the son in tail, with divers remainders over, and afterward in the same deed covenanted that he (i.e. the father) was seised in fee, and so should be till the use should be vested in the son. And that after the marriage the lands shall remain and be to the son free from all incumbrances, &c. and afterward the marriage was had, and no fine was levied: and whether the use arose upon the covenants, and the land should remain after the marriage to the uses supra? was the question: and upon argument it was resolved by Powell and Rokesby (then the only Judges of the Court) that this covenant did not raise any use, but rested only in covenant, as Dy. 55 a. 96 a. 162 a. and the rather, for that if the uses should arise upon the deed, it would be contrary to the intent of the parties, which was to raise it upon the fine; and if the use should arise on the deed, it would disable the father to levy the fine, he having before parted with the estate by the deed.

(1) This was an action of debt.

Also the father could not covenant that the son [307] should stand seised of lands whereof the father is seised. And the subsequent covenant was intended against incumbrances only, as is usual in such cases, and not to raise any use, as it should if the covenant had been (as is usual in such settlements) that for any default of a fine, or other execution of the conveyance, the father should stand seised to the uses. But here the first covenant is, that the son should stand seised, which he cannot do, before a fine be levied to give him seisin; and therefore they gave judgment, that no use did arise upon the deed, as it had been before adjudged upon the same conveyance in this same Court, upon a special verdict formerly given, which appears entered in Hill. 33, 34 Car. 2, C. B. Rot. 637, Hale against Cockeril. Levinz for the plaintiff, Birch for the defendant, who claimed the remainder by the said deed.

SIMPSON against BITHWOOD.

S. C. 2 Danvers 429, pl. 9.

Custom to have the best cable of a ship cast on the manor. Ante 85. Contra.

Trespass for taking the plaintiff's anchor and cable. The defendant justifies, for that Wharton and Cook were seised of the manor of Burling juxta Mare in Sussex; and a custom there, that the lords of the manor have used in cases of wreck of any ship there, cast upon the manor between the flux and reflux of the sea, to take care as well of the burial of dead persons, as of living persons there cast, being sick or wounded; and to preserve the goods there cast for the use of the owners; and in consideration thereof to have the best anchor and cable of the ship there cast; and that such a ship being wrecked and cast on the said manor, the defendant, as servant of the lords, took the anchor and cable in the declaration mentioned, being the best cable belonging to the said ship. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs; and now it was argued for the plaintiff, that this custom is unreasonable, and without any good consideration; for all the consideration is no more than what common charity obliges the lord to do. To which it was answered, that that may be good by custom without any consideration, which would not be good by prescription without a consideration; as a custom to turn his plow on another's [308] headland, so for fishermen to dry their nets on another's land; or to dig another's land to make bulwarks in time of danger, &c. because those things are for the public good; so the custom here is for the encouragement and safety of navigation; and although it be a charity, yet it is not unreasonable to have a recompence for a man's charity and charge. And of that opinion were Powell and Rokesby (being the only Judges of the Court;) but it was adjourned. But afterwards it was accordingly adjudged for the defendant. Serjeant Powell for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

BARNES against CORKE.

Admittance of a copyholder for life is so of him in the remainder, and no fine due by the remainder-man sans special custom. 1 Mod. 120. 1 Ventris 260, 261. Cro. El. 441, 504, 662. Golds. 95. Cro. Ja. 31. 4 Co. 22, 23. 1 Leon. 4. 4 Leon. 11.

Ejectment on the demise of Bird, and on not guilty and special verdict, the case was; the land in question is copyhold, parcel of the manor of Widford, whereof the lessor is lord; and the father of the defendant being seised of the said copyhold in 1650, surrendered it to the use of himself and his wife for their lives, the remainder to the defendant in tail; the husband and wife were admitted, and paid 10l. fine, and 4 Jac. 2, they being both dead, the defendant prayed to be admitted to the remainder, and so he was, and 58l. set upon him for his fine, the land being 112l. per ann. The fine was afterward demanded of the defendant, and a day and place appointed for payment of it, which he did not pay, and said that he thought none was due, for that he was admitted by the admittance of his father and mother, tenants for life; and therefore he refused to pay it. Whereupon the lessor entered and made the lease to the plaintiff; and in this case three points were moved: 1. Whether any fine be due in this case? And upon argument it was held by Powell and Rokesby, the only Judges in Court, that no fine was in this case due, except there be a special custom for it; but the admittance to the particular estates was also an admittance to the remainder; and that which is said in 4 Co. Rep. 22, 23 b. that it shall not be to the prejudice of the lord in respect of his fine, is to be intended where a fine is due by custom for an admittance of the remainder; but without a special custom none is due. Cro. Eliz. 504, [309] Gupping vers. Bunnie, 1 Roll. Abr. 505, lit. x. Mo. pl. 488. Dell vers. Higden, & ibid. pl. 658. 2. They held, that this refusal being upon a doubtful matter, and in such a manner, was no such obstinate and wilful refusal as would incur a forfeiture. 3. Objected; supposing no fine was due, yet seeing he had prayed to be, and was thereupon, admitted, he ought to pay the fine (for it) though no admittance was necessary, but the admission of the tenants for life had been sufficient for him; for upon every admittance a fine is due to the lord, and here by the acceptance of the new grant and the admission of him thereupon, he had waived the benefit of the admission of his father and mother, and is now in as by a new grant from the lord: and to this Rokesby Justice seemed to incline, that he having prayed and obtained an admittance where there needed none, he ought to pay a fine for it; to which Powell seemed contrary, and it was adjourned; but afterwards adjudged for the defendant.

Mandamus does not lie for a proctor. 1 Lev. 23. 2 Lev. 14, 18, 19. Trem. P. C.

A mandamus was granted to restore a proctor in the Court of Arches: and now after a retorn, and argument thereon, it was resolved by Holt Ch. Just. Gregory and Eyre Justices, (Dolben being absent) they delivering their opinions seriatim, that this was no such public office whereof a writ of mandamus would lie. This case was by the report of John Powell Serjeant at Law, and afterward a Baron of the Exchequer, then a Judge of B. C. and lastly a Judge of B. R.

Inn-keeper not bankrupt. Com. Dig. Bankrupt, B. 4 Bur. 2068. 1 Term Rep. 572. Green's B. L. 24. Cooke B. L. 21, 31. Esp. Dig. 548. Irish Bankrupt Act is 11 & 12 Geo. 3, c. 8.—Vide ante.

Trespass for entering his house, and taking his goods 1 May 1 Jac. 2, and upon not guilty a special verdict found the plaintiff an inn-keeper in London, and that he bought hay, oats and other provisions, and sold them in his inn, and thereby got his living, (and further found he had a part in a ship set to freight, and had therein a stock to [310] the value of 50l. But by an imperfection in the finding of this no regard was had of it) and they found, that such a day he left his house, and absconded from his creditors, and that the commissioners of bankrupt sold the goods to the defendant; whereupon he entered the house, and took the goods, & si, &c. And the only question was, whether this innkeeper on this finding of the jury could be a bankrupt? And after it had been twice argued, the Court delivered their opinions upon this point only, without having any regard to the imperfections in the verdict. And Dolben Justice held, that an innkeeper, as such, cannot be made a bankrupt within the statute: but by the special finding in this verdict, viz. that he bought and sold his provisions, and thereby got his living, he inclined, that he might be a bankrupt according to Jones and Berkeley's opinion in the case of Crisp and Pratt, as it is reported by Jones and March; but he agreed, that a common country innkeeper, who rents land, and has hay, oats, &c. of his own growth, shall not be a bankrupt. But the other three, viz. Holt Ch. Just. Gregory and Eyre held, that neither the plaintiff, as this case is found, nor any other innkeeper, could be a bankrupt or trader within the statutes, he being a person who for the common good keeps a house to entertain and lodge travellers, and furnish them with provisions at reasonable prices, which he is compellable by law to do, and is punishable for the non-feasance thereof; wherefore they gave judgment for the plaintiff (Dolben being absent) but he afterwards told me that he consented to the said judgment. [311] KNIGHTON against MORTON, EXECUTOR OF MORTON.

Executor pleads several judgments; the plaintiff replies but 100l. due on all, and that he has assets beyond; this replication held good, [save only as to want of venue]. Post, 368, 394.

Debt on obligation. The defendant pleads a judgment against him as executor upon an obligation of the testator, but does not conclude prout patet per recordum, and pleads divers other judgments well, and that he has fully administered all the testator's goods except 10s. which (monies) are charged with the said judgments, and are not sufficient to satisfy them. The plaintiff replies, protestando that all the judgments were obtained by fraud, for plea says, that the day of the writ there was no more than 100l. due on all the said judgments, and that the defendant had then assets sufficient to satisfy the judgments, and also the plaintiff his debt, and that he permitted the judgments to remain in force to defraud him. Whereupon the defendant generally demurs; and now it was resolved by the Court, 1. That this general pleading of assets sufficient to satisfy all the judgments and the plaintiff, was good. But then 2dly, The material part of the plea is the assets, and thereof no venue is laid, where he had assets as he ought; so that the assets are not triable, and this is an incurable fault. But then 3. It was objected, that the plea is ill in not concluding prout patet per recordum of the first judgment: to which it was answered, that that fault is no more than a default of trial by the record, which is past over by the replication, which has admitted all the judgments, but says, that the defendant had assets ultra to satisfy them, and is no more than the omission of a venue for trying by the country, which is always cured by pleading other matter over to be tried, which is the assets here; and thereof the Court would advise. But afterwards they ruled it accordingly. Levinz for the defendant.

Conusee of a statute cannot assign the land after a liberate without actual entry, or recovery in ejectment. 4 Mod. 48. 2 Salk. 563. 1 Bac. Ab. 157. Post, 427.

One Blanker 26 Eliz. being seised in fee of the tenements in question, acknowledged a statute to Parry and Studely; Studely survives and dies intestate in 1623, and in 1675 Robert Studely his administrator sued an extent and a liberate; and before any entry or recovery of the possession assigns his interest to the lessor of the plaintiff, who brings his ejectment; and on the trial before Ventris, a Judge of C. B. he at the Assizes caused it to be made a case for the opinion of the Court: and upon argument in B. R. where the case depended, it was held by all the justices, that the assignment before entry or possession was void; for by the liberate he has accepted the possession, and is estopped to say the contrary: and then when the owner continues in possession, this turns the possession, which the administrator of the conusee hath accepted by the liberate, to a right which is not assignable before the possession be regained by ejectment, or re-entry, or some other lawful means; and they gave the same judgment in the same case between Hanham and Woodford, upon another statute acknowledged by the same Blanker. Execution sued after error brought, and bail, is void without notice. But the party is not in contempt without notice. 4 Bac. Ab. 683. Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 B. 12. 1 Salk. 321. "No execution shall be stayed by writ of error after verdict and judgment, unless there be a recognizance first acknowledged, &c." Eng. stat. 16 & 17 Cha. 2, c. 8. Irish. stat. 17 & 18 Cha. 2, c. 12.

The plaintiff brought ejectment, and had a verdict at the Assizes this last vacation. The defendant brought error, and had it allowed, and bail was put in the 24th of October. The plaintiff afterward, viz. Octob. 27, not having notice of the writ of error, enters judgment generally, which refers to the first day of the term, and takes out execution tested the first day of the term, and had it executed before notice of the writ of error. And now it was moved to have restitution; for by the suing of the writ of error, and allowance, and bail put in, the hands of the [313] Court are foreclosed, so that they cannot grant execution, and therefore the execution (here) is void; and although the party ought not to be punished for suing execution after the writ of error allowed, he not having notice of it, and therefore in no contempt, yet restitution ought to be made to the defendant, because the execution is void, and so it was resolved Pasch. 13 Car. 2, & Trin. 14 Car. 2, B. R. 20 H. 6, 4. Cro. Ja. 342, 535. Roll. 2 Abr. 492. Sty. 159. By all which books it appears, that the hands of the Court are foreclosed by the writ of error. And although the judgment in this case by the general entry refers to the first day of the term, viz. October 23, and the execution is of the same date, which is before the allowance of the writ of error, which was not till Octob. 24, yet the judgment being founded upon the verdict, which was given in the vacation, and whereupon the judgment could not be entered by the rules of the Court till the quarto die post, viz. Octob. 27, (at which time the judgment was signed) the Court shall award restitution without costs of either side; and the plaintiff is excused of the contempt, he having no notice of the writ of error. S. C. 4 Mod. 134. 2 Salk. 539. Shower P. C. 88. 2 Lut. 1094. Nel. Lut. 348.

Bishop pleads that a clerk fuit minus sufficiens in literatura, sive capax ad habend' eccles. and therefore he refused him—this plea was held good in dom. proc.

A quare impedit for the church of Southpole, and declares that the plaintiff was seised of the advowson in fee, and presents one Gultramore, who died, and that it belonged to him to present, and the defendants disturbed him. The bishop pleads he claims nothing but as Ordinary, and that within six months after the death of Gultramore the plaintiff presented Hidder, who was persona in literatura minus sufficiens, sive capax ad habend' eccles. præd'; and that the bishop upon examination finding him minus sufficiens, &c. refused him, and thereof gave notice to the plaintiff, and required him to present another; which he did not do within the six months, and therefore he collated the defendant Hayman. Hayman pleads the same plea, mutat' mutand'. Whereto the plaintiff replies, that Hidder upon his examination by the Ordinary was admitted into orders, and received the cure of souls, and had been a vicar instituted, &c. into another church for divers years [314] before, & fuit in verbo divino doctus, &c. Whereto the defendant makes an impertinent rejoinder. And after divers impertinent pleadings a demurrer was joined thereupon: and the only question was upon the plea in bar, and that was argued for the plaintiff to be too general, viz. in saying that the plaintiff's clerk Hidder was minus sufficiens in literatura, non capax ad habend' eccles. not shewing particularly wherein he was insufficient, or incapable; and 5 Co. Rep. Specot's case was cited, that schismaticus inveteratus is insufficient in not shewing wherein he was a schismatick. Whereto it was answered, that there are several particular matters which will make a schismatick, and some of them by the temporal law, as nonconformity, not reading the articles, &c. appointed by Acts of Parliament, and are triable by the common law; other matters by the canon law, and some of the canons were never received in England; and therefore in the case of a schismatick it ought to be shewn wherein, so that the Court may judge thereupon: but a sufficiency in literature is a complicated thing, consisting of divers sorts of learning to make one fit to be a divine, of which the Temporal Courts are not Judges, but the Metropolitan only, as was agreed in Specot's case, and illiterateness is there agreed to be a good cause of refusal: and such pleadings as here in this case have been heretofore, as Trin. 3 Eliz. C. B. Rot. 906. Mich. 6 El. C. B. Rot. 646. Mich. 15, 16 Eliz. C. B. Rot. 1941, which rolls were brought into Court; and thereupon all the Judges, viz. Nevile, Powell and Rokesby (no Ch. Justice being yet made since Pollexfen's death) held the plea to be good; but it was adjourned to be further argued; but afterwards, Treby being made Chief Justice, upon a further argument the plea was adjudged insufficient by the whole Court. Levinz for the defendant, Pemberton for the plaintiff. Whereupon error was brought in B. R. and there the judgment was affirmed. But afterwards upon error brought in Parliament it was reversed, and the plea was adjudged good by the Lords in Parliament.

KEECH against KNIGHT.

Declaration in assumpsit 1st count, upon a special agreement for the sale of a vessel. 1st Mallory's Entries, 186.

London, to wit.—William Knight, late of Westbeer, in the county of Kent, clerk, was attached to answer William Keech of a plea of trespass upon the case, &c. And whereupon the said William Keech, by J. T. his attorney, complains that whereas one Nicholas Carrington in his life-time, to wit, upon the first day of July, in the year of our Lord 1688, was lawfully possessed of a certain part [being one moiety or thereabouts] of a certain vessel called The Lawrel, as of his own proper part, and so being thereof possessed of such his interest, afterwards, to wit, in the parish of the Blessed Mary of the Arches, in the ward of Cheap, died thereof possessed; and whereas the said William Knight in the right of Anne his wife, executrix of the last will and testament of the said Nicholas Carrington [as he the said William Knight affirmed] afterwards, to wit, upon the 13th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1689, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, was lawfully possessed of the entire interest of the said Nicholas Carrington in the said ship, then being in a certain voyage upon the high sea, and divers sums of money then were due, and from that time afterwards would become [316] due to the said William Knight in the right of his wife aforesaid, growing and accruing for the profits of the said voyage; and afterwards, to wit, upon the said 13th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1689 aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, a certain discourse was moved and had between the said William Keech and the said William Knight, of and concerning the sale and purchase of the entire interest of the said William Knight in the said vessel, in the right of his wife, together with the profits accruing from the voyage aforesaid; and upon that discourse, then and there it was agreed between them, that the said William Knight should sell and convey to the said William Keech his entire interest aforesaid in the said ship, and should assign to the said William Keech his entire profit aforesaid, accruing from the said voyage; and that such sale and assignment should be made in writing, and that the said William Keech should pay to the said William Knight six hundred pounds for the entire interest of the said William Knight in the said vessel, and for the entire profit aforesaid accruing from the said voyage; provided his interest aforesaid in the right of his said wife should amount to one full moiety of the said vessel, and after that rate for the entire interest of the said William Knight in the said vessel, should his interest aforesaid be more or less than the moiety aforesaid; and that the said William Keech should pay to the said William Knight, twenty-three pounds, and ten shillings of the said money before hand, and the residue thereof at the time of the execution of the writing aforesaid; and thereupon the said William Knight [in consideration that the said William Keech then and there paid the said William Knight, the said sum of twenty-three pounds, and ten shillings before hand, and then and there upon himself assumed, and to the said William Knight faithfully promised to perform the said agreement in all things on his part to be performed] upon himself assumed, and to the said William Keech then and there faithfully promised, that the said William Knight the said agreement in all things on his part to be performed well and faithfully would perform and fulfil. And whereas also the said William Knight afterwards, to wit, upon the 1st day of March, in the 2nd year of the now King and Queen, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, was indebted to the said William Keech in one other sum of twenty-three pounds, and ten shillings, for money to the use of the said William Keech before that [317] time had and received, and so being therein indebted, the said William Knight in consideration thereof afterwards, to wit, upon the same day and year at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, upon himself assumed, and to the said William Keech, then and there faithfully promised to pay to the said William Keech the said twenty-three pounds, and ten shillings, last mentioned; nevertheless the said William Knight his several promises and assumptions aforesaid, in the form aforesaid made, not in the least regarding, but contriving, and fraudulently intending the said William Keech in this behalf, craftily and subtilly to deceive and defraud, the said twenty-three pounds, and ten shillings last mentioned, to the said William Keech hath not paid, nor his agreement aforesaid, hitherto in any wise hath performed, [although to do this the said William Knight by the said William Keech afterwards, to wit, upon the 10th day of March, in the 2nd year aforesaid, at London aforesaid was requested;] but the said money to pay, or the agreement aforesaid to perform, altogether hath refused, and as yet doth refuse, to the damage of the said William Keech of 600l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said William Knight, by Richard Hastler his attorney, comes and defends the wrong and injury, when, &c. and as to the second promise and assumption in the declaration aforesaid above specified, the said William Keech saith that he did not assume upon himself in manner and form as the said William Keech above against him complains, and of this he puts himself upon the country; and the said William Keech doth the like, &c. And as to the first promise and assumption in the declaration aforesaid above specified, the said William Knight saith, that the said William Keech ought not to have or maintain his action aforesaid thereupon against him; because he saith that the sale and assignment in the declaration aforesaid mentioned were not made in writing, nor ever were executed by the said William Knight to the said William Keech; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore he prays judgment if the said William Keech ought to have or maintain his action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c.

And the said William Keech as to the said plea of the said William Knight, as to the first promise and assumption in the declaration aforesaid above specified, saith that he by any thing in the said plea alledged, ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against the said William Knight, because he [318] saith that the said plea by the said William Knight in the form aforesaid above pleaded, and the matter therein contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude the said William Keech from having his action aforesaid thereupon against the said William Knight, to which plea the said William Keech hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land in any manner to answer; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient answer in this behalf, the said William Keech prays judgment thereupon, and his damages thereupon to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said William Knight saith, that the said plea as to the first promise and assumption in the declaration aforesaid above specified, by him the said William Knight, in the manner and form aforesaid above pleaded, and the matter therein contained are good and sufficient in law to preclude the said William Keech from having his action aforesaid thereupon, against the said William Knight; which plea and the matter therein contained, the said William Knight is ready to verify and prove, as the Court, &c. And because the said William Keech to the said plea doth not answer, nor it hitherto in any manner doth deny, the said William Knight [as before] prays judgment, and that the said William Keech may be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against the said William Knight, &c. And because the justices, &c.

In assumpsit on mutual executory promises it is sufficient to assign a breach generally, that the defendant had not performed his part, &c. without shewing wherein. 1 Lev. 20, 44. Hardres 102, 103. 1 Vent. 177, 214. 2 Saund. 350, 351. Cro. Ja. 202. Yelv. 128. Owen 123. Ante 70. 4 Bac. Ab. 17.

Assumpsit, and declares that the defendant was possessed of the moiety of a ship, as he affirmed, and offered to sell it, whereupon it was agreed between the plaintiff and him, that the defendant should sell all his interest to the plaintiff, the sale to be in writing, and that the plaintiff should pay to the defendant 600l. for it, if it was a moiety and according to that rate or proportion, be his part more or less; and that the plaintiff should pay to the defendant 23l. 10s. in hand, and the residue thereof upon the execution of the writing; and that in consideration that the plaintiff had paid the said 23l. 10s. and had assumed to perform the agreement on his part, the defendant promised to perform it on his part; notwithstanding which the said defendant had not performed the agreement on his part: and on non (1) assumpsit and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the breach was not well laid, being too general, but he ought to have shewn some particular wherein he had not performed it, as to say, the plaintiff had tendered to him a writing which he had refused to sign, or that he had not delivered his part in the ship, and that the plaintiff ought to do the first act, viz. to tender the writing. Whereto it was answered and resolved by the Court, viz. Nevile, Powell and Rokesby, no Ch. Justice being yet made, 1. That the defendant having undertaken to sell his part by writing, he is to make and tender the writing at his peril, for he has undertaken to do it; as where a covenant is to make an obligation, &c. the covenanter is to draw the obligation, &c. and to tender it. This case being upon a mutual promise, the breach is well enough assigned in the words of the promise, especially after a verdict, and therefore they gave judgment for the plaintiff. Action brought on the Statute of Winton, and declares that he was robbed, and none of the thieves taken within 40 days, according to the said statute: and after verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment that the statute was mistaken; for it was not the Statute of Winton which gave the forty days to the country to take thieves, for the Statute of Winton gives half a year; but it was the stat. 28 E. 3, 11, which restrains the time to 40 days, Co. 2 Inst. 569. Old Entr. 218. Dyer 370, pl. 59. Co. Entr. 350. 2 Leon. 12. Whereto it was answered, that those books are mistaken, for the Stat. of Winton itself gives no more than 40 days, and so are all the modern precedents, as Rast. Ent. 406. Co. Ent. 351. Herne 215. Assumpsit on a policy of insurance. Molloy L. 2, c. 7, § 12. 2 Saund. 205. 2 Keble 717, 722. Douglas 72, Lilly v. Ewer. A warranty in a policy of insurance is a condition upon a contingency, and unless that is performed there is no contract. The contract does not exist, unless it is literally complied with. Per L. Mansfield. 1 Term Rep. 346.

Assumpsit on a policy of assurance made in the usual form; and in the conclusion of the policy were the words usually there inserted, viz. warranted to depart with convoy; and the voyage was to be from London to Naples; and June 17, the ship departed from London with convoy, but the 19th of June the ship and the convoy were separated by tempest, and the ship was by the tempest driven into Foy, and the convoy into Torbay, ten leagues distant from Foy; and the ship and the convoy continued in the said several ports 'till March 1, when the wind changed, and so continued 'till March 3, which was time enough for the convoy to have arrived at the ship; and that the ship sailed out of Foy to go to the convoy, but before she reached the convoy, she [321] was by another tempest drove seventy leagues out to sea, the convoy remaining all this time at Torbay; and the ship being so out at sea was taken by pirates. And upon a special verdict finding the whole matter (on the issue non assumpsit) the question was, whether the insurer should be charged? And 1. It was agreed and admitted of both sides, that by the custom of merchants those words, warranted to depart with convoy, are the words of the assured, and not of the assurer, and by them the assured is to find the convoy. 2. It was held by the Chief Justice Holt and the most part of the Court, that although the words are only to depart with convoy, yet they extend to sail with convoy throughout the whole voyage. But 3. That this separation being by the tempest at the first, and the ship and the convoy never after meeting, and the ship failing to meet with the convoy to go with it the rest of the voyage, and being again driven away by tempest, and taken by the pirates, though the convoy remained all this time at Torbay, yet this was not such a neglect in the (1) convoy as to discharge the insurer, who might have staid at Foy 'till the convoy came to him; and therefore they gave judgment for the plaintiff. In a warrantia chartæ where only a term for years is evicted, if the defendant obtain a verdict he shall have his costs. Query? F. N. B. [135]. 6 Viner Ab. 341. Com. Dig. Pleader 3 N.

A warrantia chartæ, and counts that the defendants enfeoffed him, and covenanted that they were seised of a good estate in fee, and had good power to convey to the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff should quietly enjoy it from all former grants, &c. except a term of 20 years to one Barret; whereof there were only seven years to come: and that the said tenants all and singular the said premisses should warrant to the plaintiff against all men. And the plaintiff says, that at the time of the feoffment there were more than seven years to come of the said term to Barret; and that Boscawen had a title thereto, and entered and expelled the plaintiff; and that the defendants refused to warrant the tenements to him; and upon issue, that there were no more than seven years to come of the said [322] term, a verdict was for the defendant; and upon this verdict it was moved, that the defendant ought to have costs by the statute 4 Jac. 1, c. 3. That in all cases where the plaintiff shall have costs, the defendant shall have costs if the verdict be for him: and by the statute of Gloucester, cap. 1, costs are to be given in all cases where damages are to be recovered: and in a warrantia chartæ the demandant shall recover damages, F. And although covenant had been the proper action in this case upon the eviction of the term, and not a warrantia chartæ, yet seeing that the tenant will accept of a judgment in this action, he ought to have his costs; but quære hereof; for if the action does not lie, the judgment ought to be against the defendant, although the verdict be for him. Levinz for the defendant.

DANBY against HODGSON.

S. C. 2 Lutw. 1389. Nel. Lutw. 447.

The defendant pleads a proscription to enter and take stones for repairs, but does not say that he used them in repairs. Upon demurrer this plea held bad. Moor 492. Cro. Eliz. 498. Owen 63. 1 Rol. Rep. 507. 5 Bac. Ab. 203.

Trespass inter alia for breaking his close, and digging four cart-loads of stones, and carrying away and converting them to his own use. The defendant, as to all but the breaking of the close, and the carrying away the four load of stones, pleads not guilty; and as to them he prescribes to enter and dig stones for reparation of his house and fences, wherefore he digged them and carried them away to repair his house and fences, being out of repair; whereupon the plaintiff generally demurred. And now it was argued for the plaintiff, that the plea is not sufficient, it not saying that he used them for repairs, or indeed that he kept them by him to repair; for otherwise it may be that he has sold them, although at first he digged them and carried them away for that use, as in Long. 5 E. 4, 100, in waste; so Cro. Eliz. 433, 434, 693, 694. Trin. 10 H. 7, pl. 9, 15. Mich. 39 H. 7, pl. 13. To which it was answered, that then it was within the plea of not guilty. Whereto it was replied, that the not guilty shall not go to the four cart-loads, but to the residue; and the taking and carrying away those four cart-loads is in itself a conversion of them, if the justification is not good; and of that opinion was the Court, viz. Nevile, Powell and Rokesby, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Levinz for the plaintiff, Lutwiche for the defendant.

[324] SMITHSON against GARTH AND OTHERS.

Trespass for several things at the same time against several defendants, one does one part, and another another part; all of them shall be charged for the whole, and not severally for several parts. 7 Vin. Ab. 259. Where the trespass is joint, and the jury find the defendants guilty of a joint trespass, they cannot sever the damages. Per Lord Mansfield. 5 Bur. 2792. But where the defendants do not plead jointly, the damages may be severed. 2 Stra. 1140.

Trespass of assault, battery and imprisonment, and taking two silver buttons, against James Garth and his wife, Sarah Richmond and one Robinson and his wife. Whereto Sarah Richmond and Robinson and his wife plead not guilty to the whole, and issue thereon. Garth and his wife, as to the coming with force and arms, and against the peace, plead not guilty, and as to the residue (they plead in bar) actio non, &c. because the plaintiff assaulted them, and they defended themselves; and so the damage, if any, was by reason of their own assault. The plaintiff replied de injuria sua propria absque tali causa, that they assaulted, beat, and imprisoned him: et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam, and the defendant likewise. And both issues were tried, and verdict for the plaintiff generally, and entire damages. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here was a discontinuance by the plaintiff himself; for, as it is, Garth and his wife have said nothing as to the imprisonment, and the taking of the buttons; nor had the plaintiff replied any thing thereto, but they are wholly omitted in the issue, and therefore the defendants ought not to have been charged with damages for that, but the jury ought to have severed the damages, and to have charged Robinson and his wife and Richmond for the damages for those matters upon the (general) not guilty to the whole, they being found guilty of the whole, and to have charged Garth and his wife with the battery by themselves, because thereto they only had pleaded, and thereupon only is the issue joined as to them. To which after several debates in several terms it was answered and resolved by the Court, that the plaintiff having charged them jointly with the whole entire matter, if one of them committed the battery, another the imprisonment, another took the buttons, yet being all done at one time, they are all guilty of the whole, and shall be all charged with the whole damages: and if several damages had been given, the plaintiff could have had only one of them, and should have made his election de melioribus dampnis. And if it should be as the defendant would have it, the plaintiff would have two several damages for the battery, the one against Garth and his wife, and the other against Richmond and Robinson and his wife, whereas they all ought to [325] be charged together with the whole, 11 Co. Rep. Heyden's case. And as to the discontinuance, that is cured by the verdict by the statute 32 H. 8, c. 30, which says, that after verdict the Court shall proceed to judgment, notwithstanding any discontinuance: so that let the discontinuance be either on the part of the plaintiff, or of the defendant, it is all one, Roll. 2 Rep. 161. Playstow vers. Jennings, 11 Co. Rep. 6. Gomersale's case cited in Heydon's case, Hob. 187. Freeston versus Boyer, Cro. Ja. 353. Watts versus King. Whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff, Lutwyche for the defendant.

Covenant upon articles, whereby the defendant covenanted, that the plaintiff should enjoy a close quietly for a year, whereupon the plaintiff put in his beasts, and Knolls (who had a title to the premisses by virtue of a certain lease to him thereof made before the making of the articles aforesaid) entered upon the plaintiff and expelled him; and afterwards, viz. such a term, &c. brought an action of trespass against him for putting his beasts into the said close, on which such proceedings were had, that Knolls recovered against the now plaintiff 20l. damages, and 17l. costs, whereof the defendant had notice; and so for the not quietly enjoying, the defendant had broken his covenant: and issue thereupon, and verdict for the now plaintiff. Whereupon it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the breach was not well assigned, for that he does not shew what title Knolls had; and it may be, the title which he had was under the now plaintiff himself, and there having been a suit wherein the title of Knolls appeared, the plaintiff ought to have shewn it; for now it lies in his own knowledge. But non allocatur; for the title of Knolls cannot be supposed to be under the now plaintiff; for the declaration is, that Knolls had a title by virtue of a demise made to him before the making of the articles to the plaintiff; and let the title be derived from whom it will, yet it being before the articles made with the plaintiff, the covenant is broken, according to Proctor and Newton's case, Trin. 23 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 856, where on the like breach assigned as here judgment was given for the plaintiff; the roll of which case was now brought [326] into Court; and upon view thereof, after divers motions, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff.

GLOVER against COPE.

S. C. Shower 84. 4 Mod. 80. 1 Salk. 185.

Covenant to repair a copyhold runs with the land. 3 Term Rep. 398.

Covenant, and declares, that the lord of the manor of Hackney granted the copyhold in question to one Hockenall, and that Hockenall according to the custom of the manor demised it to the defendant for 21 years, and that he covenanted to repair it; and that the said Hockenall afterward surrendered the reversion to another Hockenall, who surrendered it to the plaintiff, and assigns a breach in not repairing the messuage after the reversion came to the plaintiff. The defendant pleads, that before the reversion came to the plaintiff, he assigned the term to Picks, who entered and is possessed, whereof the plaintiff had notice. To which the plaintiff demurs, and two points were made in the case; 1. Whether this covenant should run with the reversion by the common law? 2. If not, whether the assignees of a reversion of a copyhold should be within the stat. 32 H. 8, 34, which says, that all grantees of reversions shall have the same or the like actions and entries for conditions as the grantors might have. And for the first point it was urged, that covenant lies in this case at common law, as appurtenant to the land, as 42 E. 3, 3. Covenant to perform divine service to him and his servants in his chapel. 9 H. 6, 16. Debt for rent by the assignee of a reversion. 5 H. 7, 19. Debt for rent or for waste by the lord upon an escheat. Mich. 25 Car. 2, Langhor against Williams adjudged that covenant lies against an assignee to repair. Cro. Cha. 137, Bayly and Offord, a covenant that if lessee be distrained, to deduct it out of the rent, it shall go to the assignee of a term. 5 Co. Rep. Dean and Chapter of Windsor, and ibid. Spencer's case, and the action lies against the lessee, notwithstanding the assignment, it being brought upon the express covenant. Cro. Cha. 188, Batchelor against Gage, and ibid. 580. Norton against Acklane, and Cro. Ja. Brett against Cumberland. And for the second point it was argued for the plaintiff, that assignees of the reversion of copyholds are within the stat. 32 H. 8. Against which it was objected, that copyholds were not [327] within that statute; 1. For the meanness of their estate, of which the statute does not take any notice; nor are they comprised in the general words of Acts of Parliament, and therefore the Statute of Bankrupts mentions them in particular; and by Cro. Cha. Rowden and Malster's case, they are not within the Statute de Donis. 2. For the prejudice to the lords. Whereto it was answered for the plaintiff, that before this statute copyholds were well known at the common law, as Litt. sect. 77, ex 7 E. 4, per Danby, 21 E. 4, per Brian. Kel. 77, & 21 H. 7, & 12 E. 4, 7, and since the statute, as Owen 73, a copyholder makes a lease, this shall bind the heir, which proves he is in by descent, and not by the admission. The heir may have trespass, ejectment, or may surrender before his admission. As to the second objection it was agreed, that they are not included in Acts of Parliament by general words in cases where the lord shall be prejudiced thereby, and therefore they were named by particular words in the Statute of Bankrupts, and a particular provision made therein against the lord's being prejudiced: but where no such prejudice is to the lords, they are comprised in the general words, lands, tenements and hereditaments, Mo. pl. 276. 3 Co. Rep. Heydon's case, 4 Co. Rep. 26, so they are within the stat. 32 H. 8, made the same session of Parliament against buying of pretended titles, and by 9 Co. Rep. Podger's case, they are within the statute of 1 H. 7, of Fines, and 6 Co. Dean and Chapter of Worcester's case 13 El. against long leases made by ecclesiastical persons, so within the stat. 27 El. against Fraudulent Conveyances, and also within the stat. 31 H. 8, of Monasteries, made at another session of the same Parliament; and a reason is there given, because great part of the realm consists in copyholds; and in the case of Wentworth and Peables lately in this Court, it was adjudged by Hale and the whole Court, that they are within the Stat. de Donis, contrary to the opinion in Rowden and Malster's case; and Justice Dolben remembered another case before Hale Ch. Just. at a trial in Middlesex, where he would not permit it to be found specially, so as to make it a question whether they were within the Stat. de Donis. But on the other side were cited Swinnerton's case in Hob. Hobart's opinion, and Millor's case, Hob. 170, 179, and Cro. Cha. 24, Platt against Plummer, where a special verdict is found on this point, but nothing further done; and Cro. Ja. 395, Beale against Brasier, where it is adjudged, but without argument, that copyholders are not within that statute. And after this case had been argued here [328] several times, Holt Chief Justice, as I heard, was of opinion, that copyholds are not within that statute; but now it seems that the whole Court were of a contrary opinion, for they gave judgment for the plaintiff, which I apprehended to be upon both points, for that they did not found it upon either point only, as I observed. Levinz for the plaintiff upon the last argument.

PYE QUI TAM, &C. against THE HUNDRED OF WESTBURY.

Oath that he was robbed by four persons unknown, seems sufficient within the statute. Ante 320. Post 347.

Case upon the Statute of Winton, and declares in all points according to the statute, only in setting forth the oath before the justice of peace he swore, that he was robbed by four persons to him unknown. And whether this was sufficient upon the statute of Eliz. which appoints the oath? was the question; it saying, that he shall make oath that he did not know the persons, nor any of them; and the matter being found specially, it was objected, that the oath here was not sufficient; for perhaps though he might not know all the four, yet he may know one of them, and Noy 20, Bateman against The Hundred of ——— was cited, where the like oath is held insufficient by three Judges against one; and to this opinion Justice Powell at this time inclined, but Just. Rokesby to the contrary held, that if he was robbed by four persons unknown, all the four were unknown to him. But no Ch. Just. being yet made, it was adjourned.

[329] EASTER TERM, IN THE FOURTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

Sir George Treby made Chief Justice of C. B.

No Chief Justice being made till the latter end of this term, nothing memorable was done in this Court, all things staying in expectation of Sir George Treby the Attorney-General to come up to the place of the late Lord Chief Justice Pollexfen. And at the latter end of this term he came up Chief Justice.

[330] TRINITY TERM, IN THE FOURTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

HUNLOCK against PETRE.

S. C. Lutw. 963. Nel. Lutw. 305, 306. 2 Danv. 570, pl. 4.

In formedon upon the plea of non-tenure in general, without a disclaimer, the demandant may maintain his writ for his damages. 1 Mod. 181, 182. Co. Lit. 102. 2 Bulstr. 15. 1 Roll. Ab. 630, 631. 2 Lev. 30, 31. Com. Dig. Abatement, F. 15.

Formedon in reverter. The tenant imparls specially, and then pleads nontenure generally. The demandant maintains his writ, that he is tenant. Whereupon the tenant demurs; and now it was argued for the tenant, that the demandant cannot maintain the writ, no damages being to be recovered; but upon such a general nontenure pleaded he may enter: but where damages are to be recovered in any real action, he may maintain the writ for recovery of his damages; and cited Litt. sect. 691, and Coke Commentary thereupon, who says, if the tenant in a formedon pleads that he is not tenant, or disclaims, &c. judgment shall be, that the tenant shall go without day, and the demandant may enter, and shall be remitted. Whereto it was answered and resolved by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby, upon consideration of the books hereafter mentioned, that Litt. and Coke are not to be understood of a simple plea of nontenure, but of a nontenure with a disclaimer, as the pleadings usually were in Littleton's time; for upon a simple plea of nontenure, suppose the tenant had no freehold, but had a reversion in fee, should the demandant recover the fee, whether in the tenant, or in any other? Certainly, no; for nothing is disowned by the simple plea of nontenure, but [331] only the freehold, which perhaps is true, and yet he has the reversion in fee. Should his reversion be thereby lost, and the demandant remitted thereto? No, surely; but when he disclaims, or pleads nontenure and disclaims, the demandant shall be remitted to the whole, because he had disclaimed the whole; and that the pleadings about Littleton's time were not simple pleas of nontenure, but with disclaimer also, see 36 H. 6, 28, 29, formedon in descender against two; one pleads nontenure, the other disclaims, the demandant may enter by the disclaimer of the one, because it cannot vest in the other, by reason of his pleading nontenure: 13 H. 7, 28, the tenant pleads nontenure, and also disclaims. 22 H. 6, 44, on a plea of nontenure in dower the demandant maintains his writ, and yet no damages are in dower, except the husband died seised, and in that case it does not appear he did so. 4 E. 4, 38, formedon in reversion; the tenants plead nontenure, and also disclaim, the demandant could not maintain his writ. 6 E. 3 and 5. 4 E. 1, in formedon the tenant disclaims, the demandant or plaintiff shall not maintain his writ, but enter. Fitz. Dow. 8, the tenant pleads nontenure, yet the demandant maintains his writ, though it does not appear that the husband died seised. 11 H. 4, 16. 7 H. 6, 17. Bro. Nontenure 23, 47, in a scire fac' to execute a fine, the tenant pleads nontenure, the demandant maintains the writ, and yet no damages are in the scire facias; and the constant practice at this day upon nontenure pleaded is for the demandant to maintain his writ, if he will, as Trin. 14 Jac. 1, in this Court, Pitt against Staples, 1 Bro. 151, & Pasch. 21 Jac Rot. 49, in Gulston's Office, & Mich. 12 Jac. 1, Rot. 221, in Bro. Office, Hern's Plead. 536. Rast. Entr. 363, and the last edition of Co. Entr. 325. In a formedon, issue was taken on the nontenure. And for pleading nontenure and disclaimer together, see Rast. Entr. 224, 225, 561. And for pleading of simple disclaimer, see Rast. Ent. 28, 276. Whereupon judgment was given that the tenant should answer over. Levinz of counsel for the demandant, Lutwyche for the tenant.

[332] BARRUDALE against LORD CUTTS, AN IRISH PEER.

Writ of protection with an exception. 3 Blac. Com. 289. 5 Term Rep. 688.

Assumpsit against him by his taylor for work done, and process to the exigent; whereupon at the return thereof a protection was brought into Court under the Great Seal for staying the outlawry, for that he is detained in our wars in Flanders, to continue for one year if he in our service should so long remain and continue beyond sea: and therefore we will that he be quieted from all suits, pleas, &c. except pleas of dower unde nihil habet, quare impedit, assize of novel disseisin, and attaint. And now two exceptions were taken to the writ; 1. For that pleas before justiciariis nostris itinerantibus is not in the exception as the register is. But non allocatur; for those iters have been long discontinued, and it shall not be intended of iters circa forestas. 2. That the writ is not allowable on his coming in upon the exigent, which is the King's suit; and there are not any such words in the protection as licet tanget nos; but non allocatur, for the writ of protection is allowable for him who comes in upon the exigent, though not for him who comes in on the cap. utlagat. Hob. 115, Shirlie's case. And the protection was allowed.

LORD PETRE against THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE AND WOODROFFE.

S. C. 2 Lut. 1117, 1120. Nel. Lut. 349, 350.

The King's pardon of a recusant convict tolls the disability to present, notwithstanding the omission of the word convict in the stat. 3 Ja. 1.

A quare impedit for the church of West Harmingfield. The university pleads the statute of 23 El. of 20l. per month forfeited by popish recusants for not coming to church, and another stat. 29 Eliz. which enacts that recusants for not rendering themselves to the sheriffs before the next sessions after proclamation, shall be convicted; and that the plaintiff was indicted at such a sessions, and proclamation was made, and that he did not render himself to the sheriff at the next sessions, whereby he was convicted, and then pleaded the statute of 3 Jac. 1. Whereby it is enacted, that every person who shall be a popish recusant convict shall, during the time that he remains [333] a recusant (not saying convict) be disabled to present to any church, and that the chancellor and scholars of the university shall present during the time that he remains a popish recusant convict. And that the plaintiff remained so convicted, whereby the university presented the other defendant Woodroffe, and Woodroffe pleads in disability, that the plaintiff responderi non debet, and then pleads the statutes 23 & 29 El. and another clause in the stat. 3 Jac. 1. That popish recusants convict shall be as excommunicated, disabled, &c. and demands judgment si respondere debet. The plaintiff, as to the university's plea, pleads the pardon 4 Jac. 2, whereby he pardons inter alia all judgments and convictions for not coming to church, and produces an exemplification thereof out of the Chancery, where it is enrolled. Whereupon the university demurs. And as to Woodroffe's plea the plaintiff demurs specially; for that the defendant did not bring in any record of the conviction with an hic in Curia prolat'. And upon argument the Court gave judgment against the defendant Woodroffe; that he should answer for two causes. 1. He pleads the statute as made 29 El. whereas the Parliament commenced in 28 Eliz. and to that time the Act shall refer, as is observed, 4 Inst. 7, and Co. Entr. 569, it is so pleaded, and so 4 Leon. 80. 2. The statute is not well pleaded; for the statute is, that they shall render themselves before the next sessions, and he pleads that he did not render himself at the next sessions; and notwithstanding this he may have rendered before the next sessions. But then as to the matter in law, touching the university, the Court did not agree at this time; for though they agreed that the pardon of K. James had pardoned the conviction, yet as to the words in the middle of the sentence, some would have them to be taken absolutely by themselves, viz. that he having been once convicted should be disabled as long as he remained a recusant, although the conviction be pardoned, and that he shall be disabled as long as he remains a recusant, and has not conformed; but other Judges inclined, that recusants convict should be intended throughout the sentence, although the word convict be omitted in the middle of the sentence. But afterwards Trin. 5 W. & M. this point was also agreed by Nevile, Powell, & Treby Chief Justice against Rokesby, that the pardon had not only pardoned the conviction, but also restored the party to his ability, notwithstanding he had not conformed; [334] for the word convict is to be intended throughout the whole sentence (though an omission thereof be in the middle of the sentence) it being inserted both in the beginning and also in the end of the paragraph. Also the plea of Woodroffe is ill for the cause assigned upon the demurrer; for he who pleads a disability by record, ought to bring in the record or a certificate thereof sub pede sigilli immediately, as in excommengement, the certificate of the bishop under his seal; in outlawry, to plead the outlawry with a hic in Curia prolat'; and by 3 H. 6, 15, one shall not plead a record in abatement or any other dilatory plea, without having it in Court: and as to the objection, that the justices of the sessions have no seal, it was answered and resolved, that it might be removed into Chancery by certiorari, and from thence sent hither by mittimus. And afterwards in Trin. 5 W. & M. Woodroffe having pleaded the same plea with the university, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz for the plaintiff, Fuller for the defendant.

GOODWIN against BLACKMAN.

[Overruled, Denn d. Burgess v. Purvis, 1757, 1 Burr. 330.]

Ejectment of the tenth part of a messuage in D. and S. the whole lying in D. only, the evidence does not support the declaration. 1 Stra. 695, contra. Com. Dig. Pleader, S. 26. 1 Bur. 330. Denison, Just. calls this a strange case.

Ejectment on a demise of Vandenbenden of the tenth part of a messuage in the parishes of St. Katharine Coleman-Street and St. Gabriel Fenchurch-Street, and at the trial at Guild-hall before Nevile Justice, it appeared on the evidence, that the whole messuage lay in the parish of St. Katharine Coleman-street, and no part thereof in the parish of St. Gabriel Fenchurch-street. And Nevile Justice being strongly of opinion that the plaintiff had failed in proving his declaration, it was made a case for the opinion of the Court, but a verdict was given for the plaintiff with a stay of the judgment till the opinion of the Court was had in the matter. And now it was moved by Levinz for judgment for the plaintiff; for if one brings ejectment of an acre of land in D. and S. and the whole lies in D. he shall recover: or if a man brings ejectment of an acre of land in D. and part thereof lies in S. he shall recover for that part which lies in D. Plowd. Comm. 429 b. If a man has a title to the 4th part of an acre only, and he brings ejectment for the whole acre, he shall recover the 4th part. Cro. Eliz. 13. Ejectment of 100 acres, and proves a title by lease of 40 acres only, he shall recover the 40 acres, which cases the Court did not deny: but in this present case the most part [335] of the Judges held, that the declaration here being precisely of the tenth part of an entire thing, viz. of a messuage, the evidence did not maintain it. Quære the diversity, and see 44 Assize 27. Assize brought of a mill, and it is found that the plaintiff had an antient mill which fell down, and he erected a new one; the greater part whereof was in the place of the old one, and another part thereof on the defendant's land; and yet he recovered such part of the new mill as was erected upon his own soil, though he did not recover the whole mill.

NOBLE against HOLHEAD.

Assumpsit for money received as well before as after the day of the promise, ill in toto where verdict and entire damages.

Assumpsit on three several promises; two of them were good, and well laid, but the third was laid thus; and whereas the defendant (such a day, year, and place) was indebted to the plaintiff in 13l. 10s. for so much money of the said plaintiff, and of divers other persons to the plaintiff's use then before and afterwards had and received, he promised, &c. After verdict for the plaintiff, on issue non assumpsit, and entire damages, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Levinz, that the declaration was ill in the third promise, viz. that such a day he was indebted to the plaintiff in monies to the plaintiff's use received(1) antea & postea. And the damages being entire, he cannot have judgment for any part; wherefore judgment was stayed.

CHAMBERS against WARKHOUSE.

Trover de catulis & catellis, not saying of what sort, and una amphora saporis, good.
Cro. Car. 391. 1 Lev. 201. 1 Lev. 99. Ray. 215. 1 Sid. 98.

Trover among other things de sex catulis, quatuor catellis, & una amphora saporis. After verdict for the plaintiff, and entire damages, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Levinz, that catulis signifies whelps, catellis little whelps of any sort, either of dogs, bears, &c. and non constat of what kind they here are, and no property can be of whelps; also the word saporis signifies savour, whereof no action lies, and the damages being entire no judgment can be given; but the Court on the first motion ruled judgment for the plaintiff, nisi causa, &c. for they would intend them dog-whelps, and trover had been maintained for a dog. And as to the word saporis, they would intend the damages to be given for the amphora, and nothing for the word saporis. But afterwards it was moved again, and the following authorities were cited pro & con in the case, Hob. 283. Trespass for taking de uno cane venatico. Dy. 306. Trover does not lie of a hawk, except it be shewn to be reclaimed. Cro. Car. 544, Sir Martin Leister

(1) The translation takes no notice of these words in the original. "Puis le jour del promise. Et le declaration est pour monies receu." against Home accordingly. But Cro. Car. 18, Sir Francis Vincent against Lesney, trespass lies for striking his hawk, without shewing he was reclaimed. Cro. Ja. 262, Grimes vers. Stacke, trover lies of musk-cats and of monkies, because they are merchandize; and for the same reason [337] it has been adjudged, that trover lies of negroes, Cro. Ja. 345, Wadhurst against Damme. Trespass for killing his mastiff; and ibid. 463, trespass for taking his greyhound and collar. 2 Inst. 655, in the time of E. 1, trespass for taking his two greyhounds. Ow. 93, assumpsit to deliver a dog. Cro. Eliz. 125, 126, property in a dog. Roll. 1 Abr. pag. 5, sect. 5, that trover lies of a spaniel; and afterward judgment was given for the plaintiff.

THE KING against THE BISHOP OF NORWICH, RICHARD HIDE AND EDMUND BOUGHTON.

Notice or no notice of a simoniacal agreement not necessary. Ante 16, 83, 115, 206.

Quare impedit of the church of Hopton Wafers in the county of Salop, and declares that J. S. was seised of the advowson, and presented Wheeler, and granted the next avoidance to Charles Boughton, and that the church avoided by the death of Wheeler, and then shews the stat. 31 El. c. 5, of Simony; and that the church being void, it was corruptly agreed between a friend of Charles Boughton, and on his behalf, and one Taylor, that Charles Boughton should present Hide, and that Taylor should pay to Richards 20l. a year for six years, if Hide should so long live; and that in pursuance of this agreement Taylor became bound to Richards in 200l. for payment of the 20l. per annum; which obligation was made to the use of Charles Boughton; and that immediately thereupon Charles Boughton presented Hide, and he was thereupon de facto instituted, &c. which by virtue of the said statute was void, and so it belonged to K. Charles II. to present, and then derives the Government to the now King and Queen, and their right now to present; and that the defendants hindered them, &c. Hide with a protestation to the agreement and the obligation pleads, that he had no notice of the agreement at the time of the presentation, or at any time before; whereupon the Attorney-General demurs for the King. Boughton also with a protestation to the agreement and the obligation pleads, that the other defendant presented him freely, and traverses the corrupt agreement. Whereupon issue was joined; and now upon arguing the demurrer, and consideration of the books of Cro. Ja. 385. The King against The Bishop of Norwich, Cro. 533. Booth versus Potter, Cro. Car. 330. Mich. 9 Car. I, Bawderocke versus [338] Mackaller, 3 Inst. 154, it was resolved by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby, that the notice is not material, but only the corrupt agreement; for the notice is very difficult to be proved in such cases, and the patron may entrust a friend, as in this case, to make the agreement; and before notice thereof given to him, may present upon an assurance by certain signs between them that such an agreement is perfected. Whereupon they gave judgment for the plaintiff upon the demurrer, but execution to stay 'till the issue tried. Levinz for the plaintiff, Pemberton for the defendant.

In an action for words where the first words are laid positively, the last words shall be taken positively also; although they come under a cumque. 2 Lev. 193. 2 Show. 17, 294, 413. 2 Jo. 197. 4 Bac. Ab. 512.

Case, quare cum the plaintiff was a good subject, &c. the defendant April 1, quarto regni Regis nunc falsely and maliciously said to the plaintiff, Thou art a perjured knave. Cumque etiam postea Apr. 2, he said, Thou art a cheating rogue, and a perjured knave, and hast cheated all men that ever dealt with thee. After verdict for the plaintiff, upon issue not guilty and entire damages, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Lutwyche, that the last words are not laid affirmatively and positively, but by way of recital, with a cumq; he said these words, and he cited several cases, where in trespass, battery, &c. when alledged cum the defendant did such a trespass, battery, &c. that after a verdict the judgment had been stayed: whereto it was answered, and at another day resolved by the Court, that this being an action on the case, and the first words being laid positively, the last words shall be taken positively also, and the cumq; etiam taken for porro, or moreover; and so they are often in dictionaries; and a case was cited in B. R. which is entered. Mich. 28 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 123. 2 Lev. 193, between Mors and Thatcher, where in such a case in an action for words, and the last words laid as here, viz. cumq; etiam he said, &c. they were on divers motions there so taken for porro; and divers classick authors were cited for that purpose. Whereupon the plaintiff in that case had judgment. And of [339] that opinion on the second motion were the whole Court, viz. Treby Chief Just. Indenture of bargain and sale to one and his heirs in the premisses. Habendum to the bargainee in tail after the death of the bargainor. The indenture shall enure upon the premisses, and shall pass the estate to the vendee directly by the premisses. 14 Viner Ab. 149. Co. Lit. 21 a. Note 2, 183, 299.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty and special verdict, the case was; Parker seised in fee 18 Decemb. 2 Jac. by indenture between him and John Bennet his grandson, the lessor, in consideration of affection and 5s. granted, bargained and sold to the lessor and his heirs the tenements in question, habendum immediately after his death to the lessor and the heirs of his body, with divers remainders over; which indenture was inrolled within six months; and the said Parker the same day by another indenture also enrolled, upon the like consideration, granted, bargained and sold to the lessor and his heirs other lands, habendum immediately after his death to the lessor and the heirs males of his body, with divers other remainders over; after which the said Parker enjoyed all the lands in both the indentures his whole life, without interruption, and died; after whose death the mother of the lessor, being the daughter and heir of Parker, entered; upon whom the lessor entered, and made the lease to the plaintiff: and upon the first argument at the Bar in Trin. term last, and consideration had of the books, Co. Lit. 158. Hob. 171. Mo. pl. 187. Cro. Eliz. 254. It was adjudged by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby, that although the habendum of a future freehold be void, yet the grant in the premises being expresly to him and his heirs, the indenture shall enure upon the premisses, and shall pass the estate to the vendee directly by the premisses, and the continuance of the possession by the grantor for his whole life afterwards was tortious, and shall not alter the case; although perhaps he thought and intended that nothing should pass 'till after his death: for his intent could not alter the law, and make a future freehold good, and a present freehold void. Levinz for the plaintiff.

DASHWOOD against FOLKS.

Declaration in debt upon a writing obligatory.

Middlesex, to wit.—Simon Folkes, late of Greys-Inn, in the county aforesaid, Esquire, otherwise called Simon Folkes, of Greyes-Inn, in the county of Middlesex, Esquire, was summoned to answer Samuel Dashwood, gentleman, of a plea that he render to him one hundred pounds which he owes to him, and unjustly detains from him, &c. And whereupon the said Samuel by Thomas Cantrell his attorney saith, that whereas the said Simon, upon the 23rd day of May, in the first year of the reign of the lord the now King and the lady the now Queen, at Westminster, by his certain writing obligatory granted himself to be holden to the said Samuel in the said one hundred pounds, to be paid to the said Samuel when thereto he should be requested, nevertheless the said Simon although often requested the said one hundred pounds to the said

Samuel hath not as yet paid, but the same to him to pay hitherto hath refused and still doth refuse, whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of ten pounds, and therefore he brings his suit, &c. And produces here in Court the writing aforesaid, which testifies the debt aforesaid, in the form aforesaid, the date of which is the day and year aforesaid, &c.

And the said Simon in his proper person cometh and saith that the Court of the lord the now King and the lady the now Queen here ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, because he saith that he the said Simon and one Thomas Gooding, Esquire, are, and at the day of the suing forth of the original writ of the said Samuel, and long before were Clerk of the Treasury and Warrants, and Keeper of all the Writs and Records of the lord the now King and the lady the now Queen, in the Court of the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen, before the King and Queen themselves; [except the making up of records for Nisi Prius in the said county of Middlesex, and transcripts and certificates upon writs of error, and receipts and files of queriturs and attachments in the same Court, and the keeping of records of attainder] and a minister of the said Court, and that he the said Simon together with the said Thomas [341] continually hath the care and custody of the said Treasury, warrants, writs and records in the said Court of the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen, before the King and Queen themselves, [except as before excepted] by reason whereof the continual attendance of the said Simon in the said Court of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen, before the said King and Queen themselves, for the benefit and advantage of the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen and of their liege subjects is required; and the said Simon according to the duty of his said office is bound to continual attendance in the said Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, before the said King and Queen themselves. And the said Simon further saith, that according to the liberties and privileges of the said Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, before the said King and Queen themselves and their predecessors, for such clerks of the Treasury and warrants, and for such keepers of the records and writs, and for the other officers, clerks, and ministers of the said Court, from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, used and approved of in the same, such clerk of the Treasury and warrants and keeper of the writs and records in the said Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, before the said King and Queen themselves, or any officer, clerk, or minister of the said Court, upon any pleas or complaints [pleas of freehold, felony and appeal only excepted] ought not, nor for the whole time aforesaid have been accustomed to be drawn or compelled against their will to answer before any justices of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, or of their predecessors, or other Judges Secular whatsoever, except only in the said Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, before the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen, and their predecessors. And the said Simon further saith that he against his will, and against the said liberties and privileges of the said Court of the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen, before the said King and Queen themselves, in the manner and form aforesaid by the said Samuel is impleaded, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore he doth not apprehend that the Court of the lord the King and of the lady the Queen of the Bench here will or ought to take any further cognizance of the plea aforesaid against the said Simon, &c.

And the said Samuel saith, that the said Simon ought not to be admitted to say that the Court of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen here ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, because by protesting that the said Simon, on the day of the suing forth of the original writ aforesaid of the said [342] Samuel, and long before did not attend, and now doth not attend the said office of clerk of the Treasury and warrants, and keeper of the writs and records in the said Court of the said lord the now King and the said lady the now Queen, before the King and Queen themselves, but for the whole time aforesaid hath entirely neglected to attend to the said office; for plea the said Samuel saith that after suing forth of the original writ of the said Samuel, to wit, at Westminster in the county of Middlesex, a certain writ of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen of capias of and in the plea aforesaid, issued against the said Simon to the then Sheriff of Middlesex directed, by which writ the said then sheriff was commanded that he should take the said Simon if, &c. and safely, &c. so that he should have his body here, to wit, from the day of Easter last past in fifteen days to answer to the said Samuel of a plea wherefore with force and arms at Westminster he broke the close of the said Samuel, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. and also of the said plea of debt upon the demand of one hundred pounds, at which day here came one John Pye, of Furnivals-Inn, London, gent. and one Thomas Folkes, of Bury St. Edmund, in the county of Suffolk, gent. in their proper persons before Henry Pollexfen, Knight, and his companions, justices of the Bench here, and at the instance of the said Simon acknowledged, and each of them acknowledged that he was indebted to the said Samuel in two hundred pounds, which sum of two hundred pounds they the said John and Thomas for themselves and their heirs willed and granted of the lands and chattels of them and each of them should be made, and to the use and behoof of the said Samuel should be levied, under this condition, that if it should happen that judgment in the Court here in the said plea of debt for the said Samuel against the said Simon should be given, then that the said Simon the said debt of one hundred pounds, and also all damages which to the said Samuel against the said Simon by occasion of the detention of the said debt in the said Court here in the said plea of debt should be adjudged, should satisfy or render his body in execution of such judgment to the prison of the Fleet, as by the record thereof in the said Court remaining more fully appears, whereupon because the said Simon by reason of the premisses hath acknowledged the jurisdiction of the Court here of the plea aforesaid, the said Samuel prays judgment if the said Simon ought to be admitted to [343] say that the Court of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen here ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, &c.

And the said Simon saith that the said plea of the said Samuel above by replying pleaded, and the matter in the same contained, are not sufficient in law to preclude the said Simon from saying that the Court of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, and that he the said Simon to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land to answer in any manner, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said Samuel in this behalf, the said Simon therefore prays that the liberties and privileges aforesaid be allowed to him, and that he from the Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen here in this behalf may be dismissed and discharged, &c.

And the said Samuel because that he above hath pleaded sufficient matter in law to preclude the said Simon from saying that the Court of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen here, ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, as before prays judgment if the said Simon ought to be admitted to say that the Court of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen here ought not to have cognizance of the plea aforesaid, &c. And because the justices, &c.

DASHWOOD against FOLKS.

Privilege may be pleaded after bail put in. Post. 398. 2 Salk. 544. Com. Dig. Abatement, D. 9.

Debt on obligation. The defendant pleads privilege of the King's Bench, as custos brevium of that Court. The plaintiff replies, that thereto he ought not to be admitted, because upon the return of the capias the defendant had put in special bail, viz. A. and B. Whereupon the plaintiff demurred: and now it was argued, that by putting in of special bail he had submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court, as if he had imparled. But it was resolved by the whole Court, that the putting in of bail is no submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court, whether it be general or special bail; for until the bail be put in, he is not [344] in Court to plead any thing, nor is the plaintiff obliged to declare against him; wherefore his plea of privilege was allowed.

Release of all demands generally upon an award refers to the time of the submission only.

Debt on obligation dated May 5, 1690, conditioned to perform the award of A. and B. ita quod it was made &c. before September 20 following. The defendant pleads, that the arbitrators in fact made an award the 19th of (1) December, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 10l. at or upon the first of November following; and that then the parties should release the one to the other all demands; and that the defendant after the submission, viz. 1 Aug. did such a trespass to the plaintiff. The plaintiff replies and sets forth the award, and assigns a breach in non-payment of the 10l. to which the defendant demurs: and now it was argued by Pemberton, that the award was void; for that nothing was awarded to the defendant but only the release, and that is void, being to be made the first of November, which is after the submission, and will release not only the trespass committed after the submission, but also the bond of submission. To which it was answered for the plaintiff, and adjudged by the Court, that the award was good; for 1st. It is pleaded to be made super præmissis, and a release of all demands 'till the time of the submission is a good performance of the award; for although the release is to be made on the first of November, it is not to release all demands 'till the first of November, but only all demands 'till May 5, when the submission was, which is all that is to be intended by this release; otherwise it would be in express words that it should be of all demands 'till the first of November, Hutt. 29, Allaboyer against Clifford, & Mich. 26 Car. 2, C. B. sed intrat. Pasch. 36. Rot. 512, where it was so held by the whole Court as to this point; but there were other exceptions taken, yet judgment was given for the plaintiff. And Roll. 1 Abr. nu. 1, 2, 3, page 260, was cited accordingly. And upon that judgment error was brought in B. R. and error assigned that the [345] sheriff had not returned any pledges de prosequendo. But upon motion here in Trinity term 5 W. & M. the sheriff was permitted to amend the return, and if the plaintiff would not proceed further upon the writ of error, it was ruled he should have costs for the amendment; but if he proceeded further in the writ of error, he should have no costs for the amendment. Levinz for the plaintiff in the original action, and also in the motion in this Court.

IN B. R.

CARTER against CALTHORPE.

S. C. 4 Mod. 152.

Adhuc in the declaration refers to the time of the plaint. Ante 246.

Error of a judgment in Hull-Court, where the case appeared on the record to be this. The plaint was entered there the 15th of December, 2 W. & M. and process was returned at the next Court, held Jan. 28, at which Court the plaintiff declares, that the defendant erected an edifice there, whereby the lights in an ancient messuage of the plaintiff were obstupat' & obstruct' until the levying of the plaint, et adhuc existunt. The defendant there pleads not guilty, and the cause continued here 'till May 7, and then it was removed by hab' corp' and certiorari into B. R. and thereupon all further proceedings in that Court ceased. But afterwards it is there entered, viz. postea ad Cur' villæ præd' tent' coram majore, &c. (not saying at what day) venit the plaintiff, and brought a procedendo, and prayed it to be allowed, which to him was granted. Wherefore at the plaintiff's petition præcept' est per majorem, &c. ad eandem Cur' ballivis to return a jury; and thereupon a trial was had for the plaintiff generally, and 40s. damages, and 2d. costs, and judgment there entered for the plaintiff. On which error was brought in B. R. and assigned, that it appears by the record that the action commenced the 15th of December, when the plaint was levied, and the declaration was not 'till Jan. 28, and then he declares of the continuance of a nuisance adhuc, and so declares for damages since the suit commenced, and so are they given by the jury (i.e. generally) and so for a longer time than they ought to have done. And at first Holt Ch. Justice seemed to incline to this opinion. But Dolben and Eyre were always contrary, who held that the adhuc in the declaration refers to the time in the plaint, for the declaration refers to the plaint, and the declaration and the plaint as to that [346] purpose are all one, and like the day of Nisi Prius, and the day in Bank. And the case of Hent against Burton, Mich. 1 Jac. C. B. Rot. 42, was cited; where in case for a nuisance, as here, and the plaintiff there declares as here, adhuc obscurat' existit, and after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, and after divers motions ruled to be good. But thereto the Ch. Justice answered, that it does not appear upon the record that there was a writ brought at one time, and the count at another time, as here it so appears, and perhaps there was no original sued at all. Whereto it was replied, that that could not be intended, for they always there (i.e. in C. B.) proceed upon an original, which is also cited in the count, viz. such a person summonit' or attachiat' fuit ad respondend', &c. which supposes that the defendant has been summoned or attached before he comes into Court, and yet all the precedents there are adhuc debet, adhuc detinet, nondum solvit, &c. and for authorities in point were cited Co. Ent. 246, 247, in error on adhuc contradicit; and there, though it does appear that the writ was brought 15 May, 30 Eliz. and the count is not 'till Trin. 31 Eliz. the judgment was affirmed. And ibid. 290, in Norwich-Court, a count 18 Septemb. on a plaint levied 13 Septemb. Rast. Entr. 350, the like upon error of a judgment in the Tower-Court; and 1 Saund. 87, 97, in Bristol-Court, a count 20 Jun. on a plaint levied 18 Mar. and judgment affirmed. Co. Entr. 11 b. and 13 a. in case for stopping his way, whereby adtunc & adhuc he lost his way. Co. Entr. 14, 15, Holland against Lovell, in case for disturbing his foldage, although in the writ the disturbance is laid adhuc, and in the count he lays it usq; impetration' brevis & adhuc perdidit, yet a verdict and entire damages was for the plaintiff. Whereupon the whole Court now inclined for the defendant in the writ of error, but adjourned it. Note, It does not appear at what day the Court was held when the procedendo was brought and allowed, and the award of the venire facias was ad istum Curiam; also the venire facias was awarded by the mayor, &c. and says not per Cur', nor when the Court was held: but of these matters no notice was taken. Levinz of counsel for the defendant in the writ of error.

[347] HILARY TERM, IN THE FIFTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

BEARECROFT against THE HUNDREDS OF BURNHAM AND STONE, IN THE COUNTY OF BUCKS, IN THE EXCHEQUER.

Amendment after issue join'd and trial ready at the Bar. Ante 345. Post. 361. 1 Term Rep. 782. 6 Term Rep. 543. Ante 320, 328.

Bearecroft being Receiver-General of Taxes for the county of Worcester sent towards London by the Worcester-carrier 4000l. and sent divers servants with the waggon to guard it. The waggon was robbed in diversis hundredis of Burnham and Stone; for which Bearecroft brought his action against the hundreds, and declares of an assault and robbery done to himself, he being then at Worcester 50 miles from the place where the robbery was committed, and declared that he made oath that he did not know any of the persons; and the trial being ready to be at Bar the jury appeared at the day, but for other business it was adjourned to another day, and before the day to which the adjournment was, the mistake in the declaration being espied, the Court was moved to amend the mistake, and to declare of a robbery on the servants, and of oath made by the servants who had also made oaths of the robbery, &c. And upon great debate and hearing counsel on both sides at several days, and view of two precedents, the one inter Chisly and Becket, in B. R. intrat' Hill. 2 W. & M. Rot. 432, in an action for false return of a member to Parliament on the stat. of H. 6, where the plaintiff declared on [348] a custom of Bedford to elect per majorem, ballivos & burgenses. And the issue was joined, and brought to the Assizes to be tried, but there it being discovered, that the custom was to elect per major' ballio' burgenses & liberos homines, the plaintiff withdrew the record; and although the issue was entered of record in Court, the plaintiff moved to amend his declaration; and upon great deliberation and hearing of counsel, seeing that the time limited by the statute for bringing the action was elapsed, and so the action lost, if it were not amended, the Court ruled it should be amended, and so it was, notwithstanding the great rasures, obliterations and interlineations it made in the record, as it would also do in this case, the year for bringing the action being now passed, and the Court here, viz. Sir Robert Atkins, Lechmere, Turton and Powell ruled the declaration should be amended, notwithstanding the opposition of the defendant. The other precedent produced was Trin. 16 Car. 2, C. B. where in a quare impedit, after issue joined, the replication was amended.

STONE against BALE.

Debt on an obligation dated the 20th of October, but first delivered the 20th March, good.

Debt on obligation, and declares, that March 20, 34 Car. 2, the defendant by obligation dated Octob. 10, 33 Car. 2, sed primo deliberat' 20 Mar. 34 Car. 2, became bound, &c. The defendant pleads, that upon the said tenth of October, when the obligation bears date, there was no such person in rerum natura as the plaintiff. To which the plaintiff demurs: and now upon argument it was adjudged by the whole Court for the plaintiff: they agreed where the plaintiff declares on a date he cannot afterward reply that it was primo deliberat' at another day; for that would be a departure, and so are the books to be intended, Co. 2 Rep. 4 b. and 1 H. 6, 1 b. there cited; for prima facie every deed is supposed to be made the same day that it bears date. But where the date is mistaken, the party may declare, or in his first plea plead, that by a deed bearing date such a day, but primo deliberat' at another day, the party granted, [349] or became bound, &c. For God forbid, when a deed is duly made that by negligence or mistake of the clerk in writing the date, the party should lose the whole benefit of the deed, and be without remedy; and so are Dy. 307 a. 315 a. Cro. Eliz. 773, 890. 5 H. 7, 27 a. to be understood upon this difference. Levinz of counsel with the plaintiff.

He keeps a whore in his house suable in the Spiritual Court. Writ of consultation awarded. Cro. Cha. 339. 1 Sid. 248, 433, 1 Jo. 44. 1 Mod. 23. 2 Roll. Ab. 296, 515. Ante 119. 2 Salk. 692, 693.

A prohibition was prayed and granted last term to the Ecclesiastical Court on a libel for calling the plaintiff there rogue and rascal, and saying that he kept a whore in his house; whereupon a sentence was there for the plaintiff. From which the defendant there appealed to the Arches; and there the sentence was affirmed and remanded; whereupon he appealed to the delegates, and for non-prosecution there the cause was again remanded. After which he obtained a prohibition here. And now on a motion to discharge the prohibition, it was insisted for the plaintiff in the prohibition, that the words in themselves are only words of heat and scolding; and that therefore the Ecclesiastical Court ought to be prohibited, though it be after sentence. To which it was answered, that whoredom is an ecclesiastical offence and scandal, and punishable by the Ecclesiastical Court only. And the defamation for those words is also only examinable there: and to say, that he kept a whore in his house shall not be taken as if he did not know that she was a whore, but shall be taken according to common intendment, that he kept a whore in his house, as a whore;

especially after sentence: and so held the Court, and granted a consultation. Levinz for the defendant in the prohibition.

[351] Sir George Hutchin's Case.

King's Serjeant by accepting of a Judge's place, loses his place of King's Serjeant, not of a serjeant.

Note, He having been the King's Serjeant, and after made one of the commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal, and after discharged of that employment, insisted, that his right of King's Serjeant remained not extinct by having been one of the Keepers of the Great Seal, being collateral to the coif, no more than a serjeant's being made a Judge, though he be after degraded from his place of a Judge, extinguishes his place of a serjeant. For determination whereof the Lord Keeper Sommers convened the Judges. And there it was resolved by all, that he being one of the keepers had extinguished his place of King's Serjeant, as acceptance of a Judge's place extinguishes his place of King's Serjeant, as had been many times resolved before; but neither acceptance of a place of keeper or Judge extinguishes his place of a serjeant. Whereupon he was forced to get a new patent to be King's Serjeant.

Case on the statutes 13 R. 2, c. 5. 15 R. 2, c. 3, and 2 H. 4, c. 11, for suing in the Admiralty for a matter done on the land, and declares that Dec. 13, 34 Car. 2, the plaintiff was about to go from the port of London with the ship named The Commerce of London, being in his possession, loaden with merchandizes, partly his own, and partly of divers other merchants, to merchandize for them, being to have of the others a fifth part of the profits; and that the said 13th of December the defendants prosecuted a suit in the Admiralty for stay of the said ship, till security given that they should not go to traffick with infidels within the limits of the charter of the East-India Company; and Decemb. 14, the defendants procured the said ship to be arrested by process of the Admiralty at Purfleet in Essex, and there detained her till Apr. 1, 36 Car. 2, whereby the plaintiff lost the profit of his voyage. The [352] defendants plead in abatement, which was over-ruled, and then they plead not guilty; and on trial of the issue Franklin was found not guilty. And as to Child and Leach a special verdict found the charter of the East-India Company, 3 Apr. 13 Car. 2, whereby they are incorporated, and have the sole trade to the East-Indies granted to them with a prohibition therein to all others from trading with the infidels there, under the penalty of forfeiture of the ship and goods; and that the plaintiff and others, merchants, had fitted out the ship Commerce with goods to go to the East-Indies, to traffick with infidels within the limits of the East-India Company; whereupon Child, governor of the company, and Leach their solicitor, petitioned the King in Council for stay of the said ship; whereupon there issued an Order of Council to the Admiralty to stay it by the process of that Court, on which the Admiralty-process did issue accordingly, and the ship was thereby stayed, and voyage lost, prout, &c. and that all this was done by the defendants as agents of the said company, and they as agents paid all the fees of the prosecution: and if guilty, damages for the plaintiff in duplo 1500l. and costs 53s. 4d. And thereupon after divers arguments in C. B. judgment was there given for the plaintiff, that he should recover the 1500l. and the 53s. 4d. costs in duplo, and also costs de incremento 167l. in duplo 334l. in toto 1840l. and 50l. to the King: and that the defendants capiantur, and the plaintiff in miseri- cordia as to Franklin. Whereupon the defendants immediately brought their writ of error in B. R. where all the matters which had been before argued in C. B. were again several times argued in B. R. viz. 1. That this whole affair being transacted on behalf of the company, the action ought to have been brought against the company, and not against the defendants their servants. But all this was over-ruled by both the Courts; for 1. This is not like the case in Godbolt 383, where one sued in the Admiralty for another by a warrant of attorney, as his agent; for here it is not found that they had any warrant of attorney, and they must have done this on their own heads. 2. If it had been done by warrant of attorney from the company, yet that would not excuse the matter; for the warrant of no man, not even of the King himself, can excuse the doing of an illegal act; for although the commanders are trespassers, so are also the persons who did the fact. [353] 2. The finding of the company's charter is not material; for admitting their charter to be legal (which was not now debated) yet it would not excuse them for suing in the Admiralty against the law and the statutes; but if any person shall invade their charter, their remedy is by actions in the Courts of Common Law. But the validity of their charter was neither opposed nor defended either in this Court, or in the Common Pleas. The third question made in this Court, and also in C. B. was, if this matter be a suit in the Admiralty within the statutes, or not? For, for the defendants it was insisted, that it was not a suit there: 1. For that there are no parties plaintiffs and defendants, but only a process to stay the ship. 2. That this process was sued by the King's proctor, and by the command of the King himself in Council, who has power to stay ships, and to grant embargoes, and that this is no more than an embargo on this ship. 3. That this is only a prohibition to traffick with infidels, which the King may well do, they being perpetual enemies, 2 Cro. Michelborn's case, and Co. Rep. 7, f. 17 a. But to this it was answered for the plaintiff, 1. That suits in the Admiralty are oftentimes against the ship itself; and so it was in this case, and yet it is a suit, and Child and Leach are the prosecutors in the suit, and Sands is the party grieved; and the stat. 2 H. 4 gives an action and double damages against the prosecutor for the party grieved, so that this is a suit within the words of the statute, and such an one as the statute intended to remedy. 2. Although the suit in the Admiralty be in the name of the King's proctor, and by command of the King himself, yet all this is done by the procurement and prosecution of Child and Leach; and they, as prosecutors, paid the fees, &c. And 3. It is very true that the King has the power to grant embargoes in time of danger for security of the realm, Mo. fol. 892, and in point of State; but the matter here is not such, but only a procurement to stay a ship upon a private and particular account, that the ship should not go to traffick within the limits of the East-India Company, and not in case of dangers from foreign princes, or for injuries done by them to the King's subjects. And if the plaintiffs do any thing against the privilege of their patent, they have thereof a remedy by prohibition or action at the common law; and they ought not to sue in the Admiralty for things done upon the land, as are the patent, and [354] the provision and the furnishing of the ship in this case. 3. As to prohibiting traffick with infidels, it is only the saying of my Lord Coke in both the books cited; and if no commerce should be with infidels, they would never be converted: and it is a disparagement to the Christian religion to think that they should rather be converted (i.e. perverted) by infidels, than that infidels should be converted by them. But that argument appears to be only a pretence in this case; for the restraint is only as to infidels within the limits of the East-India Company, so that they are at liberty to traffick with all other infidels throughout the world. A fourth matter on which the defendants insisted was, that Sands having partners in the goods, he could not sue alone, but that all the others ought to join; and that for two reasons: 1. The damage and loss of the voyage is as well to his partners as to himself. 2. If they sue severally, then the King shall have several ten pounds; whereas the statute gives only one 10*l.* for an offence. Whereto it was answered for the plaintiff; 1. That the ship which is the principal was in the possession of Sands only, and so was the property of it also for any thing that appears in the verdict; and the process is only against the ship; and although divers other merchants had goods in the ship, yet it does not appear that they were part-owners therein, but that each of them had a several property in the several goods, and not a joint-interest; and some part of the goods appears to be the several goods of Sands, and he was to have an advantage from the traffick of all the goods of the others, viz. the fourth part of the profits. And suppose the interest to be joint, yet upon the plea of not guilty, Sands shall recover alone for his part. And if the defendants would have had advantage thereof, they ought to have pleaded it in abatement. And as to the second objection upon this point it was answered, that the King can have only one fine in this action; and if in another action by another person (supposing the King ought not to have but one fine for the whole) if another fine be set, the defendant may shew this fine in excuse thereof. But the counsel argued (to which the Court said nothing) that as the damage is several, so are the offences several; and upon each several suit by each several person the King shall have a several fine, as Dy. 351 a. b. where the tenant makes a fraudulent deed to deceive the lords or creditors, each lord shall have the value of the [355] beasts, although he shall have but one for his heriot; and so upon the statute Phil. & Mar. for driving distresses above three miles, one takes the goods of divers persons by distress, and drives them above three miles, he shall lose 5l. to each of those divers persons, although the distress was but one, and taken at one time; and for an authority in the point that each party grieved may sue only by himself, was cited Dy. 159, 160, where two are sued in the Admiralty, the one alone may have an action for it; and Swanton and Gillhill's case there cited: and it would be mischievous if it were otherwise; for perhaps the others will not join, or will release, &c. The last matter moved was, that as well the damages as the costs, and also the costs de incremento were double. But thereof the Court made no doubt, upon consideration had of 4 Inst. 138, and Co. 10 Rep. 116 a. being a case upon these very statutes. Nor was there much doubt made upon any of the matters moved, except only on that question, whether the matter was a suit in the Admiralty? Whereof Holt Ch. Justice at first doubted; but afterwards in Mich. 5 W. & M. the judgment in C. B. was affirmed by the whole Court. Levinz of counsel for Sands in both the Courts.

SHAFTO against POWEL IN THE EXCHEQUER.

A decree in equity obliges an executor in equal degree at least with a judgment at common law. 1 Vernon 143. 2 Vernon 37, 88. 6 Term Rep. 385.

A scire facias against the defendant executor of J. S. upon a decree in the Exchequer against J. S. for money. The defendant pleads, that the testator was indebted to him upon an obligation, and that he had paid himself before the scire facias brought, or any notice of the decree. This case having been heard before, it was ruled by Lechmere and Turton Barons, against the opinion of Baron Powell, that it was no bar: and now upon a rehearing before all the Barons, Atkins Chief-Baron agreed with Lechmere and Turton, against Powell, that it was no bar; and that a decree in equity obliges an executor in equal degree, at least, with a judgment at common law.

[356] TRINITY, 4 WILLIAM & MARY.

PANTON against ISHAM.

Declaration upon the custom of the realm for negligently keeping fire, whereby, &c. 1 Mallory 193.

Middlesex, to wit.—Justinian Isham, late of Lampert, in the county of Northampton, Baronet, was attached to answer Dorothea Panton, widow, of a plea that whereas according to the law and custom of the kingdom of England of the lord the King and of the lady the Queen hitherto used and approved of, every man and woman of the said kingdom of England is bound safely and securely to keep their fire by day and by night, lest through default of good keeping of such fire, any damage should in any wise happen to any person of the said kingdom; wherefore the said Justinian his fire at the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, in the county of Middlesex, in so negligent and careless a manner kept, that for default of due care of the said fire, certain houses, edifices and buildings of the said Dorothea there, of the value of one thousand pounds, were burnt and destroyed, to the great damage of the said Dorothea, and against the custom aforesaid, &c. And whereupon the said Dorothea by Thomas Goodall her attorney complains, that whereas according to the custom of the kingdom of England of the lord the King and the lady the Queen hitherto used and approved of, every man and woman of the said kingdom of England is bound safely and securely to keep their fire by day and by night, lest through default of due care of such fire any damage should in any wise happen to any person of the said kingdom, nevertheless the said Justinian upon the 6th day of May, in the 1st year of the reign of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen of England, &c. his fire at the said parish of St. Martin in the Fields in so negligent and careless a manner kept, that for default of good keeping of the said fire certain houses, edifices and buildings, to wit, six stables, six hay-lofts and three lodging rooms of the said Dorothea there of the value, &c. were burnt and destroyed, to the great damage, &c. and against the custom, &c. whereupon she saith that he is prejudiced, and hath sustained damage to the value of 1000l. and therefore she brings her suit, &c.

And the said Justinian by Charles Draper his attorney comes and defends the force and injury when, &c. and says that he is not guilty of the premisses above charged upon him, as the said Dorothea above complains against him, and of this he puts himself upon the country; and the said Dorothea doth the like. Therefore the sheriff is commanded, &c. that he cause to come here on [357] the octave of the Holy Trinity twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. because as well, &c. Afterwards at the day and place within contained, before George Treby, Knight, Chief Justice of the lord the King and the lady the Queen of the Bench here, Adam Baynes, gent. being associated to him according to the form of the statute, &c. comes the within Dorothea Panton, widow, by the attorney within mentioned, and the within written Justinian Isham, Baronet, although solemnly called, comes not but makes default; therefore let the jury whereof mention is within made be taken against him by default; and the jurors of that jury being called come, who being elected, tried and sworn to speak the truth of the matters within contained, say upon their oath aforesaid, "that before the said time in which it is supposed that the said six stables, six hay-lofts, and three lodging rooms of the said Dorothea within mentioned in the within written declaration were burnt and destroyed, to wit, upon the first day of April, in the within written first year of the reign of the said lord the now King and of the said lady the now Queen, the said Dorothea Panton was seized in her demesne as of fee, of and in the said six stables, six hay-lofts, and three lodging rooms, with the appurtenances, situate and being in the within written parish of St. Martin in the Fields, in the county of Middlesex aforesaid, and so being seized thereof, she the said Dorothea afterwards and before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the said 1st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, demised to the said Justinian Isham, Baronet, the now defendant, one stable and one hay-loft aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to hold to the said Justinian Isham and his assigns, from the said 1st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, for one week from thence next ensuing, and so from week to week, as long as the said Dorothea and Justinian should will for the rent of eight shillings and eight pence of the lawful money of England for every week, so long as the said Justinian should have and hold the said stable and hay-loft with the appurtenances by virtue of the demise aforesaid. And that on the said 1st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, the said Dorothea demised five stables, five hay-lofts, and three lodging rooms, with the appurtenances, the residue of the tenements and premisses aforesaid, to five other persons for different terms and times as yet to come. And that on the said 1st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, the said Justinian Isham, Baronet, into the said one stable and one hay-loft with the appurtenances to him as aforesaid demised, entered and was thereof possessed; and on the said 1st day of April, in the 1st year aforesaid, the five other persons aforesaid into the five stables, five hay-lofts, and three lodging rooms with the [358] appurtenances as aforesaid demised, respectively entered and were thereof possessed. And the said Justinian of the said one stable and one hay-loft with the appurtenances so as aforesaid being possessed, by virtue of the demise aforesaid, as tenant to the said Dorothea, and the said five other persons of the residue of the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances so as aforesaid being possessed, by virtue of the demise aforesaid to them made as aforesaid, as tenants also to the said Dorothea, [the reversion of all and singular the premisses with the appurtenances belonging to the said Dorothea] upon the within written 6th day of May, in the within written 1st year of the reign of the lord the now King and of the lady the now Queen, a certain fire through the negligence of the said Justinian in the stable aforesaid to the said Justinian so as aforesaid demised, and then being in his possession by virtue of the demise aforesaid, happened to begin, and on the said 6th day of May, in the 1st year aforesaid, as well the stable and hay-loft aforesaid with the appurtenances demised to and being in the possession of the said Justinian, as the said five stables, five haylofts, and three lodging rooms with the appurtenances aforesaid, to the five other persons as aforesaid demised, and in their respective possessions then in like manner being, did burn down and totally destroy. But whether upon the whole matter by the jury aforesaid, in the form aforesaid found, the said Justinian is guilty of the premisses to him within charged, the jury aforesaid are entirely ignorant, and thereof pray the advice of the justices of the said lord the King and of the said lady the Queen at Westminster. And if upon the whole matter by the jury aforesaid, in the form aforesaid found, it shall appear to the justices of the said lord the King and of the said lady the Queen at Westminster, that the said Justinian is guilty of the premisses within charged against him, then the said jury upon their oath aforesaid say that the said Justinian is guilty of the premisses within charged against him, in the manner and form as the said Dorothea within complains against him. And then they assess the damages of the said Dorothea, by occasion of the burning down and destroying of the said one stable and one hayloft with the appurtenances to the said Justinian as aforesaid demised, besides her expences and costs by her about her suit in that behalf laid out, to fifteen pounds. And they assess the damages of the said Dorothea, by occasion of the burning down and destroying the residue of the premisses and tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances, besides her expences and costs aforesaid, to eighty-five pounds, and for her said expences and costs to twenty shillings. But if upon the whole matter aforesaid, by the jury aforesaid, in the form aforesaid found, it shall appear to the justices of the said lord the King and the said lady the Queen at Westminster aforesaid, that the said Justinian is not guilty of the premisses within charged against him, then the said jury say upon their oath aforesaid, that the said Justinian is not guilty of the premisses within charged against him, as the said Justinian Isham, Baronet, within by pleading hath alledged. But because the Court, &c.

S. C. 1 Salk. 19. 1 Danv. 11, pl. 112.

In an action upon the custom of the realm for negligent keeping fire, a writ with dampn' alicui alio is as good as dampn' alicui vicino. Cro. Ja. 478. Cro. Eliz. 10, 461, 777. 5 Coke 13. 1 Roll. Ab. 1, 2, 454, 458. 2 Roll Ab. 566. 1 Viner Ab. 217.

Case, and declares on the custom of the realm, that every one ought to keep their fire so, that by default thereof no damage should happen to another; and that the defendant so negligently kept his fire, that six stables, six hay-lofts, and three lodging-rooms of the plaintiff were thereby burnt. The defendant pleads not guilty, and on a special verdict it was found, that the plaintiff was seised of the stables, &c. and demised one of the stables to the defendant for a week for 8s. and so from week to week at 8s. per week, as long as both parties should please, and demised the other five stables to divers other persons for divers terms yet to come, whereby they were possessed; and being so possessed, the fire, by the defendant's negligence, six weeks afterward begun in the stable demised to the defendant, and burnt the same and all the other stables, &c. And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c. Damages 100l. and tax the damages severally, viz. 15l. for the stable demised to the defendant, and 85l. for the others, and costs 20s. And upon several arguments last term and this term, judgment was given for the plaintiff for the 85l. and for the defendant for the 15l. and they resolved the writ to be good, though it were alicui alio (for which no damages should be) and not vicino, as was objected. 2dly, That for the stable demised to the defendant himself, no action lay; for the demise to him could be no more than a term for three weeks, and for the residue he was tenant at will, against whom no action lay for negligent waste, as 5 Co. 14, The Countess of Shrewsbury's case. But 3dly, As to the stables demised to the other, the action well lies, as if they were the stables of strangers, and not of the lessor; for as to them there is no privity between the plaintiff and defendant, but as to them they are as [360] nothing, or as to other persons. 4thly, Although the other stables, &c. were in lease to others, who may have an action as to the possession for their losses, yet the lessor may also have an action for the damages to his inheritance, as was formerly adjudged in this Court in the case of Beddingfield against Onslow, Hill. 36, 37 C. 2. HEYWOOD against FOSTER.

Damages and costs in a prohibition upon an attachment. 2 Jones 128. Raym. 387. 1 Ventris 348, 350. Cro. Cha. 237, 559. English stat. 8 & 9 Wil. 3, c. 11. Irish: 9 Wil. 3, c. 10.

Attachment upon a prohibition, and declares, that the defendant sued in the Ecclesiastical Court after a prohibition granted, for the profits of the office of register to the Archdeacon of Huntingdon, and judgment by default, and a writ of enquiry issued, and damages and costs taxed. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment by Lutwyche, that no damages and costs are to be given in a prohibition; and although in Facy and Long's case, as it is reported in Cro. Cha. damages and costs are given for the contempt in suing after the prohibition, he said he had searched the roll, and that no damages and costs are given: whereto it was said, that perhaps he had mistaken the roll; for there are two cases in Cro. Cha. by the name of Facy and Long; the one Mich. 7 Car. 1, B. R. pa. 237, the other Mich. 15 Car. 1, pa. 559, and it is in the case Mich. 15 Car. 1, B. R. where the damages and costs are given: and the same case is reported the same way, not only by Just. Croke, but also by Justice Jones, who was another of the Judges of that Court at the same time. And Hill. 30, 31 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 488, in a writ of error out of Ireland, damages and costs are given in a prohibition for the contempt in proceeding post prohibitionem Regiam, and so in Mich. 19 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 84, and Co. 2 Inst. 644, and Trin. 27 C. 1, damages were recovered in attachments on prohibitions. But both those last cases in B. R. were adjudged against the plaintiff for default of a venue. And in the case at Bar there was also a default of a venue, which was also moved in arrest, &c. in this case at the Bar. But thereto it was answered, that the imparlance-roll was well. Wherefore afterward in the same term the imparlance-roll was brought into Court, and the plea-roll was amended thereby, and then judgment was [361] given for the plaintiff for the damages and costs. After which it was moved, that the imparlance- roll was made since the first motion in arrest, &c. and after the exception taken. Whereupon the Court ordered it to be examined, with intent to punish the attorney for doing it, but not to stay the judgment. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff.

Amendment of the sheriff's return after error brought. 3 Term Rep. 349, 750. 5 Term. Rep. 577.

Debt on obligation for performing an award, and judgment for the plaintiff, and error brought thereon and assigned, that no pledges de prosequendo were returned on the back of the writ: after which on motion in C. B. the sheriff was permitted to amend his return, and to endorse pledges, according to Mich. 3 H. 7, pl. 23, and Cro. Cha. 563, Roe and Lond against Devys. And a rule was produced, where it was so done in a case between Boynton and Morgan. But it was ruled by the Court here, that the (1) plaintiff should pay costs for the amendment, if the plaintiff in error would not proceed further in his writ of error: but if he proceeded further therein, that then the defendant in the error should not pay any costs.

WARD AND OTHERS against BRAMPSTON.

S. C. 1 Danvers 6, pl. 10.

Two church-wardens join in an action for a false return of a mandamus, held good. Ante 258, 352, 353. 2 Lev. 27, 238. 1 Ventris 167, 297. 2 Keble 838, 850. 2 Ventris 288, 291. 2 Leon. 12. 1 Lord Raym. 127.

William Wasdale and Henry Bannister brought an action on the case against Dr. Brampston, and declare on a custom of Chersey in Sussex, for the parishioners in Easter week to elect two persons to be church-wardens for the year ensuing; and that the plaintiffs having been elected according to the custom, the defendant being surrogate of the Bishop of Winton refused to admit and swear them into the office: wherefore they brought a mandamus; upon which the defendant falsly and maliciously returned a custom for the vicar to elect one of the said church-wardens, and therefore he could not admit both the parties, but was ready to admit one of them, and had offered so to do; quorum prætextu they could not take upon them the said office, to their damage 40l. The defendant pleads not guilty, and thereupon a verdict was for the plaintiffs; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the plaintiffs ought not to join in the action; for the tort or damage to the one is not tort or damage to the other, nor is the office of one the office of the other, and yet they have concluded, that by reason thereof they could not suscipere officia sua præd. But after divers arguments made in the foregoing Hill. and Easter-terms, judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court. For the mandamus and the whole prosecution and charge thereof was joint, and the office is no office of profit, nor is the [363] action brought for that, but for the unjust return, whereby they were put to the charge of the mandamus. And note, that afterwards in Trin. or Mich. 8 W. 3, in an action brought by divers inhabitants of Hinly-Chapel in Lancashire against the register of the Bishop of Chester for denying to register a licence of the chapel for a conventicle, according to the stat. 1 W. & M. and making a false return on a mandamus; the register being sued for this by four or five of the inhabitants, they all joined in an action on the case for a false return: and after divers arguments in several terms it was adjudged, on a demurrer, that the action well lay by all of them jointly, and this by the whole Court, there being then a new Judge, viz. Powell jun. who at first doubted thereof. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff in both the actions.

MASTERS against MARRIOT.

Defendant sold plaintiff a horse for 8 guineas, and promised plaintiff that if he did not like the horse, and delivered him to one B. that B. should repay the plaintiff the said 8 guineas; and if B. did not repay, defendant would. Court held this was not a collateral contract to pay for the debt of another—but the whole was one entire contract upon the sale. No special request in such case. Post, 366.

Assumpsit, and declares, that the defendant sold to the plaintiff a bay gelding for eight guineas, and on the sale agreed, that in consideration the plaintiff had paid the defendant the eight guineas, the defendant promised to the plaintiff, that if he did not like the gelding, and delivered it to Barham to the defendant's use, that Barham should repay the said eight guineas to the plaintiff, and if Barham did not pay it, that the defendant would repay it on request: and that the plaintiff did not like the gelding, but delivered it to Barham, and requested him to pay the eight guineas, which he refused to do upon request; and he declares also upon an indebit' assump' for another eight guineas had and received to his use; and that the defendant not regarding the said several promises, licet sæp' requisit' had not repaid the said sums, to his damages 30l. And on non assump' and verdict for the plaintiff and entire damages, it was moved in arrest, &c. and argued several times, that the promise to repay the eight guineas, if Barham did not do it, was a collateral promise to pay in default of another; and the defendant was not a debtor, but only as a surety in default of Barham; and therefore a special request to the defendant ought to have been laid, and a sæpius requisit' is not sufficient, but there should be a notice that Barham had not paid, and a [364] special request to the defendant; for the promise by the defendant is, if Barham did not pay it, that he would pay it on request; and the damages being entire on both the promises, the plaintiff cannot have any judgment. But at last it was resolved by the whole Court, that this was not a collateral contract to pay a debt for another, but the whole was one entire contract upon the sale, and is no other in effect but that the plaintiff bought the gelding conditionally, that if he did not like him he should receive back his money, and the defendant received the money upon the same condition; and when the condition is performed by the dislike of the gelding, and the returning it to Barham, the bargain is void and at an end; and the money is in the hands of the defendant as a debtor to the plaintiff, as money received to the plaintiff's use, and Barham is no more than a servant to receive the gelding, and to repay the money; and by the not doing thereof, the defendant, as master, is the debtor. Wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff, and affirmed in error. Levinz for the plaintiff in the original action.

Flax, &c. in a garden, or common field. Quære if small tithes. 2 Inst. 640. 1 Roll. Ab. 633. Cro. Cha. 28. Cro. El. 467. Hutton 77, 78. Owen 74. Golds. 149, 150. Palmer 220, 222. 5 Brown P. C. 586. It is the nature and not the quantity that makes the tithe great or small. Per Lord Hardwicke. 2 Atkyns 364.

Trover of 20 cart-loads of flax, and on not guilty a special verdict found, that the plaintiff was impropriator of the parish church of Thorpe in Essex, and the defendant vicar; and that time out of mind, &c. the parson had had all great tithes, and the vicar all the small tithes; and that in the said parish are 650 acres of arable, and 750 of pasture; and that 26 acres of arable in the common fields there had been for eight years last past sown with flax by several persons, and that before those eight years no flax had been sown in the parish; and that the flax in question was sown by several persons in several parcels upon 26 acres of the arable, and the tithes set forth, &c. And if they are great tithes they find for the plaintiff, and if not, for the defendant. Holt Ch. Just. held them great tithes; and he did not allow any other difference, but that where flax, hemp, or other such things are sown and growing in gardens, or backsides, or orchards, &c. they are small tithes; but when they are sown and growing in the open fields, they are great tithes, be the quantity more or less. But the three other Judges, viz. Dolben, Gregory and Giles Eyre, held the contrary, and cited Lyndewode 192, that small tithes in England consist of flax, milk, wool, honey, &c. and Godolph. Repertory 198, 199, that tobacco, hops, &c. are in their nature small tithes, and so held the said three Judges; and there is no such quantity in this case as to alter its nature; and the doubt was, if it should be altered by reason of the quantity? wherein they did not agree; for some held, that let the quantity be what it would, yet they are small tithes, although growing in common fields: and though in the case of Udal and Tindal in Cro. Cha. 28, and Hutt. 78, it is admitted that the nature should be altered by the quantity, yet Ow. 74. Co. pl. 1277, and Cro. Eliz. 467, in Beddingfield's case, that is not admitted; and by the opinion of the said three Judges judgment was given that they are small tithes. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff.(1)

Stat. of Lim. pleadable in assumpsit by attorney for fees. 1 Saund. 37, 38. 1 Sid. 305. 1 Lev. 31, 48, 110, 143, 191, 273, 287. 2 Saund. 125, 126.

Assumpsit, by an attorney for fees and money expended, and labour and pains in prosecuting divers suits. The defendant pleads the statute 21 Jac. 1, of Limitations. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs: and it was argued for the plaintiff, that this action being by several counts, or declarations, whereof one only was for fees, and the others for money laid out, and labour and pains in the prosecution, the statute was not pleadable to that count which is for fees only, because it arises upon matter of record, viz. his being attorney of record. But by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby it was held, that the statute is pleadable to the count for fees: for the fees are not of record, and a case was cited where it was so adjudged in this Court within two years before. Whereupon judgment was given for the defendant generally in the case at Bar.

[368] THOMPSON against HUNT.

Executor pleads several judgments. Plaintiff replies, and shews lesser sums due on each, and that he had assets ultra. Defendant rejoins, no assets ultra to satisfy the debts and judgments in the plea. Demurrer inde, rejoinder, held good. Ante 311. 1 Lut. 450. B. R. Debt on an obligation against an executor. Defendant pleads several judgments obtained against him on several obligations made by the testator, and that he has not assets ultra, &c. The plaintiff replies as to the obligation of 200l. that it was on condition to pay 100l. and so to all the others severally, and that the defendant had assets to pay the plaintiff, and ultra to satisfy the said lesser sums, viz. at such a place. The defendant rejoins, that he had not assets ultra to satisfy the debts and judgments in his plea. Whereupon the plaintiff specially demurs, because the rejoinder does not answer directly to the replication, but ambiguously. And now it was argued by Pemberton, that the defendant ought to have rejoined only, that he had not assets ultra to satisfy the lesser sums, and not to make the penalty in the judgments parcel of the issue: for if he had assets ultra the lesser sums, he ought to pay the plaintiff. But it was answered and resolved by the whole Court, that the rejoinder was good; for the penalties are legal and due debts 'till they are satisfied, under which he may defend himself against other actions; for although in equity and conscience the lesser sums are only due, yet perhaps the plaintiffs in them will not accept the lesser sums in satisfaction of the judgments without a suit in equity: and if they would, or offered to accept the lesser sums, and the defendant would not pay them, the plaintiff might have aided himself by another manner of pleading, viz. that the party would and offered to accept the lesser sums, and the defendant would not pay them, but kept the judgments on foot by fraud and covin, and so upon the issue of fraud and covin the plaintiff might give in evidence such matter as would serve him to avoid the penalties; but he cannot aid himself by such a general manner of pleading as this is in the case at Bar. Wherefore judgment was given [369] for the defendant by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby. But then it was prayed for the plaintiff, that he might replead; which was granted him by the Court, on condition that the defendant might also replead in bar, and plead more judgments if he had any to plead; but not otherwise.

OSMAN against SHEAFE.

S. C. 2 Lut. 1205, 1209, 1210. Carth. 307. Nel. Lut. 242, 243, 378, 379.

I give and grant lands to my cousin and his heirs, to hold to him and his heirs, from and after my decease; if I die without a son of my body living at my decease; these words pass the interest when pleaded as a covenant to stand seised. 1 Lev. 59. 2 Lev. 9, 10, 213, 225, 226. Post 432, 443. 22 Viner Ab. 243. Ante 291. 1 Mod. 175. 1 Ventris 137. Sir Tho. Jo. 105. 2 Wilson 78. Com. Dig. Covenant, G. 2.

In replevin, the defendant makes conusance as bailiff of Daniel Wilmot, for that one Chapman seised of the lands, in which, &c. being gavelkind, granted a rent-charge of 14l. per annum out of the same, payable the 4th of June and the 4th of December to Taylor and his heirs; and that the said rent descended to Waller and her heirs, who Jan. 23, 30 Car. 2, covenanted to stand seised to the use of Sir William Brodman her cousin, and his heirs, if the covenantor died without a son of her body living at the time of her death; and that she died without any son of her body living at the time of her death, whereby the said rent came to Brodman; and that he in 1763 granted it to one Wilmot and his heirs, and that he died, and it descended to Daniel Wilmot and three others his brothers, and for 15l. 15s. the fourth part of the rent for four years and a half, ending the 4th of June, 1687, he makes conusance. The plaintiff demands oyer of the deed to Brodman, and it was entered in hæc verba, viz. Know ye, that I Mary Waller for the affection I bear to my cousin Sir William Brodman, do give and grant to him and his heirs my rent of 14l. per ann. issuing out of, &c. To hold to him and his heirs from and after my decease, if I die without a son of my body living at my decease. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs: and the only question was, whether this deed should [371] inure as a covenant to stand seised? And it was objected for the plaintiff that the deed was void, and can have no operation at all; not by way of use, because the intent appears to have it operate as a grant by the words give and grant, and then it cannot enure by way of use. See Co. Litt. 49 a. If the father enfeoffs the son by deed, with letter of attorney to make livery, and no livery is made, it shall not enure by way of use; and by way of grant it cannot operate, because no attornment was had. Also this would be to grant a future freehold or inheritance, reserving a particular estate to himself, which cannot be either by way of use or by the common law, 2 Roll. 789, Pitfield v. Pierce, where a man gave and granted his lands to his son after his decease; the deed was adjudged to be altogether void. Whereto it was answered for the defendant, that this case differs from Pitfield and Pierce's case; for there it is (in the very words of the grant itself) limited to commence after his death; here the grant is to him and his heirs in the premisses, habend' to him and his heirs after his death, where the estate is compleat in the premisses to pass a present fee, if any attornment or other execution had been; as was adjudged, Mich. 4 W. & M. in this Court between Madgwick and Carter, and that it might also pass by way of future use, to arise out of the estate of Waller in futuro; and in the mean time the grantor continued in his old seisin, as Dy. 274 b. to the use of himself and such wife as he should afterwards marry. Trin. 24 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 703, Pibus and Mitford's case: covenant to stand seised to the use of the heirs males of his body, omitting himself, good. 2 Roll. 274, covenant, that when a man does such an act, the covenantor shall stand seised to his use, is good. And as to Co. Lit. 49, that a deed shall not operate by way of use when by the scope of the deed the intent appears to have it operate by the common law: certainly where by the deed it appears, that the intent was that the party should have the estate, it is more worthy consideration how to make his intent good by passing the estate, if by any legal means it may be done, than by considering the manner of passing it, to defeat his intent in the principal, viz. the passing the estate, than in the manner how it shall pass; and so has the law been often taken, as 3 Leon. 16. Tenant in tail makes a feoffment with a letter of attorney to make livery, the deed is enrolled, and afterwards livery is made, and it was resolved that it should [372] pass by the enrolment, and that no discontinuance was by the livery made afterwards, and Crossing and Scudamore's case, Pasch. 23 Car. 2, in B. R. Rot. 871. Where a man granted, bargained and sold the land to his son with a clause of warranty, the deed is enrolled, but no money paid, yet it passed by the covenant to stand seised, notwithstanding the enrolment and the warranty: and so 2 Rol. Abr. 786, 787, Tilb and Poplethwayt, and Trin. 29 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 90, Coltman against Senhouse, where the scope of the deed was of divers other matters, yet by reason of this clause in the end of the deed, If I die without issue, I do give and grant the lands to J. S. the land in question, adjudged a good covenant to stand seised: and Mich. 29 Car. 2, Walker against Hull. A man in consideration of marriage gave and granted to his intended wife the lands, and a letter of attorney was in the deed to make livery, and livery was endorsed on the deed, but no proof of livery made, nor any witnesses names subscribed to the livery; yet it was resolved after divers arguments, that this was a good covenant to stand seised; and Sanders and Savile's case is there cited, which Justice Rokesby now remembered to have been so adjudged, viz. a man seised of a rent grants it, to which grant another attorns, who was not tenant, and so no attornment; and although the intent appears to pass it by the common law, yet it was adjudged to be a good covenant to stand seised. By which cases it appears, that the Judges in these later times have had more consideration of the substance, viz. the manner of passing it. But it was adjourned. Pemberton for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant. And it was afterward adjudged for the conusant, i.e. the defendant.

[373] BLISSET against CRANWELL AND OTHERS.

A devise to A. and B. and their heirs for ever, and the longer liver of them to be equally divided between them after my wife's death; these words create a tenancy in common. Cro. Eliz. 330, 347, 443, 695. Cro. Cha. 75. 1 And. 194. 1 Bulstr. 113. Lit. Rep. 46. 3 Leon. 19. Hetl. 29. 3 Co. 39. Golds. 182, 185. 3 Mod. 209. 1 Cha. Rep. 64. Co. Lit. 190 b. note 4. 2 Vesey 252. 1 Wilson 165, 341, 3 Brown P. C. 297. 4 Brown P. C. 224. Cowper 352, 660.

In ejectment tried at Kent-Assizes lately upon the evidence the case was such, before Treby Ch. Just. and it was agreed to be made a case for the opinion of the Court. Allen by his will devises the lands in question in these words; I give and bequeath to my sons Richard and Robert, and their heirs for ever, and the longer liver of them, to be equally divided between them, after my wife's death, all that my messuage, &c. The wife dies, and Robert devises his part to the lessor, and dies: and the only question was, if Richard and Robert were jontenants, or tenants in common of the inheritance? and in C. B. it was said for the plaintiff, that the last words in wills shall controul the former, as the last will will controul a former will; and although here are words of survivor in the middle of the will, that is no more than the law would have said, if those words had not been in the will; but equally to be divided in the end of the will makes a tenancy in common; and if they are not so taken, they can signify nothing, and they cannot be taken as surplusage (as the words of survivor may) for they are no more than the law implies without them; but the words equally to be divided have a signification not implied, and therefore ought to be understood as put into the will for some purpose, and that purpose is to make a tenancy in common: and it was said that thus all the words may be taken so as to stand together, viz. that they should be jointenants during the wife's life, and tenants in common after her death; and so the devise of the inheritance to the lessor is good, as is 2 Leon. 68, 69, Brian against Cosins; a devise of lands to three sons severally of several parcels, and if they live to twenty one to them and their heirs, they are several tenants 'till 21, and then they are jointenants. And this case is between children; and it is better for them to have several estates than joint, in respect of their posterity, which was the reason that equally to be divided made a tenancy in common at the first; see Cro. Eliz. 443, Lewin against Dod, and Sty. 434, Torrell against Frampton, a devise to three sons, and their heirs respectively, makes a tenancy in common. And that the [374] last words in wills shall controul the former; see Plowd. Com. 541 a. Ow. 148. Co. Litt. 122 b. Yelv. 209, 210. The whole Court seemed at first to be all of opinion, that it was a jointenancy of the whole estate, as Treby Chief Justice was before the cause was tried. But it was adjourned; and afterwards Pasch. 6 W. & M. it was adjudged by Treby (having changed his opinion) with Nevile and Rokesby, to be a tenancy in common, Powell being of a contrary opinion. Levinz for the plaintiff.

SEDGWICKE QUI TAM, &c. against RICHARDSON.

In a penal action the demand was quod reddat, dom. Reg. &c., &c. S. qui tam, &c. and the issue was non debet to S. only; yet held good. 1 Vent. 122. 2 Keble 788. 1 Rol. Ab. 223. 1 Ander. 138. 1 Rol. Rep. 78. 4 Co. 13. Hetley 122. 2 Leon. 190. 3 Leon. 237. Dyer, 95, 159. 1 Jo. 261. Noy 22. Hobart 327.

Richardson was summoned to answer Sedgwick qui tam pro domino Rege, &c. quod reddat dict' domino Regi & dominæ Reginæ, & Sedgewicke qui tam, &c. 10*l.* and declares for the selling of two horses in Smithfield market, not being tolled, against the statute 31 El. c. 12, whereby he forfeited two several sums of 5l. whereby an action accrued to the said King and Queen, and to the said Sedgwicke qui tam, &c. the said several sums amounting to 10l. that yet he had not paid the same to the said King and Queen, and Sedgewicke qui tam, &c. vel eorum alteri. The defendant pleads, quod ipse non debet prædict' Sedgwicke qui tam, &c. the said 10l. nor any part thereof. And upon this issue tried, the jury found, quod debet the 10l. and gave damages and costs, &c. And now it was moved in arrest, &c. 1. That this action being for a forfeiture upon a penal law, no damages or costs ought to have been given. 2. That the issue is not well joined, or rather here is no issue at all; for the demand is of 10l. due to the King and Queen and Sedgewicke qui tam, &c. and the issue is, non debet, to Sedgewicke only: and for those causes the judgment was stayed 'till the plaintiff shewed cause. And at another day it was answered for the plaintiff to the first, where the penalty is certain, damages and costs are to be given, but not where the penalty is uncertain; as on the stat. Ed. 6. Treble damages for tithes, &c. no costs nor damages; otherwise where the penalty is certain, as Cro. Cha. North against Wingate. Jones Rep. 474. Co. Ent. 163, 164. Roll. Abr. 579. And to the second it was said, 1. The summons is to [375] answer to Sedgwick qui tam, &c. only. 2. The de placito quod reddat might have been so also, as appears Co. Entr. 363 b. upon the Statute of Mainten'; and Rast. Entr. 421 b. per quod actio accrevit to the prosecutor only. Rast. Entr. 430 bis. and Rast. Entr. 207 b. The summons is ad respondend' Regi & parti qui tam, &c. so the entries are in several forms, and each of them good. 3. The debt is entire to the King and party, so that if he owed it to the party, of necessity he owed it to the King; and the issue is found that he owed it to the plaintiff, and then by consequence to the King also; and the plea is quod non debet the debt, or any part thereof. 4. This issue does arise upon his own default, whereof he shall not take advantage, Hob. 9. Cro. Eliz. 914. Co. 5, Nicholl's case. Cro. Cha. Knighton against Harvey. And if it should be taken to be any discontinuance, that was remedied by the statute of 32 H. 8, c. which extends to actions upon penal statutes, they not being excepted; and therefore it is cured by the verdict: whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff.

Administrator shall not pay costs on a writ of error. Ante 60. 2 Lev. 165. 6 Mod. 92. 1 Salk. 207.

Gale had judgment in C. B. after a verdict against Till an administrator, who brought error thereon in B. R. where the judgment was affirmed. And the question was there, whether the plaintiff in the action should have costs on affirmation of the judgment in the writ of error upon the statute of 3 Jac. 2. And that he ought to have costs were cited Cro. Cha. 219, Atky against Herd; and ibid. Peccash's case, Hutt. 78, 79. Latch. 221, this bringing the writ of error being his own act. The Court seemed of opinion that no costs should be; for he shall not find bail on the writ of error upon the same statute; but they would advise. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff in the original action; who was satisfied with the opinion of the Court, and did not move it again.

[376] HUTCHINSON AND HIS WIFE against BROOKEBANKE.

Marriages in conventicles good. 15 Viner Ab. 260.

A prohibition was prayed to the Ecclesiastical Court on suggestion of 1 W. & M. whereby it is enacted, that no person dissenting from the Church of England, who takes the oaths mentioned in an Act of the same year, (viz. the new oaths of allegiance and supremacy) and subscribes the declaration mentioned in the statute 30 Car. 2, should be obnoxious to the penalties and forfeitures mentioned in the stat. 22 Car. 2, against conventicles, nor be prosecuted in the Ecclesiastical Courts for nonconformity to the Church of England, except it be for not paying of tithes, or other parochial or ecclesiastical duties; and further, that all marriages between dissenters (taking the said oaths and making the said declaration) solemnized before witnesses in the face of a congregation so licenced by the statute, should be good and valid in law; and that no persons should be presented in the Ecclesiastical Court for nonconformity to the Church of England in such marriages; and that the interpretation of all statutes belongs to the common law. And whereas the plaintiffs, being dissenters, had taken the said oaths, and made the declaration according to the statute, and were married in the face of their congregation in the presence of witnesses, according to the statute, and after banns published, according to the discipline of the said congregation, yet the defendant had libelled against them in the Ecclesiastical Court for incontinence and fornication between them, and compelled them to answer there, where they had pleaded all this matter; which the Court there refused to admit. Note, this was moved in Trin. term last, and day given to this term, and the Ecclesiastical Court stayed in the mean time. And now this term it was agreed a prohibition should go, and that the plaintiff should declare upon the prohibition; so that upon a demurrer the law might be tried. Pemberton of counsel with the plaintiff in the prohibition. Levinz for the defendant.

THE K. AND Q. against THE BISHOP OF LONDON AND DR. LANCASTER.

S. C. 4 Mod. 200. Parl. Cases 164. 1 Lord Ray. 23. 2 Salk. 559.

A parson made a bishop, the King shall present not only hac vice, but toties quoties, &c. Post, 382. Vaughan 19, 20. Davis 68. Pryn's History of Papal Usurpations, Tom. 3, pa. 13, 14. Puff. Quær. l. 8, c. 2, § 3. 6 Term Rep. 440. Cro. Jac. 691.

A quare impedit to the Vicarage of St. Martin in the Fields, in com. Middlesex, and counts that Henry, Bishop of London, was tenant in fee gross, and collates Thomas Lamplugh, who was created Bishop of Exeter, whereby it belonged to the King to present, and he presented Lloyd, who was made Bishop of St. Asaph: wherefore the King presented Tenison, who was afterward made Bishop of Lincoln, and so it belonged to the King to present by his prerogative, and that the defendants disturbed him. The defendants plead in abatement variance between the writ and the count; for the count says that the King ought to present by his prerogative, which is not mentioned in the writ: but non allocatur; for the writ is always general, and there is no other form, but the prerogative is always mentioned in the count; therefore a respondeas ouster was awarded; and then the bishop demurred upon the count. Dr. Lancaster pleaded in bar, confessing the seisin and collation of Lamplugh, and all the presentations alledged by the King, and then pleads the stat. 25 H. 8, of Dispensations; and that Decemb. 20, 1693, Dr. Tenison was elected Bishop of Lincoln, and that Decemb. 22, 1693, the Archbishop of Canterbury granted to him a dispensation to hold St. Martin's in commendam till the first of July then next following; and that Decemb. 23, 1693, the King confirmed it, and Decemb. 25, 1693, Tenison was confirmed and consecrated; and avers, that the dispensation was not contrary to the Word of God, and that it was such as before the statute was made at Rome, and that Tenison held the vicarage till July 1, when by the limitation of the dispensation it became void; whereupon the Bishop of London collated the defendant Lancaster, whereby he was and yet is vicar. The King's attorney joins in the demurrer with the bishop, and demurs on the plea of Lancaster: and the points made in the case were three. 1. Whether the King had any prerogative at all to present to the church of a subject on the promotion of his clerk to a bishoprick? 2. Admitting he had, yet whether he had it toties quoties, as here he had it three times one after [378] another? 3. Admitting he had, yet whether his prerogative were not satisfied by the dispensation to Tenison? And it was argued for the King by Cowper, being one of the King's Counsel and the Queen's Solicitor; who on the first point said, that the King had certainly such a prerogative; that to argue it was to make that a question, which was without question; nor would he enter into the reasonableness thereof, it being antient, but would justify it by authorities, and cited 11 H. 4, 17. Cro. Eliz. 790, Basset against Gee; and ibid. 542, 601, Armiger against Holland. 2 Roll. 343. Mo. 399, Wright's case. Cro. Ja. Woodly against The Bishop of Exeter. Bro. Presentation to a Church 71. Vaugh. Rep. Edes against The Bishop of Oxford. Yet he confessed, that the old books were not so clear in the matter; and the reason was, for that till the time of H. 8, the King had not much to do with the creation of bishops, because they were always confirmed at Rome, but that since the time of H. 8, constant usage had been with the King; and that it is reasonable when the King presents a parson to a bishoprick, that he should have the presentation to his parsonage. To the second point he said, if the King had such a prerogative, that it should extend as well to the second, third, and all other times, as to the first time that he promoted the parson to a bishoprick. And to the third he said, that this dispensation could not serve for his turn, 1. Because it being before the consecration, the church was never void till July 1, but Tenison continued parson by his first presentment till July 1, this being a commendam retinere. See Vaugh. Rep. Edes's case, and 11 H. 4, 37. And 2. Because it does not exceed the tempus semestre above two or three days; and all the books agree that a commendam per tempus semestre is good for the supply of the church, because the patron has so long time to present, and is not obliged to present during the temp' semestre. Whereto it was answered by Serjeant Levinz for the defendants, as to the first, that the King had not any prerogative to present to the church of a subject on the promotion of his parson to a bishoprick; and there is little or no reason that he should have it for that he has promoted the parson; for the church is the patron's church, and it is reasonable he should have the presentation of such a clerk thereto, under whom he and his tenants and servants are to live, whose manners, doctrine, religion and conversation ought to be such as he shall approve: and if what is said be a reason, by the same reason if the King promotes [379] my chaplain of my family, or my bailiff, or other servant, he may impose another upon me. The King's prerogative is part of the common law, and has been time out of mind, &c. And though the common law has been sometimes altered in Westminster-Hall as to the methods and manner of proceedings, yet it cannot be altered as to the property or interest of any man without authority of Parliament. And although of late times some opinions and the practice has been to allow such a prerogative to the King, yet if it be not warranted by such authorities, it cannot be a prerogative, but is an encroachment upon the liberty of the subject; and yet such opinions have never been given without dispute and contradiction, even in these later times: and that antiently the King had no such prerogative is (plainly) to be collected; 1. Because no mention is made of any such prerogative neither in the King, nor the Pope, as certainly there would have been, if any such thing had then been. 2. There is no mention of it in the Stat' of Prerogativa Regis made in time of E. 2, nor in Staundford's treatise upon that statute. 3. And the 5 Ed. 2, 148, in the book imprinted (published) by Serj. Maynard, it appears that Hugh de Courtney brought a quare impedit, and counts, that the Countess of Albemarle was seised and presented a clerk, who was made a bishop, and so derives title to the plaintiff to present. But there is no mention of the King's prerogative, or any presentment by him upon the parson's promotion to the bishoprick. 4. Nor is there any mention of any such thing in any of our antient books, as Glanvile, Bracton, Britton, Fleta, &c. nor in any of our year-books till the book of 11 H. 4, cited on the other side; which in truth does no way prove the King's title, but is contrary to it; for there the case is thus, the King makes a title to a prebend, for that it became void, it being the temporalties of a bishoprick, which were then in the King's hands: the defendant pleads, that the King had restored the temporalties, absq; hoc that it became void during the time the temporalties were in the King's hands; whereupon the King's attorney waved his declaration, and declared de novo on the Statute of Provisors; which proves that the King's attorney did not then imagine that the King had any such prerogative of presenting to the church of one promoted to a bishoprick, as is now claimed. For whether the temporalties were in the King's hands, or were they not, it would not, according to the present doctrine be material; for be it so, or not, the King now claims the presentment [380] upon all promotions, be the church of his own patronage, or of any other. It is very true, there are divers precedents in our antient books, whereby the King has presented to a church on his promoting the parson to a bishoprick; but all those were either as he was patron, whilst the temporalties of the bishoprick were in the King's hands, (he being the patron of all bishopricks) or as he was lord, whilst the true patron (by reason of infancy, or otherwise) was in the King's wardship; but not merely in point of prerogative to the church of a stranger till after the time of H. 8, thus in the 40 E. 3, 4, the Dean of York being made a bishop, the King there made a new dean, but it was by reason that the temporalties of the archbishoprick were then in the King's hands; so 41 E. 3, 5, 6, the King makes a prebend of Sarum, the temporalties of the bishoprick being in the King's hands; and 44 E. 3, the King makes a parson bishop, and then presents to the church, but it was for that the patron was in the King's wardship; so Fitz. Quar. Imped. The King makes a prebend of Wells, (on making the former prebend a bishop) but it was because the temporalties of the bishoprick were in his hands; and Co. 4 Inst. 356, 357 is the like case; which he observed was in point of patronage, and not of prerogative: and the cases cited on the other side are all in Q. Elizabeth's time and since, and the ground of them was, for that divers such precedents had been in the time of H. 8, as is said in the case of Wright cited on the other side, in Mo. pl. 522. But in Ow. Rep. of the same case, 144, it is said, that all the precedents cited were in the time of H. 8, and which being new, the Court had no great regard to them; which report was four years after the report thereof in Mo. so that it appears, that after four years consideration had, the Court were of opinion against the prerogative; and so is the same case reported in Cro. Eliz. and in the case of Woodly, Hutton Just. was against the prerogative; and although that Cro. in that case reports, that Hobart and Winch were of a contrary opinion to Hutton, yet in the same case as reported by Winch himself it appears, that he was of the same opinion with Hutton, and so was Hob. also, as there it seems; and though the judgment was in that case given for the King's clerk, yet that was not by reason the King's title was good, but because the plaintiff's title was ill, claiming by a grant of the next avoidance, whereto he made no good title. And in truth, this case as oft as it has come in question did never pass without difficulty and diversity of opinions, although in some later cases the [381] opinion for the prerogative has prevailed. But surely a right, which was a right of old time, is still a right, if it be not altered by some Act of Parliament; and for authorities against this prerogative there are Dy. 228 b. Eliz. Sidny's case, and Dr. and Stud. chap. 3, where he says, that if a church becomes void by death, creation or cession, the patron shall present; so is Ow. 144, by the whole Court; and there Walmsly says he had seen a case in the time of Ed. 2 so resolved upon debate; and so in 5 E. 2, in the case before cited out of Maynard. As to the second point, if the King has a prerogative, yet such a prerogative as is here claimed to present toties quoties, is not mentioned in any book, nor can there be any reason for it; for if so, the King might gain and hold in his hands, and the patrons lose their advowsons for ever; for the King having presented one, no more is to be done but to make him a bishop, and he may present again, and so in infinitum: and then, when shall the patron have his advowson again? As to the third point, supposing there be such a prerogative, and that the King may present toties quoties, yet the King has here had his turn by the commendam of Tenison, being for more than the tempus semestre, or six months. Commendams were never of any good repute, neither in the common law, nor the canon law, and therefore are to be strictly taken, Da. 76, says, a church given in commendam is quasi commendata; and Hob. 144 cites the Council of Lions, and says, it was the last general council which gave any countenance to them, and that not to be above six months; and in the gloss thereon it is said, that the consent of the patron, and of all others who may be prejudiced thereby, ought to be had; and Hob. 155 says, that no mention of a commendam can be found in any of our year-books till 11 H. 4, and Hob. 144 enumerates three manners of commendams; 1 Semestre, which arises upon a natural equity, because so long time the patron has to provide. 2. For life, or a perpetual commendam. 3. Limitatu, being for years, or other certain time. The first sort are only allowed by the canon law and the Council of Lions, and are not to exceed six months, as Hob. 144 says. The other two were granted by the Pope ex plenitudine potestatis, for that being thought above the law, he could dispense with all laws, and what the Pope did before the stat. 25 H. 8, the King did after the statute as the Pope did before ex plenitudine potestat' suæ prerogativæ; and that when he here commends Tenison for more than six months, this was not done according to the canon, but by his prerogative, and shall serve for his turn. [382] Holt Ch. Just. and Just. Eyre were upon the first argument strongly of opinion for the King in all the points. Dolben was strongly to the contrary. But Gregory said nothing. And it was afterwards adjudged for the King in all the points without further argument.

The King and Queen against The Bishop of London and Birch.

S. C. 2 Salk. 540. 4 Mod. 200. 1 Shower 164.

The King has the like prerogative in churches newly erected, as well as in the old, to present on the promotion of the parson to a bishoprick. Ante 377. 6 Term Rep. 440.

A quare impedit of the Rectory of St. James, Westminster; and declares, that by Act of Parliament, 1 Jac. 2, it was enacted, that St. James in the Fields should be divided from the parish of St. Martin, and a church erected there; and that it should be a parish of itself; and that Dr. Tenison, the Vicar of St. Martin's, should be the present and first Rector of St James's parish, and the patronage of the advowson be in the Bishop of London, and the Lord Jermin alternis vicibus; the first rector after the vacancy of Tenison to be presented by the Bishop of London, and the next by the Lord Jermin and his heirs, and so alternis vicibus for ever: and that Tenison was promoted to the Bishoprick of Lincoln, whereby the said church was avoided, and that it belonged to the King to present ratione prerog', and the defendants hindered him. The pleadings and demurrers were the same here as in the foregoing case; and the first and third points here were the same as in that, but the second point of toties quoties was not in this case. But a third point was in this case which was not in the other, viz. that this being a church newly erected by Act of Parliament, and the presentments thereto being specially appointed by the Act, viz. the Bishop of London to have the first, and the Lord Jermin the second; and so of the rest alternis vicibus for ever: and this being without any saving of the King's prerogative, quære, whether the King were not excluded from his prerogative in this case? For it was said, that an affirmative Act of Parliament, creating a thing de novo which was not in esse before, implies a negative, and shall be taken as if it had said, that the Bishop of London shall present, and not the King; as Hob. 289 and divers other books are; also the King shall be bound by this Act, being made for religion, though he be not expressly named. 5 Co. 24. 11 Rep. 67. Also the King and the bishop cannot [383] both present for the same turn; and the Act saying, that the bishop shall present, thence it follows that the King shall not present. And to this opinion Holt Ch. Justice at the first seemed to incline, but it was afterwards resolved, that this Act only directed the method and turns of presenting between the patrons themselves, but did not exclude the King of his prerogative; as where lands are entailed by Act of Parliament, they are yet subject to such bars as other entailed lands are; and although this church be newly erected, yet the King having this prerogative in all churches before, he had it also in this when it was erected. Note, The same counsel were in both cases, and both were argued at the same time, and the same judgment was given for the King.(1)

MARCH against FREEMAN.

Defendant by bill sealed promised to pay 5l. per year for five years, debt brought on non payment of the first 5l. held good. 7 Viner Ab. 355.

Debt for 5l. and declares, that the defendant by bill sealed promised and agreed to pay the plaintiff yearly 5l. for five years at two payments, viz. 24 Jun. and 25 Decemb. the first payment to begin the 25th of December next after the date, for the maintenance of Eliz. Freeman, a daughter of the defendant; and that he had maintained Eliz. Freeman for one year ending the 23rd of June last past. The defendant pleads, protestando that Eliz. was not his daughter, for plea says, that the five years are not expired. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs; and it was resolved that the protestando was idle. But it was argued for the defendant (whereto the Court on the first and second argument inclined) that no action lay till all the days are past; as Co. Litt. 47 b. 292 b. F. N. B. 131 a. But for the plaintiff it was said, that this is not like to bills of debt, but this is a covenant to pay at several days, for which covenant will lie upon a breach at every day; as on a promise to pay at several days, an action may be for non-payment at each day, as Cro. Cha. 349, Pecke and Ambler's case, and divers other books, and constant experience is: and in every case where a covenant is to pay a certain sum, the party may have either debt or covenant for the money; and here the 5l. [384] per annum is for the maintenance of the daughter; and if it were not paid till the end of the five years, how should the daughter be maintained in the mean time? And the case depended till Hill. 5, 6 W. & M. and then judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevile, Powell and Rokesby. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff. See Hard. Rep. 178, Nowell's case, that covenant lies at the first day; but it is there quæried of debt.

IN B. R.

BENSON against SCOT.

S. C. 4 Mod. 251. 1 Salk. 185.

Custom was that a copyholder's wife shall have free-bench of all that her husband died seised: he surrenders to A. who is not admitted till after the copyholder's death, the wife shall not have free-bench. 2 Sid. 37, 61. Lane 20. 3 Bulst. 214. Sty. 146.

Ejectment of lands in Wethersfield in Essex, and on not guilty and special verdict found, the case was this; Samuel Scot (seised in fee of the lands in question, being a copyhold, where the custom is, that the wife shall have free-bench of all copyholds whereof the husband died seised) takes the defendant to wife, and afterwards Octob. 3, 1690, surrenders to Barbara Callard and her heirs, conditioned to be void upon payment of 70l. the 20th of August next following, and at a court held 1 Jun. 1691, this surrender was presented to be enrolled, but before admittance the surrenderor dies; and after his death the surrenderee is admitted. And the question was, if in this case

(1) If after the grant of the next presentation to a living, the incumbent be made a bishop, by which the living becomes vacant, and the King is entitled to present, the grantee may present on the next vacancy occasioned by the death or resignation of the King's presentee.—6 Term Rep. 439.

the wife should have her free-bench? And it was said for the defendant, that till admittance the copyhold remains in the surrenderor, Cro. Cha. 273, 783. Burgoin against Spurling, Cro. Eliz. 422. Yelv. 16. And then the husband died seised, and consequently the wife is within the custom; and though by the admittance after, the surrenderee is in from the time of the surrender, yet it was said for the defendant, that that was only a relation and fiction of the law between the parties, and to prevent (or make void) all mean acts of the surrenderor, [386] but not to prejudice the wife, who is a third person, as 3 Co. Butler and Baker's case. 2. That although the title of the surrenderee is to be computed from the time of the surrender, so is the title of the wife to be computed from the time of the marriage: for then was her title incepted, though perfected by the husband's death; so the title of the surrenderee is no more than an incepted title by the surrender, and only perfected by the admittance: so that the wife here had an incepted title before the inception of the title of the surrenderee, which was also perfected before the perfection of the title of the surrenderee, which was not till after the husband's death; whereas the wife's title was perfected by the husband's death. But Holt Ch. Just. and the whole Court held the contrary, and they denied that the wife had any incepted title by the marriage in this case, as wives have to their dower at the common law, but that she had only a conditional inception of a title, subject to the power of the husband of avoiding it by alienation, which power the husband had not at common law; for he could not by alienation defeat the wife of her dower, but without doubt the husband might here have precluded the wife from her free-bench by alienation; for she is not to have it except the husband died seised, which he did not in this case, by reason of the surrender; and they relied much on the case in Co. Lit. 19 b. a copyholder jointenant surrenders and dies before admittance, the survivor shall be precluded by the admittance afterward: and judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz for the defendant. Webb of the Inner-Temple for the plaintiff.

STOPP against PEACOCKE.

A modus in discharge is good.

A prohibition was prayed, and at last granted, on suggestion of a modus to pay for all the tenants and occupiers of the lands (so much) in discharge of tithes. On the first motion this prescription in occupiers was doubted by the Court. But at last, seeing it goes only in discharge, and not in claiming an interest, the prohibition was granted on consideration of Cooper and Andrew's case, Hob. 39, and ibid. 8, Shelton against Mountague, and Cro. Cha. 418, Baker against Brereman.

[387] EASTER TERM, IN THE SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

SMARTLE against WILLIAMS, IN B. R.

S. C. 2 Salk. 245, 280.

A mortgage for years was enrolled, and having got into the possession of the defendant, the plaintiff was allowed to prove the mortgage-deed by a copy of the enrolment.

Ejectment of lands in Cornwall, and on issue not guilty, and trial at Bar, the case on the evidence appeared to be, that John Kendall, seised in fee of the Barton of Trevanion, mortgaged it in the year 1659 to Penoire for 500 years, which deed was enrolled in 1667, being then acknowledged before a Master in Chancery. And therein was the ordinary covenant, that the mortgagor should retain the possession till default of payment. The mortgagee assigns the term, being out of possession, to Buick. The executors of Buick assign the term to Tho. Kendall, who was the cestuy que trust. Tho. Kendall brought ejectment to recover the possession, and pending the action, assigns the term to Sir Charles Maddiford. Sir Charles Maddiford makes a mortgage thereof for 100 years to Henry Coventree, without taking notice of the former mortgage by way of recital, but demised it to him by way of original mortgage, as if he were owner of the land in fee: after which the first mortgage-money is paid to Sir Charles by the mortgagor, and he assigns the original mortgage to him, and then he for a valuable consideration conveys the inheritance to the defendant Williams, and delivers to him the original deed of mortgage; and so the plaintiff, who claims as executor to Coventree, had it not to produce, but he produced a copy of the enrolment thereof to make out his title: and now divers matters were objected thereto for the defendant. 1. That the copy of the deed enrolled was [388] not evidence, because it being only a term it passed immediately, and the enrolment afterward is no more than as the enrolment of an obligation. But the Court over ruled this; for the acknowledgment of the deed by the lessor before the Master in Chancery is good evidence against himself, and against all who claim under him. 2. Objected, that the consideration of the first mortgage was not proved, but the consideration paid by Williams upon the purchase was proved, and so the first mortgage was voluntary and void as to him. But the consideration paid by Sir Charles Maddiford being proved on the assignment made to him, the Court held it sufficient to support the first mortgage-deed; for it was a deed executed, and the consideration paid by Maddiford on the assignment to him, before the defendant's purchase, made it a deed upon valuable consideration against the defendant who purchased afterwards, and thereby it became a mortgage upon valuable consideration, although it were not so at the first. [Quære of this, for the contrary has been held. And yet in Progers and Laighan's case, P. 15 Car. 2, B. R. it was held as here.] 3. It was objected, that all the assignments except the first, being made off from the land, and by the mortgagees only without joining the mortgagor, were void, the parties being out of possession at the times of the assignments. And it was argued, that the first assignment by the mortgagor was only good; for the mortgagor was by the covenant to retain the possession only till a default of payment, which made the mortgagor tenant at will to the mortgagee (after such default;) but when the mortgagee had made the first assignment, the tenancy at will was thereby determined, and the mortgagor by his retaining the possession afterward was a disseisor; and so all the assignments by the mortgagee being out of possession, without the concurrence of the mortgagor, were void; and the rather in this case, because Maddiford had brought ejectment before his assignment, and thereby has admitted himself to be out of possession both before and at the time that he made the assignment or lease to Coventree. But the Court, viz. Holt Chief Justice, and Giles Eyre held all the assignments good; for although the tenancy at will was determined, yet the mortgagor was tenant at sufferance, and not necessarily a disseisor; and the bringing the ejectment is no more than an admitting that he was not in actual possession, but does not admit an actual disseisin, and so they directed the jury, [389] who accordingly gave their verdict for the plaintiff, the lessee of the executors of Coventree, being the assignee or lessee of Maddiford. Note, Samuel Eyre, a Judge in the place of Dolben lately deceased, said nothing; and Gregory Just. was sick and absent. Levinz and others for the plaintiff.

POULSON against ——— IN C. B.

Statute of the 5th Eliz. appoints deeds of apprenticeships to be enrolled in the next town corporate. The King by charter creates the Trinity Company, and grants that they may take apprentices according to the statute—that their indentures may be enrolled by the company non obstante the said statute—resolved that the King cannot alter the place of enrolment.

Covenant, and declares on the statute 5 Eliz. that mariners may take apprentices, and that they shall be bound by their covenants, as apprentices in London are by the custom there, the indentures being enrolled in the next town corporate: and that King Charles II. incorporated all mariners by the name of The Trinity Company of Deptford-Strond, and that they might take apprentices according to the statute; and that their indentures should be enrolled by the corporation of the Trinity-Company, and that such enrolments should be good, notwithstanding the statute of 5 Eliz. and that the defendant was bound an apprentice to the plaintiff, being a mariner; and that the indenture was enrolled before the Trinity-Company, and that the defendant departed from his service. The defendant demurs upon the declaration, because the enrolment was before the Trinity-Company, and not in the next town-corporate, according to the statute: and altho' that the lien (or obligatory force) of the covenant is by virtue of the statute (the plaintiff being a mariner) and no alteration by the patent but only the place of enrolment, which for the plaintiff was argued might be dispensed with by the patent, and non obstante, as the case is 2 R. 3, 11, a statute, that goods should be unladen at Calais, yet the King by a non obstante may dispense therewith, and allow the unlading at another place; and so when the King grants conusance of pleas, he may alter the place of holding the pleas, though he cannot alter the manner of the trial; yet it was resolved by the whole Court, that the King cannot alter the place of the enrolment, but it should have been according to the statute, otherwise the covenants should be according to the common law, and the apprentices not bound by them: and they gave judgment for the defendant upon the first argument. Levinz of counsel for the plaintiff.

HILARY, 5 WILLIAM AND MARY.

[390] NORDEN again FOX.

Bill against the warden of the Fleet for an escape.

Be it remembered that upon Thursday, the 25th day of January, in this same term came here into Court Catherine Norden, widow, by Charles Townshend her attorney, and exhibited to the justices here, her certain bill against Thomas Fox, Esquire, warden of the prison of the lord the King, and of the lady the Queen, of the Fleet, present here in Court in his proper person, in a plea of debt, the tenor of which bill follows in these words:—To the justices of the lord the King and of the lady the Queen of the Bench. Middlesex, to wit. Catherine Norden, widow, by Charles Townshend her attorney, complains of Thomas Fox, Esq. warden of the prison of the lord the King and of the lady the Queen, of the Fleet, present here in Court in his proper person, for this, that he hath not rendered to the said Catharine 304l. which he owes to her and unjustly detains. For this, to wit, that whereas the said Catharine heretofore, to wit, in the term of the Holy Trinity, in the 4th year of the reign of the lord the now King, and of the lady the now Queen, in the Court of the said lord the King, and of the said lady the Queen, before George Treby, Knight, and his companions, then justices of the said lord the King, and the said lady the Queen, of the Bench here, to wit, at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, by the consideration of the said Court had recovered against one William Lenthall, Esq. by the name of William Lenthall, late of London, Esq. as well a certain debt of two hundred and forty pounds, as forty shillings, which to the said Catharine in the said Court of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, were adjudged for her damages by occasion of the detention of that debt, as by the record and proceedings thereof in the said Court here remaining more fully appeareth; which judgment as yet remains in its full force, vigour and effect, not reversed, annulled, or satisfied; and whereas also afterwards, to wit, in the term of St. Michael last past, in and by the said Court of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, before the said George Treby, Knight, and his companions then justices of the said lord the now King, and the said lady the now Queen, [391] of the Bench here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, it was considered that the said Catharine should have execution against the said William for the said debt and damages by the default of the said William, as by the record and proceedings thereof in the said Court here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid remaining, more fully appeareth. And whereas also the said Catharine heretofore, to wit, in the term of St. Hilary, in the 4th & 5th years of the reign of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen, before the said George Treby, Knight, and his companions then justices of the said lord the King, and of the said lady the Queen here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, by the consideration of the said Court had recovered against the said William Lenthall, by the name of William Lenthall of London, Esquire, as well a certain debt of sixty pounds, as forty shillings, which to the said Catharine in the said Court of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, were adjudged for her damages which she had sustained by occasion of the detention of the said debt as by the record and proceedings thereof in the said Court of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, remaining more fully appeareth; which judgment last mentioned as yet remains in its full force, vigour and effect, not reversed, annulled or satisfied. And whereas also, afterwards, to wit, upon Tuesday after the octave of St. Martin last past, the said William then being in the custody of the said Thomas, then and from thenceforth hitherto being warden of the prison of the Fleet; he the said William by the said Thomas, then warden of the said prison of the Fleet, by virtue of the writ of the lord the King, and of the lady the Queen, of habeas corpus to the said warden directed, was brought to the Bar here, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, and thereupon the said William at the prayer of the said Catharine by her attorney aforesaid, then and there by the said Court was committed to the prison of the Fleet, in execution for the several debts and damages aforesaid, there to remain until, &c. by virtue of which committal of the said William to the prison aforesaid, in the form aforesaid made, the said William was in the custody of the said Thomas in execution for the several debts and damages aforesaid; and the said William, so in the prison of the Fleet aforesaid, in execution for the several debts and damages aforesaid, in the form aforesaid being, the said Thomas afterwards, to wit, upon the 20th day of January, in the 5th year [392] of the reign of the lord the now King, and of the lady the now Queen, he the said Thomas then being warden of the prison of the Fleet aforesaid, him the said William at the parish of St. Clement Danes, did permit to go at large wheresoever he would, the said Catharine of her debts and damages aforesaid not being satisfied; whereby an action hath accrued to the said Catharine to demand and have of the said Thomas, the said three hundred and four pounds; nevertheless the said Thomas, although oftentimes requested, the said three hundred and four pounds to the said Catharine hath not as yet paid, but the same to her to pay hitherto hath refused, and still doth refuse, whereupon she saith that she is prejudiced and hath sustained damage to the value of four hundred pounds, and thereupon she prays relief, &c.

Pledges of prosecuting, John Doe and Richard Roe.

And the said Thomas Fox in his proper person comes and defends the wrong and injury, when, &c. and saith that the said Catharine ought not to have her action aforesaid against him, because he saith, that the said William Lenthall in the declaration aforesaid named, after the said time of his pretended committal to the custody of the said Thomas, and before the day of the exhibition of the bill of the said Catharine in this behalf, to wit, upon the 10th day of January, in the 5th year of the reign of the said lord the now King, and of the said lady the now Queen, by the consent and license of the said Catharine then and there had, was permitted to go out and to escape from the prison of the Fleet aforesaid, out of the custody of the said Thomas, for which escape of the said William, and not another nor different, the said Catharine now hath exhibited her bill aforesaid, against the said Thomas; and this he is ready to verify; whereupon he prays judgment if the said Catharine ought to have her action aforesaid, thereupon against him, &c.

And the said Catharine saith that she by any thing before alledged ought not to be precluded from having her action aforesaid, because she saith that the said William of the proper injury of the said Thomas and without any notice thereof given to the said Catharine, upon the said 20th day of January, in the 5th year aforesaid, at the said parish of St. Clement Danes, was permitted by the said Thomas [being warden of the said prison of the Fleet as aforesaid] to escape and go at large out of the custody of the said Thomas wheresoever he would, and not by the consent or license of the said Catharine, as the said Thomas above by pleading hath alledged; and this she prays may be enquired of by the country.

And the said Thomas saith that the plea aforesaid of the said Catharine above by replying pleaded, is not sufficient in law to maintain [393] the said Catharine to have her action aforesaid against the said Thomas, and that he the said Thomas to the said plea in the manner and form aforesaid pleaded hath no necessity, neither is he bound by the law of the land in any manner to answer, and this he is ready to verify: wherefore for want of a sufficient replication of the said Catharine in this behalf, the said Thomas prays judgment, and that the said Catharine may be precluded from having her action aforesaid, &c.

And the said Catharine because that she in her plea aforesaid, above by replying pleaded, hath alledged sufficient matter in law to maintain her the said Catharine to have her action aforesaid, against the said Thomas, which she is ready to verify; which matter the said Thomas doth not deny, nor to the same in any wise answer, but altogether doth refuse to admit the verification thereof, prays judgment, and her damages by occasion of the detention of that debt to be adjudged to her, &c. And because the justices, &c.

NORDEN against FOX.

Want of prout patet per record' cured by pleading over. Ante 311. British stat. 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16. Irish: 6 Anne, c. 10.

Debt for an escape against the warden of the Fleet, and declares that Lenthall was committed to him in execution upon three several judgments (but says not prout patet per record' of the commitment) and that the defendant permitted him to escape. The defendant pleads, that he permitted him to escape by licence of the plaintiff. The plaintiff replies, that he permitted it of his own wrong, and not by licence of the plaintiff. Whereupon the defendant demurs: and now it was argued for the defendant, that the declaration was ill, because it does not say prout patet per record' of the commitment; and that this is a matter triable by the record, and not per pais. Whereto it was answered, that that was cured by the plea over, which tendered an issue upon another matter, and thereby admitted the commitment; so that that is not now to be tried, but only the licence to escape; as want of a venue in a declaration is in another case cured by a plea of other collateral matter, which waves the matter issuable in the declaration; and so it was ruled in this Court within two or [394] three years past before Pollexfen Chief Justice, in the case of Knighton and Moreton; and of that opinion were the Court now, and ruled judgment for the plaintiff. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff.

HUNT'S CASE.

Trial of foreign matter in the county where the action is brought is good. 1 Ventris 10. 2 Keble 492.

Debt for rent in London of lands in Essex. The defendant as to part pleads nil debet, and as to the residue an entry and expulsion; on which they were at issue, and verdict for the plaintiff for the whole entirely, and damages: and now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the issue as to the expulsion was local and to be tried in Essex, and for that the whole was tried in London, and the verdict being general and entire for the whole debt and damages, it is ill in the whole: but this point having been determined last term in the Exchequer-Chamber in a writ of error on a judgment in B. R. between Briggs and Chew, intr. Trin. 3 W. & M. B. R. Rot. 763, by the opinion of four Judges against three, that it being tried in the county where the action is brought, it is cured by the new statute, the Court here would not reverse the judgment, but affirmed it, although some of the most considerable of the Judges now here, and also three of the most considerable in the other Court, were of a contrary opinion. But in both cases the judgments were given rather by the greater number, than by any weight of argument. Levinz for the defendant.

Thou art a witch, and I will make thee suffer for it. These words held actionable. 1 Lev. 255. Ante 166. Cro. Ja. 255, 276. Noy 22. 1 Brownl. 2, 14. Godb. 34, 341. Hut. 13. 2 Brownl. 276. All. 6. Sty. 5, 59. Hobart 129. Cro. Eliz. 312. 1 Rol. Rep. 86. 1 Rol. Ab. 47. 1 Sid. 53, 386. 1 Jo. 325, 397. Ray. 35. Cro. Cha. 141, 261. 1 Leon. 336. 1 Lev. 148. Ante 166.

Case for these words, Thou art a witch, and I will make thee suffer for a witch. After verdict for the plaintiff, and 5l. damages, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not actionable: that witch only, is not has been divers times adjudged, and I will [395] make thee suffer for a witch are not; for it is not said suffer death; and it may be intended by a citation into the Spiritual Court, which was the usual way before the statute, or it may be by ducking in the water, as the common people use to try people suspected of witchcraft. But hereto it was answered and held by Rokesby and Nevile Justices, that the words shall be taken as they are usually understood among neighbours in the country; to suffer is intended to suffer death; as they usually say, How many suffer at this Assizes? which is intended suffer death? And thereto Treby Chief Justice after it had been twice moved inclined. And afterward upon a case cited in this Court, Pasch. 26 Car. 2, Thou art a clipper, and thy neck shall suffer for it, it was adjudged actionable, although it was in that case objected, that clipper was uncertain, it may be of cloth or any other thing; and thy neck shall suffer for it, which may be by pillory, &c. Yet all together, they were adjudged actionable, because in common parlance it is intended clipper of money. And so here at the last judgment was given for the plaintiff by the said three Judges; but Powell was of a contrary opinion; because words shall be taken in meliori sensu, and the word suffer is wholly uncertain what manner of suffering was intended.

Copyholds not within the stat. 12 Car. 2, c. 24 of Guardians. Hutton 16, 17. Kelw. 186. F. N. B. 143. Vaughan 180.

In replevin, upon long and intricate pleadings, and not well pleaded, the Court resolved one point only (without any regard to the other defects in the pleadings) viz. that a copyholder is not within the stat. 12 Car. 2,(1) to dispose of the custody of his infants, but that the custody shall be to the lord, or others, according to the custom of the manor, as to the copyhold lands, for the prejudice that may otherwise be to the lord, and for the meanness of the estate.

[396] THE KING AND QUEEN against TUCKER IN B. R.

Judgment in high treason reversed because the judgment did not conclude contra ligeantiæ suæ debitum.

Error of a judgment upon an indictment of high treason against Tucker, for being in rebellion with Monmouth in the time of Jac. 2, because the indictment did not conclude contra ligeantiæ suæ debitum; and although that the treason and rebellion, and all the particular facts of the rebellion were fully and particularly expressed in the indictment, so that it appeared to be contra ligeantiæ suæ debitum, yet for that error the judgment after divers arguments in B. R. was reversed, although that divers precedents of attainders were produced in Court, where the indictments were as this is, with that omission in the conclusion, as Sir Henry Vane's, General Lambert's, and three or four more. And thereupon error of this reversal was brought in the House of Peers, where this judgment of reversal was affirmed by one voice only.

(1) Irish, 14 & 15 Cha. 2, c. 19, § 6

GALE against TILL.

S. C. 4 Mod. 244. Ante 375.

In debt on a judgment nil debet pleaded. Quær. hereof.

Debt in C. B. upon a judgment in the same Court; and upon nil debet pleaded, the issue was tried before Treby Ch. Justice at the Guildhall, where the defendant gave in evidence that the judgment on which this action is founded was removed into B. R. by a writ of error, which is there pending. Whereupon a case was made to be determined by the Ch. Justice at his chamber: (the question being, whether this action be maintainable in C. B. after the record removed into B. R. by writ of error?) And it was there argued for the plaintiff, that the action well lies, and cited 1 Sid. 236, and 4 H. 6, 31 a. Debt in C. B. on a judgment in the same Court, the defendant pleads that the record was removed into B. R. and respondeas ouster was awarded; for per Cur', the record remains here to all purposes, except only as to suing execution thereupon, and the supersedeas in such a case is only for staying the execution; and 18 E. 4, 6 b. [397] is the same resolution. But the Chief Justice held, that the action did not lie as it is laid, as upon a judgment in this Court, but that he ought to declare upon the whole matter, viz. of the judgment in this Court, and of the removal by the writ of error, and that the judgment is still in full force, prout patet per record' inde in B. R. and so are 18 E. 4, 7 b. and Bro. Debt 186. Wherefore he stayed the judgment; and accordingly afterwards in Trin. or Mich. 9 W. 3, in debt brought in this Court upon a judgment in this Court, after error brought, declaring on the whole matter, judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court.

[398] TRINITY TERM, IN THE SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM AND MARY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

BAKER QUI TAM, &C. against DUNCALFE.

In actions qui tam, &c. attornies have privilege to be sued by bill. 1 Lutw. 192, 193. Cro. Cha. 10. Hutt. 82. Cro. El. 138. 1 Leon. 119. 3 Inst. 194. 1 Ventris 137. Ante 343. Cumberbach 319. Skinner 549.

Debt ad respondend' domino Regi & Baker qui tam pro domino Rege & seipso sequit' for 200l. on the stat. 23 H. 6, for executing the office of Sheriff of Hull above a year; and it is brought by original. The defendant pleads, that he is an attorney of this Court, and ought not to be sued except by bill. To which the plaintiff demurs; and it was twice argued in this and the following term: and for the plaintiff it was said, that this being the King's suit, an attorney has no privilege against him, but he may sue in what Court, and in what manner he pleases; as 9 H. 6, 44. Roll. Privilege 244. Rast. Entr. 206 upon this statute. Whereto it was answered and resolved per Cur', that so it is where the suit is the King's suit alone, as indictments, informations, and actions by the King alone; but here, though the King is to have part of the money recovered, yet it is the suit of the party, though brought in the name of the King and him, and in this suit the party may be nonsuit, also he may have a tales without a warrant by the Attorney-General; but where the King alone has the suit, he cannot be nonsuit, nor can there be a tales without warrant of the Attorney-General; and this difference is taken 4 Leon. 46. Whereupon judgment was, that the writ should abate.

[399] TAYLOR against CLARKE AND DENNY.

A writ is directed to two coroners, one of them executes it, and permits an escape, the other has no notice of the writ; quære is he liable to the plaintiff in the writ? 6 Mod. 37. Shower 400.

Debt against two coroners of the county of Norfolk, and declares, that the plaintiff had recovered against one Nightingale, sheriff of the said county, 600l. and that a cap' ad satisfac' was directed to the defendants to take him, and that they arrested him and permitted him to escape. The defendants severally plead nil debet, and upon trial of the issue before Holt Ch. Just. by the evidence it appeared, that the writ was delivered to Denny only, and that he in person alone arrested Nightingale, and that Clarke had no notice nor had given any assent thereto, nor made any warrant for it, nor signed any return of the writ, nor did it appear that any return of the writ was made at all. But on the trial Holt Ch. Just. for that the coroners are but one officer in this ministerial office, directed the jury to find for the plaintiff, which they did accordingly; but for the hardship of the case and difficulty of the matter he offered, and afterwards at London signed, a bill of exceptions, comprising the whole matter: and now upon the bill of exceptions it was argued for the defendant Clarke, that he ought not to be charged for this act of his companion done without his assent or knowledge; for although in truth they both make but one officer, and ought to join in all ministerial acts, yet in this personal tort done by his companion without his assent or knowledge he shall not be charged, but the charge shall be laid upon him only who did the wrong; as Cro. Eliz. 175, the under-sheriff only, who embezzled the writ, is charged, tho' the sheriff alone is the officer of the Court. So Dy. 278 b. a deputy-marshal is charged for an escape; and Sty. 297, one of the sheriffs of London was charged solely, he alone permitting the escape: but e contra it was argued, that both being but one officer, the act of one is the act of both, and both are chargeable for the act of each, and 2 Mod. 23, Nayler against Sharpless was cited, where the Court did so incline. Treby Ch. Just. here inclined for the plaintiff, Powell inclined for the defendant; Rokesby doubted; and it was adjourned to be further argued. Levinz for the defendant, Rotheram for the plaintiff.

Action upon the case for toll-traverse—good without shewing title or consideration. Post, 424, 425. Ante 90, 266. 1 Bur. 441. Toll-traverse is good without consideration. 1 Term Rep. 667, 670.

Case, and declares, that the plaintiff was possessed of a toll-traverse for passage on the Bridge of Ware, and that the defendant had carried so many cart-loads of barley over the bridge, the toll whereof (at such a rate by the cart) amounted to 40s. which the defendant had not paid, but refused to pay it, intending to defraud him, to his damage 10l. Whereto the defendant demurs generally: and now it was argued for the defendant, 1. That no such action lies for toll-traverse for passage through the high-way, without shewing a title and a consideration. 2. That this action is only for a non-feasance, viz. non-paying, for which an action of case does not lie, but debt, if any toll be due. To which it was answered, that the action lies without shewing the title or the consideration in the declaration, for it shall come in on the evidence, Cro. Ja. 43, 122. Dent against Oliver, Ow. 109. And as to the second, that case lies for non-feasance, as Cro. Cha. 446. Moyler against Gray, Hill. 2 H. 7, pl. 9, against my shepherd for negligent keeping my sheep; and 7 H. 4, 14, against my carter for negligent keeping my horses; and 11 H. 4, 82, 83, for not repairing a bridge by which I am to pass; 1 E. 3, 4, against a champion, qui se retraxit; and 22 H. 6, 46, 47, against a chaplain, for not reading prayers; 39 H. 6, 18, 19, against an innkeeper, who refuses to lodge me. But note, all those cases are for a tortious non-feasance, but this here is quasi a debt, for which there lies rather debt or assumpsit; and it was adjourned. Pemberton for the defendant, Levinz for the plaintiff.(1)

THE LADY GERARD against THE LORD GERARD OF BROMLEY.

S. C. 5 Mod. 64. 1 Salk. 54, 253.

The wife shall be endowed of the caput baroniæ. Ante 84, 86, 96, 169, 220. Post. 437. Co. Lit. 30 b. 31 b. Glanv. lib. 6, c. 1. Bracton. lib. 2, fol. 92, 93, 96. Britton. c. 101, 103. Fleta. lib. 5, c. 22, 23.

Dower, and demands the third part of a capital messuage, called Bromley-Hall. The tenant pleads, that time out of mind, &c. it had been called as well by the name of Gerards-Bromley, as of Bromley-Hall, whereof Sir Thomas Gerard, Knight, 20 Julii, 1 Jac. 1, was seised in fee, and being so seised the said King James created him Baron Gerards de Gerards-Bromley, he then being resident and commorant with his family in the said capital messuage; and the said capital messuage then became caput baroniæ suæ, and ever since has continued to be the habitation of him and his ancestors, & caput baroniæ, and derives the title of the messuage and barony down to himself through divers mean descents, and demands judgment, whether the demandant shall be thereof endowed, it being caput baroniæ? And avers that he had assigned to the demandant diversas terras magni annui valoris, scil. de 400*l. per annum existen' tertiam partem* of the tenements of her husband, which she had accepted: whereupon the demandant demurs generally: and now it was argued for the demandant, that the ancient books which say that wives shall not be endowed de caput baroniæ, as Britt. 247 b. &c. and Co. Litt. 31 b. are to be intended of baronies by tenure, which are now extinct, and then were castles of defence; and that the King cannot by his creating [402] a man to be a baron deprive his wife of her dower. Whereto it was answered and agreed, that baronies by tenure are now extinct; but the reason of the privilege of the capital messuage of baronies by tenure and by creation is all one, viz. order and decency, and the honour of the realm, as Co. Lit. 31, cited on the other side; and it would be very indecent that a baron should not enjoy his capital messuage entirely to himself, but that the wife of his predecessor should have the third part thereof in common with him, and thereby a (perplexed) mixture of families and servants, and perhaps she may let it to an innkeeper or taverner. And as to the objection, that the King cannot deprive a woman of her dower, it was answered, that indeed he cannot do it directly, but by a mean he may do it, as he cannot directly privilege a man from arrests, but by making him a baron he may do it obliquely by that means: and no injury is done to the wife here; for although she shall not have the third part of the capital messuage, yet she shall have the value thereof out of his other messuages and lands, which will be more convenient both for the woman and the baron. But the whole Court were of the contrary opinion, and gave judgment for the demandant upon the first argument, yet it was after consideration had thereof for a term or two. (Levinz being for the tenant.) Whereupon a writ of error was brought in B. R. and there the judgment was affirmed; upon which a writ of error was brought in the House of Peers, which was the thing at first designed. But afterwards (as I heard) the parties agreed without having the judgment of that house.

For a bond to a feme before coverture, the husband may sue alone. 1 Danvers 713. All. 3, 6, 37. Sty. 9. Lit. Rep. 13. Sed contra apparent. Moor 422. Com. Dig. Baron and Fem. V. W. X. 2 Wilson 423. 1 H. Blackstone 109. Per Marshall, Serjeant.

Debt was brought by the husband sole, upon an obligation to the wife before the coverture. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which was to pay money to the feme, and then demurs on the declaration; and after divers arguments judgment was for the plaintiff per totam Cur', and a judgment was cited by Just. PATRICK against JOHNSON.

S. C. 1 Lut. 259. Nel. Lut. 287, 288.

Execution sued after the year, not void, but voidable by error. Cro. Ja. 251. 2 Ventris 193. Nel. Lut. 470, 481.

Trespass, for that the defendant simul cum, &c. 17 Ap. 4*to* of the now King, at Melford in Suffolk did assault, beat and wound, and imprisoned him for 12 months. The defendant as to the vi & armis and the wounding pleads not guilty, and as to the residue of the trespass, the assault and imprisonment and detaining in prison, he says, that St. Edmund's Bury is an antient borough, and that the now plaintiff within the jurisdiction of the Court of Record of the said borough was indebted to him the defendant, and for the recovery thereof the now defendant impleaded him in the same Court, and found pledges to prosecute his suit, and that thereupon taliter processum fuit in eadem Cur', that he had judgment and execution, which he delivered to the other defendants in the simul cum, being the bailiffs, who at D. infra jurisdict' Cur' molliter manus imposuer' upon him, and arrested and detained him in prison, quod est idem residuum transgression' præd' and traverses Melford seu alibi extra jurisdict' Cur'. The plaintiff demands oyer of the execution, which appears to be sued above a year after the judgment, and then pleads that no execution issued within the year, [404] upon which the defendant demurs: and it was resolved, 1. That the execution sued after the year is not void, but only voidable by writ of error; but that 'till it be reversed, it is a good justification. 2. It was resolved that this brief way of pleading a judgment in an Inferior Court by an implacitasset, whereupon taliter processum fuit that he recovered was good, though antiently it was otherwise practised; and Hill. 24, 25 Car. 2, B. R. it was so resolved by Hale and the whole Court, which case is entered in Easter or Trinity term of that year, Rot. 235. But there they plead a plaint levied, without which the Court there held the plea had not been good, for proceeding there without a plaint would be void, but by the implacitasset and pledges found, as the pleading is here, is tantamount thereto, and supplies it. And in Mich. 36 Car. 2, C. B. Rot. 825, Adny against Vernon, the pleading by taliter processum of a judgment in Worcester Court was adjudged good; but there also they commenced the plea with the levying of a plaint super quo taliter processum fuit. 3. It was objected, that the molliter manus imposuit did not answer to the battery; and the Court inclined that it did not sufficiently answer it, but that he ought to have pleaded that he resisted, wherefore they in their defence beat him, which I wonder at; for all justifications in such cases are as here, and the laying hands on him is a battery, if they had no warrant to excuse them. 4. It was objected, that the plea was ill, because in the quoad residuum he had omitted the battery, and only said quoad residuum transgress. insult' & imprisonament', and so does not answer to the battery, which makes a discontinuance of the whole: to which the Court inclined. But thereto it was answered, that the quoad residuum transgressionis without more was a sufficient answer to all; for the whole is but trespass: and the Court agreed, that quoad residuum transgressionis had been sufficient to answer the whole; but when the defendant in the quoad residuum enumerates all the other particulars, but omits the battery, the battery is thereby excluded in the quoad residuum. But in answer to this was cited Mich. 26 Car. 2, B. R. The King against Newton in error upon a judgment in Chester for forging and publishing of a deed, the jury found the party guilty of the trespass and forgery aforesaid, omitting the publication; which was assigned for error, but resolved to be no error. For de transgressione præd' includes the whole, as in an action for trespass, assault and battery, if the jury find him guilty of the trespass and assault aforesaid the Judges [405] there said it was a good and sufficient verdict; for de transgress. præd' includes the whole; of which case you have a note in 3 Keb. 353. But he reports it as a motion, but in truth it was on a writ of error, and it was resolved to be no error: and upon those two last exceptions the Court would advise; but the plaintiff being afterwards satisfied that those exceptions would not aid him, he to prevent judgment being given against him, discontinued his action. Lutwyche for the plaintiff. Levinz for the defendant.

Tenements are not put in view in this action but in assize, &c.

In ejectment, the defendant venit & dicit (without any defence) that the tenements in visu posita tenent' de Johan' Nicholas Mil' ut de maner' suo de Gillingham, and that the manor is de antiquo dominico Coronæ Angliæ, and that the tenements time out of mind have been placitat' & placitabilia in curia ejusdem maner' per parvum breve de recto. The plaintiff replies that they are copyhold parcel of the manor. Whereupon the defendant demurs. (Note, no notice was taken that the plea was without defence) and it was admitted that the copyholds being parcel of the manor, are pleadable at common law, and the freeholds held of the manor are only pleadable in the lord's court, 9 Ass. 2. 41 E. 3, 22 b. Bro. Anc. Dem. 6. F. N. B. 11 F. Sty. 197. 8 H. 6, 1 a. Trin. 2 H. 7, pl. 1. 2 Cro. 559. And although the replication be repugnant in saying quod bene & verum est that the tenements are held of the manor as the defendant has supposed, and afterwards saying they are copyholds, which are parcel of, and not held of the manor; yet for the fault in the plea by the words in visu posita judgment quod respondeat ouster was given for the plaintiff; for the tenements are not put in view in this action, but in assize, &c. And it seemed as if this plea was drawn by a precedent of a plea of antient demesne in an assise. Serjeant Gould for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

[406] GODBOLD against FREESTONE.

An heir a parte materna limits several estates with reversion to his right heirs, it shall go to his heir a parte materna. 2 Salk. 591. Ante 94, 209, 233. Co. Lit. 12 b. Note (2). 5 Term Rep. 104.

Ejectment, and not guilty tried before Holt Chief Justice at Suffolk Assizes, he being of opinion for the plaintiff but doubting, a verdict was by his direction given for the plaintiff, but by consent of parties a case was made to be argued before him at his chambers at Serjeants-Inn, and according to his opinion there, either the judgment to be entered or the verdict to be stayed; and the case was this. A man seised of lands by descent a parte materna, makes a feoffment of all the lands to uses, viz. of Blackacre to the use of himself for life, the remainder to his wife for her life, the remainder to the heirs of his body on his wife begotten, the remainder to his right heirs. And of Whiteacre to the use of himself for 99 years if he so long lived, the remainder to trustees for his life, remainder to his wife for her life, remainder to his first and so to his tenth sons in tail, remainder to him and his heirs; the husband and wife are both dead without issue; and if the heirs a parte paterna or a parte materna should have the lands? was the question. And now upon argument at his chamber he changed the opinion he was of at the Assizes, and held that the heir a parte materna should have the whole; and he did not make any difference between the cases, though the one is to himself for life, and the other for years: and Co. Lit. 13, 23 was cited, that where one takes an estate to himself for years, the remainder to his heirs, this is a new estate in him and not the ancient reversion; otherwise when he takes an estate for life, the remainder to his heirs; and Hob. 33 & Dy. 134 a. 163, where it is held, that when a man seized a parte materna makes a feoffment, or levies a fine, &c. and expresly declares the use to him and his heirs; this shall be to the use of his heirs a parte paterna: otherwise where he does not expresly declare the use, but levies a fine, &c. without an express declaration of the use, there the use shall be the same it was before without any alteration. But on the other part were cited, 5 E. 4, 7. 2 Co. Bingham's case, that it is all one be the use expressed or not; the word heirs shall be heirs of the same quality as before: and of that opinion was the Chief Justice, and ruled the postea to be delivered. But the heir a parte paterna, not being satisfied with this opinion, brought a new ejectment, which [407] is entered Hill. 6 W. 3, C. B. Rot. 306, where this whole matter was found specially, and there, upon argument and the authorities before recited, judgment was given by the whole Court, viz. Treby, Nevil, and the two Powels Justices, for the heir a parte materna for the whole: and they did not differ the cases where the estate was limited to the ancestor for years, or for life, the remainder to him in fee, for in both these cases the fee is the old reversion and shall go to the heirs a parte materna. Nor did they admit the difference where the use is expresly limited by the deed, or implied by law without any express limitation; but that in both cases the fee remains in the donor, and was never drawn out of him. And that it neither merged the estate for life or for years, but that both are preserved by the mesne remainders over, which come between those estates and the reversion, as was held in The Earl of Bedford's case, Poph. 3. Mo. f. 719. 2 And. Pasch. 179, pl. 17. Roll. 2 Abr. 418, the same case; where 'till John Lord Russel in whom the next reversion in tail was, both the term for years and also the reversion in fee stood distinct in the earl, viz. the term for 40 years and the reversion in fee; and in Plunket and Holme's case, intrat' Hill. 1658, Rot. 521, B. R. sed adjornat' Mich. 13 Car. 2, where a feme devised lands to her son and heir Thomas, and if he died without issue living Leonard, to Leonard and his heirs; but if he had issue living at his death, to him and his heirs, there the fee descending upon Thomas did not merge his estate for life, but it was preserved by the contingent possibilities coming between his estate for life and the fee; and seeing that Holt had before delivered his opinion the same way, no writ of error was brought, and so the case rested. Pemberton for the heirs a parte materna, Levinz for the heirs a parte paterna in both places.

Error of a judgment in ejectment in C. B. affirmed in B. R. where on a special verdict in ejectment, the case was this. John Long being seised in fee devised the lands in question to Henry Long the eldest son of his brother Richard for life; the remainder to his first son in tail, remainder to all his other sons in the same manner, remainder to Richard the lessor of the plaintiff for life, remainder to his first and all his other sons in tail; with divers remainders over, and dies, Henry enters and was seised, but before he has any son born dies, leaving his wife great with child. Richard the lessor enters as in his remainder: and six months after the defendant, son of Henry, is born, and his guardianenters for him upon the lessor, who thereupon brings ejectment: and the cause being tried before Turton Baron of the Exchequer, this whole matter was found specially; and upon argument in C. B. judgment was by the whole Court given for the plaintiff for two causes, 1. For that this being a contingent remainder to the first son of Henry, and he not being born at the time the particular estate determined, it became void. 2. The next in remainder being the lessor, and he having entered before the birth of the first son of Henry, he was in by purchase, and shall not be evicted by an heir born afterwards, 5 E. 4, 6. 9 H. 7, 5, &c. whereupon the defendant brought error in B. R. where the judgment was affirmed by the whole Court; whereupon he brings error in Parliament where the judgment was reversed by almost all the Lords in Parliament, because it being a will they construed it according to the intent and equity and meaning of the parties, which they said could never be to disinherit the heir of the name and family of the devisor, nor would they do it on such a nicety. But all the Judges were much dissatisfied with this judgment of the Lords, nor did they change their opinions thereupon, but very much blamed Baron Turton for permitting it to be found specially where the law was so clear and certain. Levinz for the plaintiff in the ejectment.

Dower, and upon default a grand cape issued, and suggested that the husband died seized, and thereupon a writ of enquiry of the value of the lands, and the inquisition returned 60l. damages for the lands; and it was moved to stay the filing of the writ of enquiry because no notice was given to the tenant of it, nor of the execution thereof: whereto it was answered, that in real actions no personal notice is to be given, but the tenant ought to take notice, because the writs, viz. the summons, &c. are always executed upon the land and not elsewhere; but per Cur'. The grand cape is a judgment, and thereby the suit is determined at the common law, and the damages for the value of the land is but an addition by the Statute of Marlebridge, and sounds in damages only; and that personal notice ought to be given of the writ and of the execution thereof by enquiry, as is done in other cases of writs of enquiry; and for want of notice they discharged the inquisition, and awarded a restitution of the damages levied thereon. Quære hereof, for the practisers said it was not usual to give notice of executing a writ of enquiry in such a case of dower. Nota, this case was ruled two or three terms past, but was forgot to be reported till now.

PRIDE against THE EARL OF BATH.

Evidence admitted to bastardize a son after the death of himself, his father and mother. Co. Lit. 244 a. Buller N. P. 114. 3 Mod. 164. Hargrave L. T. 479.

Ejectment upon a lease by Pride, tried at the Bar in B. R. before Holt Ch. Just. and Giles Eyre only in Court. Pride made a title to the lands in question as heir to George late Duke of Albemarle, viz. son of a daughter of one Monk the elder brother of the said duke, supposing that Duke George died without issue; the E. of Bath makes a title by a deed, and also by a will made by Duke Christopher son of Duke George. Whereto the plaintiff said, that C. was not the son of Duke G. but a bastard, because at the time of the marriage of Duke G. with Duke Christopher's mother she had a husband living to whom she was lawfully married, and so her marriage with Duke G. was void; and produced several witnesses who endeavoured to prove this. Whereto it was answered by the E. of Bath's counsel, that they ought not to be admitted to give such evidence to bastardize the issue after his death, and after the death of his father and mother, who were married in 1652, and lived together as husband and wife their whole lives after until their deaths, (without any question made) which happened not till 1663. And also Duke C. during his whole life was taken and acknowledged as his son and heir till his death, which was in 1668, and he was styled son and heir of Duke G. both in the settlement and in the will of Duke G. and enjoyed the estate accordingly, and so had the earl under him by the settlement and will of Duke C. till this present. Also, that Duke C. sat in Parliament, &c. as the son and heir of Duke G. and so was he styled in the patent made to him by King Charles II. and also in an Act of Parliament made to dispose of certain lands so settled upon him, which he could not dispose of without such an Act, and that therefore the plaintiff should not be admitted to bastardize him after the deaths of himself and his father and mother; for this Court will not permit the Ecclesiastical Courts so to do, but in such cases have often granted prohibitions to them, as Kenn's case, 7 Co. 44. And that what they would not permit the Ecclesiastical Courts to do in such matters whereof they are the proper Judges, they themselves ought not to do. But it was answered by both the Judges, that if the matter objected was true, the marriage was null and void, and the jury might (enquire and) try such facts as would make it void, and they admitted the evidence; and afterwards upon a long trial and diversity of witnesses, the jury not being satisfied with the evidence gave [411] their verdict for the defendant the Earl of Bath. Levinz and others of counsel for the Earl of Bath.

HALL AND KEENE against POTTER IN CHANCERY, AND THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

Bonds and contracts for procuring of marriages, void. Shower P. C. 76. 2 Vernon 392, 445. 10 Mod. 445. Cha. Prec. 267. 1 P. Wms. 118, 496. 3 P. Wms. 66. 3 Atkyns 566. 1 Vesey 507. 2 Vesey 549. 1 Strange 240.

Thomas Thinne gave an obligation of 1000l. to Mrs. Potter, conditioned to pay to her 500l. within three months after he should be married to the Lady Ogle, a widow of great fortune and honour, being the daughter and heir of Josceline Percy the last Earl of Northumberland of that name: and in debt on the obligation issue was taken that they were never married, (he being afterwards killed) and a verdict for Potter against Hall and Keene, who were Thinne's executors; whereupon they brought their bill in Chancery, surmising that it was a void contract, it being for procurement of a marriage of Thinne to the Lady Ogle, she being a person of such great honour and fortune; and they insisted principally on two things: 1. That nothing was done by Potter but only advising Thinne to apply himself to Brett who had a great interest with the lady and her friends, and some small matter expended for Thinne's entertainment, and so no sufficient consideration was for the obligation. 2. If there were, yet such contracts for procuriug of marriages are of dangerous consequence, and tend to the ruin of families, and divers precedents were produced where such contracts have been set aside in equity, (but in all those precedents there appeared some circumvention in the case, excepting one about 11 Ch. 1, decreed by the Lord Keeper Coventry). But thereto it was answered by Potter, that here being no fraud, circumvention, or ill practice, used in this case, but only advice, the contract was not illegal; for advice is as lawful in such cases as in other cases if it be without fraud or ill practice; and here none is proved. Also this marriage was convenient (i.e. suitable) in respect of their estates, for though the lady was heiress to a very great estate, yet it was in reversion, and depending upon two jointures for a great part of it; and Thinne's estate was great in possession, viz. 10000l. per annum, and he a gentleman of a great family though not of the nobility, and if any advantage were in the case it was to Thinne, and therefore his executors had no reason to complain of the matter; [412] and divers cases have been adjudged in the Courts at common law, where on such contracts the parties have recovered their recompence, if the contracts were duly made without fraud or circumvention; and particularly one touching a marriage between Foster and Ramsey within two or three years past, where the defendant Foster promised to the plaintiff in the action 50l. if he would procure Ramsey a widow to marry him, whereupon he brought an action for the 50l. after the marriage, and recovered the whole in damages, which verdict being set aside for imperfection in the declaration, the plaintiff brought a new action and amended his declaration and recovered all the said 50l. again in damages, and had it paid him; both which trials were before Holt Chief Justice at Guildhall, and there being no fraud or circumvention in the case, there was no doubt made of the legality of the contract: and of that opinion was the Lord-Keeper in Chancery, and upon a re-hearing discharged an order made by the Master of the Rolls to the contrary, and dismissed the plaintiff's bill; whereupon he pleaded to the House of Peers, and upon hearing the cause there all the Lords but three or four were of opinion, that all such contracts concerning marriages are of dangerous consequence, and not to be allowed; and they reversed the decree of dismission made by the Lord Keeper, and decreed the obligation to be void. Whereon the then plaintiff (now defendant) took issue that the 10l. was not sufficient, and a verdict that it was sufficient, and judgment thereon had, which he now pleaded in bar in the Ecclesiastical Court, and they refused to receive it, whereupon a prohibition was here prayed and granted; for the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court having been barred of dilapidations at the common law, it shall bar him from suing in the Ecclesiastical Court; and of that opinion were the whole Court of C. And that there upon each party should make general releases to one another, and assigns a breach on the nonpayment of the 7l. 10s. Defendant rejoins, nullum tale fecerunt arbitrium. On which an issue was, and verdict for the plaintiff, and it was moved in arrest of judgment by Levinz, that the award is void; for nothing is awarded to the defendant but the release, and that is not to be made till the [414] rest be performed; and though the award is good for the 7l. 10s. which is certain, yet the expences of the suit, and all reasonable expences which the plaintiff has expended circa sectam prædict' is wholly uncertain and void as to them, and the award in that part thereof can never be performed, and so the release is never to be made; for it is to be made superinde, &c. And so held the Court in Hill. last, when it was first moved; but now in this term it being moved by Lutwyche for the plaintiff, and the case of Pinkny against Bullock, Pasch. 23 Car. 2, cited, where the award was to pay 10l. and the charges spent at the making of the award, and each to release to the other; though as to the charges it was void, yet on paying the 10l. it was adjudged he ought to release: so here: whereupon judgment was for the plaintiff.

[415] TRINITY TERM, IN THE SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM THE THIRD. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

ZOUCH against THOMPSON.

Hilary, 7 William.

Writ of scire facias to avoid a fine of lands in antient demesne.

The lord the King hath sent to his justices of the Bench here his writ close in these words: William the Third by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland King, defender of the faith, &c. to his justices of the Bench greeting. Whereas by fine in the Court of the Lord Charles the Second, late King of England, of the Bench at Westminster, on the octave of St. Hilary, in the twenty-fourth year of his reign, before John Vaughan, John Archer, Hugh Wyndham, Robert Atkins, and William Ellis, Justices, and other faithful subjects of the said late King then there present, levied between Stephen Thompson, demandant, and John Sellon and

Elizabeth his wife, deforciants, of one messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-four acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, in Elvetham Barnards otherwise Elverton, and Elvetham otherwise Elverton Sturmy, in the county of Southampton, they the said John and Elizabeth acknowledged the tenements and common of pasture aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to be the right of the said Stephen, as those which the said [416] Stephen hath of the gift of the said John Sellon and Elizabeth, and those they remised and quitted claim from them the said John and Elizabeth and their heirs to the said Stephen and his heirs for ever. And further the said John and Elizabeth for themselves and the heirs of the said John, granted that they would warrant to the said Stephen and his heirs the tenements and common of pasture aforesaid, with the appurtenances, against the said John and Elizabeth, and the heirs of the said John for ever. And for that recognition, remise and quit-claim, warranty, fine and concord, the said Stephen gave to the said John and Elizabeth one hundred and twenty pounds sterling, as by the said fine of record in our Court of the Bench before us remaining more fully appeareth. And now on the behalf of James Zouch, Esquire, now and at the time of the levying of the said fine, and from thence hitherto lord of the manor of Odham, with the appurtenances, in the county of Southampton aforesaid, which is of the antient demesne of England, as it is said we are supplicated, that whereas the said messuage and forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, in Elvetham Barnards otherwise Elverton aforesaid, of the said tenements in the said fine contained, are held, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary were held, of the manor aforesaid, and for the whole time aforesaid until and unto the levying of the said fine, were pleadable in the court of the said manor, according to the custom of the said manor, and not elsewhere. And the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, by the fine aforesaid are put to the common law, to the great damage of the said James, and to the manifest danger of his disherison, and also in deceipt of the said Court of the Bench. And whereas after the levying of the said fine, the said Stephen Thompson and John Sellon and Elizabeth his wife died, and one Christopher Thompson is the son and heir of the said Stephen, and William Sellon is the brother and heir of the said Stephen, and one James Goodyer now is the tenant of the said tenements, with the appurtenances, as it is said: we being willing to provide convenient remedy for the said James Zouch upon the premisses, willing that to be done which in this behalf is just, command you that inspecting the fine aforesaid, and summoning before you those whom you shall think fit to be summoned, and hearing the reasons of the parties upon the one side and the other, you further cause to be done of and upon the annulling of the said fine as to the said messuage, [417] forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, which of right and according to the law and custom of our kingdom of England you shall see fit to be done. Witness ourself at Westminster, the 23d day of January, in the 7th year of our reign. Reynolds. By the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, at the instance of the plaintiff, received 6s. 8d. H. Hetherington. Afterwards, to wit, upon the 12th day of February, in this same term, comes here into Court the said James Zouch by James Field his attorney, and saith that the fine aforesaid was levied in the Court aforesaid of the said late King Charles the Second of the Bench aforesaid here, between the said Stephen Thompson, and John Sellon and Elizabeth, of the said tenements and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, in the manner and form aforesaid, as by the said fine of record in the court of the said lord the now King here remaining more fully appeareth. And that he the said James Zouch at the time of the levying of the said fine was and as yet is lord of the manor of Odham aforesaid, with the appurtenances, in the county aforesaid, which is of the antient demesne of the Crown of the lord the King of England. And that the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, in Elvetham Barnards otherwise Elverton aforesaid, of the said tenements in the fine aforesaid contained are held of the manor aforesaid; and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, until and unto the levying of the said fine, were pleadable in the manor of the court aforesaid, according to the custom of the said manor, and not elsewhere. And the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture aforesaid, with the appurtenances, by the fine aforesaid are put to the common law, to the great damage of the said James, and to the manifest danger of his disherison, and also in deceipt of the said Court here; and that after the levying of the said fine the said Stephen Thompson and John Sellon and Elizabeth died, to wit, at Elvetham Barnards otherwise Elverton aforesaid; and the said Christopher Thompson is the son and heir of the said Stephen, and the said William Sellon is the brother and heir of the said John Sellon, and the said James Goodyer now is the tenant of the said tenements with the appurtenances. And this the said James Zouch is ready to verify, &c. whereupon he prays that the said fine as to the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, may be reversed and annulled; [418] and that he to his court and to all things which he hath lost by occasion of the said fine, may be restored, &c. And because the justices here are ignorant whether the allegation aforesaid of the said James Zouch be true or not, and because it is necessary and expedient, that the said Christopher Thompson, William Sellon, and James Goodyer, for their interests in the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, in this behalf should be forewarned, before that they should any further proceed to the annulling of the said fine, the Sheriff of Southampton aforesaid is commanded that he cause to come here from the day of Easter in three weeks the said Christopher Thompson, William Sellon, and James Goodyer, to shew if any thing, &c. wherefore the fine aforesaid, as to the said tenements with the appurtenances, by reason of the premisses, ought not to be reversed and annulled, &c. And further, &c. At which day, to wit, at the said three weeks of Easter here comes the said James Zouch by his attorney aforesaid, and the said James Goodyer by Samuel Grove his attorney, and the said Christopher Thompson by John Benn his attorney. And the said William Sellon being solemnly called upon the fourth day of pleading came not. And the sheriff, to wit, Richard Cowper, Esquire, now returns that the said William hath nothing, &c. nor is found, &c. And that the said Christopher and James Goodyer are attached by their pledges, to wit, John Den and Richard Fen; therefore the said William in mercy, &c. And thereupon the said James Zouch as before prays that the fine aforesaid as to the said messuage, forty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, thirty-three acres of pasture, six acres of wood and common of pasture, with the appurtenances, by reason of the premisses may be reversed and annulled, &c.

Leave to imparl until the morrow of the Holy Trinity, and from thence until three weeks of St. Michael.

A scire facias to reverse a fine in antient demesne, where the lord was not a party to the fine, lies not, but a writ of disceit. Cruise on Fines 299. 1 Salk. 210. 2 Wilson 17.

A scire facias by the lord of the manor, being antient demesne, against the heir and tertenant to avoid a fine levied of a messuage and lands held of the manor. The sheriff returns nihil habet against the heir, and scire feci against the tertenant, who comes in and pleads that the fine ought not to be questioned on a scire facias, but by an original writ of disceit sued out of Chancery; upon which plea the defendant demurs: and it was argued for him, that it may be done by scire facias on the record of the fine being in this Court, as well as by writ of disceit out of the Chancery. In Thesaur' brev' is such a precedent of a scire facias sued out of C. B. where the record of the fine was. And F. N. B. 99, G. H. A writ of disceit shall be had either out of Chancery or C. B. at the election of the party. F. N. B. 105. Audit quer' on a judgment in waste given in C. B. the Court awarded a scire fac' out of that Court, and to proceed thereon, and not on the audit' quer'. So Old Nat' Brev. 57, a writ of disceit may be sued upon the rolls of the Court where the record is; and ib. 50. It is sometimes original, and sometimes judicial. Trin. 21 E. 3, pl. 5. By Shard, a writ of disceit shall be sued out of the Court where the record is. And as to the objection, that none may sue a scire facias upon a record, who is not party to the record, and that so is not the lord here: it was said, that in Mo. pl. 700, a conusor of a statute aliens part to one, and part to another, and execution is sued against one of them, he shall have a scire facias for contribution against the other; for though he was not party thereto, yet because he is grieved thereby, he shall have the writ. And the lord here is grieved by the fine, because thereby the land is become frank-fee. But after divers arguments the writ was abated by the whole Court, because the lord not being party to the record of the fine, a sci' fac' does not lie for him, but he ought to bring his original writ of disceit, and so he did afterwards, and reversed the fine.

[420] CRISPE against BELWOOD AND ANOTHER.

Declaration in trespass, vi et armis.

Lincoln, to wit.—Maria Belwood late of Gainsburgh in the county aforesaid, widow, and Joseph Garner late of G——— in the county aforesaid, labourer, were attached to answer John Crispe of a plea, wherefore with force and arms the goods and chattels of the said John to the value of twenty pounds at G——— there lately found, they took and carried away, and other wrongs to him did, to the great damage of the said John, and against the peace of the lord the now King, and of the lady the now Queen, &c. And whereupon the said John, by Francis Johnson, his attorney, complains that the said Maria and Joseph, on the 1st day of May, in the 2nd year of the reign of the lord the now King, and of the lady the now Queen, at G——— with force and arms, &c. the goods and chattels, to wit, 120 fir deal boards of the said John, to the value, &c. there then found, took and carried away, and other wrongs, &c. to the great damage, &c. and against the peace, &c. whereupon he saith that he is prejudiced, and hath damage to the value of 20l. and therefore he produces his suit, &c.

And the said Maria and Joseph, by William Sampson their attorney, come and defend the force and injury, when, &c. and as to the coming with force and arms, say that they are not guilty thereof, and of this they put themselves upon the country, and the said John doth the like; and as to the residue of the trespass aforesaid above supposed to be committed, the said Maria and Joseph say, that the said John ought not to have his action aforesaid against them; because they say that one Willoughby Hickman, Baronet, at the said time in which the trespass aforesaid is supposed to be committed, and long before, was and as yet is seized of the manor of Gainsburgh, with the appurtenances in the county aforesaid, in his demesne as of fee, and that sundry messuages in the town and burgh of G——— aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, are held, and were held by burgage tenure of the lord of the said manor as of the said manor, within which manor and within the burgh or town of G——— aforesaid, in and upon the river Trent there, being a navigable river, there is had, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there was had a certain wharf called a slaith, parcel of the said manor, very convenient for loading and unloading goods and merchandizes in and out of small vessels called keels, and other [421] vessels whatsoever, there at the said burgh or town, and accustomed so to load and unload such goods and merchandizes, and where the goods and merchandizes of every person could be loaden and unloaden. And the said Maria and Joseph further say, that the said Willoughby, and all those whose estate he hath and had as aforesaid, in his manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances, from time to time and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, have repaired, amended and maintained, and from the whole time aforesaid, have been used and accustomed to repair, amend and maintain the wharf aforesaid at their proper expences, as often as there has been need, and by reason thereof and for the support of the said expences, they have had and perceived, and for the whole time aforesaid, have been accustomed to have and perceive a toll, called a water-toll, of all goods or merchandizes in such small vessels and other vessels by the river aforesaid, within the manor aforesaid imported, and within the manor aforesaid unloaded, [except of the goods and merchandizes of the persons in such messuages so as aforesaid held in the burgh aforesaid, inhabiting and being resiant; and of goods and merchandizes other than corn and seed to be sold in the common mart or market of G—— aforesaid,] after the rates following, to wit, two pence by the ton for every ton of such goods and merchandizes, [corn and seed excepted,] and for corn and seed after the rate or proportion of two pecks for twenty quarters of such corn and seed; and for default of payment of such toll upon demand or request thereof they have been used and accustomed from the whole time aforesaid, by themselves their ministers or servants, the goods and merchandizes for which the said toll so was due and payable, or a reasonable part thereof in the name of a distress to take and detain until satisfaction should be made to them for the toll aforesaid, or such distress was replevied by the due process of law. And the said Maria and Joseph further say, that the said John who is not, nor ever was an inhabitant or resiant in any such messuage so as aforesaid being held in the burgh aforesaid, before the said time in which, &c. to wit, upon the day and year aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid above mentioned, in small and other vessels by the river aforesaid, within the manor aforesaid imported, and within the said [422] manor unloaded, 120 tons of fir deal boards, not to be sold in the common mart or market aforesaid, whereof the fir deal boards in the declaration aforesaid specified were parcel: whereupon the said Maria and Joseph on the behalf of the said Willoughby and by his command then and there requested the said John to pay the toll in that behalf due, to wit, two pence by the ton for every ton of the said 120 tons of fir deal boards so imported and unloaded, but the said John, the said toll then and there refused to pay, whereupon the said Maria and Joseph, as the servants of the said Willoughby, and at his command at the said time in which, &c. the fir deal boards in the declaration aforesaid specified, parcel of the said 120 tons of fir deal boards, whereof the said toll was due and payable, and being as aforesaid, at G—— aforesaid, within the manor aforesaid, in the name of a distress for that toll took, and carried away as it was lawful for them to do; and the same in their possession there as yet detain, which is the same trespass whereof the said John above now complains; and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray judgment if the said John ought to have his action aforesaid thereupon against them, &c.

And the said John saith, that he by any thing by the said Maria and Joseph before alledged ought not to be precluded from having his action aforesaid thereupon against them, because he saith that the said Maria and Joseph on the day and year aforesaid, in the declaration aforesaid above specified, at G—— aforesaid, with force and arms, &c. of their proper injury, the said 120 fir deal boards of the said John, of the value, &c. there then found, took and carried away, against the peace of the said lord the now King, and of the lady the now Queen, as the said John above against them complains; without this that the said Willoughby and all those whose estate he hath and had as aforesaid, in his manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances, from time to time, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, have repaired, amended and maintained, and from the whole time aforesaid have been used and accustomed to repair, amend and maintain the wharf aforesaid, at their proper expences, as often as there hath been need, and by reason whereof and for the support of such expences have had and perceived, and for the whole time aforesaid have been used and accustomed to have and perceive a certain toll, called a water-toll, of all goods and merchandizes in such small vessels, and other vessels, by the river aforesaid, within the manor aforesaid imported, and within the said manor unloaded, [except of the goods and [423] merchandizes of persons in such messuages so as aforesaid held in the said burgh, inhabiting and being resiant, and of goods and merchandizes, other than corn and seed to be sold in the common mart or market of G—— aforesaid,] after the rate following, to wit, two pence by the ton for every ton of such goods and merchandizes, [corn and seed excepted,] and for corn and seed after the rate or proportion of two pecks for twenty quarters of such corn and seed, and for default of payment of such toll upon demand or request thereof, that they have been used and accustomed from the whole time aforesaid, by themselves, their ministers or servants, the goods and merchandizes for which the said toll so was due and payable, or a reasonable part thereof, in the name of a distress to take and detain until satisfaction should be made to them for the toll aforesaid, or such distress should be replevied by the due process of law, as the said Maria and Joseph above by pleading have alledged, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore, because the said Maria and Joseph above acknowledge the trespass aforesaid, the said John prays judgment and his damages by occasion of the said trespass to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the said Maria and Joseph as before, say that the said Willoughby, and all those whose estate he hath, and so as aforesaid had in his manor aforesaid, with the appurtenances from time to time, and from the time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, have repaired, amended and maintained, and for the whole time aforesaid, have been used and accustomed to repair, amend and maintain the wharf aforesaid, at their proper expence, as often as there has been need, and by reason thereof, and for the support of the said expences, have had and perceived, and have been used and accustomed to have and perceive a certain toll, called a water-toll, of all the goods and merchandizes in such small or other vessels, by the river aforesaid, within the manor aforesaid imported, and within the said manor unloaded, [except of the goods and merchandizes of persons in such messuages so as aforesaid held in the burgh aforesaid, inhabiting and being resiant, and of goods and merchandizes, other than corn and seed to be sold in the common mart or market of G—— aforesaid,] after the rate following, to wit, two pence by the ton for every ton of [424] such goods and merchandizes [corn and seed excepted,] and for corn and seed after the rate or proportion of two pence for twenty quarters of such corn and seed; and for default of payment of such toll upon demand or request thereof, have been used and accustomed for the whole time aforesaid by themselves, their ministers or servants, the goods and merchandizes for which the said toll was due and payable, or a reasonable part in the name of a distress, to take and detain until satisfaction should be made to them for the toll aforesaid, or such distress should be replevied by the due process of law, in the manner and form as the said Maria and Joseph above thereupon by pleading have alledged; and of this they put themselves upon the country, and the said John doth the like; therefore, as well to try this issue as the said other issue between the parties aforesaid above joined the sheriff is commanded, &c.

CRISPE against BELWOOD.

Prescription for toll of goods set on land within a manor, is good as a toll. Traverse. Raym. 52. 1 Mod. 48, 105, 232. Ante 37, 160, 190, 307, 400. 1 Term Rep. 667, 670. Protestation unnecessary.

Trespass, for taking 120 deal boards of the plaintiff's, of the value of 20l. The defendant justifies, for that Sir Willoughby Hickman is seised of the manor of Gainsborough, within which manor is and time out of mind has been a wharf repaired by the lord of the manor, being upon the river of Trent, by reason of which the lord has had a toll of 2d. per ton of all merchandizes put on land within the manor (not saying upon the wharf) and for non payment to distrain a reasonable part of the goods; and that the plaintiff put on land within the manor 120 tons of boards, and refused to pay the toll, for which the defendant as servant to Sir Willoughby distrained the boards in question. The plaintiff replies de injuria sua propria, and traverses the prescription; whereupon was a verdict for the plaintiff; and it was moved in arrest of judgment that the prescription was void, and without consideration, because it is not for landing upon the wharf, but within the manor; and it was twice argued, viz. last Easter term by Wright for the plaintiff, and [425] Blencoe for the defendant, and this term by Lutwyche for the plaintiff, and Levinz for the defendant. And on behalf of the plaintiff it was said, that the landing not being upon the wharf, but within the manor was no more than toll-through, and being without consideration was not good, as 22 Ass. 58. Toll-through without consideration is void. Mo. pl. 793. 5 H. 7, 10 a. and Trin. 24 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1472, between Prideaux and Warne. But on the other side it was said, that it is not like the cases of toll-through, but rather of toll traverse for passing over my lands, which by all the books cited on the other side appears to be good without any consideration or charge. For the ease, &c. by passing traverse my land is a sufficient consideration, and so here the landing within my manor is a sufficient consideration. And it may be intended that all the lands within the manor are the demesnes of the manor, for so they were at first 'till the lord divided them among his tenants, Spelm. Glos. 389. And supposing that those lands are not now parcel of the demesnes, but given to the tenants in fee, yet the prescription may have a reasonable commencement, viz. that when the lord divided those lands among his tenants, he reserved this toll for landing of goods to himself. And for the defendant were cited Kel. 152, in quo warranto. Prescription for toll for passing through his manor, allowed good, 5 H. 7, 10. Prescription to pay for passing over his land; and 3 Co. Farmer's case, prescription that none but the lord shall keep a bakehouse within the manor, good; and 1 Mod. 231, James against Johnson; prescription for toll for passing over his manor, held good; and of that opinion in the end were the whole Court, and gave judgment for the defendant. Then two exceptions were taken to the pleadings, 1. That the toll is not laid to be manerio prædicto spectant'. 2. The boards are laid to be of the value of 20l. and the toll amounts to 120 twopences, which is but 20s. and no protestation or averment is to the value of the boards, and so must be taken to be of 20l. value, and consequently an unreasonable distress. Whereto it was answered by the Court, 1. That manerio spectant' is only form, and it shall be intended; especially after verdict. 2. That the value is no more admitted here, than upon a not guilty, where it is always proved; also a protestation is only an unnecessary form, and if the distress be unreasonable, he has his remedy upon the statute.

[426] CHATER AND OTHERS against HAWKINS, EXECUTOR OF HAWKINS.

Before the Court of Delegates at Serjeants-Inn in Fleet-Street.

In the case of a will two of the witnesses being adjudged to the pillory for matters not infamous by the canon or civil law, their depositions in the Ecclesiastical Court were admitted for evidence by the Court of Delegates. 5 Mod. 74, 75. 2 Salk. 689, 690.

Hawkins being a prisoner in Newgate for opprobrious words spoken of the Mayor of London, and under some distemper of mind, but of a great personal estate, to the value of 10000l. made his will there, attested by several witnesses, and upon hearing of the cause in the Prerogative Court, sentence being there against the will and administration committed, the cause came hither by appeal coram delegatis, viz. Lloyd Bishop of Litchfield, Lloyd Bishop of St. Asaph, Treby Chief Justice of C. B. Rokesby a Judge of the same Court, and John Powell jun. one of the Barons of the Exchequer, with Dr. Oxenden and other civilians: where, for avoiding the testimony of two witnesses to the will, two records were produced, whereby they were severally convicted, the one for publishing a libel, and the other for singing a song against the Government, and both of them adjudged to the pillory; but no proof was of their having stood in the pillory, only the said records were produced; and after their examination in the Ecclesiastical Court, but before the sentence there, came the general pardon, whereby they were pardoned; and the question here was, whether their examination and testimony given in the Ecclesiastical Court shall be admitted for evidence? And, 1. It was admitted that they being convicted and adjudged to the pillory at the time that they gave their testimony in the Ecclesiastical Court, the pardon afterwards did not make their testimony good, if it were not good when it was first made. 2. That the judgment of pillory makes the infamy though they were never set in the pillory. But, 3. The great question of the case was, whether the conviction and judgment for those crimes should make them infamous and destroy their testimony notwithstanding the judgment of pillory? For it was said on one side, that the books, as Britton, Co. 3 Inst. &c. which speak of infamy by the judgment of pillory, speak only of a judgment of pillory for such cases as import deceit and fraud; as cheats, &c. and that it is from the nature of the crime that the infamy arises, and not from the judgment. Whereto it was [427] answered, that it is the judgment upon which the infamy arises, and not from the nature of the crime; as if one be convicted of cheating, he is still a witness if he has not had judgment of pillory for it. 2. It was said, that pillory, although it infers infamy by the common law, yet by the canon and civil law (whereby they are to adjudge in this case, being of a will) does not import infamy except the cause for which it is inflicted be infamous: and herewith the civilians seemed to agree. And (after the counsel were withdrawn) for this cause only (as Rokesby and Powell afterwards told me) the matter itself not being infamous by the canon or civil law, the depositions of the witnesses were admitted for evidence, notwithstanding the judgment of pillory, by the whole Court, and the sentence in the prerogative reversed, and the will adjudged to be good.

BISHOP versus FOUNTAINE, BRADSHAW & TODD, IN CHANCERY.

Devise of a possibility not made good in equity. Contra. Fearne's Essay, 1st vol. 537, 543. Fearne's Essay, 2d vol. 522. 1 Hy. Blackstone 30. 3 Term Rep. 88.

Dr. Berry, seised in fee, devised the lands in question to Serjeant Fountaine and his heirs in trust, 1. To sell part for payment of his debts. 2. Till the debts paid, to pay 100l. per an. to his natural daughter Mary, and after the debts paid, 300l. per an. for her life; and if she have children, to convey successively to those children; if sons, at their full age; if daughters, to them all; but so as the husband she marries take the name of Berry. 3. For want of such issue, or if such issue die without issue, he devises Hemsworth and Kingly-Park, the lands principally in question, to be conveyed to the eldest son and heir of his nephew John Cater, and the heirs of such eldest son; and gives the said eldest son an annuity of 40l. per annum till such estate shall come to him; but if he claim any thing during the life of Mary or any of her issue, then both father and son to be excluded from having any thing out of his estate. The eldest son of John Cater was Anthony, who had two sisters, the defendants Bradshaw and Todd, daughters of John. Anthony died, and left issue John his son, who in the life of Mary devised the lands in question to the plaintiff, and died without issue. Mary after died without issue. The heir of [428] Fountaine conveyed the lands in question to Bradshaw and Todd, sisters of Anthony, and heirs of him and also of his father John. Bishop brings this bill to have the lands conveyed to him, supposing the equity to have this estate was vested in Anthony, and so well devised to him by John the son and heir of Anthony. But the Lord Keeper, assisted by the Chief Justice Treby, and Powell Baron of the Exchequer, after several arguments, and long consideration of the authorities cited on both sides, resolved that John had no estate devisable, but a mere possibility, during the life of Mary or any of her issue; and so the devise to the plaintiff void, and the lands well conveyed to the defendants Bradshaw and Todd, sisters and heirs of Anthony, and dismissed the bill, but without costs, provided he acquiesce, and give them no farther trouble in this Court.(1)

(1) In the case in 3 Term Rep. the testator gave his lands and hereditaments charged as in his will unto his brother T. L. until his son John or any other of his younger sons should attain the age of twenty-one years; and in case he should have no younger son that should live to attain said age, but should have only one son that should live to attain said age, then until such only son should attain said age upon trust, &c. And when and as soon as his said nephew John or any other of the younger sons of his said brother T. L. born or to be born should attain the age of twenty-one years, then he gave his lands and hereditaments charged as aforesaid unto his said nephew John, or unto such other son as for the time being should be a younger son of T. L. and should first attain his age of twenty-one

SANDERS against MARKE.

Debt lies on an agreement to pay the proportionable part of the charge of a suit at law, averring that such part came to a certain sum—for when the damages which were at first uncertain are by the averment reduced to a certainty, debt lies as well as covenant. Styl. 31, 133. Cro. El. 797. 1 Leon. 208. Ray. 14, 222. 2 Lev. 80. 2 Jo. 184. 2 Strange 1089.

Debt for 15l. 18s. 6d. and declares on a deed reciting that divers suits were like to arise between the Vicar of Shittlehampton and the plaintiff touching a modus decimand' infra parochiam pred', and that the vicar had sued the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court touching the same, which modus concerned all the parishioners; and the defendant being a parishioner agreed and promised to the plaintiff to pay and bear his proportionable part of all charges of the said suit and of all other suits by the said vicar touching that matter. And that the plaintiff in defence of the said suit and of all other suits by the vicar touching the said modus between such a time and such a time had expended 350l. And that the defendant had within the said parish lands of the yearly value of 53l. and that his proportion of the said charge amounted to 15l. 8s. 8d. whereof the defendant had notice, & licet sæpe requisitus had not paid it, per quod actio accrevit. The defendant pleads non est fact', on which verdict was for the plaintiff, and it was moved in arrest by Darnell, 1. That debt does not lie upon this agreement, it not being certain what the sum to be paid shall be; but it ought to be covenant. And he said it was not like the case of Johnson and Morgan, Cro. Eliz. 561, an agreement by bill to pay such a debt as his brother owed, and avers [430] that his brother owed 40l. for there it was writ at the foot of the bill that the years, and to the heirs and assigns of such younger son for ever. And in case his said brother should have but one son that should live to attain his age of twenty-one years, then he gave the same to him, his heirs and assigns for ever, with remainder to T. L. in fee. The testator died in the year 1734, and left T. L. his heir at law, and J. T. L. and John L. his two sons then living; John L. died under the age of twenty-one years, J. T. L. married, and made his will, and thereby gave all his worldly estate, &c. unto his wife, and died in 1765 before his father T. L. who never had any other son; upon his death in 1785, the widow of J. T. L. brought an ejectment in the Court of Common Pleas, and there it was argued that J. T. L. had but a possibility which could not be devisable, since any interest which he had was liable to be defeated by the birth of a younger son of T. L. his father, before whom he died: but the Court of Common Pleas gave judgment for the widow, and a writ of error being brought in the Court of King's Bench, that Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, and upon that occasion Lord Kenyon said, There are two kinds of possibilities, the one a bare possibility—that which the heir has from the curtesy of his ancestor, and which is nothing more than a mere hope of succession—such a possibility undoubtedly is not the object of disposition —the other a possibility or contingency like the present.—Executory devises are not naked possibilities, but are in the nature of contingent remainders, and there is no doubt but that such estates are transmissible and consequently devisable. Ashhurst, Just. said—The doubt appears to have arisen upon the word "having" in the Statute of Wills—and the old cases determined that a contingency like the present was not the subject of a devise—but that doctrine has been exploded in all the modern cases—the plain meaning of the statute is, that every person who has a valuable interest in lands shall have the power of disposing of it by his will. Buller, Just. said—It is a sound distinction which has been taken by my Lord Chief Justice between a bare possibility and a possibility coupled with an interest. Grose, Just. said—If the case in Levinz cannot be considered as law, the foundation on which the other cases is built is destroyed—and the modern cases have decided the other way—on the authority of which I think the point is now settled.

brother owed 40l. and though it is there said that judgment was given for the plaintiff, yet it appears afterwards in the same case, Cro. Eliz. 758, that the Court were divided, Walmsly and Kingsmill being for judgment for the plaintiff, but Anderson and Glanvill contra; and so here for the present judgment was stayed; but afterwards in the same term it being moved again, upon long debate judgment was given for the plaintiff: for when the damages which were at first uncertain are by the averment reduced to a certainty, debt lies as well as covenant.

The defendant pleads a frivolous plea, upon which the plaintiff in the scire facias demurs. And now for the defendant it was argued, that the whole plea is discontinued for want of the continuances from Trin. 6 until Trin. 7, and that the cause was thereby out of Court, so that the plaintiff could not have judgment. And the case was argued divers times in this term, and the Court gave the plaintiff leave to enter an imparlance-roll with the continuances with intent to have amended the plea-roll thereby; but it was afterwards at last resolved by the whole Court that the plea-roll itself was amendable without any need of an imparlance-roll, for the continuances, essoigns, &c. are the acts of the Court itself, and the Court might at common law at all times before judgment amend their own acts although in another term; but their judgments they cannot amend in another term, but only in the same term by the common law: and for authorities were cited 4 E. 3, 9 b. Replevin brought of four cows taken in Eastfield, parcel of the manor of Silke-Willoughby in com' Lincoln'. The defendant makes conusance, for that Sir Thomas Bernardistone was seised in fee of the manor, and demised Eastfield to Sims, and because the cows were damage feasant there, the defendant as bailiff to Sims makes conusance. The plaintiff in bar says, that long time before such taking, one Evers Armin was seised in fee of the manor, and devised it to Armin Bullingham in tail, who licensed the plaintiff to put in the cows, absque hoc that Sir Thomas Bernardistone was seised in fee modo & forma, &c. Upon which plea issue was joined, and by a special verdict it was found, that Mar. 30, 1668, Sir Michael Armin was seised in fee of this manor, inter alia of the manor of Pickworth; and being so seised, made his will in these words, viz. I desire my executors to take care of the payment of my debts; and because my debts and legacies are many, amounting to about 4600*l. a perfect schedule whereof is hereto annexed, therefore I devise my lands in Orton and Buttolph-Bridge to be sold. And left that my personal estate be not sufficient, I give to my executors full power to receive the rents and profits of my real estate, in trust to pay my debts and legacies.* And in another clause: If my debts and legacies being paid, Orton be not sold, I devise it to my servant Silvester for his life; but if it be sold, then Silvester to have a rent-charge of 50*l. per annum out of Pickworth and Willoughby for his life; and I desire my executors to see it paid.* And in another clause afterwards [432] he says; As concerning my manors of Pickworth and Willoughby, after my just debts and legacies paid, I devise them to my uncle Evers Armin for his life, without impeachment of waste; and in case he shall have issue male, to such issue male and his heirs for ever; but charged with 25*l. per ann. of the* 50*l. per ann. to Silvester; and after the death of my uncle Evers Armin, in case he leave no issue male, the manor of Pickworth to my nephew Sir Thomas Stiles and his heirs for ever, but charged with* 25*l. part of the* 50*l. per annum to Silvester. And as to the manor of Silke-Willoughby, in case my uncle Evers Armin die without issue male, I devise it to my nephew Thomas Bernardistone and his heirs for ever, but charged with* 25*l. part of the* 50*l. per annum to Silvester.* Then he devises another rent-charge to one Bristow, and then it follows, And I do earnestly desire my nephews Bernardistone and Stiles, to whom I have given the inheritance of my estates in Pickworth and Silke-Willoughby, to take care of the payments of the rent-charge. Then he devises several other rent charges to several other persons for their lives, and then he again says: I earnestly intreat my nephews Stiles and Bernardistone, to whom I have devised the inheritance of Pickworth and Willoughby, to take care they be paid. And then he devises money-legacies to be paid after his debts, and then he says, My debts are only these mentioned in the schedule. Then the jury find the schedule of debts, and that it amounts to 4600l. and that after the making of the will Sir Michael mortgaged the manor of Pickworth for the term of 1000 years for 4000l. and that all the debts in the schedule are paid, and also the legacies are paid, but the last mortgage for 4000l. is still unpaid, and that after the death of Sir Michael, and after the debts in the schedule and the legacies paid, Evers Armin, in Hill. 1675, suffered a common recovery of both the manors to the use of himself and his heirs; and 19 Octob. 1677, devised both the manors to Armin Bullingham in tail, and Jul. 1, 1680, he died without issue male, and Sir Thomas Bernardistone entered into Silke-Willoughby, and was seised prout lex, &c. and demised to Sims prout, whereupon Bullingham entered and gave licence to the plaintiff prout, &c. And if Sir Thomas Bernardistone was seised in fee as the conusant has alledged, then they find for the [433] conusant; and if not, for the plaintiff. This case was argued several times at Bar, and two questions were made, 1. Whether any estate was vested in Evers Armin before the mortgage of 4000l. paid? 2. If not, then whether the recovery suffered by Evers Armin, and the limitations of the use, and the devise made by him, were void? And it was resolved without any difficulty, that the estate was vested, for the debts were only to be paid before the vesting of the estate; for by several clauses and the whole scope of the will it appears that the debts to be paid by the provision of the will were the debts in the schedule only, all which were found to have been paid before the recovery suffered. But the great point was, whether Evers Armin took an estate-tail by the will, or only an estate for life? For it was said for the plaintiff, that although the first clause of the devise be to Evers Armin for his life, and in case that he had issue male, to such issue male and his heirs, it may be doubted whether Evers Armin took more than an estate for life with a contingent remainder in fee to his issue male, if he had any; and though thereto it was said that such devise to his issue male would be void for uncertainty what issue male he intended, and it was said that a devise to the issue male of a man had been adjudged void for that reason; yet by the subsequent clause, And as to the manor of Silke-Willoughby, in case my uncle Evers Armin dies without issue male, I devise it to my nephew Bernardistone and his heirs, &c. it makes the whole clear that Evers Armin had an estate-tail. Whereto it was answered, and at length resolved by the whole Court, that Evers Armin took only an estate for life. For, 1. The first limitation to him for life is without impeachment of waste, where the words without impeachment of waste were impertinent if he should have an estate-tail. See 2 Co. 23 b. where the exposition of a doubtful deed is made by these words. 2. By the first limitation the inheritance is not to him, but to his issue male and his heirs, 1 Co. Archer's case, and the words his heirs exclude the exception of uncertainty, for there must be an issue male and his heirs, and the issue male first born shall take the contingent remainder, and though there are twins, he who first comes shall take, as Esau and Jacob, although born at the same time, yet Esau had the birth-right, 1 Co. 95 b. limitation of a use to himself for life, the remainder to the use of his heirs, and the heirs females of the bodies of the said heirs, the heir took by purchase and had the inheritance, [434] and the ancestor only an estate for life. 3. It is two or three times mentioned in the will, I earnestly desire my nephews Stiles and Bernardistone, to whom I have devised the inheritance of my estate, to take care of the payment of the annuities; which proves his intent that Evers Armin was not to have any inheritance, but only for life, (and there was no probability of his having any issue, he being then above 70 years of age) but that the inheritance should be to Stiles and Bernardistone. 4. The last words, And if Evers Armin die without issue, are not to be taken substantively and absolutely, but relatively to what he had said before, viz. that if Evers dies without issue, that Stiles and Bernardistone should take the fee as was before appointed; and it cannot be intended that he by those oblique words would destroy by implication the estate expressly devised before to the issue male of Evers and his heirs, see Hob. A devise of all my lands in A. to B. and his heirs, and afterwards in the same will is a devise of all my lands in D. and elsewhere to C. and his heirs; those general words elsewhere shall not destroy by implication the express devise to A. before; so Dyer 173, a devise to one for life, remainder to A. and the heirs males of his body, and if A. dies without heirs of his body, &c. the word heirs shall not be taken generally, but such heirs as were mentioned before; viz. heirs males; so Dyer 130, 131, an express devise to one shall not be altered by words of implication to another, Cro. Eliz. 15, 16. Mo. pl. 269, the like case; so Mo. 801. Cro. Cha. 185, Spalding against Spalding, a devise to his son John, and the heirs of his body in fee, and after the death of Alice his wife, if John die living Alice, then William shall be his heir; John dies living Alice, leaving a son: William shall not have the land; for the words, if John die living Alice, in the latter part, shall be expounded by the first part, viz. die without heirs of his body living Alice. And after that the Court were agreed to give judgment for the avowant upon these points. Justice John Powel jun. of Glocester, raised another point, viz. that this was a contingent remainder to the issue of Evers and his heirs, and so are the remainders to Stiles and Bernardistone, and that all were destroyed by the recovery suffered by Evers Armin before they happened; and that they were contingent remainders, and not executory devises, he cited a case between Plunket and Holmes, Mich. 13 Car. 2, in B. R. whereupon this case was adjourned to be farther argued upon [435] this point; and afterwards it was twice argued upon this point, viz. whether it was a contingent remainder or an executory devise? And afterwards, before any judgment given; the parties agreed and divided the estate.(1)

HILARY TERM, IN THE SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF WILLIAM THE THIRD. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

REYNOLDSON AND OTHERS against THE BISHOP OF LONDON AND BLAKE.

The Act of Parliament concerning the union of churches in London, does not affect the title of the patrons, who if they had been usurped upon before the Act of Parliament, must recover their right by writ of right of advowson.

A quare impedit to present to the church of St. Andrew Wardrobe, and declares that by the Act 22 Car. 2, for rebuilding of London it was enacted, that the parishes of St. Andrew Wardrobe and St. Anne Blackfryers should be united, and St. Andrew Wardrobe to be the church to be rebuilt, and to be the parish-church, and that the patrons should present by turns, the first presentation to be by the patron of the church, the endowment whereof was of the greatest value, that at the time of the Act the endowment of the church of St. Andrew Wardrobe was of greater value, quam dos prædict' Vicar' de St. Anne Blackfryers. And that Jul. 1, 25 Car. 2, Cade the incumbent of St. Andrew Wardrobe died, and the King being patron presented Stoning, which was the first avoidance after the Act, and that Stoning died, whereby it belonged to the plaintiffs patrons of Blackfryers to present ut in turno suo, and that the defendants hindered them. The bishop says he claims nothing but as Ordinary, and Blake demurs upon the declaration, and now two exceptions [436] were taken to the declaration, 1. For that it is said that the endowment of the church of St. Andrew Wardrobe was of greater value, quam dos prædict' Vicar. de St. Anne Blackfryers, and there is no Vicarage of St. Anne Blackfryers mentioned before, and so they had failed in making their title; for if it does not appear which of the churches is of greatest value, it does not appear that the King has presented in his turn, nor that this turn belongs to them. Cro. Eliz. 824. Cro. Cha. 465, Cholmly's case, Cro. Ja. 149, Jennings versus Markham. That the prædict' where no such thing is mentioned before makes the whole void. 2. Supposing that the prædict' only is void, yet the declaration is not good; for ecclesia and vicaria are different things, the one is the whole rectory, and the other is a thing derived out of the rectory: and the statute speaks only of churches, viz. that the first presentation shall be by the patron of the church whose endowment is of the greatest value. And though it is afterwards said in the declaration, that the rectory is appropriate, and that they claim by a grant of the advowson of the vicarage to them, this will not serve them, it coming out of time, as in Plo. Com. 563. 15 E. 4 & 24 a. Hob. 71, 72. And the traverse ought to have been, absque hoc that the endowment of the church of St. Andrew Wardrobe was of greater value than the endowment de prædict' Vicaria St. Annæ Blackfryers; and this could not be, for that no Vicaria de St. Annæ Blackfryers is well alledged before in this part of the declaration upon which the traverse ought to be taken; and so the defendants are deprived of traversing that by which the plaintiff makes his title. But the Court ruled judgment for the plaintiff, and they held that the prædict' only was void, and not that the whole sentence was void thereby. 2. That though ecclesia and vicaria are different things, yet seeing upon the whole record it appears that the Rectory of Blackfryers is appropriate, the Vicarage of Blackfryers shall be taken to be a church within the Act. But then another exception was taken to the declaration, viz. that it does not appear therein that the plaintiffs, or any by whom they claim, had presented to, or ever were in possession of, the vicarage, and that such presentation ought always to be alledged in a quare impedit. Whereto it was said, that this case being on an union by an Act of Parliament which appoints that the patrons shall present by turns, and he of the greater value to present first, it needed not in this case. Whereto the Court said, that the Act did not intend [437] to restore a title to one who had lost it by usurpation, but to leave the title as it was before the Act; and perhaps here had been an usurpation, and then the usurper is the patron within the Act, and not the plaintiffs till they had regained their right by a writ of right of advowson; and thereupon it was adjourned to be farther argued, and afterwards judgment was given for the plaintiff upon this point, and affirmed in error in B. R. but both judgments were afterwards reversed by error in domo procerum.

In a fine sur done, grant and render, the cognizee is but an instrument, who has a seisin only for an instant, which is not sufficient to entitle his wife to dower.* Cruise's Essay, vol. 1, 69.

Dower, and upon nunquam seisie que dower pleaded, and thereon a special verdict, the case was, William Duncomb tenant for life, the remainder to J. S. and his heirs for the life of William, the remainder in tail to William, viz. to the heirs males of his body, the remainder to George Duncomb the now tenant. William married the demandant and died without issue, and whether the demandant should be endowed? was the question; viz. whether the remainder to J. S. and his heirs for the life of William Duncomb be such an interposing estate between the life of William and the remainder to the heirs of his body, that the wife should not be endowed? And for the demandant it was said, that the whole estate was really in William, and the remainder to J. S. for the life of William was no more than a possibility; so that if William had committed a forfeiture, J. S. might take advantage thereof for preservation of remainders. But in the mean time the whole estate is executed in W. D. as in Lewis Bowles's case the whole estate-tail was executed in the father 'till the birth of the first son; and though by this possibility the estate for the life of William is not merged, yet the estate-tail is executed to such a purpose that the wife shall be endowed, as 50 E. 3, 4, 5. Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct, with a remainder to him in general tail, marries a second wife; she shall be endowed, though both estates stand distinct in the husband, but the Court upon the first argument hastily gave judgment for the tenant.

HATTER against ASHE.

S. C. Salkeld 413. 1 Lord Raym. 84.

A prebendary makes a lease for life, habend' a datu. It is more reasonable to expound the words so as to make the lease good, and therefore a datu held to mean a delivery, and thus to include the day of the execution of the indenture. Co. Lit. 46 b. 2 Salk. 625, 627. 1 Salk. 44. 6 Mod. 215. Aleyn 77. 2 Bulst. 83, 305. 3 Bulstr. 203. 1 Wilson 176. 2 Wilson 166. Powel Essay on Powers, 505. 1 Ld. Ray. 280. 2 Ld. Ray. 1242. Cowper 714. In this last case, A. under a power reserved in his marriage settlement to lease for 21 years in possession, but not in reversion, grants a lease to his only daughter to commence from the day of the date; this was adjudged a good lease. Lord Mansfield commented upon all the authorities on this point, and concluded with saying: The ground of the opinion and judgment which I now deliver is, that "from" may in the vulgar sense, and even in the strictest propriety of language, mean either inclusive or exclusive. That the parties necessarily understood and used it in that sense which made their deed effectual; that the Courts of Justice are to construe the words of parties so as to effectuate their deeds and not to destroy them; more especially where the words themselves abstractedly may admit of either meaning.

Ejectment by the successor of a prebendary, wherein upon a special verdict, the case was this: A prebendary makes a lease for life habend' a datu; and if it should bind the successor? was the question: and it was argued at the Bar three times in three several terms: and for the plaintiff it was said, that a datu is all one with a die datus, and 5 Co. 21, Clayton's case, and divers other cases cited to that purpose; also here the livery being the same day the indenture bears date, it was said the livery was void, because it could not expect, and the term not being commenced 'till the day after the date, the livery being made the same day the indenture bears date, it was made before the term had any commencement; and so it was void. 2. They said, that the lease was void, being a lease in reversion, and it being not to commence in interest 'till the day after the making, or the date, was not a good lease within the words of the statute of 18 Eliz. c. 10, which does not make any leases by ecclesiastical persons good, if made for more than 21 years from the time of the making; and here the time of the making and the day thereof is excluded; for the lease is not a lease from the time of the making, [439] nor to commence upon that day, but the day following. Whereto it was answered for the defendant, that in propriety of speech datus or dated in English is the very act of the delivery of the deed, for datus in Latin being participially understood signifies given or delivered; and datus substantively taken is in English the date or the delivery, which signifies the same thing; and in Clayton's the six months were the most extensively expounded for making of the deed good, viz. that it being enrolled within six months after the day of the date or teste, it should be good notwithstanding; and all the said day shall be taken exclusively according to common parlance so as to make the conveyance good; but to make construction of a word which has an equivocal sense, as here (the date may be taken either for the day the deed bears teste, and so exclude the whole day of the date, as in common parlance oftentimes the date of an indenture is taken for the day the indenture bears date, and by this exposition the deed would be void, or it may be taken in its proper signification, viz. the very date or delivery of the deed, and so the lease is good) so as to make the lease void is unreasonable; but it is more reasonable to expound the words, so as to make the lease good, and not to make all that the parties did when they made the lease void and to no purpose; and words shall always be so taken, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. And after that the case had been several times argued, and the authorities of Dyer 288 b. 5. Co. 2 Clayton's case. Latch. 61 Mo. pl. 128. Roll. 2 Abr. 520, 54. 1 & 3 Bulst. 177, 203. Mo. pl. 128. Dy. 286 a. Cro. Ja. 135, cited and considered, it was at last in this term adjudged by Nevil Justice and the two Justices Powel senior and junior, for the defendant, the Chief Justice Treby being now of the contrary opinion, though he also was at first of the same opinion; but now he had changed his opinion, and was not present when the judgment was given, having (as was thought) purposely absented himself. Note also, that Powell junior was at first of opinion for the plaintiff, but afterwards changed it and was for the defendant, even as the Chief Justice had done who had changed his opinion and became at last of opinion for the plaintiff; such a variety and change of opinion had there been in this case. Pemberton, Levinz, &c. for the defendant, Lutwyche, Birch and Wright for the plaintiff.

On which plea the plaintiff demurred, and shewed for cause, that the traverse made the plea double, and was impertinent, and that no such value could be set upon guineas; and the plea was adjudged ill, and a repleader ordered by the Court wherein the traverse should be omitted, and the plea be a tender of 45s. and issue taken on the sufficiency thereof. And so note, a repleader awarded by the Court after a demurrer and argument, which I have known denied divers times of late, and that no repleader should be after a demurrer, but only after an issue joined; and yet in former times repleaders have been allowed after demurrer, and so it was Hill. 26, 27 Car. 2, B. In assize the recognitors must first appear, but shall not be demanded until the assize be arraigned per Curiam. The assize was for the office of clerk del Treasury and warrants a keeper of the writs & records of the Court of B. R. which was time out of mind used and approved. The Chief Justice of B. R. for the time being had a grant with all fees, profits &c. appertaining to any one person or two persons for term of their lives and the life of the survivor of them, and that B. J. is an admittance of the writ to be good, and therefore as on the view grant they had per Curiam a special imparlance; for the abatement of the former writ is not their faults, and this is for the advantage of the demandant that he should not be prejudiced by preposterous pleading. Also per Curiam the very indenture of return must be the ground for the Court to proceed in this motion or a writ out of the Chancery. And by Maynard the priviledg goeth 20 days before the sessions of Parliament; ad quod non fuit responsum.

Prohibition.

Sir Ed. Turner Attorney of the Duke of York moved against prohibition to the Court of Admiralty, because the sentence by the assent of the parties is there given 8 years agon, but notwithstanding this, Foster Ch. J. and Twisden held, that the Court ought, ex debito justitiæ, to grant the pro-[4]-hibition where it appears to the Court, as here, that they have no jurisdiction, notwithstanding judgment there given, if execution be not actually done, which was agreed and prohibition awarded nisi.

Sewers.

Johnson moved to quash an order of the commissioners of sewers of Bromely-Marsh, because made on a bare suggestion of one of the commissioners. 2. None of the quorum are mentioned. 3. It is not alledged that the defendants are chargeable: and Tourner to the same effect, that the order is felo de se, because it is said, that if J. S. only shall repair, he shall have x.li. allowed to him in respect of 80 that he hath expended. Wild Serjant contra, That the order is good, and this suggestion is but a complaint which may be made by any, and if a private man makes it of his own head, yet the commissioners may allow his expence; and though J. S. ought to repair, yet he was not bound to make it so ample; also Bromely would have a profit by it (and Twisden agreed, that contribution shall be made by him that hath any manifest benefit, but this must be on presentment of the jury) and although any six may make a presentment as well upon their own view, as when by a jury, yet here the persons appointed shall not make it. Also by Tourner this is done by the commissioners after that J. S. of his own head hath repaired the breach, yet per Curiam the danger being apparent and of necessity to be amended. As a house may be pulled down on danger of fire, and the order recited this, and the benefit of the marshes thereby: wherefore respit the award until view of a copy of the order. Windham Justice said, that the commissioners of sewers shall have as much favour as may be, and they would not quash it.

Amendment. Hetley 119.

Stroud junior moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case on promise because it is to pay arrearages on account of money of the defendant and this on the Hub. 170, pleaded agreement parol for the tythes with the parson as long as he shall be parson, this is good only for a year, though it be with the party who is a parishioner. But in issue on this agreement after verdict no repleader shall be, no more than in issue on payment on single bill, which in it self is not good: per Windham Justice, to which the Court accords: but Twisden said, If the issue on payment on single bill be found for the defendant, its doubtful if a repleader be not to be awarded: and he doubted whether the grantee cannot agree with the grantor of rent that he may retain his rent for several years, which Powis who moved for repleader conceived could not be good. 14. STAMPTS CASE. Siderf. 40, pl. 2.

Mandamus.

Yorkshire Turner, on Dy. 109, opposed a mandamus for the office of steward of a court baron and leet, because 'tis but a private office, as a parish clerk, which Trin. 17 Car. 1, B. R. was denyed and therefore one shall not have this but only to be sworn when he is elected. And in Trafords case, Trin. 1655, for usher of a school in a colledge it was denied: also the steward of court baron hath fee for the which he may have assize. Wild Serj. There is none to whom the writ can be directed. Twisden Justice said, that in Trafords case it was expresly adjudged, that a mandamus would not lye for the steward of a court baron sole; but per Allen a leet is also the inheritance of a private person, which he may grant as he pleaseth: but, by the Court, the lord hath inheritance only in the profits, but the office is publick for execution of ju-[6]-stice: Windham, The proper remedy to remove a steward of court baron is an action upon the case; for this is private, and he is not Judge there, but the suitors, to which the Court accord. Foster Chief Justice, A leet is derived of the sheriffs tourn which is publick, and the mandamus is not for the profits, but for the place it self. Mallet, Steward of Copyhold Courts may administer oath, yet for that alone a mandamus shall not be granted; and it was denyed.

15.

Labourers.

Nota. Justices of the peace have conusance of apprentices bound by indenture or otherwise, as well by private persons as by the overseers of the poor: but the justices, per Curiam preter Twisden, may make provision weekly for them, as for bastards as for the time past, but not for time future above weekly: sed adjournatur.

16. RAWLINS against ———. May 3.

Slandre.

Action upon the case for slanderous words: I will indict R. Rawlins at the next sessions, and he shall lose his estate, and it shall go hard with him to save his life, but his estate he shall surely lose for marking of my sheep. Wild Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment after verdict in action upon the case for these words, because that some part of them are not actionable. Jones for the plaintiff, All the words together amount to a charge of felony as well as if he had said, the plaintiff had committed such an offence for which he shall lose his estate. Apres.

Record. Apres.

Nota. Per Twisden, The defend' in B. R. ought to bring in the postea when it is come into the office, but the plaintiff is to bring it in to the office and then give notice of it to the defendant, quod Wild neg. the course is as Twisden said.

[7] 18. KNIGHT versus DANCER. Ejectment.

Seisin.

In evidence to a jury it was observed, that temporal possession is given by induction without taking of esplees per Twisden and all. 2. The ejectment was 20 Apr. the Parliament began 25, and confirms the possession until the 25 December; yet by the Court that is intended only as to the perception of profits, quod Maynard pro def. neg. and by them they that are in void livings shall be adjudged incumbents ab initio, but not where there is a title in being, then it shall be only as to the profits. Twisden, If the ejectment had been after the Parliament and before the 25 of December, there the defendant may plead not guilty; but being begun before the Parliament, there is only a cessat executio by the Act till the 25 of December. But 3. Maynard moved for a special verdict, and the Court said, that they could not deny it to the Kings Serjeant. Also he said, that damages must be paid unto the time of the ejectment, which shall be contrary to the intent of the Act, sed Curia e contra. 4. Nota per Twisden, Original record must be brought in by the clerk himself, but a copy may be brought in by any one. 5. The title being to a rectory by Dr. Griffith lessor of the plaintiff by a presentation of the Earl of Shrewsbury who (as was proved by the roll of estreats of the clerk of assize signed by the Judge and delivered into the pipe and thereupon an inquisition and process made) was a recusant at that time; and this was allowed for good evidence, the very record of the Assizes at that time when the earl was found a recusant being burnt in the Temple, after in 1649, which was proved by Mr. Ceely keeper of them as associate to the clerk of assize, but he residing on the Nisi Prius side, was not required to answer to the particular time when this recusancy was found. 6. Primer possession (though it will not make a plenerty, as Greens case and Sir H. Gaudyes case Hub. 302, against the true patron yet) though it be void, and the collation to it also as to him, yet it shall be good against any stranger who hath no title; but this point being also waved, 7. fuit insist that the plaintiff having no title, the defendant is confirmed in by the Act of 12 Car. 2, but the main point insisted on was the conviction of the Earl of Shrewsbury, which Wild Serjeant pro plaintiff urged was not full upon 3 months between the 1 April and the 6 of September and time for two proclamations. 2. One of the estreat rolls was crossed of the like conviction as aforesaid, and was the ori-[8]-ginal of the estreats, the other being but a certificate thereof by the Judge (but both were signed by the Judge) which was warrant for the clerk of the pipe to proceed; and both rolls are delivered into the Exchequer upon the oath of the clerk of assizes, but the rolls are that plaint. for 3 months following 1 Apr. 17 Car. 1, that Crost. for 3 months apres 1 November the same year, whereas the conviction was 17 Car. 1, en September: but per Maynard, There being a conviction that shall remain till it be reversed by conformity, which Finch Sol. al R. admits as to the King, but as to any other person it ought to be good, or at least, not void. 8. It was agreed per Curiam and Maynard that summed up the evidence of the defend. that the Act 12 Car. 2 takes away any primer possession without title. Also that the recusant cannot avoid conviction (de facto only) until conformity. Wind. If one be indicted for recusancy 1 April and convicted 6 September, that may be good quod Curia neg. for the indictment must be for three months absence, which is not here; if it be otherwise, the recusant may avoid it; and per Twisd. and the Court he may do it before conformity by the statute, but not against the K. As Finch aforesaid: Allen pro defend. The conviction may be by appearance and confession or otherwise, as well as upon proclamation quod Curia concessit. Also per Powis pro defendant, The conviction, if the recusant conform not, shall have relation to the indictment. And per Maynard pro defendant, The certificate of estreat is in July 18 Car. 1, for three months before the conviction, at that Assizes, which per Curiam relates to 17 Car. 1. Contra Maynard, who said, that the certificate relates only to the time of the making of it, being unde convictus est, which might be at any time before. Yet per Finch pro plaintiff le certificat is coram justiciariis pred. which shall be intended at the same Assizes. Also although the recusant himself cannot avoid it, yet the persons claiming under him may avoid any title made against him but his own recusancy. Sir Jeoffrey Palmer the Kings Attorney said pro plaintiff, that presentation by a recusant is presentation de facto to make a plenerty, as Chancellour d'Oxfords case. Twisden, That which is certified in the Exchequer by the clerk is only wanting of the record, but in evidence the jury may be satisfied that there is a record by other proof; but how two certificates of estreats should come in he knew not: the jury upon the whole was directed to find whether the earl was convicted or not per Curiam seriatim, and refer the rest to the discretion of the Court. The jury found the earl a recusant convict.

21. THOMAS HOWARD. 30 Pl. 53.

Siderf. 41, pl. 7. Ch. de Pardon Br. 10.

He brought in the Kings pardon being after attainder of murder, which suggested, that upon the trial there was no evidence to prove it to be of malice fore-thought, and that the wound was not given by him but by another fled: also that the coroner found it but manslaughter, and the indictment, trial and removal were recited in it: also it was a pardon of 3 joyntly and severally by particular name, but not having a special writ of allowance (although the non-obstante was that it should be allowed, explained, &c. in all Courts, yet) per Curiam without a special command, the continual practice of this Court hath been not to allow it without a special writ. And Mallet said, This is sufficient for the prisoner but not for the Court. And per Twisden, That statute that saith such an act shall be allowed, that must be intended according to law; and the practice of the Court was affirmed by all the councel at the Bar: but on Morgan & Egertons case le Court agree, that the King may pardon murder per non obstante without special words (de murdris) which this wanted notwithstanding the statute and Stiles 377, pl. 819, e contrà.

22. WEDEN against BALDWIN, &C.

Devise. Siderf. 55, pl. 23.

In ejectment special verdict on not guilty, find that J. B. and his wife, and the heirs of the baron was seized of lands capite, and J. B. was seized of the soccage lands in [10] question, and devised to his wife the remainder to H. B. in fee, &c. Powis for the plaintiff, The case is only lands in capite are granted to baron and fem for life, the remainder to him in fee; and he being seized of other lands soc-devised the whole, which he conceived good, 1. Because the husband dyed not tenant to the King nor had any thing in capite at the time of his death: for he dyed seized in fee only of a bare remainder expectant upon the life of the wife, 2 Co. 60, 61, for which he shall not pay any heriot, 24 Ed. 3. Heriot, f. 3, 5. Dy. 237. The wife being sole tenant, and therefore, 2. This remainder will not hinder his demise of this land, 9 Co. 96, 139 b. 134 b. Soccage, 2 Co. 92, 93. Such an heir shall not be in ward, 32 H. 8, cap. 1. This is the reason of the express proviso in the statute, because it was not so at c. law: but the stat. 34 H. 8, explanatory 10 Co. 81, of a remainder, must be intended of a remainder that is immediate to the particular estate as a reversion but not other: 7 Ed. 3, 51 b. pl. 29, neither was at c. law. Mr. Howel pro defendant was not ready, which J. Twisden rebuked, because it was in a concilium of the last term, and it is not expected that one should answer the objections of the other at the same time, but only shew their own judgments and leave the rest till afterwards. Also he said, that it is alledged that J. B. was seized of certain lands in capite, and doth not in all the verdict say how much, which is uncertain, and not helped by any special conclusion in the verdict: and if there be not two parts descended, this can never come in question; special conclusions will only help the faults of amendments of lives or matters of form, which the Court agreed: adjornatur. Post.

23. COOKER against GARDNER.

Prohibition.

Prohibition to the Great Sessions at Mongomery on suggestion put in writing, that the matter was without equity and only tryable at common law. And this although that Court should admit their jurisdiction, is sufficient for a prohibition per Curiam, but it appearing they had cognizance, it was denyed. Post.

24. CHAMBERS APRES. 62 Pl. 97.

Prohibition.

Allen moved for a prohibition to the Admiralty notwithstanding an appeal to the Commissioners Delegates, and sentence in that appeal in 1653 confirmed by Parliament. [11] Charleton shewed cause against it, but the Court would give no rule without the suggestion put in writing and answered to, but conceived that as the case is, that prohibition will not be granted pending the appeal (though a supersedeas to the Admiral jurisdiction) and so there was no sentence there at the time of the Act. Yet by Twisden, that is quoad executionem only; but the Act is general of all proceedings, &c. that they shall be confirmed: Goldsb. 119, pl. 4.

25. BRADFORD against BLOODWORTH.

Bankrupt.

In ejectment special verdict find that Sir J. Harison being seized, became a bankrupt; and in 44 and 45, and 46 and 49, at the sute of three several persons was utlawed: and in 48 Sir J. H. sold to the lessor of the plaintiff bona fide, and the jury have not found him that he was utlawed in 45 in fraudem creditorum, and to that intent; which by Wild Serj. pro pl. is necessary, for otherwise a man shall not be a bankrupt. Also the parties ought to have notice of his utlawry: also admitting both times 43, and 46, the last whereof is 7 years before the suing out of the commission, which was not till 1653.

Neud. for defendant, that the bankrupt Sir J. H. is within this Act 21 Jac. 5, for the sale by Sir J. Harison in 48 was within 5 years, which is sufficient to bring him within it. 13 Eliz. c. 4. The estate of persons in debt to the King, is subject from the time of the debt due, which is like to the stat. of 21 Jac. 2. Co. 55, 26. F. N. B. 150 Q. The second reason is, that the creditors title is eign to the purchasers, and are first provided for by all the laws of bankrupts being, Com. 59. 1 Co. 131, for advancement of trade and shall be beneficially taken. 3. It is in the creditors election, as the case is, to take out a commission when they will, for the proviso being to take off the benefit of former laws, is like the Stat. of Limitations, which shall be so: as 4 H. 7 (Com. 379. 3 Co. 79) of Entry. It may be within 5 years or after. And Sir John Lakes case C. B. 4 Ca. 1, in battery of his servant the plaintiff shall recover for any battery within 6 years before the action and so, 1 Cr. 139. A 4th reason, This stat. being to bar rights, are like distinctive conditions, 8 Co. 90, which shall be taken strictly: and so if the bankrupt sell his lands within the 5 years, that shall save the creditors to 5 years after; else the soonest bankrupt is in the best condition, which is an inconvenience: for he might as well have purchased a day after he became a bankrupt, 1 Cr. 49. A 5th reason: The Stat. of Bankrupt by express pro-[12]-viso are to be construed beneficially, 1 Cr. 568. And though the first act of a bankrupt doth intitle the creditors yet, they are only bound by 5 years after notice of such act. Nor doth the purchaser incur any other hazard than he that buyeth a defective title: but the creditors can have no other remedy than this for their money. Mich. 1655, in C. B. Rot. 484, Jellif versus Horn. A grasier copyholder in fee 10 May 1643 became a bankrupt, and in 49 became a bankrupt again, and in 52 he doth sell on a commission in 51, which was 10 years after the first cause of bankruptsie; after argument al Bar & Bench adjudged for the creditors, that they had a good title against the purchasers. Per Curiam, The proviso is express, that the commission must be sued within 5 years after some time when he became a bankrupt; and his being so after the sale, that will not hinder, that if the commission be not sued within 5 years of his becoming a bankrupt, & then they can only defeat all sales made within the 5 years, but not afterwards: and upon this ground was the judgment aforesaid in the C. B. for that point was, whether if a man continue bankrupt 20 years, he is always lyable or no, which was adjudged for the plaintiff by all the Court. Nisi, &c.

Finch for the defendant cited Sir Simon Bennets case 3 Car. 1. 1. That a baronet is a dignity, and though not in the stat. yet if it had, it is not within the word knight. Twisden: Kt. of the Bath shall not have 2 chaplains within the stat. Windham; Baronet is by patent. But Portmans ca. 1 Ed. 6, 7 Co. 27, cited by Finch, is express, that this being the parties own act, shall abate his writ: but whether Knight of the Bath shall be included within the general word knight, is the question. Forfeiture. Latch. 227.

In evidence to a jury at the Bar. Twisden, The lord after acceptance of rent cannot enter upon the lessee of a copyholder. 2. The lord leaseth the freehold of a copyhold to J. S. per Curiam this is good betwixt J. S. and the lord. 3. The lord may be admitted to give evidence for the lessee or copyholder, though the Court would have spared him had there been other. But it is strange, by Windham, that the lord should reserve a rent upon such a lease (though it may be intended for the copyholders benefit) and the Court agreed it could not. 4. That a copy of the act of the Court is enough to prove a man administrator, for there is only a commission goeth out to swear the party, but no particular authority, by Twisden & Curiam; but yet such copy ought to recite the authority of the Court or persons that give it: and unless the authority be good and allowed, such copy shall not be read (which of it self by Foster is a kind of allowance) and this upon the doubt of a grant by Dr. Ayloff. 5. On Cromwell & Giles case: I thank my husband he hath done kindly by me in giving me this land and my son after me. This was a good assent by fem executrix to take as demisee: and by Windham, The not bringing a writ of dower may be taken for an assent after her death. Also if she saith that the heirs (for whom lands are devised in trust) shall have them undivided, it is a good assent. Southwards case, that after the death of my wife the land goeth to the Holloways, adjudged a good assent by the husband of Holloway, executor to a devise to Holloway and the heirs of the testator. The principal case was H. devised to his wife for life in lieu of her dower, and after her decease to two in trust for J. D. during life, and after of the male heirs of the testators eldest son, this being of a term after the death of the tru-[16]-stees, by Windham, shall go to the heirs of the testator. But for the length and intricacy of the case, the Court directed a special verdict. 6. Devise of a term to one for life, the remainder to the first issue male by Windham & Curiam is void to the issue, and the executors of the tenant for life shall have it; and they all agreed not to exceed Mannings case. One title, Child & Baylies case, 2 Cr. and Jenkins & Gibbons case in the Exchequer 1655. 51. THE KING against READING. May 9.

Serement.

In an indictment for murder, the Court refused to admit proof of a copy of an order of the commissioners of sewers (under which the prisoner claimed benefit) upon oath, but read it upon the bare affirmation of the witnesses that it was a true copy. 2. The prisoner was said to murder J. S. under colour of authority, which by Twisden and Foster was not to be confirmed by the act, but to make an act murder only by reason the authority is afterward made void is unreasonable, to which the others agreed. 3. Though a wound may be cured, yet if the party dyeth thereof, it's murder; and if the act be unlawful, it matters not who gave the first blow. 4. In trover and conversion, Winnington moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff saith, that he is one of the attorneys Curiæ domini Regis in the said Court to hold pleas before the King, which by him is not the office of an attorney; but per Curiam this is applicable to the stile of the Court only and not to him: judgment pro querente.

51. RICH against HALL. Trespass.

Damages. Trespass. 2 Leonard, 148, pl. 18. 1 Brownl. 42, pl. 216.

In evidence to a jury it was observed, 1. The trespass being for fishing and cutting 2 acres of oziers, which being several damages, ought to be so, per Curiam. 2. H. leased a river and the land on both sides, yet per Curiam, the right to fish also remains in the lord, as of a common high-way, warren, &c. And though he had granted the sole fishing, yet where the grantees land lyeth not on both sides, he cannot prescribe for it probably, though it be not impossible that he that hath land on both sides, may not have any fishing. 3. The proof for the plaintiff tenant of the mannor was by a court-leet-book by presentment of the homage, not per juratores of any certain place; & so it was supplyed by witnesses. 4. Trespass lyeth not by one tenant in com. against another, nor for a several fishing. 5. Presentment without execution of it by levying the assessment, is no evidence. 6. The verdict being only of fact is properly the juries, and not void tho contrary to directions of the Court, but if any matter of law be directed of that, the Court may reprove a jury, and they find it in pain of [19] attaint. 7. Though a man may accept parcel by copy, yet he may give evidence for more, because the rest is not thereby destroyed, per Curiam, if it be by prescription.

Custom. Record.

In evidence to a jury it was observed, 1. That by custom of Woodstock freehold ancient demean as well as copyhold passeth by surrender and copy, and shall descend to the youngest son or daughter. 2. Decree under the Exchequer Seal (which by Twisden is in the nature of a judgment) yet though it recite the bill and answer, that is not sufficient evidence. By Allen council with the plaintiff contra, by Foster Ch. Just. & Curiam. And by Twisden, Decretal order under seal, which recites all the proceedings on exemplification under the Great Seal hath been allowed to be read; but by Allen, not unless it have the bill and answer, which Windham agreed: but by Twisden, Where the decree is produced only in paper, then the bill and answer ought to be adjoyned, but not so when the decree is under seal: and in C. B. Stiffe against Stiffe, the Judges admitted a decree to have been under seal, and yet would not allow it without bill and answer. And by Allen, Its usual to disallow such decrees, but an examplification of the Chancery, per Curiam, [22] always recites the bill and answer. Moreton Serjeant said, he never did see the seal of any Court denyed to be given in evidence. 3. In debt against assignee for rent, the defendant pleaded assignment of the term before rent arrear by the assignee by assent of the plaintiff, the plaintiff traversed the assent, which by Allen is ill, this being against the assignee, in whom only is realty of contract, which is gone by assignment and so his assent not to purpose because the assent of the plaintiff to the assignee (the personal contract being determined) is not material, and this might have been demurred to; or it appearing the plaintiff hath no title, the defendant shall have judgment; for though the plaintiff hath not confessed the assignment, yet he having let that slip and traversed a surplusage, a repleader ought to be: the assignment being with notice, but without assent. Nota. (Replications per bene & verum est, are not usual here as in C. B). Also by Twisden, On immaterial issue the Court can give no judgment, which Foster Ch. Claim within 5 years after the death of cestuy que vy when lease was to commence, is necessary on Saffins case: but by Glyn, [25] the fine being in pursuance of a trust, cannot destroy any lease made by cestuy que trust, which Twisden, Foster and the Court agreed. And though a fine by cestuy que trust to his lessee do not extinguish the trust, yet it is not safe. Twisden, A lease to the use of me and my heirs is not altered by fine to the same use, nor any claim necessary. 3. Surrender. Apres. He cannot distrein or have debt before. Forfeiture.

In evidence to a jury it was doubted if (upon a custom to surrender to two copyholders out of court) a surrender to the heirs of a copyholder before admittance were good: Twisden conceived it was, Foster and Windham absent. 2. The not appearing at a court being a forfeiture, a copyholder said, if it were a court, he would appear; if none, he would not. Though this appear to be a court, this is no forfeiture, because no wilful contempt, by Twisden. And so where a copyholder hath license to fell (though it were repeald by the grant of the lord of his interest before the felling) yet this is no forfeiture though the license be determined by it. 3. Whether a lessee for years may grant a license to a copy-[26]-holder to fell timber, was doubted: but by Twisd. Though it be good against himself, yet it is void against the lessor, because the license is derived out of the interest, and so can be of no greater extent than it, and the assignee of the lessee may take advantage of it. 4. Whether the admittance of an heir of a copyholder by dominus pro tempore be a dispensation with a precedent forfeiture; Mallet and Twisden conceived it was. 5. To say that J. J. said, that whatever his own opinion were, he would never deny a special verdict desired by any serjeant. And by Windham, tenancy escheat can never again be parcel of the mannor, nor can any man have the same lands in fee, and yet hold them of 2 mannors, though the land may be parcel of one, and the services of another mannor, which the others agreed. Post.

Depositions in Chancery after the death of the party, shall not be allowed against other parties, though one claim from him that so is deposed for by Wild Serjeant for the plaintiff; but the Court allowed it to be read, because the defendant could not be made a party to the decree betwixt the plaintiff and him under whom the defendant claim by a debt subsequent to the plaintiff though by a conveyance before; which gave occasion to the suspition that this conveyance was fraudulent; and though depositions might not be read, yet a decree is the judgment of the Court, and therefore ought to be read, especially when the point of fraud depended thereon. 3. Bond presumes a due debt till the contrary be proved, and it shall not be intended to be for performance of covenants till the defendant sheweth it. Demise, Br. 16. H. demised copyhold to bar. & fem, and the heirs of the body of the fem, if they shall attain to 14, they suffer a recovery, and then they have issue, which after his death attains to 14. Sp. Verdict, 2 Leonard, 11, pl. 16. 1 Brant. 1, pl. 2. 2 Leonard, 92, pl. 115. 3 Cr. 526, pl. 5. 2 Cr. 461, pl. 6. That this is all one as to say, when T. dyeth without issue.

A demise was found by special verdict thus: I give my messuage to my son Thomas for his life; and if he dye without issue of his body then living at the time of his decease, to Leonard a son by a second husband, and his heirs: but if T. have issue living at the time of his decease, then to T. and his heirs. T. suffers a common recovery to the use of himself, &c. Allen for the pl. This is no estate tail, because the limitation to L. is not absolute upon an estate tail but upon Thomas's dying without issue living at the time of his death: and this point hath been agreed by both parties, and so waved it. But he argued that L. hath not any contingent remainder upon the death of Thomas, which is only when a remainder is in obeyance until the contingent happen: Com. 35. But by executory devise where the fee is vested in somebody always, but to be divested by a future contingent, this cannot be by way of remainder, because a fee cannot be upon a fee so and T. hath an estate in fee simple (and not for life only) immediately: T. being heir at law, and so had a devise been to him for life. This will not displace the fee nor put the estate in obeyance: as Jones (who argued that T. had it but for life) said, relying upon Archers case, which was a mistake: for Robert had an estate there in fee simple, having only by the will an estate for life, and being heir at law. 2. That was a devise of a remainder in tail, and so an obeyance of necessity, because the contingent was subsequent, but here the contingent is precedent and to be in the lines of the parties. And that T. hath a fee simple is clear, because the limitation is to his right heirs (if he dye having issue, &c.) which doth not make his heirs purchasers, but are declaratory, that if T. have no issue, then L. shall have it. This giveth nothing to T. that he had not before, and this was the most genuine meaning of the will; because the sons being by several venters, could not inherit each other, and so she made provision for the youngest L. by disposing the writings in a friends hands for him. 3. When the intent is dubious ut res magis valeat, &c. the intent of the devisor shall be taken most favourably, especially when by such construction the whole will may be fulfilled, as here, that T. if he had issue, should have the whole estate. 2. That the common recovery here by T. is no bar, is manifest, because the intended recompence (which is the sole ground of bars by recoveries) reacheth not to this remainder. So The Marquess of Win-[30]-chesters case, & Dy. 252, when he cometh not in by voucher or in privity of estate: and though tenant in tail be attaint or utlawed, yet a recovery by him will bar, only because of the intended recompence; because the tenant might have counterpleaded the vouching of any such persons, and so it is his own fault: and here Leonard hath no contingent but a distinct estate, and a recompence cannot go to it, no more can it go to a fee limited upon a fee reservation, Br. & Rec. en Value Br. Because the recovery in value must be of an absolute fee though by reason of a warranty annexed to an estate upon condition. 3. L. though he cannot falsifie, yet he shall not be hard, because as Pelhams case: such a recovery is but upon collusion, which destroyeth the legal operation of a common recovery, especially where it is to avoid a title: and L. needs not falsifie, because he is a stranger, and so not bound by this recovery. Privies in blood and estate cannot falsifie in the same, but only in higher actions, conditions, Br. 26, & Boswells case, 6 Co. 52. And if this should be otherwise, then great mischiefs would happen in common assurances; as that after a feoffment by a recovery a man may defeat all uses and mortgages which are of the same nature with executory devises, there being no real distinction betwixt a condition and a contingency. And Pell versus Brown is adjudged in all these points, 2 Cr. 590, pl. 13. Finch for the defendant, that L. the devisee is barred by this recovery whether he take by way of remainder or executory devise; but that the defendant is in by way of remainder is clear, and not within Pell & Browns case, which was a devise to T. and his heirs, and on death of T.

without issue living, W. &c. And Dy. 330, the law will rather make such construction, than suffer a fee to be upon a fee, which shall not be allowed but in case of necessity, 37, 38 Eliz. Sole versus Gerrard C. B. A devise to the youngest son and his heirs, and if he dyed before 21, or without issue, then &c. here to avoid this contingency they strayned and made it. Or so 2 Cr. 415. And here the construction must be strained to make it otherways, (though if T. had not been heir it would have been out of question, yet) his being heir will not alter the case, it being no mischief that the fee be in obeyance when the freehold is visible; and it is also the intent of the will, which provides, that T. shall not sell, &c. which could not be hindered by delivery of the writings into a strangers hand: but admitting L. takes by executory devise, yet, 2. He shall be barred because this limiting of a fee upon a fee, is new; as 38 Eliz. Fulmestons case, & 3 Co. Borastons case, and the first [31] judgment in the case is that of Pell against Brown, and hath been since a serjeants case, and often debated, but never received any determination till (53) Jay against Jay, contrary to Pell & Browns case. But the recovery upon such a contingency never yet received any decision. And had the recovery been by title it would have barred clearly; and being private, is of the same effect, and only to be avoided on the statute 32 H. 8, by the same parties as the other. And it is not only the intended recompence, but the favour of common assurances, as 9 Co. Beamonts case, that gives efficacy to common recoveries. So Hub. Duncomb against Wingfield, 1 Leonard 157, pl. 221, (which he commends, and Foster also) and otherwise all the inconveniencies of perpetuities will be de novo introduced; and though future uses may be limited thus with a fee upon a fee, yet may they in many cases be destroyed, as in Englefields case in Poph. 20, by an attainder. And a condition is collateral without dependance upon the estate, but this contingency goeth with the land, and is of the same nature with it, 6 Co. Mildmays case. And in like cases a recovery will bar, as Formedon Fitzh. & 4 Jac. The Earl of Cumberlands case, a fee depending on estate conditional was barby such recovery at the c. law. And 6 Eliz. C. B. Moor Rep. 73, pl. 201, a devise that if J. S. dye without heirs male, that his executors shall sell this by such a common recovery, was barred, and all these without any intended recompence, Rec. in Value Br. Foster Ch. J. The not barring of the recovery will set up perpetuities. Windham, When a precipe is brought against the tenant of the land, be it for life with voucher, that this (for the intended recompence) should bar all the remainders or possibilities depending thereupon (if upon real title) is clear. And so if tenant of the land (whereof rent in fee doth issue) suffer recovery, this shall be charged with the rent and have a fee only charged with the rent or with the condition according to the warranty. Twisden conceived this estate to be a fee, and that if a collateral ancestor suffer a recovery vouching tenant for life, it will not bar the remainders. Contra, where the recovery is against tenant for life vouching the lessor, &c. this will bar all remainders or dependancies upon it. And though the recompence giveth force to it, yet being common assurances, they will be construed more favourably than at c. law: and in Pell against Brown the Judges argued upon several and different reasons; and a feoffment to J. S. and his heirs till a marriage had been gone by recovery before by Twisd. though Foster cited the opinion of Hutton to the contrary, & [32] adjornatur. And by Wind. He in remainder had no remedy at common law on recovery against the tenant for life. Per default. Post.

The sheriffs of London retorned, that for the more indifferent way of merchandize they have accustomed, that the goods as well that were sold by weight as others of all strangers before sale ought to be weighed at the common beam; and to enforce this, there is a by-law made with a pain of 40s. per tun for not weighing. Allen for the plaintiff, This is a good custom (and though it were objected that men should be forced to weigh whether they sell or no, yet) because it may have a reasonable commencement, because the city are bound to keep officers there: and that they need not sell by weight but at their pleasure might be upon good grounds restrained, and being used long and confirmed by Parliament will be as well presumed good as a custom that goods foreign bought and foreign sold shall be forfeited: and sometimes these Courts have taken notice of these customs: and admitting the custom good, this inforcement of it by a penalty is good as well as restrayning the carmen, foreign traders, &c. Twisden cited the opinion of Justice Barclay, that this Court shall take conusance of recoveries in London, and conceive also the custom and by-law good, and award procedendo nisi, &c.

Error being brought and shewed to the attorney is no supersedeas by Twisden, until it be shewed to the clerk of the errors, which is an allowance in Court: and therefore if execution be done before it be allowed by the Judge or shewed to the clerk of the errors, it is well done, because the attorney otherwise would never have it allowed, but only shew it to the attorney of the other side. But if he shew it and declare his intention to have it speedily allowed, there execution is superseded in the mean time; but yet if bail be not put in according to the statute, the execution may be well done, which the Court agreed.

Reeves for the defendant excepted to the retorn of the habeas corpus cum causa, 1. That the custom is, that all goods of foreigners usually bought and sold by weight being exposed to sale, ought to be weighed, which as it is compulsory, is unreasonable. 2. The by-law is grounded upon a custom, where there is any default necessary to be remedied, which he conceived is not here, because that they may have an action upon the statute. 3. That 13s. 4d. the hundred is an unreasonable imposition, which the Court doth think reasonable. And by Twisden, this is the common form of retorn of by-laws. 4. Such by-laws are to be profitable to the city and people; this Reeve conceived is not so here, because only the first buyers are concerned herein. 5. The reason of a by-law, viz. that there might be a just and indifferent weighing of all merchandize is not in this case, that exempts the citizen and duly restrains the foreigner, which is not adequate to the mischief of the contrary. 6. They have not proportioned the penalty to the offence, but to the subject matter. 7. The by-law is made the 2d, and to take effect the 10th of February 1658, without any provision of notice to the strangers (who are not concerned in the common-council) and yet must be bound to take notice of it at their peril, which is unreasonable. But it appeared that the testator should say that the defendant whom he had made executor by the last part, should never be his executor, nor ever have any thing to do with his estate. The first part was under hand and seal, the latter brake off abruptly, referring to what was not crossed out in the former. And in direction to the jury at Bar, Foster Ch. J. conceived, that the whole will to which he subscribed, was void, and so Mallet; and that because lands were not devisable at common law, therefore it ought to be clearer. And by Twisden, The intent is the main, which is not sufficiently declared. And Justice Windham said, A will by writing without hand or seal may be good, being published, or lying among papers of concernment; but the last of these maketh no dispose of the land as in the former, and therefore without the finding of both it is nothing available.

Windham, Fraudulenter is not material but only where the subject matter warrants it; but in things entire the law gives a power to either party to dispose of it, and the other hath no remedy, for volenti non fit injuria, which the Court agreed; and that it was the folly of the tenant in common that he did not take collateral security for his sixteenth part, and nil capiat per breve award: see Conscience Br. of 9 Ed. 4, 2.

Allen for the defendant agreed to these cases, but said, that if the immaterial issue by the plaintiff or defendant upon an immaterial point be found, judgment shall be according to the verdict if it be found against him that pleads it, but if it be found for him that pleads it, that was held to have been a jeoffail, in Nichols case, especially when a material issue is offered, and the plaintiff will plead so immaterially. Reeves for the defendant admitting the custom good, yet there was no necessity of it, because there was a remedy convenient before by action upon the statute. And 2. This is not for the benefit of the people in general, as 19 Assizes 6. 3. Being penal against foreigners must aver notice, which is not provided for here, 1 Cr. 498, James versus Tutne, although if it had been the custom all persons had been bound to take notice of it, yet not so of any by-law. Allen for the plaintiff prayed procedendo, because where there is a custom without means to enforce it, that may be made by by-law, as in restraining foreigners to set up trades on pain of 5l. and the party cannot have any action upon the statute, nor the mayor and commonalty, for they have no loss thereby. And 2. Being in pursuance and strengthening of the custom, must [40] be for the peoples benefit as well as the custom. 3. Notice is not necessary, because nothing de novo is done, but pursuant of the custom; and every person trading in the city is to take notice of the law of the place, and else all the by-laws in London would be overthrown; and the party may excuse himself by being ouster le mere, &c. but the Court otherwise will intend notice. Twisden, There is equal remedy, as 5 Co. Greyes case; and in annuity pro consilio, the party may refuse, so he may to carry his goods to the beam: and for notice it was never seen, but if it be bonæ fidei consonum, and both parties have equal remedy; and to enforce a duty, it will be good enough without notice, especially in London where the by-laws resemble Acts of Parliament. Archer for the defendant, that the sentence is confirmed, the Act of (53) to this purpose is made as a good and valid Act of Parliament: the case is not within the clause of repeal in (56) being found and admitted a good marriage; but being fraudulent, as appears by the circumstances found by the jury, that she was stoln and clandestinly married in the night, and they may as well proceed by information as indictment, or otherwise upon motion and publick notice. And it appears they had a complaint, and proceeded thereupon according to their power then, and therefore their sentence confirmed. Windham, The jury find not any express fraud or force, but evidences of it, but that is not enough to enable the justices to the conusance of the cause. Twisden, Though the justices determin it to be fraud, that will not make it so if it be not expresly found, and the justification must be positive or special, as in The Chancellour of Oxon's case. And 2. Generally things left to justices of peace are intended (without special words) to be proceeded upon by indictment; but for the dangerous consequence of this, if they might proceed only by indictment that every act they do of fact shall be re-examined by jury, and because the general practice of the justices through England was then to proceed by petition and not by indictment, the fraud should be found; yet this is not so necessary to find express fraud as where it is upon pleading, and issue thereupon: and now the Court is not to judge of fraud, but to affirm the judgment [42] of the justices of peace that is found by the jury. Powis for the defendant agreed, that it is only a rent seck, but without remedy before seisin had, though after he might have had a writ of annuity, but now here wants all manner of privity, unless a double privity should be created; he agreed the cases cited, but conceived that upon the act of God, which, as Ognells case, that resolves the real contract into a personalty, though there, rather than be remediless, debt may lye, yet not so where it is the act of the party himself to determin it. If it had been an original rent granted out of the land, annuity or debt may lye, but not so here, notwithstanding attornment, which is but an agreement to enjoy as the law will: as in 2 Jac. Rot. 2660, Warner versus Agnas: lessee for years surrendred rendring rent with a cause of distress. If this had not been made he conceived that the rent had been remediless: and alike is L. But the attornment being a bare ceremony, he agreed it will not make any new contract. But here betwixt lessor and lessee the privity of contract is by reason of the rent, as 45 Ed. 3, 8, and so is transferred with the rent to the grantee. As on lease of a fair reserving rent, debt lieth, and yet no reversion but only a contract. Also debt for rent charge may lye every year the contract being annual: and where remedies may be given without manifest inconvenience, they shall be as Yelver. 51, much favoured. In a sc. facias against several persons they plead severally, and the plaintiff demurs to all joyntly quod seperalia placita, &c. this by Allen is good. And he cited 8 Car. 1, Rot. 420, B. R. Cross against Norman in covenant upon several breaches. The defendant pleaded several pleas; the plaintiff demurs quod placitum predictum, &c. this was there ruled good. And Justice Twisden cited Tucker against Honywood 44 Eliz. This plea ruled good; and that 15 H. 7, 10 b. Dy. 182, Fish against Broket, and Chapman versus Dalton Jac. It was ruled that such a plea was not good, but the current hath been contrary. And by Windham, The new reports being but promiscuous, are no farther to be credited than as they are consonant to the old, or agreeing with the roll. Dy. 325, pl. 4. Veniat assiza de titulo, where there were two titles, yet good, because title is nomen collectivum. And he agreed with Twisden, that the plea is good, reddendo singula singulis; and Foster Ch. J. to the same intent, and so judgment pro querente.

And by Twisden, The case of Chapman was, where upon a demurrer on one part, and issue upon the other part of the plea, the plaintiff said quod placitum predictum, which was uncertain which plea it should refer to.

117. DE LA BAR versus GOLD. May 25. In Debt Br. 79.

Consideration. 1 Brant 334, pl. 861. 1 Roll. 26.

Allen moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case upon promise, that in consideration J. S. on the part of the plaintiff let to W. who let to Gold the defendant the half of three eight parts of a ship, the defendant upon forbearance of J. S. to attach the money of W. in the hands of Gold, the defendant promised to pay what was due to the plaintiff, that this is no good consideration because it doth not appear the defendant is concerned therein, the plaint being betwixt J. S. agent for the plaintiff, and Wood (which is necessary previous to a foreign attachment) Wild for the defendant, that the consideration here is not that the defendant would pay to the plaintiff, but, as Hob. 216, Bidwell's case, that if J. S. would forbear, the defendant would pay what was due for the fraight; and here is a loss to the plaintiff of his attachment by J. S. and an advantage to the defendant: and therefore though the consideration be betwixt other persons, yet if it have any influence upon the defendant it will be good. Windham, If the promise had been to J. S. from whom the consideration moved that the defendant would pay to the plaintiff, that would have been good, which Allen agreed contra where the promise is to the plaintiff only from whom no consideration moved. Twisden, Upon a collateral promise [45] on a marriage to a person unconcerned, as Yelv. 54, Musgrave versus Wharton, the married persons shall not have benefit; but otherwise where the meritorious cause ariseth from a third person as in a promise betwixt parents on marriage of their children, there either party may have the action. And by Foster Ch. J. If one promise to give 500l. with him that shall marry his daughter, if J. S. a stranger doth it, he shall have an action upon the case for it. And Wild cited a case, that A. indebted to J. S. &c. deposits goods for this debt with J. N. and in consideration that J. N. would deliver the goods, A. will paye to J. S. it was ruled that an action upon the case lyeth. Adjornatur.

Prohibition.

The plaintiff in the Court of Admiralty (that is now defendant) had judgment in the Admiralty on a charter-party made on the land, after which the defendant (now plaintiff) appealed, and after that he here prayed a prohibition: and Powis for the defendant in the prohibition conceived, that the suit there being according to their power, is confirmed by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, notwithstanding the appeal, which is only a suspension of execution: and by the Court the prohibition was denyed.

At Doncaster in the Court of Kings Bench at W. in the county of Middlesex then being, 5 Ed. 4, 7. 17 H. 6, 10. This being after a verdict, the Court cannot judicially take notice where the Court is held. 2. If there had been no place mentioned this plea had been good enough, and here it is repugnant, and so void, and as none. But by Wild, If the action be local, the Court will never give judgment upon what plea soever out of that place as this debt upon a judgment is to be only where the recovery is, which the Court agreed, and doubted if a plea were pleaded out of the place, that is not material where the Kings Bench was. Bulwers case judgment arrest.

[47] 124. SICLEMORES CASE.

Prerogative.

The King may wave his demurrer in civil, but not in criminal causes, by Allen for the prisoner: but per Curiam, the demurrer is by the Clerk of the Crown, by the misdemeanour of whom the King shall not be prejudiced. Also the Court required presidents of this to be shewed by the prisoner, because the Kings prerogative is general that he may wave his plea; but no presidents could be remembred where such waver had been in criminal causes. And by Allen, the presidents must be in the affirmative, not negative, but Curia contra. Post.

7. DOMINUS REX AND SICLEMORES CASE. Ante.

Preragative. Error.

Allen for the defendant supposed, that the Act of Oblivion had discharged him of the manslaughter; and after this error shall not be brought to reverse the attainder of manslaughter. Twisden, The King may the rather bring a writ of error, because the Act doth not extend to erroneous judg-[51]-ments or utlawries. And by Windham & Curiam, error is the only way. The errors were, 1. Because it doth not sufficiently appear that he was secundo exactus. 2. In com. meum, not said Suffolciæ ad Curiam ibid. tent. which is ill, though in comitatu Suffolciæ, which is necessary to be in the margent: because his Court held for his county for ought appears may be any where, and is uncertain, as 11 H. 7, and this hath been a common exception. 3. At the tertio exact' Wiseman was made sheriff and saith, at his Court, not saying where. And for these errors all the Court reversed the utlawry. Also the ven. fa. was before O. St. John Justice of Peace and Oyer and Terminer, and doth not say, justice of gaol delivery. Allen, The writ is brought in the prisoners name, which he denyeth: but by Twisden, This is but ore tenus, which the Court cannot take notice of; which was agreed by Windham, especially when judgment is given to reverse the indictment, upon such writ he shall be estopped. But by Allen, The judgment is yet in the breast of the Judges, which yet the Court will not alter, being for speed of justice. And by Foster Ch. J. a release of a void judgment is not good, nor shall be accepted without assent of the Attorney General. But by Twisden, Issue on these errors is not usual, but they are the bare suggestions and desire of the party: also these errors are in the very plea of the party, and therefore the Court may give judgment upon it, especially being, by Windham, to further justice, and not to defend the party against wrong. 9. WEDEN against BALDWIN. Ante. Ejectment.

The plaint. declared on lease made by H. B. and by special verdict it is found that T. B. was seized in fee of lands in capite joyntly with his wife for their lives, and to the heirs of T. B. and that T. B. is seized of the lands in question in fee in his own right, and devised all his lands in W. to his wife, and after her decease deviseth to H. B. and Howel argued for the defendant, that the devise is good but only for a third part, and said, that herein it is considerable if T. B. hath power to devise any part of these lands, and he held [52] that he cannot, because prima facie he was seised of a joynt estate for life with a remainder to his heirs; but it is uncertain of what quantity of lands he was so seized of, or of what estate, because this may be intended several ways, and therefore no certain judgment can be given thereupon. For if they were thus seized before marriage, then they take by moieties, if after, they do not; they might be joyntenants by one conveyance, and several by another, or they might be seized joyntly for the life of the wife. The verdict should be as if it had been pleaded, though the words of lay gents be found neither the quantity nor the quality of his estate, as in Lovyes case, 10 Co. 83, is found, nor that he had no other lands of the same tenure, Dy. 366, which was necessary. But supposing the lands capite to be two parts, yet having once disposed all, he cannot dispose of the third part, being soccage, 2 Co. Binghams case. As if the case were as 25 H. 8, 55, that T. B. had once executed his power for the two parts by feoffment to the use of him and his wife, as in Dy. 237. Also if they had the estate by purchase, he cannot dispose it because they do not take by moieties, Co. 28, Butler & Bakers case the fem may after the death of the baron wave her estate, Dy. 9, but not so where they take by moyeties; yet the fee is in him to whom it is limited, as to Estrangers Gard, F. 48. Pet. Br. 303, and shall not be in contingency, Relief F. 40, and the verdict it self hath found that T. B. died seized, which will overthrow the objection, that he died not tenant to the King: and however, if he had had but a right, it is sufficient to make him tenant within the stat. 32 H. 8, 1. But dissee, as Litt. 106, to many purposes is actually seized, Mortdancestor Br. 59. 16 Ass. 11. It is in the heirs election to have mortdancestor on the death of his ancestor, joyntenant for life with fee to him linit Dy. 368. And here the baron, although he had estate for life joynt with his wife, yet he is sole seized in fee. Twisden conceived the verdict utterly uncertain, because that the devise of the third part is not utterly void, and so all the Court agreed. But by Allen for the plaintiff, this devise is good for the whole, and so the verdict is good; but it agrees, that if it be void for the third part, that then it is uncertain. And by Foster Ch. J. The ancient course on devise of more than two parts an inquisition was awarded to enquire of the value of them: also the Court will intend that they were seized as husband and wife, and to the heirs of the husband, and not otherways. And by the agreement of the parties the special verdict was amended in the uncertainty of the third part, and made that a full third [53] part descended, because otherwise if the verdict be such that no judgment may be given upon it for plaintiff or defendant, a new ven. fa. would be error, because the Court must give judgment where the verdict is totally defective. Windham, A bare remainder of capite lands will not hinder devise or disposition of the soccage, because such person is not tenant. Sed dubitatur, whether tenant for life the remainder to him in fee shall be said sole seized, so that he may devise, Ployers case, per l'Estat. 182, pl. 208.

Windham, When the words are general, and after per videlicet it is said as in 12 H. 8, 3, that he was seized in particular as sua, as 12 H. 8, 9, that will not aid after verdict, but otherways when the words are particular at first; for the defendant was cited 43 Ed. 3, 24. It was excepted by Wild, that he doth not shew in certain the judgment, nor the recital of the whole record, plaint, &c. Nor he doth not shew the jurisdiction of the Court, which, per Curiam, is necessary by the baily of an Inferior Court, especially because that he justifies by reason thereof, as in The Countess of Rutlands case. And it must appear that the Court hath conusance of the cause, otherwise he cannot execute their precept. Also for every several point he should have put himself upon the country, because the plaintiff had alledged non solvit, but otherwise issue should be taken by the plaintiff, which the Court agreed.

14. GWIN against LLOYD & BOLD.

Error to reverse a judgment given at the Grand Sessions in Anglisie, because the warrant by the writ of summons appears to be after the dedimus potestatem, and after the common recovery removed, & in nullo erratum pleaded upon suggestion at the Bar, that others were tertenants, a sci. fa. was awarded against Ellen Gwin, who pleaded in abatement & said, that there were other ter-tenants as T. Gwin not named, whereupon the plaintiff demurred, because that it was not necessary to the ter-tenants, as Dy. 321, but to the heir: and the ter-tenant is only warned to appear, to shew why the judgment should not be reversed and his land saved to him, but he cannot plead in abatement, 30 H. 6, 2, or any thing which concerneth not himself. By Allen for the plaintiff, The tenants plea must be to the possession, not to the errors, and this plea is against the express retorn of the sheriff that he is ter-tenant, and he cannot take issue thereon. Also if execution be against one ter-tenant sole, this shall be avoided by the others by audita querela: also here there is no certainty of what quantity the other is ter-tenant. Williams for the defendant, that he shall not be charged before all the other ter-tenants be served. 1. That a sc. fa. is necessary against [55] the ter-tenants as well as against the recoverors, on Dy. 321, & 2 Cr. 392, 160. M. 38, 39 Eliz. Owen 157, C. B. Rot. 545. Carne versus Warren 21 Ed. 3, 56. Holland against Jackson, 11 Car. 1, B. R. To the same effect Bridgman 11, 70. Also 2. If this be necessary, yet being general that award without particular names this cannot be satisfied by particular retorn, and the ter-tenant coming in due time and pleading such a plea, the Court in discretion will not leave him to an after game. Also 3. It must the rather go out against this ter-tenant as the case is, because otherwise he shall be finally concluded by the judgment, because he cannot come in upon a second sc. fa. because he had liberty upon the first. But 4. Admitting the plea frivolous in her month, yet because such a suggestion as sc. fa. 138. 2 Ed. 3, 56, as amicus Curiæ to the Court is a sufficient ground for a sc. fa. against the ter-tenant. Windham Justice on 47 Ed. 3, in a sc. fa. on a judgment or recognizance such summons to the ter-tenant is necessary, and so it may be here in a writ of error on a recovery, because it is not dilatory, being the first sc. fa. therefore he conceived the sc. fa. must be awarded, but the pleas of ter-tenant ought to be proper. And by Twisden, Any thing that may extort execution against him, but nothing against the errors; and though this plea be not proper, yet as amicus Curiæ, this will be good. As diminution alledged by the Lords mediate or immediate. Also by Windham, an averment may well be against such a retorn of the sheriff, because he is not omniscient. And by Twisden, The writ that is directed to the heir and ter-tenants, and if it be executed only as to the ter-tenants, yet the heir may come in and plead that he is ter-tenant, &c. And here that the writ is general, as 1 Cr. 312, Eyre against Danton. And per Curiam, this is a common assurance, wherein it is the discretion of the Court that none may have prejudice by too quick dispatch; and here the plaintiff at his peril must seek out all the ter-tenants. Post.

Notice. Consideration.

The defendant promised in consideration that if the plaintiff would consent that the mortgager shall assign an indenture to the defendant, he would pay to the plaintiff, &c. And it is alledged that ad tunc & ibidem the plaintiff consented without notice, and good. 2. The consideration was that the plaintiff should consent to the assigning of a lease, which by Windham & Curiam, the plaintiff having possession of the [56] indenture as mortgagee of B. A. Estranger is a good consideration, because the lessee without the consent of the plaintiff cannot make assignment, and so the defendant hath a benefit and the plaintiff prejudice thereby. But by Allen for the defendant, If the lessee had never assigned, yet the plaintiff had been bound by his consent, which is of no operation of it self, because he may yet keep the indenture in his hand: but yet per Curiam, hereby is an influence to make the bargain better, and therefore it is good: judgment, nisi.

C. B. Ireland against Booths. It was ruled to the contrary: and so in 1 Cr. 331, cited by Norton to the contrary. An action upon the case against the sheriff for taking insufficient bail, because that although (as 10 Co. Beaufages case) the sheriff be bound to take bail, yet that is meant of sufficient bail. But by Twisden, He is Judge of the sufficiency. Jones prayed, that the party being in prison, the Court would stay proceedings, which yet the Court would not do, because it is after a writ of enquiry awarded.

Keeling Serjeant moved for quashing of an order of sessions at Orford in Suffolk, because they cannot levy a tax for any new bridge nor for an old one of money, but only by way of issues and distresses; also the way might have been repaired for less than the bridge newly made. And by Justice Twisden, This is no bridge within the stat. 9 H. 3, but only the reparation of the way by this amendment as a wear, which only remedies the defects of the sinking sands, which the Court agreed, and that by by-law of the majority of the inhabitants a tax of money may be levied, and that if the majority be for repair, the justices may compel particular persons to contribute money, whereupon they refer this to be finally ordered by the Justices of Assize.

20. WINDSOR against SAYWELL.

In ejectment special verdict find, Sir Arthur Gorge seized, and so being he was utlawed at the suit of the lessor of the plaintiff who had judgment before against him; whereupon after a seisure on the utlawry he extended on his judgment, no amoveas manum being sued. Also the defendant had levied fine of the lands before the seisure on the utlawry made, which was only in personal action. Jones for the defendant, The King by this utlawry is as Com. 541. 9 H. 6, 20 b. partner of the profits only, and his interest continued only so long as the interest of the party in the lands, 21 H. 7, 7, which is gone per mort ou feoffment. 9 H. 7, 21, Stanf. Prærog. 57, but the course of the Exchequer hath been contrary. Yet this is intended after seisure, but before he may defeat the Kings interest. And in Pickerings case, 24 Car. 1, in the Exchequer it was adjudged, that a bargain and sale made after the extendi facias awarded, and before the execution thereof, had it been inrolled, had been good, but it was inrolled after the execution, and therefore would not bind the Kings interest. But it was agreed, that if nothing be done, the Kings interest might be discharged, and the Court conceived this difference to be law. Sed adjornatur.

Error.

In action upon the case on non assumpsit pleaded, judgment is given for the plaintiff at Hereford, and the defendant assigned the general errors in the judgment, &c. and after special errors were alledged; 1. That ven fa. is of xii. at Hereford, &c. without more, which the Court ruled to be no error. But 2. It is, that the Court awards, and doth not say who in certain. 3. It is capiatur pro misericordia, for which it was reversed: but it was moved for the plaintiff, that the error being directed to the mayor only of a record quod coram vobis, it was ill, but per Curiam, this is the usual course, and not quod coram te, &c.

Covenant.

In an action of covenant that he was seized in fee at the time of the bargain and sale without condition or limitation, &c. And the breach assigned by the plaintiff that he was not seized in fee, which by Wild on demurrer is not good, without shewing in whom the estate was. 2. It was said that he was not seized in fee without condition, which is not good, because that the condition or limitation is not answered. Allen for the plaintiff, that this is a direct answer, and he is not bound to shew in whom the estate was, to which the bargainer only is privy, as 9 Co. 61. Also his replication could have been only that he was seized in fee, and not absq; hoc, that any stranger was seized, which Twisden agreed, on Yelverton. And if it was a good covenant that he is seized in fee, and that he saith farther without condition or limitation. This by Windham, is superaddition, that he hath a good estate in fee, and doth not qualifie or alter the fee. And the plaintiff cannot take issue that another was not seized in fee without condition, but the condition must be shewed by him that pleads that he was seized in fee, confessing it, but that it was on condition; for it was the folly of the covenanter to make such a covenant. And Twisden conceived, that to alledge that he was not seized in fee is a good plea, contra by Mallet, Foster absente. Adjornatur.

In debt upon an obligation made to the plaintiff as bayl for security of the appearance of J. S. the defendant pleads non damnificatus, the plaintiff replyes non comparuit, and the defendant rejoyned that no latitat issued forth. This per Curiam is a departure, but notwithstanding the bond the party might have averred, as in Birches case, that there was no latitat. But by Wild, that is intended in an action brought by the sheriff himself, and not between other parties, which the Court agreed on demurrer to the rejoynder, and gave judgment nisi.

Arbitrement.

In debt on award that the defendant shall pay money and also grant annuity to the plaintiff for his life and the life of his wife, and that the defendant do secure by lease to the plaintiff, and that thereupon the defendant upon the request of the plaintiff shall carry his goods, &c. And upon performance of all to give general releases; this by Wild in arrest of judgment is ill, because the request of the plaintiff is uncertain, and the releases by the parties are not to be made untill all is performed, which is no benefit to the defendant; for by Stroud on the same side, the payment is to be made during their two lives, and the release cannot be made before all be performed, and so the plaintiff is not obliged. Windham, Super performationem of the award shall be intended by giving of security, and not by payment so long as they live. Also the tender by the defendant to carry, is good performance in law, if the plaintiff do refuse it: but Twisden doubted, because that the breach may be assigned in the non payment or for default of the security; and also because it is not shewed what interest the defendant had in the lease, and because that the defendant may tendre when the plaintiff hath no occasion or convenience. But by Wild, The release is to be of all matters untill the date of the release, which he conceived would be a discharge of the annuity, and therefore that it could not be executed, but that the annuity must be determined; and this was the intent of the arbitrators, which, by Windham, is nothing to the purpose, for this release will not discharge the annuity. Wild prayed judgment in trespass of goods upon Sir Fr. Vincents case, 1 Cr. & Pell against Lemon, trover for a spaniel, which was here on error on judgment on demurrer in C. B. given that it was good; that it was so a fortiori in trespass of goods taken out of his possession; which as in 3 H. 6, 55 b. pl. 34, in property, Br. 4, being after verdict shall be intended sua, as in the case of Swan. Twisden, Quare warrenam fregit, 1 Cr. 554, et cuniculos suos cepit, it is good. And in trover for such goods if the defendant demur, is good. So Sir Rich. Fines case, and Spencers case, Dy. 306 b. pl. 66, and 1 Cr. 18, 89. Trover and trespass in this differ not, both being of goods; which as Bulstr. 95, after verdict will be good, as well for taking away as for killing his hawk. After demanding whether the jurors had had the view, they were sworn: the title was made to two offices of custos brevium & recordorum, and clerk of the writs and Treasury except the writs of Nisi Prius. And in evidence to the assize it was observed, 1. That it needs not be proved that the Chief Justice hath power to grant these offices, but the Court will take notice of it. 2. Whether, as 1 Cr. 198, a grant by patent, though void, be not a surrender of the office by writ. 3. An admittance of any clerk is matter of record, and without that, the Court will not take notice of the fact, Dy. 2, 3 Ph. M. Fancies case, 39 H. 6, though the record be lost. And 4. It is not sufficient for admittance without a special entry of it on record; for the admittance is by the Court, though the grant be by the Chief Justice: but by Keeling, A man may prove a thing recorded, though he cannot prove the record it self. 5. The entry of a record of proclamation avails not if it be not under the Great Seal: yet by Serjeant Keeling for the plaintiff, this is only the warrant of the sheriff, but the entry among the records in Chancery is the authority, which may afterwards be [61] exemplified. 6. A writ is necessary to an adjournment, because the last proclamation of the term is hither, which cannot be altered by word, only by the removal of the King, for the Kings pleasure cannot be declared but by writ, because by Twisden, it is not the King, but the Court that adjourns: and so are all the presidents since 4 Ed. 4, and thus hath been the law (viz. the usage of the Court) which the Court agreed: and that before Magna Charta the Kings Bench had conuzance of real as well as other causes. 7. Admittance to an office is no grant, by Windham. 8. The copy of a record ought to be brought into the Court by the officer, especially being a single parchment and not bound up among the rolls; and because the officer would not come without special command of the Court, which they would not send, thereupon the proclamation was disallowed. 9. Offices may be divided ad libitum of the Chief Justice, especially the course having been so of long continuance. 10. The admittance ought to have been in Court, and it doth not appear that any Court was held in Oxon, because no adjournment is made thither; and on full evidence verdict for the defendant.

Finch moved to stay the retorn of the mandamus, because the name of the colledge was mistaken, being certified by the master on his oath to be so. The writ was to the master or custos and fellows, whereas their names was master fellows and scholars. Allen for the plaintiff, The name of corporation, Boldstr. 189, 190, is not necessary in the writ but only such persons that have the power of making a retorn. But the indorsement of the writ was by the name of the custos collegii infra script, which by Foster Ch. J. and Twisden, is an acknowledgment of the writ. And per Curiam, This is a great affront to the Court, being after so long delay. And by Windham, The writs are according to the powers, though if it be directed to the whole, and mistaken, that is void. Adjornatur.

Wild for the defendant moved another exception, that it is said unum ferrum, Anglice a fire-grate, which is ill, because there is a proper word [62] for a fire-grate. Twisden, If there be no

Latin word one may be made with an Anglice, but not by general terms: as unum instrument, Anglice a horse-cloth, is ill, though Angl. a pedigree 11 Car. hath been ruled good; and so when the words before Angl. doth describe it particularly, as unum instrument pro tormento, Angl. a spanner for a gun, Stiles, Barker against Marten, ruled good. De instrumento magno de ligno, Angl. a skreen, ruled good. Pro tribus ornamentis pro capite, Angl. coifs, ruled good: but this case being de ferro igneo, with an Angl. it was held good; as pro instrumento ferreo, Angl. a jack. 3. Wild said, that a word for which there is a proper Latin, cannot be expressed by an Angl. but that was over-ruled by the Court, being after verdict.

In debt against lessee of tythes for years (by the executors of H. lessee to H. and his heirs of a rectory, for three lives &c. 2 Cr. 112, 453, 454, rendring rent on Tr. 37 Eliz. Buskin versus Edmonds, it was said this is a good rent, and not a sum in gross, and that a demand is necessary to make void such lease, and so it is incident to the reversion, but per Curiam, it is gone by the death of tenant for anothers life; there being no occupant of tythes, unless as joynt with a rectory: and therefore by Jones for the defendant, here the executors shall not have the rent. Allen for the plaintiff in Jewels case, it is resolved that rent upon a lease for lives shall go to the executors, and not to the bishop or the heir, Inst. 47, and so should it do in case of a lease for years. And though it be said spectant rectoriæ, yet when the lessor hath nothing to do with the rectory, yet the heir shall not have the rent, for by letting the tythes they are severed from the rectory, and so by the death of tenant pur auter vye; only the [63] contract remains, but the rectory vanisheth, which the Court agreed. Jones, Such a severance for years will not amount to a full severance but only if it had been for life. Windham, It is said that the lessor was seized of the tythes, which are part of a rectory, and not only incident to it; and of them only an occupant cannot be. But a rectory is like a mannor mixt, and an occupant may well be of that: and when tenant pur auter vye makes a lease and dyeth, this determineth his interest but not the lease. But by Twisden, This is the act of God, and so may determine the lease, but not so of a surrender. And the Court agreed Dentons case in 2 Cr. 111, pl. 10, put by Jones, that a lease for years is good of tythes, but not for life by such a tenant; but yet that the rent should either follow the reversion, or shall be extinct, being by act of God or of law: but otherwise if the lessor had surrendred, there the rent had been absolutely gone; and after the plaintiff, executor of tenant pur auter vye discontinued the action. And by the Court, this is a good case for a reader of an inn of Chancery.

Assumpsit. 1 Cr. 273.

Jones for the plaintiff taketh it as admitted, as Hob. 116, that forbearance (whether the party had cause of action or the other benefit by it or not) is good; and it is sufficient that there be but either benefit to the promisee, or damage to the promiser. Personal considerations, as of blood, &c. are not applicable to others, but other considerations are. B. R. H. 24 Car. 1, Rot. 1010, Disborn & Donaby. Consideration that an estranger at his request had transferred his goods to the defendant he would pay to the plaintiff, this on error adjudged good, P. 28 Eliz. Meggots case in the Exchequer, in consideration that estranger had enfeoffed the defendant at the plaintiffs request, the defendant promised to enfeoff the plaintiff, and adjudged good, Stiles 296, pl. 643, in Tr. 1651, R. R. Rot. 1071, betwixt Starkie & Milney. In consideration the plaintiffs grandfather had given to the defendant, &c. (44 Eliz. 3 Cr. 849, pl. 3, Rippon versus Norton, Yelverton 1). And Thomas versus Green, in consideration that J. S. would surrender to the defendant, he would pay to the plaintiff, &c. and ruled good, because being a promise all at one time, all such parties will be intended to be present and consenting. Allen for the defendant relyed upon the difference where the benefit of the consideration redoundeth to a stranger and when to the party; and here, if any man should [64] have an action, it should be Luke Wood and not his lessor, who by Windham, was but agent for the plaintiff, but yet the lessee of Wood is not at all concerned in the lease betwixt Gold & Wood, on the part of the Plaintiff by Allen: and by him Donabys case was upon delivery of goods by executors to the defendant, for which he was sued by the plaintiff for them, and so he had a benefit by it, but here the defendant hath no benefit; for Wood to whom the money is due is better entituled to it than the plaintiff, who is not concerned in the matter of the promise, which is most considerable in action upon the case upon a promise. Windham, If the promise were in consideration that A. hath sold goods to B. he promiseth to C. 10l. C. hath no remedy because he is but as an attorney of A. to receive for his use; and A. only can have an action upon the case against B. for not paying the money to C. But if A. sells to B. and B. promiseth in consideration thereof to pay to C. 10l. which A. owed to C. in this case C. shall have an action because it appeareth the interest was his: these cases he cited of his own reports in time of Rolls being Ch. J. And here the defendant hath done an act on the behalf of the plaintiffs, and there is a debt due for that which he hath done for the plaintiffs, and so he may be entituled to the actions. Twisden, In Donabyes case it was said, that it matters not from whom the consideration moveth, but who hath the benefit thereby; which was said per Curiam, then and so he conceiveth in this case, that it is a good consideration, because Gold owed Wood 10l. for which Swinock sued Wood, and attached the money in Golds hand, upon which this promise was made. And in consideration that J. B. was bayl for J. S. at my request, I promise to save J. B. harmless, this he conceived good. Windham on Evans against Jampney 24 Car. 1, where A. sold to B. a house, in consideration whereof B. promised to pay to A. and C. in action upon the case by A. and C. adjudged that it was no good consideration to C. and so he said it was here. Allen for the defendant, It doth not appear in the declaration that Wood is to be discharged by the payment of this money, for the second lessee owed nothing to the plaintiff. Windham, In consideration that Swinock will forbear his attachment, implyes that he shall procure the attachment to be discharged and forborn: and by Windham, The consideration was only to pay such money as was in Golds hand to the plaintiff, for whom it was attached as due by a stranger to whom the defendant owed so much. Alien.

Bridgman Ch. J. argued, that the issue, as L. Co. 80, 84, cannot inherit one to the other propter defectum, though upon attainder, which is only propter odium culpæ, whatever was in the ancestor may be left to the issue betwixt each other, H. 11 Car. 1, Bradstock versus ——— and Hob. Dunkom against Wingfield's case, will not reach this case (not that it is not necessary to name the ancestor) for without him he cannot make his pedigree by him, tho he may his title, on 32 H. 8, cap. 36, and those cases are grounded upon the statute: but at common law it would not be so, but that the heir taketh only by reason of the right that falleth upon the heir, and not only by reason of the naming his ancestor, as 3 Co. 61. Also the children by several venters by a possessio fratris shall not inherit each other though daughters be, who shall not hinder this case, because there an intirety of blood is necessary: but if there had been no daughters, the uncle must have named the father, and yet the younger brother who is his heir shall not inherit. And Coke in this case upon great advise in Hobbies case, held the same opinion, who in this is much to be relyed on: for the case is but that Sir. J. Ramsey seized in reversion having brother an alien, and a son English, deviseth to his brother and his heir, and this in trust to pay his debts, and he conceived that it was the intent of the devisor that he should take, but not a legal one, because the son of an alien is no heir, though in propriety of speech the eldest son be [66] thereby intended. And legal forms may be supplyed where the intent is apparent, as here, there could be no other heir: and in the other cases cited the word heirs carried limitations of estates, as in Counden & Clarks case, Hob. But here the word heir is only a designation of the person, and so the devise is only to Patrick the nephew and his heirs, and not to the heirs of his heir, for he could have none; but this it cannot be, and so it is void: as a devise to the heir of J. S. (J. S. being then alive) as in Wildes case a fortiori when the devisor taketh notice of this disability, and especially when there is no verdict in this case, the party having described him only according to the law, his intent shall not have any other construction: Tyrrel agreed with him, but Brown and Hide to the contrary. Post.

42 Eliz. Day. }
19 Jac. } And all the presidents of the Court are this way, 21 Jac. } sub silentio.

The inquisition was found after the Act. Twisden, No indictment ever had the word murdravit for felo de se, which is a necessary badg of murder. But the inquisition was quod voluntarie se ipsum suffocavit & murdravit. Keeling Serjeant for the defendant, The King had only an inception of a title, and no interest in the lease till found by matter of record, before which time the pardon was made, which was a release by the King. And an exception is of a thing that without that would have passed within the general words of the Act; and felo de se is not capable of a pardon, no more than he that committs murder and dyeth before the pardon, he shall lose nothing: and the issuing out of process is only grounded where [67] the inquisition is before the pardon, as 5 Co. The Archbishop of Canterbury's case, which enureth not as a pardon, but as a release to the executors of the estate. Allen to the same effect relyed on the negative clause, that the executors, &c. of any of the Kings subjects shall not suffer, &c. but only for such persons and offences which are expressed in the Act, &c. but that it shall be effectual to all others, &c. and expounded beneficially for the party, &c. by a pardon of felons, felo de se is not included, nor by granting the goods of felons, the goods of felo de se pass not. Nor ought this particularly described murder to be excepted by general words especially because the intendment of that Act was to bring the offender to justice, which cannot be here. And an hundred presidents sub silentio, are not material. Finch pro Rege com' is express, that ex vi termini this is murder, and the intentions are guided by their proper words, and the seizing of his estate is a sufficient example, and publick justice for deterring of such offenders, and that is the same that is ordained in all such cases of felo de se: and it was never doubted before that the King was not hereby intituled. Windham, By the common appellation of murder it is intended of murder of another person, and these are handled under distinct titles and names. And Parliaments have always excepted murders, becase it hath been doubted by divines whether any humane powers can pardon the offence, though the law hath been otherwise; and this was a law delivered to the patriarchs before the Mosaick law. And thus it is presumed the King would never pardon murders by express words, because hereby is aliquod periculi animarum, by contracting that blood on themselves which they should put away by vengeance against the offender, which cannot be here, but only a forfeiture; which is within the express words of the Act, and though it be a high offence, yet it must be taken in the common sense, and liberally according to the pardon. Twisden ad idem, That murder is pardoned by all supream powers on earth, and David did it, and by the law the King may, 6 Co. Windsor's case, and here he hath pardoned the person and offence, and is not within the exception of murder. The statute that saith, one shall not be essoined is to be intended by the common essoin, but not quia in servitio Regis: and the presidents, 4 Co. Slades case L. 5 Ed. 4, sub silentio without argument, are of no moment; and the words of the Act of Pardon as of all statutes shall be taken in the common sense: Mallet to the contrary, and Foster Ch. J. to the same effect, but both on the sudden they agreed the liberal exposition of the Act, [68] but that such crimes were to be depressed as much as may be; and this is as hainous a murder as any, and is done rather to avoid the shame and loss of their posterity. They denyed the difference betwixt the finding of the title before, and after, for that the King hath a right fallen, and so nullum tempus occurrit Regi, though he cannot grant it before office; likewise there hath been no opposition or grievance against so many former presidents. Twisden agreed with the Ch. J. that if the King be intituled, the inquisition avails nothing; and yet when the King's right is in him, by Windham, it cannot be pardoned, but must be granted though the King may pardon murder. Entry.

The defendant having had a verdict of too little damages, would not enter his postea but enters a new action; whereupon Allen for the defendant prayed that the plaintiff might enter his postea, that that verdict may be pleaded as a bar to the new writ: and though there be error, yet the plaintiff thereupon may pray a nil capiat per billam, and so proceed de novo, and this hath been the ancient course to compel the entry of it. Wild for the plaintiff, The Court may enforce the party to bring in his postea, but not to enter his judgment, which difference Twisden agreed on ——— against Trussell, and Lental against Andrews case, which were accordingly: and the reason of the statute 2 H. 4, that the plaintiff should not discontinue after verdict, was grounded upon the same inconvenience; but by Wild, this was, because then no plea in abatement was left, which Windham agreed; and if the defendant hath neglected to plead this in abatement, it is his folly, and he shall not now plead it in bar.

Bar. & feme. 1 Brownl. 47 r.

An action upon the case for wares sold to the wife of the defendant after departure from her husband, but desired that she might again cohabit with him, which he refused, and prohibited the plaintiff to sell or deliver any wares to the wife, as appeared by special verdict, as also that he did allow her no maintenance. Jones for the plaintiff, that the husband shall be charged, 1. Supposing her only as his wife and this only for necessaries, yet he agreed the general rule of the books to be contrary, and that the wife is but as a servant, who without assent, precedent, or subsequent cannot charge the master; but the reasons hereof are, because the property of the wives personal, and the possession of the wives real estate is in the husband; and therefore it is but reasonable that the husband should allow his wife necessaries, for which alimony by other laws is allowed. And though the wife be uncapable to contract, yet so is an infant, and yet he may take up necessaries, and shall be bound by it, and so the wife. Thus are Dy. 234 b. The case in Parliament was adjudged, that alimony was not allowable, because she might charge him at the common law for necessaries. And thus was Tr. 22 Car. 1, Rot. 1651, B. R. Dent againt Scot, wherein judgment was given only upon a slip in pleading: but 11 H. 6, 30, by Marten agreed, that as to the merits of this case an action would lye. 2. Admitting this though here the wife did depart against the husband's will, yet this will not hinder. So Yean against Brown in Guildhall by Roll given in charge, that a wife might charge the husband, because there may be many unkindnesses betwixt them which the wife cannot prove. But if she lived in adultery, then she cannot charge him, but here it is not found one way or other; and malum non præsumitur: and it is here found she was willing to come and live with her husband, and therefore it would be great inconvenience that husbands might so take away their wives maintenance. 2. The prohibiting the person to trust, is not of purpose if he be chargeable. 2. Baldwin for the defendant waved all the parting and desire of return, because no cause of it is found, and so the Court can say nothing to it but that the husband is in general not chargeable on 34 Ed. 1, Debt F. 163, though it come to his use without an express authority, 22 H. 6, 20, by Newton, V. N. B. Debt is no warrant for this [70] case which came not to the use of the husband: and 11 H. 6, is an opinion obiter, but 21 H. 7, 40, by Fineux, Dy. 234, and F. N. B. 120, are full in this point; and Mich. 1650, in the Exchequer, Foxhil against Scot was so, though in this case there was nothing found that the wares were necessary, and therefore a nil capiat per billam. Also the wife, as Rot. Claus. 8 H. 3, Membr. 19, Freckfields case, might have an estoverio capiendo against the husband; & quia nun vult maritus uxorem suam secundum legem maritalem tractare, he was excommunicated, and a capias against him, and she had estovers until the husband should take her: and as 4 H. 3, Rot. Claus. Membr. 7, use her according to the law of marriage: and the note in the margent of that roll was a writ of seisin pro sustentatione uxoris. And 1 Co. 139, great inconveniences would follow upon this expence of the wife as an encouragement to evil, &c. And this is but a new devise to let in alimony to the common law, and the law doth presume the husband will not use his wife ill, unless she hath deserved it; and the father for this cause is not compelled to allow his son maintenance; and it is better that some disobedient wives want maintenance, than that the husbands should be thus forced to allow them. 2. This prohibition (if the wife had lived with him) is sufficient to discharge the husband, and nemo per delictum facere potest conditionem meliorem; and the operation of the law will not be stranger than the facts against an express disagreement, which as is said in 27 H. 8, 25, is to maintain a contradiction, because it can never be presumed the husbands contract against his express assent; and he could never have forbid every body, though he forbid these. 3. As this case is found, judgment cannot be given for the plaintiff, because the declaration is of 90l. and the verdict only of 43l. and especially because they find not what the particular wares were, that the Court might have judged upon them. And 2. They ought not to have found that they were necessary, but left that to the Court; as also they ought to have found what trades the plaintiffs were of, else are the juries made Judges of the law as well as fact, 20 Ed. 3, 23. 40 Ed. 3, 15 b. & 9 Co. 74. Verdicts must be certain & that necessaries are to be judged by the Court appears, P. 9 Car. 1, Cr. B. R. Hastings against Duglas in trover for a sprig of diamonds; and M. 27 Eliz. Moor, Burley against Hutton on demurrer the same point ruled, and though it be suitable to the degree of the husband, yet that is not sufficient, unless it be also suitable to his estate, and what is convenient or not is always questio juris, as also reasonable or not, 4 Co. 27, especially when the word [71] necessary here is no more than convenient, and not necessitas naturæ or absolute, without which she cannot subsist; and on the whole he prayed judgment for the defendant. Twisden Justice agreed, that the Court is to judge what is necessary but it must be the Court before whom the tryal is, and if any jury give verdict against directions, a new tryal will be awarded, and upon an elopement she cannot work but only to the advantage of the husband, and therefore she must be kept by the husband. Windham, Debates betwixt the husband and wife are not to be brought to the common law, but are left to the Ordinary to whom it belongeth by the ancient common law, Register 34. That placitum de matrimonio with testamentary causes appertain to his jurisdiction, though when these jurisdictions were taken away men did endeavour to have remedy at law, the Ordinary did allow by paternal care fitting maintenance to the wife, which we cannot do now: but by Foster on elopement, It is fitting and just she should lose all sustenance; and more of these debates have been within these 20 years, than in 200 before: and 7 Membr. 4 H. 3, of Katharine Pinkney was, that she should not extraordinarily grieve her husband, but she may go to the Ordinary, 1 Cr. 17 Car. Drakes case, & 1 Cr. 220, Pannel against Cramont, alimony is maintenance for a woman cast off by her husband, 2 Inst. 434, 435, and recoverable in the Spiritual Court. Post.

Debt.

Wild Recorder, that the action lyeth, else shall the lessee hold his term without rent, for the lessor cannot have remedy having no reversion: this is a remedial [72] case, which shall be favourably construed, and differs not from the case of debt for an annuity granted for years. And so is L. 5 Ed. 4, 2. Yelverton, Lucas against Fulwood, 208, & Bulstrod 151. And as in L. Co. 46, there is no necessity that the party that brings debt should have a reversion, but the rent is reserved by reason of the profits, as Dy. 127. And an attornment is an advantage for the grantee, and an agreement that the tenant would pay his rent to him; and in this case the Court ought to judge according to good conscience; wherefore he prayed judgment pro querente. And Serjeant Sais being for the defendant and absent, the Court would not delay their opinion: but Windham was of opinion the action lyeth, and that on 5 H. 7, 18. The privity of contract is incident to the rent and passeth with it, where the law fixeth the duty it fixeth the remedy and privity, and this is made by the attornment, which is necessary to every grant; and it is not barely, and in its foundation a chose in action as an obligation, but is as a shadow to the body, and accessory to the principal, and passeth as a remedy in the annuity. And the opinion in Dy. 140, pl. 38 is but obiter, and hath been over-ruled; and this is not a remedy de novo, as in L. 5 Ed. 4, 42 b. is said, but a supporting of an ancient remedy, as Lilingstons case is, and as in 45 Ed. 38. When an estate or interest is determined then an action of debt is proper, because it depends on the thing granted, and not on the inheritance. Twisden ad idem, Debt will lye for a rent charge granted for years, because the agreement of paying the rent is as a contract betwixt them, being but for years; as L. Co. 47, and as in 1 Cr. 111. If it were a rent out of a fair, as 20 Ed. 4, 12, which is not good for life, because no rent can issue out of it, and yet by this quasi contract it is good for years, 3 Cr. 895, pl. 13, in 44 Eliz. Benlos against Williams, and the reason of this difference is (Ognels case) because that freehold is in being in one case and not in the other. In Leonards Rep. 441, which he commends, it is said, that the ter-tenant shall be charged by the contract of the grantor and grantee which is evident, because, as 32 Ass. 10, it was always subject to debt, and there is no other remedy left, and it is no prejudice to the lessee, as 9 H. 7, 16. 19 H. 6, 42. 7 Co. 39. And he affirmed that the privity of estate and of contract remain by reason of the attornment, as in a quid j. clamat upon a fine, 4 Co. 49, which amounts to a real contract in case of a lease for life, and personal in lease for years, as 3 Cr. 637, Ard against Watkins. Mallet to the contrary in omnibus. Foster Ch. J. agreed, that an action will lye for the rent against the [73] grantor, not against the lessee, who may be discharged of his rent by the voluntary grant of the lessor (neither who) nor the grantee have thereby any prejudice. No man shall be charged for rent but upon a contract, which is not here either real or personal, which are inseparable, the one to the person, the other to the estate. 3 Ed. 6, Rot. 140, ——— against Bosworth; and 1 Leonard 441. This is left a quere, because there is no privity, for the lessee is but as a conduit-pipe to convey the rent to the grantee, unless he give any thing in the name of seisin that may charge himself with a privity of contract. The rent is reserved payable at a place certain, to which the grantee by general words shall not come to demand the rent, nor is there any fealty incident to the rent in the hands of the grantee as there was in the hand of the grantor. Lease.

In ejectment special verdict find, that bar. & fem, seized in right of the fem having issue W. C. for provision for children made a lease to J. S. to commence on the death of W. C. and his wife without issue male; and after made another lease and delivered it first: then W. C. and his wife died having a son and a daughter, by whom the plaintiff claimed. Whereupon Serjeant Neud. for the plaintiff on 1 Co. 62. conceived this lease to commence on death without issue is good, not only in respect of the lessors, but of the lessee also, and in both C. B. and here these two points were thus agreed, because it may be reduced to a certainty, and is to fall upon a common possibility as well as if it had been upon a life. Also because by construction according to pleading when such a tenant in tayl, as 38 Ed. 3. 26 Dy. 14, 16, 349. 8 Co. 88, being tail to him and his issue male dyeth leaving a son which after dyeth without issue, now he is dead without issue, so 27 H. 8, 13. 6 Co. Treports case, and damages F. 121. Dr. St. 80 F. N. B. 212, in a legal sense: and the words of conveyances have a more liberal construction according to the intent, as 21 H. 6, 10. 3 H. 7, 4. L. Co. 112. Leonard fo. 285. 30 Ass. 20. L. Co. 22. 5 Co. 29, which is plain in this case: here the lease was made before the conveyance, and indorsed on it, which maketh it altogether but as one conveyance, which being for provision for daughters portions; as also that the executors of W. C. should receive the profits for 100 years in trust for other purposes: and here is a daughter unprovided for, she is in nature of a purchaser upon a valuable conside-[74]-ration, and so being precedent to the conveyance of the reversion, which was but voluntary, 2 Cr. 80, shall defeat it. And whereas it is objected, 1. That this would countenance a perpetuity. And 2. Not to be defeated by a common recovery. And 3. Would introduce great inconvenience by the late contingent, which could not be intended for provision for the daughters; and being upon a collateral limitation, shall be taken strictly. To answer which on 1 Co. 85. 6 Co. 40. L. Co. 84, he conceived this a present interest grantable, forfeitable, &c. and may be cut off by a common recovery, though neither by the father nor the son, which would have been a contradiction of the intent of the making; in all marriage agreements there are intermediate estates to preserve remainders to the eldest son. And Hains against Villers B. R. 2 Cr. 90 is, that it may be cut off by a recovery, 8 Co. 96. 10 Co. Lampets case, and no purchaser can be deceived by the lease because it is indorsed on the conveyance of the inheritance, Benloes Rep. the second case. And though there had been no daughters it were nothing to purpose to hinder the other uses, the heir having other provision, 5 Car. 1, Keble against ———, C. B. Rot. 3770. 5 Co. 35. The lessee shall have advantage of which of the accidents first happen, Hutt. 119, as well as if it had been expresly mentioned. And upon the same reason, Noy 132, that if lands had been given J. S. so long as B. hath issue male, notwithstanding infant born after the death of tenant in tayl, the tayl is gone, and the remainder shall be revived. So here, & Meller versus Robinson in Mich. 4 Jac. B. R. 2 Cr. 395. Dy. 14, the authorities to the contrary, P. 55, B. R. Southam versus Clerke, was considered in the C. B. and in Trinity term after, that case adjudged contrary. And in C. B. H. 58, Mustion against Clerke in a second action there adjudged accordingly. Twisd. cited a case of a devise to J. S. on the death of J. N. without issue, and J. N. dyeth, and after his issue dyeth, that the devisee shall take nothing, and so he said was Pell and Browns case, post. 78, pl. 51.

Alienation.

Yarnton for the defendant conceived that the King had good title not to be defeated but by an amoveas manum. But by Twisden Justice, upon conference with Hale Chief Baron; and on 9 H. 6, 20, he said, that it is the constant course to alien before any seisin made, and so it is good, for the utlawry is but a contempt: but yet by Glin for the defendant, It is first in time and the course of the Exchequer in many points contrary to our books, as in Pickerings case, and [75] in the Exchequer they would not allow this elegit, because though a fine conveyeth away the interest, yet it shall not defeat the King of his profits, which begins by the award of the writ of seisin, and otherwise men may by dormant utlawries avoid all judgments. And by Wild for the defendant, When lands are seized, be it by a writ awarded before the fine or after, the Kings hands shall not be removed without writ, according to the custom of the Court of Exchequer. But by Allen for the plaintiff, When there is a seisin virtute officii upon an utlawry, as 9 H. 6, 20. 21 H. 7, 7, Stanf. Prerog. 57. This is discharged by alienation a fortiori a seizin by a capias in manus, where there is no question to be made, but it will pass, because it is but a bare pernancy of the profits; and by him the two Judges in Pickerings case, were divided, but upon mispleading agreed to give judgment for the King. Glyn admitted the fine will pass the interest in the land, but not the pernancy of the profits, which yet he agreed by the death of the party are gone. On a mandamus to be restored to a fellowship in the Colledge of Physitians, the colledge returned that G. as the writ supposes, is not removed, and therefore they cannot restore, against which Glyn excepted, that the retorn in the main is ill, 1. Because they have not answered the writ which supposes Dr. G. one of the society, and turned out, which they agreed, but do not speak any thing of the priviledges and advantages which the letters patents of H. 8 giveth them. 2. They say that 30 persons (by by-law) whereof the president was to be one, were chosen by the name of fellows to assist in comitiis; this is a good by-law, as 4 Co. 78, to give an interest and priviledge to the party chosen, although the corporation commence within time of memory: and they have shewed no cause but his absence, without being called and summoned to answer, which is no sufficient retorn; and he may be unus sociorum, and yet not enjoy all the priviledges of it. 3. It was alledged that the by-law was made ea intentione, that the persons should be present, but do not alledge any positive rule laid upon them. 4. It is said that he was absent but do not say for what cause. 5. They do not say the president had designed any meeting or given notice of it, without which the person cannot divine when it will be. 6. They say they have put in aliam idoneam personam, without naming [76] him. 7. The writ is directed to the president, who returns ego, which ought not to be, this being to him in his politick capacity. 8. This is a pleading, and therefore the word president is not good without the Christian name. 9. They have alledged no issuable plea. Adjornatur. Justice Twisden absente.

Tryal.

Foster on motion put off a tryal, because the defendant was at sea, and had material witness upon agreement, to cross examin the defendants witnesses; but Windham after in his absence denied to do so without judgment given for security, although the attorney had no warrant so to do, because it was the defendants folly to move to put off a tryal, and not to be ready to give security.

50. STEPHENS against BRETHEREDG.

Discontinuance. Br. 38. Leonard 258, pl. 345.

In ejectment Coke for the plaintiff put the case on the special verdict that Sir Fr. Worsely tenant for life the remainder to his wife for life, the remainder to the heirs males of their two bodies, the remainder to Sir Francis his son by another wife and his heirs males, the remainder to his right heir; Sir Francis the father levied a fine [77] with warranty with his wife, which by him doth not work any discontinuance, and consequently no bar to the plaintiff, because the wife hath no remedy on 32 H. 8, or on 4 H. 7, cap. 24, being party to the fine; but she nor he was but tenants for life at the time of the fine, and the estate tail not executed, and so could not be discontinued, as 1 Co. 104. 1 Instit. 22 b. where the ancestor takes an estate of freehold, and the heirs an estate by the same conveyance: so 40 Ed. 3, 9. And the remainder to him there is executed, but not so where a measn estate is limited to another by the same conveyance, as 27 Ed. 3, 87. 1 Inst. 281. And he relyed for this difference upon Lit. sect. 578, the consequence whereof will be, that by the fine of the baron & fem they granted only their estates for life and in tail, but doth not disturb the remainder, because the law will never make a tortious construct. where a good one may be found, 1 Co. 76. And here they granted only what was in them to grant, the estate tail first, and then for life to prevent a forfeiture, 10 Co. 95, Chenois case, and for Dy. 339, pl. 44, there was only estates for life present, with an estate tail to one after an intervenient estate, but here the estate tail is immediately subsequent to the estates for life. 2. The collateral warranty doth no ways affect the lessor of the plaintiff, because the remainder was not displaced at the time of the warranty. So 1 Co. 76. Bredons case, L. Co. 398. Noy, 66. Kell. 79 a. L. Co. 388 b. Also the estate to which the warranty was annexed is determined, Lit. sect. 741, and ought at least to have been avoided by plea, because it doth only bind the right, not extinguish it, L. Co. 372 a. nor give it, L. Co. 385. Arthur Treavor for the defendant conceived the entry of Sir Fr. the son to be taken away because the warranty is descended upon him, for which reason no discontinuance can come in question; but whether or no by the joyning of bar. & fem upon 11 H. 7, c. 20, that the entry of the heir be taken away; this by him extends only to the heir of the first husband, as 1 Inst. 365, and upon that this question is raised, which in 1 Leonard 161, pl. 347, in Estwick & Ridges case is resolved to be out of the statute expresly: and P. 16 Jac. B. R. 2 Cr. 475, because till the death of the husband the statute operates not, 7 Car. 1 Cr. 244. Copland against Piat B. R. 15 Car. at the Assizes resolved accordingly. Twisden, The wife here hath but an estate for life; but by Windham, & Curiam, a gift to the heirs of the husband upon the body of the fem is tail in the fem: but here it is express to the husband for life and the wife for life, and the remainder during their lives not [78] executed. Twisden, If it had been to his heirs, agreed it, but doubted when the words are to the heirs of both. be law, being over-ruled in Browns case, 3 Co. 50. Windham denyes 1 Inst. 365 b. to Adjornatur.

51. GOODIER against CLERKE. Ante 73, pl. 44.

Lease.

Wild for the defendant put the case, that on marriage to be had betwixt W. and M. it was agreed, that on their death without issue male the land shall be charged with 2000l. for portions of daughters, in pursuance whereof a lease is made to commence after the death of M. without issue male in trust accordingly, and after he levied a fine to W. and M. in tail, who died having issue, which after died without issue: and he agreed this lease good, as in Capels case, but subject to be dockt by the tenant in tail, nor is this lease prejudiced by the fine: but when this lease shall commence is the main doubt, whether upon the death, or on the failure of the issue. And he conceived it shall commence immediately upon the death of W. and M. his wife; otherwise that which is made on 1 Co. 156, one contingent will be upon another, which depends upon the other; and hereof the inconvenience would be great, because the law will not admit of such dancing estates that by fractions shall rise and fall, Corbets case 86. The law fixeth on the most near contingent. 2. This is the grant of plain men, as Hob. 304, and shall be taken in the vulgar and common sense, and not in any accurate construction, 1 Cr. 102. Leonard 167, pl. 233. Dy. 361, Cradocks case. The first day of the term for legal acts is the essoin day, but for common parlance the 23 Jan. Yelverton 149, Pool & Needham, 6 Co. Bishop de Baths case. The 3d reason wherefore he conceived the lease determined then is, that otherwise perpetuities would be favoured, which here can never be cut off by any recovery by tenant in tail, and it may as well be for 1000 year. And 4. This is the very intendment of the parties, as upon every marriage agreement, to provide for daughters, and not to enrich the executors. Twisden, The main point is only how the party meant this dying without issue, which the Court agreed. Windham, If it had been limited, that if H. had died without issue J. S. shall have for 100 years, if having issue, only for 50. This sheweth the critical time of having issue or not must be his death. Foster Ch. J. demanded what difference betwixt from the dying without issue, and if he dye without issue. Twisden cited the case of a devise, that J. S. his executors shall sell if he [79] died without issue male if he died, and after his issue dyeth, yet the executors may sell having but a bare authority, and this he said was the nearest that he knew. [80] 57. MANBY against SCOT. In Contract Br. 19.

Bar. & fem.

Justice Windham waved all the exceptions taken to the verdict as not good; and for the main point he conceived, that this express prohibition will weigh much, but as to that exception that the jury have found, that they were necessaries, and suitable to her degree; which on L. Co. 56, reasonable time (59) shall be judged by the Court. And in Hastings case it was found specially, that she was a lords daughter, but yet it being in a verdict, it is good enough; though in special pleading it ought to be ascertained that issue may be taken thereon: as upon tendre of amends the certainty must appear by averment, upon which as the common course Bar. F. the jury may find it reasonable or not, and it lyeth in their cognizance so to do by direction of the Court before whom the issue is tryed, and they may find it generally or specially at their election as in all other cases. For the main point that 11 H. 6, 30, by Martin is but obiter, and though some general recoveries have been, yet none upon a special verdict: but it is an unshaken maxim, that the fem, Cod. 5, tit. 16, l. 9, without command precedent, or assent subsequent cannot charge the husband for necessaries, though she hath been compared to an infant: and it hath been said that these things came to the use of the husband. An infant is capable of doing any act for his advantage, and so is no ways like a fem covert. A lease by him without rent is not void as it were if made by her. She hath no will nor capacity, but is as a dead person without her husband. Her bond for necessities is a nullity, and non est factum may be pleaded; her will is subject to her husbands, and is his, and she is as a servant to his master, a monk to an abby, &c. She is a person disabled to any act of benefit to her self or husband, as 2 Cr. 617, Tracy versus Dutton, nor needs there any notice hereof. 2. It is no inconvenience that she hath no remedy at law for a livelihood, because she hath a better remedy before the Ordinary, to whom the law hath given a paternal care in such matrimonial and testamentary causes, and he may allow her maintenance as anciently as any law in being what ever. And this hath been always practised by them accordingly, being established in them by the Kings authority, 1 Cr. 16. 1 Cr. 220, and though they do severe acts, yet the Court will award no prohibition, because every Court is presumed to do right according to their laws and customs, as 2 Cr. 364. And alimony is with them in the proper jurisdiction in the Spiritual Court, Register 34, [81] 38. 21 H. 3, Prohibition F. 31. Attachment on Prohib. 8. Upon a divorce propter sævitiam, which is only a mensa & thoro, the Ordinary may restore the goods which the wife brought with her to her husband, because these chattels are incident to the main cause of matrimony, and he had cognizance of them by excommunication only; but yet upon a significavit the King will imprison him till he hath performed the sentence, and upon a caution put in he may be discharged. And that president in 8 H. 3, that the sheriff seized the lands of J. S. is eo quod idem J. S. excommunicatus est usq; he takes his wife & lege maritali illam tractaverit: so 4 H. 3, 8. 18 H. 3, 10. And the temporal power came in aid of the spiritual, and the common law doth allow this proceeding, being in aid of it, and all make but one compleat law: and this is the most prudent way that a reconciliation may be first had, if possible. 3. Though the wife do convert goods to the use of her husband, he shall not be charged without his assent, else might she build houses with her husbands money; and Det. F. 163. 21 H. 7, 40. Bread bought for the houshold will not bind the husband by special verdict so found without his assent, which yet is easily intended by that general authority that he giveth: as the baily of a lord, or the purveyor commoin, and the abbe, but this general authority is a good evidence only of the assent; and all the books run upon this express difference, 21 H. 6, 22. 13 R. 2, Annuity F. 50, 2. F. N. B. 120. 27 H. 8, 24, 25. And there is no case but men may find some opinion for and against it in the books, arguendo Hob. 234, & Dy. 234. The very gift of the case was upon the assent of the husband, not whether he shall be charged, because the things were necessary; and that which staggered his opinion was the frequent finding of it in Guild-hall and here, upon which recoveries have been had: yet upon consideration he found them consonant to the rules of law, being by direction of the Court. And although she were enabled to take up necessaries, yet not against the express prohibition of the husband, else would she be judge of her own convenience and necessaries after the fact done, which is a mischief like seizing mens estates before conviction: it were more necessary and convenient to complain first, that it may be known in whom the fault is; and so he conceived the action doth not lye. 2. Twisden to the contrary, but agreed the verdict well found in both points, her going away being not material, nor will the husbands prohibition be valid, because hereby were there but one tradesman in a town, he might by this means defeat her of maintenance: he agreed the difference put of spe-[82]-cial and general verdicts, as upon a reasonable fine of a copyholder, &c. by the direction of the Court. The reasons why the husband is chargeable are, 1. Because it is a thing of necessity, and that she must live is the law of nature, and the only medium is food and rayment; and because she hath no remedy her self, the consequence must be that her husband is chargeable; as I may throw another mans goods over-board when a boat is over-charged, 9 H. 7. A lease by infant without rent is void, and a lease by husband and wife by acceptance will bind her after her husbands death. So Clare against De la Val H. 2 Car. 1, Rot. 521. And the goods of a monk taken up in vacation of the abbe shall bind the successor, 13 H. 7, 3. And so 11 Co. 61. New offices granted for necessary subsistence will bind the successor of a bishop. 2. The law taketh all away from the wife, which is a kind of consideration for her thus to charge him. Trover may lye against husband and wife, which sheweth she may convert to his use, 9 Co. 73. And the wife, as Coxe against May, 11 Car. 1, may charge her husband for any wrong; they shall both be taken for her trespass a fortiori, for that without which she cannot live. 3. It is no more than the husband must have done himself; it is agreed the husband must maintain his wife. And 1 Cr. 16 is no determinate opinion: for alimony probably never was within ecclesiastick jurisdiction, because it is not mentioned, 24 H. 8, 12, in 9 Co. 9, in any old books, nor in that statute that takes away appeals from Rome. He agreed that matrimonial causes are of spiritual cognizance as the right of matrimony, as unq; accuple, or divorces, 4 Co. Bumtings case, 7 Co. 44, and bastardy general, but not of the consequents, 48 Ed. 3, 18. 50 Ed. 3, 19. And appurtenances of matrimony, as the age of consent shall be tryed by the common law. And Debt F. 8, she must live and be maintained as well when she is single, as when married, and so that cannot be a necessary dependant upon that jurisdiction that marriage is. Also the Spiritual Court cannot sequester the estate but only issue forth process, the result whereof must come again to the common law, and therefore inutilis labor. The presidents prove that the common law had care of it; but being of ancient time and not used, it is of little force, and the assistance of the secular power was only to imprison the person: as 4 H. 3. They could do no good to bind the land; and the other writ was an habere facias sesinam after the death of the husband upon a gift in fr. marriage, as 37 H. 6, 14, and though they have jurisdiction, they may allow alimony: but 2 Inst. 492, not of necessity upon a divorce [83] propter sævitian (they need not) give alimony at first dash; if the husband should absent himself, she will be without remedy. Also that men may sue in the Spiritual Court (ergo they cannot sue at common law) is a fallible argument, for some causes are indifferent to both; and that Court, as M. 2 Car. 1, which first is possessed shall take the conusance of the cause: as annuity by prescription out of a vicaridge and incontinency is not directly examinable here, but yet ex latere it may, as upon defamatory words, 21 Car. 1, Globeries case, the wife may bind the husband to the peace, and here it is not at all examined as this case is in 1 Leonard Stone against Withipoll. If it had not been necessary for her maintenance or degree at least it would not have lain: but as the same wind may lead to contrary ports, so the same arguments may be used several ways; yet this is the most convenient and prudent way, because whatever she doth will come under a stricter scrutiny: nor doth she begin with execution first, or is her own judge, but the Court by whose direction the jury find their verdict; nor is there one book contrary to this opinion, Det. 163, and all being of things not necessary, V. N. B. 62, is by a general contract only, which without an assent or command will not bind, as 21 H. 7, 40. And of Poyns case, nothing is to be made without a gloss, which may be to any sense: the authorities upon which he grounds his opinion are, that Rolls told him there was no law to compel alimony in England, and so said Glyn & Neudigate Serjeants, and Hutt. 105, 107. 1 Cr. 34, 139. Promise of payment by husband upon request makes the request the cause of the action, and therefore an action upon the case would lye, which could not be unless there be a duty; and likewise this action is brought in (1658) when no alimony was allowable, which must be taken notice of, though it be an usurped power as to the suppression of right, which is by force; but acts of jurisdiction set up by an usurped power shall not be taken notice of, as the giving cognizance of alimony to the Chancery, which being taken away, she may resort to common law, wherefore he conceived that judgment shall be for the plaintiff. 3. Mallet ad idem, 38 Ed. 3. 1 Brief 644. 1 Cr. 358. 4. Foster Ch. J. clearly agreed with Windham to the contrary, that the action lyeth not, because it properly appertains to the Spiritual Courts who have cognizance of the principal cause. As a solemn vow made to God, which is the ground of their jurisdiction, the fem cannot consent without her husband, but hath subjected her will (by her first transgression) to the will of her husband; she hath no other will, and she is bound to know this, [84] and is so much the more blameable if she do contrary. And Hob. 107 was grounded only upon the promise of the husband, because the fem could not contract, as is expressed: and in Sir Marmuduke Langdales case, the cause of alimony was 12 Co. 50, taken from the High Commissioners, and left to the Ordinary, because it is his of right, that judgment giving no new jurisdiction. Also a rationabile estoverium will lye at law, though it hath not been used of latter times; and these causes are accessory, which follow their principals, and there is no want of presidents of alimony during that time and before in Chancery, and the inconvenience hereof will be much greater than can be of the contrary, and so he conceived the action lyeth not. Post.

Retorn.

Wild for the colledge agreed to the exceptions as invalid as this case is, but one, viz. by the Act of Parliament 34 H. 8, there is none but presidents elect and censors, but all the commonalty are socii, and so is Doctor Goddard as much as any man, and they only desire to be restored to the place and priviledges according to the Act and letters patents. The writ is general, and doth not particularize any priviledge, and therefore the colledge not bound to answer otherways; and the thirty chosen by by-law are only called socii by that, not by the Act of Parliament. And by Allen, This is but a profit of being a fellow, to which he cannot be restored alone without the principal. Charleton Serjeant for the doctor, The writ distinctly requireth restitution ad locum statum & previlegia unius sociorum, which is a particular office, and however made is not material; but it being distinct from the commonalty, and the place being distinct, he cannot be expelled without being called to answer; and so he enforced all the former exceptions that the counsell on the other side agreed, but as not material here. Glyn the Kings Serjeant, The retorn ought to have answered the previledges and incidents to the place expresly; and by the retorn it doth appear that there is a priviledge to which the [85] doctor was elected and chosen, and in which he had a right and freehold pro tempore. Finch for the colledge, This doth not concern any freehold, but a priviledge occasionally made for convenience by by-law, for which no writ of restitution will lye, because it concerns no matter of government or legal interest. Justice Wyndham conceived the retorn good, because it doth not mention that the eight mentioned by statute are only choseable out of the thirty made by by-law, but that the thirty were only chosen for convenience and consultation, of which the Court cannot take such notice as to restore him, because it appeareth to be but a burden to him, as the case in H. 7. And as their election was voluntary, so might their ejection. Justice Twisden ad idem, Restitution lyeth not for the dividend of a fellow or for priviledges, only if he be not amoved from his place, as he that is removed from his being of a corporation by by-law, is removed from part of his place it self, and in all agreed with Windham and Foster Ch. J. to the same intent, because no reward or fee for such attendance and consultation is due; nor are the eight necessarily to be chosen out of the thirty, but that they may augment or decrease the number as they please; and so by all he was denied restitution and the retorn ruled good.

Indictment.

He was indicted for words spoken in his sermon, that though the great ones grin and shew their teeth, yet the faithful were more numerous: and he exhorted them to stand fast, for God would send his angel to fight for them. And the Court conceived the indictment sufficient; and Windham wished them more frequent, because though they do not talk treason expresly, yet tantamount.

61. ALEWAY against ROBERTS. M. 1658, Rot. 894. Dam. 852.

Scire facias. Damages shall not be assessed by the same inquest on judgment given by defaults. 3 Ed. 3, 23 b. pl. 13. Dower F. 73. 3 Cr. 557. 14 H. 7, 25, pl. 5.

Stroud for the plaintiff, that the heir of the ter-tenant that died after judgment, and before the writ of inquiry of damages, and the other tenants, &c. against whom dower is demanded, shall answer damages. The fem brings scire facias against the heir (the tenant in the first action bringing a writ of error, whereby he suspended the judgement, which was afterwards affirmed, and then he dying, the plaintiff after writ of dower brings scire facias against the heir). She had actual possession of the land, but yet the damages are not gone, because it is an original and perfected before the writ of enquiry is awarded, because it issueth only [86] upon allegation of a dying seized. And 10 R. 1, Rot. 28, among the records of the Roundhouse, Mandevils case, dower de virgata terræ, of which her husband endowed her, she had judgment for her dower but not for damages: and at this day the original writ 11 Co. 40 b. is determined, in Trin. 51, Spitler against Farmer Stiles 290, pl. 634, where Roll then Judge, cited a case, that judgment of damages was reversed, and the judgment of the dower held good because they are distinct judgments: and the sheriff needs not retorn his writ of seisin because the original is determined. And damages are only given by the statute of Merton cap. 1, and were not at the common law. Lit. sect. 39. In a writ of right of dower no damages is at this day. And Trin. 50. B. R. Zanchy versus ——— and this case is within the statute, and that this scire facias is well brought against the heir and ter-tenants, because dower is one of the three favourites of the law ranked with life and liberty: and the delay of the execution is the parties own though in course of law; yet when the judgment is affirmed, the Court will suppose that error was brought for delay, 50 Ed. 3, 3 a. And if she should have it upon the act of God, that had determined her own estate a fortiori, when she hath her estate continuing: and Dower F. 185. Unless such an action had been well brought an interpleader would not have been allowed, 17 Ed. 3, 67 b. 10 Ed. 3, 41. L. Co. 33. The surmise of dying seized, 14 H. 8, 25, may be either before or after judgment, being only ex officio to inform the Court, and so were the presidents upon search in the Com. Bank, the seisin was awarded here upon the affirming the judgment, and then a writ to the ter-tenant to know why they should not have a writ of enquiry, after which the tenant dyeth in this case. Powis for the defendant, The ancestor tenant of the land in tail made a feoffment before his death, and after the writ of enquiry awarded he died, by which the damages being not ascertained and only chargeable upon his person, are gone, 9 H. 3, 7. 20 H. 3, cap. of Merton, was made only to help the defects in the quarentine; the words whereof extend only to the deforciatores ipsi, not to any feoffees: and because the act of God hath determined that writ and the damages, of which it was the plaintiffs own folly she had not execution of before, and they are only given to the woman in recompence of the trespass done to her in detaining her dower, which is distinct from the real action. And though actio personalis quæ oritur ex contractu dyeth not, yet quæ oritur ex delicto moritur cum persona, as all trespasses, &c. Dy. 271, 14 a. 12 H. 7, 22 b. [87] and the realty shall not support it as annexed to it, because in all mixt actions where the real part is determined, as 15 H. 2, 4 a. it shall not support the personalty, but every man in mixt actions, 37 H. 6, 35 b. shall render damages only for his own wrong by the Statute of Glocester, as in the 2 Inst. 284, and the feoffees shall not be charged in damages. Had the damages been ascertained in the time of the heir, that had been as a judgment in debt to bind the land, as Yelverton 112, Bromly against Littleton; and then should a writ of enquiry issue forth, yet the feoffee shall not be chargeable here, because he cometh in after the dower assigned, and had he come in before the dower assigned, as L. Co. 33, and pleaded any false plea, he shall be charged for the whole, because it doth not appear but that he is the deforceor. Also if he doth not in a writ brought against him plead specially, and shew that he hath been always ready, 14 H. 8, 25. Dr. St. 84 a. Issue F. 133. Dower F. 59, he shall be likewise chargeable, but in no case when he cometh in after judgment, because he hath done no wrong. 11 H. 4, fol. ult. cited in Ognels case, he hath no way to defend himself, and so nemo punietur pro alieno delicto, 26 Ass. 4. Damages F. 68, 102, and the damages do not charge the land, Libr. Entr. 226, 227, and so the land shall not be extended for them. The Court conceived the only material point to be the non-ascertaining of the damages, without which the last judgment alone is not such a clogge upon the land; but this resteth upon the first judgment that the land shall be charged, because that is a final judgment, and is general, including both land and damages, which is only suspended till the ascertaining of them which are for the seisin of the husband. But by Allen for the defendant, non liquet till the writ of enquiry retorned, whether she shall have damages or no. Adjornatur.

A prohib. was prayed to the Admiralty in suit there, on a stipulation for security made by rule of the Admiralty in a cause whereof they have cognizance, but denyed because this is not questionable here as a parol agreement, though it be collateral & extrajudicial as to the main cause, because the order is grounded upon that agreement of the parties, and because, by Wind. if a prohibition should be awarded hereupon, all the jurisdiction of the Admiralty would be defeated, 16 H. 6, and these interlocutory securities are incident to it. And by Foster Ch. Just. This is for benefit of trade, and so shall not be altered without great advice, and so said Mallet and Twisden Justices. but by Twisden, If the agreement had been to perform the decree it had not been to be doubted, but if a bond had been given for such security it should have been sued at the common law. Jones for the plaintiff, The libel is in nature of a scire facias upon the security, which they will make in nature of a recognizance, and so prefer it to a judgment at common law, and this against executors. Also it doth appear that the party and surety bound only themselves and not their executors, and yet this is but error, not cause of prohibition, as if they will not, as 8 Ed. 4, admit of an allowance of the precedency of debts or fitting pleas, as modus decimandi, a prohibition shall go. And by Twisden, A conviction by view cannot be reversed but by error, as Roll often said: yet Shelton who was clerk of the peace of Middlesex said, that it had been otherwise ruled in Blackwels case, Trin. 1660, according as he before said in B. Travers.

In debt for rent the defendant pleads an assignment by the assent of the plaintiff with notice; the plaintiff replyes he did not consent: and after verdict for the plaintiff Scrogs moved for judgment on Renolds against Bulkly, Hob. The issue is well, being upon a good affirmative and negative. So Kent against Hull, Hob. and a verdict pursuant. So Nichols case, 5 Co. and 32 H. 8, 30 doth fully help this defect, whether the Court be satisfied the plaintiff had title or not, which is not material: and though the issue be upon never so frivulous a point, the judgment ought to be given. Allen for the defendant, If the plea is pertinent to the declaration, though it be immaterial, yet the plaintiff shall have judgment, but not so when the verdict upon such insufficiency of plea it is found for the defendant: and here issue by the replication is not offered upon the matter of the plea, which was an assignment by the assignee with notice to the plaintiff, and the assent of the plaintiff was but surplusage, and so the replication doth not answer the bar, and [90] therefore there ought to be a repleader. The case of Reynolds was grounded upon the verdict, which by finding an entry doth imply an ouster, which the Court agreed. And by Twisden, Where the issue is good, as 1 Cr. 78. Hob. 76, to bar the plaintiff of his action, if the issue be upon an immaterial point, that is good, upon which the Court may give judgment, but not so where it appeareth the plaintiff cannot have judgment, as in debt on bond, the defendant pleaded per minas, the plaintiff said he made it voluntarily without duces of imprisonment; the defendant rejoyned that he made it per duces: whereupon the plaintiff takes issue, and repleader awarded, 16 Jac. and so in Jennings & Lees case, Hob. 197. Godbolts Rep. 2 Cr. 585, Saltkacke against Thorn, because the plaintiff cannot have judgment. Windham also conceived the best way for expedition to be to replead, but yet he said Reynolds case is not answered, as issue on sufficient repair of hedges in trespass tempore transgressionis, but not at the time of the action; but here he said that the issue is well enough. Mallet contra, the verdicts shall be favour and no repleader here. Foster Ch. Just. that there shall be a repleader, the issue being immaterial; and for this reason were the words in the writ of error (or false judgment) which was to leave it to the discretion to judg whether, notwithstanding the errors assigned were not good, the plaintiff had no cause of action on the whole record. And though the justices may tax the parish, yet not the hundred; nor is a constable bound to repair any bridge. Also the bridge is in two hundreds, and one only is taxed, which by him is illegal; but the order being after a verdict, the Court will not allow such exceptions against it as against pleadings, and therefore they affirmed the order.

In a writ of error of an action upon the case where it is declared that the defendant brought an action upon the case, upon which the plaintiff was arrested, not shewing the whole writ, which, per Curiam, is the course of the C. B. and thereupon dimunition should be alledged and not demurred to the declaration for that cause; for had there been no writ in the C. B. yet after verdict the judgment is good, because this Court will intend they had a writ. Foster Ch. Just. said, that for fifty years the writ of clausum fregit, with declaration in any other action, as debt, &c. in C. B. had been practised. 2. The custom of London is alledged to be a custom through all the land, which is but a surplusage, per Curiam. 3. The writ is, de transgressione coram R. Foster & sociis suis, where the plea is only before Foster, and Hide being present, but at the issue Tyrrel was added to them. 4. A misericordia is entered notwithstanding the general pardon, which is well enough, but it shall not be estreated or affeared, for the pardon doth not alter the judgment but only taketh away the penalty; and so is the course of the Court, per Curiam, adjornatur till the pronotaries certifie their course, but a capiatur is not entered at all.

But the defendant must rely upon no award made, as H. 22 Car. 1, Ken against Peeling, on award to pay at or in the house, adjudged naught, because at and in are all one: but per Curiam, But where payment is to be in the house of a stranger, H. shall not be presumed to be able to perform it; but otherwise where the payment is to be at the house of a stranger.

Scire facias. So for damages on rec. in assize against 2. Execution, F. 81. 27 Ed. 3, 80. Seu. 4, pl. 7, is express accordant L. Co. 386 b. The difference between the real and personal lieu, and also the same in 3 Co. 14, of which see in Assets per Br. 15.

In a scire facias against one joyntenant surviving without the heirs of the other on judgment in debt against both; this by Winnington is good at the plaintiffs election on 1 Ed. 3, 13, pl. 41. 3 Ed. 3, 11, pl. 37, because that where ter-tenants are charged all must be named; but not so when any party is himself, 29 Ass. 27, against whom the scire facias is awarded, because this is a personal thing, for which the execution at common law was personal. And this is but pleaded to the writ, and therefore concluding in bar to the action, it is naught. Wild for the defendant supposed the land was not chargeable at common law, before Westm. 2, and by this statute, as Langfords case, the real line is put all in the same case, and the judgment being joynt shall never survive. 2. As to the writ, that concludes only that he ought not to have execution, juxta executionem brevis; this per Curiam is well. Windham, The difference, as 16 H. 7, is betwixt a real and personal execution: and by Twisden, After the death of the survivor he must charge all the ter-tenants, which proves that it doth not survive, 29 Ed. 3, and Herberts case. On a recognizance the plaintiff hath electi-[93]-on to take out a capias, or elegit, or scire facias, and yet when the elegit or scire facias is brought, it must be brought against all, especially because the bond is joyntly against two, and this scire facias is only to revive the judgment, not to have execution: and yet by Windham, he must joyn them both, because though he may take a capias upon it against the survivor alone, yet he may also take out a scire facias to have execution, which ought to be against all, and therefore so ought the first scire facias to be, but Twisden doubted. Also the copyholder hath no other place than the Court to pass his estate, and therefore no such uncertainty as at common law. 82. In Error Br. 117.

A warrant of attorney given by agreement of the parties may be entred after the death of the party the same day by compulsion of the Court, being in the term, but not so where it is by covin, yet per Curiam, the judgment being acknowledged before the Judges before, although not signed by the clerk with taxing of costs till after his death, which by them is the compleating only of the same judgment, though they conceive a judgment without costs taxed to be only erroneous, not void: but Hern Secondary to the contrary. And by Allen, The very signing of the book by the clerk is the essence of the judgment; and by the death of the party before this, the authority of the attorney is determined. But by Windham, The signing is but only a ministerial act, the original of which is in the judgment of the Court, who notwithstanding the death of the party may enter it the same term, because the act of the Court shall prejudice no man. But by Twisden, The Court must pronounce the judgment first, and then if it be not entred, the party shall have no prejudice but on a non sum informatus, which is but the plea of the attorney, the judgment thereupon is not before that the book be signed, which is the judgment of the Court. All agree, that if this were per covin, it shall be avoided. Adjornatur.

Covenant.

Jones for the plaintiff, A covenant that he is seized of a good estate in fee, the plaintiff takes issue by replication that he was not seized of a good estate in fee: the defendant rejoyns, that he was seized of as good an estate as Sir J. W. who granted it to him, had; which by Jones is nothing to the purpose, because that he was seized of a good estate, according to such an indenture, refers to the estate passed by the indenture it self, and not to him that made it, which the Court agreed, and judgment pro querente, nisi.

The question was, whether an avowry being made for rent due 1661, shall be an estoppel to an avowry for all rents due before: and by Jones, This is in nature of an acquittance and disclaimer, there being a retorn habend awarded. Allen for the defendant, who doth not avow but makes cognizance as baylies in both the cases: and admitting that judgment in the latter avowry shall bar, yet it shall not do here: 1. Devise.

Allen for the plaintiff, The value of the capite lands is 10l. per ann. of the soccage 30 added by special agreement of the Court and parties; but by him this is not material, because if the will be good it must be good for all the soccage lands, or none, because the capite lands cannot descend in point of recompence because he was seized only [96] thereof in reversion after the death of his wife: in the stat. 32 H. 8, cap. 1, there are three clauses, 1. That of soccage only all may be devised. 2. That of knights-service two parts, and thereby that he that hath knights service and capite may devise only two parts of the whole: and the heir of tenant only in soccage shall not be in ward for his land, but by knights service he shall be in ward for all his land, knights service and soccage: this statute only extended to estates in possession, but 34 H. 8 came to explain that of estates in remainder; for which, as Lovies case, one shall not be in ward at the common law during the estate for life remaining, Dy. Bokenhams case: but here, because it is doubted whether by the limitation of such uses this be not the old remainder, and so in nature of a reversion for which one shall not be in ward. But the point now in question was not disputed there, being taken as granted: and the main question is upon the 32 H. 8, 1, where lands are given to two and the heirs of one of them, whether here the heir shall be in ward; and therefore this estate shall be such an estate that may by construction be said to hold of the King and to be tenant to him, and therefore makes this land also within the first clause, that only two parts shall be devised; but this is an enacting clause intended ad unum, and shall never by construction be drawn to other lands, or relate to any other clause. Also knights service tenure doth not by this statute hinder men from disposing all their soccage lands as knights service in capite doth. Also another reason is, that such a tenant shall be in ward for his body only, and not for his lands, where they were joyntenants in capite to the heirs of one who hath soccage lands, because the statute doth only give the ward of the body and not of the soccage lands; and therefore by the meaning of this Act he may dispose of all his soccage lands; for at common law the King had wardship neither of body nor lands, but only by this enacting clause he is entituled to the ward only of the body, and therefore such tenant shall not be said to hold of him, which would alter former clauses of that law. Jones for the defendant agreed, that if the land be an impediment to devise, the value will not be necessary, because the knights service lands cannot make up any thing of a third part: and that it is an impediment is apparent by 32 H. 8, cap. 1, § 4, n. 1. The third clause without which knights service could not have been devised, and by this two parts are allowed to him that hath an estate of inheritance, as the defendant hath here, and the King by it hath title of wardship either at com-[97]-mon law, as when the tenant for life died, the heir should be in ward, 33 H. 6, 5. 28 Ed. 3, 93. 27 Ed. 3, 80. The land is not absolutely charged but chargeable upon the contingent death of tenant for life, and therefore it may reasonably be intended that such remainder-man could not devise all away in the mean time, and defeat the King, or else by this statute at least, that the King shall be intended to have this benefit, as a necessary consequent of the Kings advantage given him by the wardship of the body, which would be fruitless without such intendment; and all along this Act hath been taken for the Kings behoof, 6 Co. 76. And the nearest case hereto is that of a reversion, which is construed to be within the statute, by reason there is a tenure implyed, which is not material, the King being intituled to his wardship. Twisden, He that is joyntenant for life with fee expectant, cannot devise in probability, at least within the statute, which Windham agreed, Dy. 366 b. pl. 38. Adjornatur.

1 Cr. 350.

In debt upon a counter-bond for security of bayl given for appearance of the defendant, the defendant pleaded non damnificatus; the plaintiff replyed non componit; the defendant rejoyns, that the first bond given was void by 23 H. 6, 10, and that there was no latitat issued forth; this by Pemberton is no departure, and also the suit is only quia timet, the execution on the former bond will be had, which is no damnification, being, as it is affirmed by the defendant, without reasonable cause, by reason there is no latitat. And here the rejoynder on 1 Instit. 304, Dy. 207, is not disaffirmant or varying from the bar, as in 1 Ed. 4, 5. 21 H. 7, 27, but in corroboration of it, 1 Cr. 387. And thus the rejoynder is here, because it could not have been pleaded in bar without a conclusion of sic damnificatus, which had, as in Com. 20. 20 H. 6, 16. 1 Instit. 303, waved the special matter which here is most properly included. Wild Serjeant to the contrary. It is said, that the defendant was in the gaol debita legis forma, and in the bond whereby he is bound to the plaintiff as his security, the latitat is recited, which is an estoppel to say this after against the security, that there was no latitat (otherwise it might have been against the sheriff.) And 2. This matter is a departure, because one cannot plead non est factum to such a suit, but is lyable to be sued and arrested for it, which is damages and just cause of fear. Twisden agreed that here the party is concluded to plead this against the [98] bayl, and that the very non-appearance was a damnification, be the bond void, or not, which cannot by special pleading be made void on the stat. 23 H. 6, 10, § N. in the rejoynder: but by Pemberton, The plea only mentioneth a bond in which such a latitat is recited, which is no estople: but by Windham, The defendant affirms, that the plaintiff is bound for appearance on the latitat, and not barely recites it, which the Court agreed, and that the bond is only voidable by plea, because it supposes danger of arrest by just presumption of law. And by Twisden, This is but a recital, and shall not estop, but because this is a damnification. Per Curiam, judgment for the plaintiff.

Fraud.

Woolmer for the plaintiff, It doth not suppose that the marriage is fraudulent or without the parties consent, but it may be according to vulgar acceptation fraud if it be done without consent of parents, and no other fraud appears by that verdict. But by Allen on the other side, The justices having judg'd it fraud, this Court cannot alter their judgment, being confirm'd by the law of the times. But Twisden Justice doubted whether an action may not be brought against the justices on this judgment, on refusal to refer it to the bishop of the diocess, according to the direction of the Court. Entred Trin. 1659, Rot. 959. Adjornatur.

89. In the Exchequer Chamber.

Entry.

On Swain against Rogers, 1 Cr. 32, & Heatons case 42 Eliz. cited by Hale, the Barons and Judges being there, it was said, that the entry of a capias or misericordia after a general pardon is not usually done in the Com. Ba. with a pardonatur in the margent, but otherwise it is in Ba. Reg. but the one or the other may be done on good reason, because he that is pardoned may be within the exceptions of the Act, and must aver aliquando, that he is not the same person excepted. Post.

It was also doubted by the Judges in the Exchequer Chamber, whether the entry of judgment in English be good, it is considered that the plaintiff shall recover the pleadings then being in English: and it was said, that in B. R. several judgments had for this error been reversed, but by them this is intended of the judgments of Inferiour Courts, and not [99] of the judgments of C. B. Yet Jeaquell an attorney affirmed, that it was so done of them also, because it doth only imply time future, whereas the judgment is always. Therefore it is considered that the plaintiff do recover in the present, but by them this is a fault amendable.

Per Curiam, The first bayl is only to appear to account, and then on judgment quod computit capias shall issue, and a scire facias against his second bayl for the sum for which he is adjudged to account, which unless he can discharge, shall lye upon him; and therefore the scire facias must be, that he render the body, or pay the whole sum.

96. Error Fitzh. 40.

Brief d'enquiry.

In repl' Jones moved for staying the filing of a writ of enquiry, because there is no judgment entred upon the roll: but by Allen, this is not usual, but only that it be signed, which the Court agreed. Also the damages and costs are 20 pound, which, the tryal being in Durham, was held reasonable. And Twisden cited the case of Amersely, where in repl' the jury found 300l. damages, and upon a new tryal upon supposition that that was excessive, another jury gave 500l. and another after that 300l. and all without remedy by the whole Court, because only the costs are by them afferable.

Prohibition.

Williams shewed cause against a prohibition to the sessions of Mongomery, because, as Bagnal against Owen 3 Car. 1, the Court there had jurisdiction mixt, and have proceeded to a decree, whereas it might have been demurred when the cause was first brought by bill, being for a trespass. But by Powis for the prohibition, If it appears that there is no manner of equity in the bill, the Court, notwithstanding a decree, may award prohibition. Twisden, Hereby, upon 34 H. 8, the jurisdiction of Southwales will come in question, and therefore they would not be content only with the [101] suggestion, but would see the bill it self, for he held that a prohibition is not honourary, but ought to issue when requisite; whereupon the prohibition was waved until a view had of the bill.

Judgment may be against the ter-tenant, that he shall be in misericordia, notwithstanding that the vouche be within age. Judgment for the demandant.

Certiorari.

A certiorari to remove a record is retornable immediatè regularly, though the party for whose benefit it is may have it at a day certain: and on diminution alledged after (nothing being done upon the certiorari) a scire facias issued, which because it had not 15 days, Bear Serjeant moved to have the judgment reversed for error; but because no oir thereof is demanded, but the defendant pleaded gratis in nullo est erratum, therefore the advantage of the defect of the scire facias is waved. Bear for the plaintiff, in the error judged, that albeit that the scire facias is taken out by him, yet it is entered by the defendants attorney; yet because that the teste of the scire facias doth not appear of record, the Court awarded the proceedings to be good: but because the certiorari was of record coram Olivero St. John & sociis suis, and the record that is certified is by R. Foster, &c. the writ was abated: yet by Twisden, this is no advantage to the plaintiff in error, because the second writ of error is no supersedeas.

Jours.

Keeling conceived Shelleys case, being of land was more strong than this, that the term is but one day, and this judgment was for a just debt and to prevent the spoil made by the wife, as it appears by affidavit. Twisden Justice conceived, that in many cases the law will not allow fractions, but, as 4 H. 6, in many it will; as if the plaintiff purchase a new assize the same day that he had judgment, that another writ is depending is no plea. Also if an executor pay a debt in the morning, he shall not be allowed to plead riens entre manus jour of the writ purchased the same day. Keeling said it was agreed on the indictment of the murderers of the late King, which was contra pacem of the same King, that [103] by all the Judges of England this was good. But by Twisden, A recovery is but one act, otherwise of such a judgement as this is on warrant of attorney, and yet this shall be avoided if it be by covin, but it is not perfect until signed by the clerk, but is countermanded by his death that made the warrant before judgment. By Allen, And the consequence hereof is to allow this judgment given on warrant by a dying person who could not write his name, which would be an occasion of great trouble; and such a judgment in the City of London acknowledged by fraud would be vacated. But by Twisden, This is but evidence to a jury, and not to avoid the judgment here. Also by Windham, By the acknowledgment of the judgment, which was in his life, the warrant of attorney is determined, and the other proceeding is the act of the Court, which on an act well begun, will not make fraction of a day, which the Court agreed. And by Foster, To question this judgment upon this nicity, would introduce greater inconvenience, for it may be avoided by error or by pleading of collusion, and therefore shall not be vacat by motion, but shall stand; for on a non sum informatus rules are not necessary by the clerk, according to the course of the Court.

108. ROBINSON against AMP.

Siderf. 48, pl. 7. In Deceit Br. 2.

Deceit. 2 Cr. 505. 3 Cr. 77, pl. 32.

Maynard moved in arrest of judgment in an action of covenant for suing on a statute contrary to the defeazance, which by him is no breach of covenant, but he ought to have brought an action of deceit; for in covenant he ought to alledge a particular breach, 43 Ed. 3, 20, and conclude contra formam conventionis, which he hath not done here. Allen, The covenant is broken because it was to deliver up the statute to be cancelled, and cause the same to be vacated: when, as Means case, the money should be paid, and here by suing out execution upon the statute, he hath quite disabled himself to deliver it up, but it might have been otherwise, if the covenant had been only, it should be void on payment of the money, there an audita querela or action of deceit might have been the proper remedy: but this is more of an act to be done on the defendants part, and the breach is generally assigned in suing out execution, which relates to all the points of the covenant. Maynard, The covenant is not that he will not do any mean acts, for he may sue execution and yet cause the statute to be cancelled: but per Curiam, this is [104] only a performance of words, not in reality, because hereby the party that is to pay his money is without benefit. Also covenant will not lye upon a bare defeasance without this further covenant to deliver up: and by Foster & Twisden, The particular breach must be assigned, but because that they doubted whether this be a breach of the covenant of deceit. Adjornatur.

Tryals.

A tryall at Bar at the latter end of a term may be granted, notwithstanding the defendant hath not pleaded, because else the plaintiff having time to make up his book till the end of the term, the defendant thereby would else be defeated of it.

111.

Amendment.

In debt on a bond for performance of covenants, the defendant cannot now pray oyer as heretofore, but must plead to the indenture and produce it to the Court. 2. The plaintiff declared on a deed dated the 30 Jan. the defendant demanded use, and the date thereupon was by indenture of another date; and now the plaintiff prays that this mis-entry might be amended, being only upon oyer, which is the act of the Court, and therefore may be, but not so if it had been on a deed so pleaded; and because that this is but only a false recital by the Court, it shall be amended though in another term, per Cur.

Nota. The Ch. Justice here may command the Ch. Justice of Ireland to do execution of lands there against manucaptors or other persons, per Curiam, and by the clerks, if the roll here be not marked till the retorn of the writ, the common bail shall stand but only to save amerciament, but not so but that upon good cause the Court may award special bail. Also if the plaintiff sheweth cause at the retorn of the writ, he may have special bail, though the roll be not marked, but then the defendant must have notice of it by the course of the Court. Also sufficient bail of Irish men whose estates are there, was allowed good.

It was said, that the forging of an alias is discharged by the Act of 12 Car. 2 of Oblivion, because it is not any offence that is within the exception; for though every record be a writing, yet every writing is not a record, by Newdigate Serjeant for the defendant. Windham Justice, Exception of the lesse is exception of the greater, though pardon of the less doth not extend to the greater: and by the Act all escripts writings, &c. all are excepted, being forged; a fortiori a record, which the Court agreed.

Nota. By Twisden, By the course of the Court, if the attorney of the plaintiff swear positive notice of a tryal, though the defendants attorney swear he had none, or excuseth it, that is not sufficient, but the affirmative shall stand. But by Windham, The attorney is not Judge of sufficient notice, and therefore if by the circumstances it appeareth to the Court, they will judge whether it was notice sufficient or not.

116. GLASCOCK against MORGAN.

Marriage.

In debt upon a bond to pay money on marriage, or at the age of one and twenty years of his daughter, on 29 Ed. 3, 8. 2 Co. 102, the jury may try wife or not wife, but not the legality of marriages: and this was moved in arrest of judgment on issue unques accouple, or debt on bond to pay money on marriage or one and twenty years of age after verdict. 2. Wild took another exception, that it is not alledged that the party was married at the time of the bill, but issue being joyned upon married or not married, after verdict this shall be intended, there being a good affirmative and negative, per Curiam. And by the Act of 12 Car. that confirms judicial proceedings, the legality of the marriages shall be tryed by jury; yet here the issue is not (as in dower) where legit. modo maritatus which shall not be tryed by jury; but [106] in debt on bond its no more, but unques accouple, which doth not draw the right of matrimony in question, per Curiam. Judgment pro querente.

117. LATTAM against ———.

Costs.

The lessor of the plaintiff is lyable to pay costs (though he shall never be forced to give security for them) but the lessor of a tenant in possession is not lyable to costs, because though he may come in gratis and defend his title, yet the tenant in possession is only lyable to costs by the law but only by the course of the Court, unless the tryal be by the lessors means brought to the Bar, and then he shall never have a second tryal at Bar before he hath paid the costs of the former tryal; but yet the Court for non-payment of costs will not hinder proceedings in the country, per Curiam.

118. 1 Cr. 116.

Entry.

The plaintiff shall be compelled by the Court under a pain to bring in his postea, but this before the judgment entred cannot be pleaded in bar of any new action.

119.

Misnomer.

On motion of Bear to set aside plea in abatement, by misnomer Straight for Streight, the Court awarded the plaintiff to plead or take issue, though per Curiam, the plaintiff may plead that the defendant is known by the one name, and the other; and therefore though it were a frivolous plea, the Court would have the writ mended, which being an original, cannot be, but the defendant agreed that the plaintiff should purchase a new writ.

120. STOCK against WESTPHALING.

Error.

Error of a judgment in ejectment was assigned in the day of Nisi Prius, which is 20 in the postea, and the 30 of April in the roll. 2. Nota. That on rule given to transcribe a record, if in two terms it be not done, the defendant in the writ of error may nonsuit the plaintiff without motion.

124.

Prohibition.

Nota. Pro regula by all the Court, that a prohibition shall never be awarded the last day of a term, no more than restitution: but they confirmed a rule, and made it absolute on oyer of the suggestion the last day of the term, which was de diversis contractibus, and doth not say, infra jurisdictionem of the Court of Cinque Ports, emergent.

125.

Notice.

Notice at the house is not sufficient in ejectment, because this may be, as Twisden cited a case, thurst into the rafters, but at the house with a servant, is good: yet affidavit thereof being amended, the Judges may give a rule thereon for judgment against the casual ejector in their chambers after the term; and the acknowledgment of the defendant that he received it, is not sufficient.

126.

Indictment.

A man may be indicted of a forcible entry although he hold peaceably; and therefore to say that he extra tenet with force, is not necessary, per Curiam, and the last rule on taking that exception, was quasht.

127.

Nota. The tenor of the record is sufficient to be certified by Inferior Court to the Superior Court, as in Limry against Langhams case was held, because the certiorari is only to know whether there is any such judgment.

128.

have judgment only against the tenant, and therefore the vouchee shall not have advantage of any error between the demandant and the tenant; and this judgment against the vouchee is for the benefit of the tenant, and therefore by Foster Ch. Just. he shall not have error thereon. Also the first judgment is absolute, and only cessat executio until the voucher be tried; but otherwise it should be if the first judgment were against the vouchee, and that the tenant recover in value that is all but one judgment: and per Curiam, he had execution.

2. OPIE against KING.

Liew.

In action on a charter party made in B. and the parties living there, Stroud upon affidavit moved to change the venue, being in another term & præter regulam, which the Court refused to grant, being a suit upon a specialty, as upon a bond, &c. and the party must prove his counterpart in L. where the action is laid.

3. JOHNSON against WARING. Ante.

Record.

Stroud jun. moved in arrest of judgment in action upon escape upon a mesne process by exception to the record, which the Court would not hear till brought into Court; nor if it had been to the verdict, would they have heard it till the po-[110]-stea returned, which is in the will of the plaintiff any time in the term; and the defendant hath four days after its coming in to move, &c. but cannot do it before, though he give notice to the other party, 110, pl. 6.

4. THE KING against OSBORN.

Restitution.

Winnington shewed cause against awarding a restitution, because it depended upon a doubt whether H. may devise gavelkind land: and Mich. 59, a verdict was against the custom, that H. may devise; and the first offence, viz. a forcible entry is pardoned, and so the party would be remediless; and this is in the discretion of the Court, and seven verdicts and a nonsuit hath been for the custom, by Finch solicitor: but by Twisden, multitudes of verdicts is no ground because they have been contrary, and restitution was awarded upon quashing the indictment, and so the offence being pardoned, the party cannot be re-indicted. Wild Kings Serjeant shewed that the lease of ejectment made by Osborn is expired, and so no fruit can be had of the verdict before without a restitution. Windham, The jury found 1 Cr. against the opinion of all the Judges, and therefore unless the prosecutor hastned another tryal in another action according to agreement, this term restitution was awarded.

5. KING against THE CITY OF YORK.

Dilatories.

In a quo warranto by Keeling Serjeant, who moved for time to plead: Ipswich and Yarmouth had a year to plead, but he desired after a long vacation to have till Hill. term for the City of York: but the Court would give but a fortnight in the term, which may be said initium termini, according to the rule, being only for the private corporation.

6. JOHNSON against WARING. Ante, 109, pl. 3.

Monstr. Br.

The exceptions which Stroud took were, 1. That it is said L. entered into bond, but doth not shew where, which being after verdict, and depending on it, the Court would not willingly hear it, till the postea come in: yet upon reading the record, it appeared to be only inducement to the action upon the case for the escape, which recited all the former process and judgment on the bond. 2. It is said, he did escape but saith not when; yet it is shewed when he was in prison which is within the time of limitation, and though commit-[111]-ted by Rich. Protect. yet if he had no power, then the party may plead, not guilty: adjornatur, till the postea returned, which the attorney for the plaintiff said, was stayd by order at the Assizes, which yet the Court ordered to be moved by the plaintiffs council to stave it in Court, that all may appear.

7. ——— against SIR RICH. BELLISON.

Pleading.

Upon a bond for performance of covenants generally, H. may plead general performance; but when to do any particular act he must answer certainly. 2. Defeasance unless made the same day of a stat. and delivered uno flatu, cannot be pleaded in bar, as the whole Court conceived, upon opening of a record in demurrer. Adjornatur.

8. FINES against KING. Siderf. 59, pl. 27.

Arbitrement.

In debt to perform an award, which was, that one should pay the other release, &c. Proviso, that if any of the parties were within the Act of Indemnity and Pardon, that for so much the party should be excused. Finch Solicitor upon demurrer conceived the award which was set forth in the replication good, and the proviso not material in the rejoynder after no award made pleaded in bar. Adjornatur.

9. ERRINGTON against CHAT.

Respond. ouster.

H. pleaded in abatement that there was no such parish in the said county as supposed; the plaintiff offers an issue, the defendant demurs, which prima facie the Court over-ruled, and respond' oustre, but by the attorney of the defendant in com. præd. was not in at the time of the plea, which the Court regarded not.

10. DOCKSON against ELLIS.

Pleading Br.

In debt upon bond for performance of covenants in indenture, to which the defendant pleaded performance; the plaintiff replyed, that one was, that the defendant should not do any act to hinder the plaintiff of water, and sheweth the defendant cut up the cock, and so hindred, to which the defendant demurs. Adjornatur.

12. DAY against GUILFORD.

Siderf. 54, pl. 22.

In ejectment its found by especial verdict, that the father let for life, and acknowledged a statute to the lessor of the plaintiff, and a scire facias against the heir in reversion, who by scire feci is retorned heir and ter-tenant; wherein he might have pleaded, (Kilborn against Wracks, Mich. 1657, B. R. F. N. B. 104. Kel. 125) and an action upon the case lieth against the sheriff upon non summons; but shall have no other remedy till the last judgment be discharged. Townson against Barecocke 1652, Hill. B. R. upon two writs against the bail he brought audita querela; but no writ of error for death of the principal, suggesting no capias went against the principal, which he might have because no notice is supposed. Quære, if a scire facias here had been returned; (Wind.) doubt whether he be not relievable, because this land was never asserted, as in case of tenant in tail, or the other cases it was 6 R. 2, Assize 69. Twisden vigilantibus non dormientibus, &c. and if he come not in and plead upon the scire facias, though he be a mere stranger and in of another estate, as the issue in tail is to a judgment against the tenant, he shall never avoid it, but is estopt and shall never falsifie, Hanner against Mare, Hub. 283, to which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

13. DOLBIN against WHITE.

Slander.

He is a base fellow, and I will question him ere long, for that he would have taken away the Kings life. Twisden, that H. would have killed the King is actionable, per Curiam; and so they conceived the words well actionable, as well as if he had said, I do question I. S. of treason.

[113] 14. AUSTEN against MANDRE. Rot.

Error.

Error of a judgment in B. that the venire facias was to return 12, &c. and in the alias its not said to recognize at large (but only and so forth), which in Inferiour Courts ought so to be; but per Twisden, if the trial appear to be within the jurisdiction it is sufficient, as Osborn against Gregory, which the Court agree. 2. They do not say that the process was awarded in, by or at the Court, but only as aforesaid, sed non allocatur. 3. The judgment was of costs ex incremento, and do not say (circa sectam sua expensa) which is necessary according to the usual presidents of this Court and the Com. Ban. as well upon verdicts as demurrers. In Inferiour Courts they draw their judgments by short notes, and the attorneys here enter them at large, and so they shall not be aided by intendment. The Court agree, if it had not been ad requisitionem of the party it had been error; but the principal judgment for damages and costs were, which he had expended in the suit; but ex incremento were found by verdict only guilty pro misis & custag' without circa sectam, of which there were two presidents shewn by Hern Secondary. Barr. Assize F. 63. Moor 7, pl. 26. 47 Ed. 3, 7, pl. 3, per Plisay. Rec. in assize of the latter is no bar of former rent, 9 Ed. 3, 8 b. pl. 21, but in a cessavit tender of the latter accept is discharge of former arrears, 17 Ed. 3, 57, pl. 40, per Shard. Distress Br. 14.

Repl' upon demurrer the question was, when H. avows for a latter, whether after he may avow for a former rent. Jones for the plaintiff conceived that he could not no more than on acquittance, especially having relied upon this estoppel; (for H. may avow for several days arrears severally, 2 Ed. 2, 32, pl. 10. Avowry F. 172. If H. have rettorn irreplevisable award for latter, he cannot after avow for former services, 25 Ed. 3, 47 b. seu 11 b. pl. 38, per Grene). Barre F. 79 is against both cases; but 11 H. 4, 55, and Penants case 3 Co. 65, are otherwise. But 2. The avowry was made here betwixt the same persons, but the repl' was by others, but the cause of action is the same in both; yet he admitted in case of change of a baily one shall not be bound by the act of the other. Allen for the defendant, Confess the case of Dy. 271 of an acquittance Bendloes Rep. which is a discharge for all before. But avowries may be made at several times for several rents, and the matter in truth is against the plaintiff, [114] because the avowry of the baily cannot make the master lose his arrears, and what he doth is only in his right and as servant to him, F. N. B. 71 L. and recaption lieth not for the lords distress after the baily hath made a former. Windh. conceive clearly they were several duties, and avowry for one is no estoppel; and not like an acquittance which is a release, especially this being betwixt other persons. But by Twisden, When H. doth no more than he must, as giving acquittance for an annuity he shall not lose the arrears: so here when the baily distrains he must avow, and therefore had it been betwixt the same parties it had been no estople, which cannot be of the master by an act of the baily; (contrà per Mallet); but Foster agree that its no discharge. Which after imparlance was pleaded in bar, and a demurrer thereupon. Foster conceive, that when the minor comes of age he shall be specially charged, as shall also the administrator. Twisden, After age he is in as of his own wrong, and by him shall so be charged. Though Jones Judge conceived he should be charged specially, and by him this plea in abatement concluded in bar is naught though it was said he did not administer after the infant came of age. They conceived, he ought also to shew he had fully administred until then.

But if it be for paululum tempus, 1 Cr. 241, which is naught, for all any averment that forbearance was till the writ was brought; but for a reasonable time it is good with such an averment, for the Court upon the evidence shall direct the jury whether it be reasonable or not, but not after verdict here, as the Court agreed. 2. The consideration was of forbearance until he and they could go to B. and examine witnesses, &c. and the averment of forbearance was till they could go, &c. Upon covenants performed plead generally, and special breach for non-payment of rent assigned in repl' in debt upon bond, a rejoynder that the plaintiff entered before the rent-day is not good, but a departure; because Dy. 290, it might have been pleaded in bar, (as 44 Ed. 3, 42, pl. 45) as a feoffment to use is a departure from a feoffment generally alleadged before, so 5 H. 7, 25, Baldwin for the plaintiff who demurred. Jones for the defendant, that the rejoynder doth corroborate the bar, which could not be otherwise pleaded to pursue the words of the bond, which is for general performance of covenants, as in such case he might have alleadged in the rejoynder, there was no demand, Baker against Spain, Hub. But in action of covenant he agreed it had not been good. Windham conceive it a departure, and not like the demand, which is necessary to make the rent due, whereas this is only an excuse of what he confesseth, Chapman against Chapman, 1 Cr. 76. Twisden agree, and that he should have said he performed till such a day. Foster doubt. Adjornatur.

Action upon the case. In devise Br. 6. Br. Cent. 3 Ass. 63, p. 346.

Action upon the case for a legacy devised to H. when he should set up his trade if the executors had sufficient, and its averred that the executors had sufficient, and that the plaintiff came to age and set up. 1. The will was, that the executor should double his legacies if the estate sufficed, which was waived as a sufficient devise of a legacy, and not at their discretion. 2. That an action upon the case lieth. Jones for the plaintiff, Glan. cap. 6, 7, conceived it did, for the breach of trust by the executors. Consideration of forbearance is good for assumpsit against executors, assent upon condition not good, and in an action brought by the rightful against a wrongful executor for them lieth, so far the common law doth take notice of them; and when men are indebted to another for, 2 Cr. 544, the injury, an action lieth as well as by way of assumpsit. So when any duty is due from one man to another an action lieth; and to say that legacies have not been sued for in specie, may be true as an indebitatus assumpsit, till Slades case; but the novelty is not material, being only want of good pleading, for here it is but sued for as a duty of breach of trust. Wild for the defendant, that an action upon the case lieth not, being a testamentary thing, of the original whereof they have jurisdiction, Regist. 38, in the Court Christian, and its the office of this Court, not ampliare but regulare jurisdictionem; and as to the indebitatus assumpsit the common law had jurisdiction of the original debt, and that was only a new action; and the reason why they were countenanced in the late times was for want of justice, the bishops being not then in fact though de jure, and the breach of trust is a personal wrong and dieth with the person, as Dy. 322, or trover lieth not against the executor for tort done by the testator. Windham conceived, that as the bishops are restored to their lands, they should be also to their jurisdiction; and this is a gift after the death of the intestate, and though the Exchequer would send a prerogative writ, yet never any other Court did so for a legacy, for its not payable at common law, nor can an action upon the case be grounded upon any default without some special injury, as for default of rent or annuity, &c. for so men may draw the questions of all laws, what ever to the common law; and as the suit cannot be for the legacy, so not for the non-payment of it. Twisden said, legacies out of land are properly suable in Chancery, and yet in ancient times, as [117] in title debt and legacy in the Book of Entries an action lay at common law; yet here, when the breach is in default of a thing of the original, whereof another Court hath jurisdiction, an action upon the case lieth not, lest thereby men bring in question all matters whatever; but especially here if it would lye, it would not lye against an executor of an executor, to which the others agreed, and Foster wondred to hear such an action brought, having never been heard of this 60 years, which he hath been related to Westminster. This was upon demurrer to the declaration, but the usual pleas hereto were not guilty, or non detinet. Baldwin and Stroud relate the Exchequer Chamber, to have given an opinion in the same point, that an action would not lye in a case they argued. Judgment pro def. nisi. Rot. 1540.

Upon a resistance of execution the council table refused to meddle, because this Court ought to see their own judgments executed; and Finch prayed a writ to the high-sheriff (which all writs are), but with a special rule that the high-sheriff should execute it himself; which the Court granted, and a tipstaff to fetch the under-sheriff up to retorn his writ, which is better than an attachment, which is retornable by it self.

In ejectment it was observed in evidence to a jury, 1. If it had been only a circumstance, and as inducement, and the will remain in Chancery or other Court, by special order of such Court. 2. An enrollment of a fine or other conveyance not being a bargain and sale, though acknowledged by the parties themselves, was not regarded without proof of the deed, because it was needless. 3. When trustee to the use of I. S. for life, the remainder to his first son, joyns with tenant for life in a fine, cestuy in remainder is scarcely relievable in equity. [118] 4. Covenant.

In action of covenant in nature of a defeasance of a recognizance, that upon payment the recognizance should be delivered up to be vacated, and caused to be cancelled by the defendant. Allen moved for judgment, and that the action of covenant well lieth, because it doth not terminate in it self, as Com. 38, but is for a collateral act, and engageth the party to further acts, as to be delivered up and to be cancelled, and not only that it should be void. 2. The defendant pleaded generally performance; and the plaintiff said, that the defendant means before delivery he had sued an extent, which 5 Co. 23, is a present breach, though no mony by the plaintiff be paid, because he is hereby disabled to deliver it up when the defendant shall pay his mony. Jones for the defendant, The covenant is to deliver up the recognizance upon payment, &c. and acknowledge satisfaction; and the denial of either of these should have been pleaded by the plaintiff, and so he might have had an action upon the case for this fraudulent taking execution, but no covenant. Windham upon covenant to do a thing, when done no covenant lieth as to stand seized &c. Contrà when executory, as case is, as 5 H. 7. to enfeoff I. S. of D. taking a wife or granting a rent is a present disability. This is an act precedent to the act that is to be done by the covenant, and puts the statute in another plight, which he conceived a sufficient breach. Twisden, This lieth not properly in covenant of it self, being a bare defeasance, (and as the words are not only barely to deliver up, which may be, and the plaintiff hap of it again and so extend); but being to cause the same to be cancell'd is by this act broken presently, because transit in rem judicatam by the extent, and so cannot after be vacated; but per Curiam such special matter should have been pleaded by the party defendant in this action, conusee of the recognizance. 29. BLUNKET AND HOLMES. Oct. 26.

Devise Br. 1. 2 Brant, 95 b. pl. 250. 2 Leonard 68, pl. 92.

Windham delivered his opinion against the plaintiff, making the single point on the construction of the words of the will, what estate is given to Thomas Wedgwood, who suffered the recovery. The devise was to T. for life, and if he died without issue of his body then living, then to Leonard and his heirs, which he conceived was but an estate for life with remainder in tail, and not a fee-simple, by reason the writings were deposited, that Thomas should not alien; which yet he conceived would not help, nor the contingent which is founded on the estate for life, however confounded with it; because the estates come several ways, and so are not presently, though afterwards they may be confounded. And this is the express words of the will. 2. To make a fee there must be a transmutation of the will, placing the latter words first, which were a strange metamorphase, for all the contingent is to the remainder, not to the estate for life, according to the natural placing of the words. 3. This construction avoids more inconveniences, and is more suitable to the rules of the common law, for otherwise an [120] executory devise (which by Pell and Browns case cannot be cut off) would be made, whereas it is rather a contingent remainder, against which the rules of law fight with, and will by no means support it; Colshirst against Bajushan; though it will rather create that than an executory estate, which cannot be created by feoffment, but only in favour of devises; and therefore executory devise, which clogs an estate against the rules of law, shall not be let in by a construction, by transposition and wresting, when the natural construction will make a contingent suitable to the rules of law.

2. When Thomas having an estate for life with such a contingent, suffers recovery, his estate for life and the contingent are confounded, and so the remainders. Lit. sect. 690, L. Co. 262, destroyed.

3. In the mean time, before the contingent there is a fee-simple in Thomas, which (Seamors case) being created by the same conveyance, doth not confound the estate for life, Archers case, being a stronger case than this is; and if the estate for life had been confounded by an ordinary surrender to an estranger that had had the fee, the estate for life had been utterly gone, and shall not be said in esse to maintain any contingent: and thus Thomas by the record is seised in fee and may well devise to his wife, and the heir of Leonard is barred.

Twisden of the same opinion for the defendant.

1. Supposing Thomas had been a meer stranger and not heir in this case, then he had a bare estate for life, the remainder in contingent, if he had said only to Thomas for life, and if he die without issue, then to Leonard (Lony's case 85) this is a contingent in remainder, Baraston's case. And he saying further, that being that if Thomas hath issue then he shall have in fee; this is a contingent, and yet cannot depend on another contingent, as in Chedington's case; but this is the same contingent operating several ways, as to A. if he pay C. and if he fail of payment to B. this had been a good contingent.

2. Thomas not being a stranger, but heir, he hath the fee simple in the mean time, though Lit. Co. 342, it might be argued that the fee were in abeyance; yet Berks case 6 Car. C. B. and Nappers case Hutt. and Coneys case are of another opinion; and this is by operation of law, and not by the construction of the will, 1 Cr. 158. 3 or 4 Car. Braughton against Player in the Chancery, devise to two sons equally [121] to be divided, share and share like, which was but an estate for life in the youngest son, because the eldest son had no more by the will, but only by operation of law; and Archers case is the same in terminis with this, and though the reporter took no notice of this, it was because they looked only upon the will; not but that they did see the operation of law admitting, Pell and Browns case (which hath been always controverted) to be law, yet it reacheth not this case, being a devise to W. and his heirs, and if he die without issue then to another. And Hut. Angel and the City of Londons case, the Court would not meddle with the fee upon a fee, as it seemeth by that case to be; but here is an express devise for life. Mallet and Foster to the same intent. Most settlements of marriages are upon contingents, and therefore great care must be had of shaking them, M. 11 Jac. per Coke Ch. Justice, There are more perplexed constructions in wills than the estates of the will are worth to unfold, and therefore the nearest must be to the intent of the devisor, so as it consists with the rules of law; he agreed the cases and authorities above cited; because as contingents are not lightly to be shaken, so should they be suffered, they would introduce greater inconveniences of perpetuities. This case differs not from Archers, or Nichols case, Pl. Com. and whereas in Lampets case it is in ambiguo whether it fall or not, then it is in contingent till one dye without issue, and no act of the tenant for life can destroy or hinder it. Assumpsit.

In arrest of judgment (Wild recorder for the plaintiff) the mony was due only to Wood and not to the plaintiffs, and so no consideration; but (by him) it doth appear there is a duty due to the plaintiff on which the mony of Wood depends, and the defendant is to have benefit of this by withdrawing and forbearance of the suit. 2. It doth not appear that the mony attached was mony due to Wood for the fraight but as the mony of the plaintiff, and Starkie against Miln, Trin. 1651, Rot. 701, B. R. R. grandfather of the plaintiff and defendant delivered goods of the value of 20l. to the defendant in consideration whereof the defendant promised to pay to the plaintiff after the death of R. but by Just. Windham in this case it was. H. hath issue a son and a [122] daughter, and would give goods to the son and the mony to the daughter, and in consideration of the goods the son promiseth to pay to the daughter after the fathers decease; which Twisden agreed. H. promiseth to the father to make a joynture to the daughter, she shall have the action, for she is to have benefit of it, as 12 Jac. Odeham against Badenham. Windham & Curia very much doubted of this consideration, 24 Car. Evans against Jamney; and by Rolls, If A. sells goods to B. and B. in consideration thereof promiseth to pay to C. that shall be intended as attorney to A. and A. only may have the action, and C. shall never have it unless some special matter appear; and here it doth not appear that the defendant intended to promise to Swinnock. Twisden, Remember the case of Evans and Jamney, which in consideration A. hath bought a house of the defendant, the defendant promised to pay to the plaintiff, son of A.; here A. only can have the action. Otherwise in case of a marriage, agreement betwixt parents for their children, (Sprot against Aggot) the action may be brought by either; if this case had been in consideration the plaintiff would procure Swinnock to remove his attachment it had been good; but as this is 24 Car. Rot, 1010, Dishborn against Donabys case, is not to the purpose, and so he inclined, that this was no good promise, being not so much that Swinnock at the request of Gould would forbear. Bear Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment in an action upon the case, upon a promise to seal when he should be requested such instruments as should be tendred to him, and by him the tender must be of wax, ink and pens, and necessaries to seal. 2. It is to be according to such draughts as were betwixt them agreed; and its said, he did tender secundum tractationes, Angl. draughts prædict', but doth not set them forth in hæc verba, which being after non assumpsit is not material, 16 Ed. 4, 9, was upon demurrer, which the Court agreed; but a verdict presumes that the deeds were shewed. And 3. The request was two days after the tender, which by the Court was well done, for he is not bound to seal them on the sudden; but the promise being not to convey land generally, that must be by counsel, and so the party must be requested; but when it is to be done according to such and such draughts, there all must be done by the party promising at his peril; and [123] also if it had been only that he tendered to the defendant, and requested him to seal at another day, that had not been good, unless he shews (as here) that he left the writings with the defendant to peruse; for else he might request when he had not the writings present. 4. Allen, There are sealing of writings and conveyance of title to a reversion to be done, and the breach is alledged that he hath not sealed, nor the reversion conveyed, and doth not say that he did not seal two instruments according to the draughts drawn, or none, but per Curiam other instruments then according to the draughts cannot be tendered, and the defendant should have shewed that the draughts were not according to the draughts, Mansers case, for after verdict all will be intended well.

Debt. Fitzh. 7. Scire facias.

Winnington for the plaintiff in scire facias upon a judgment against two after the death of one against the survivor, not naming the heir of him that is dead. And by the common law upon such judgment in debt, 3 Co. 14, Harberts case, the charge should survive: and the Statute of Westm. 2, that giveth the elegit tolls not the privilege of the party at common law, because it was made for the plaintiffs benefit: and 29 Ass. 37, Age Br. 36 giveth no reason of it; but 29 Ed. 3, 39 per Thorp the parol shall demur, because the lands are all equally lyable, Error, Br. 191. So that that judgment only considered, the land (or real) not the personal lien: in the point of this case are 1 Ed. 3, 13, pl. 41. 3 Ed. 3, 11, pl. 31, and the difference is betwixt the lien real, which must be equal, and personal, which may be of any of them, Com. 440. Davies against Peepes, 11 H. 7, 12 b. Windham agreed to the authorities cited, and Langfords case was upon the real lien; which Twisden also agreed, that a warranty real will not survive personal will, 1 Inst. 469, and so of such kind of charges F. H. shall not be put to an audita querela, but upon shewing the [124] indentures or judgment in the Chancery he shall have a supersedeas of execution. Wild recorder for the defendant. Upon a scire facias the award must be to have execution as the law will, viz. against either in the personalty, or against all in the realty, and so shall charge the heir not named, and put himself to two writs, which he may do by one, which the Court denyed, and that by this personal lien he hath waved the benefit against the heir by an elegit, but it is in his election which he will have, the heir having assets by discent (by the same writ) for the same writ must be executed against all in one manner, 37 H. 4, 30. 4 Ed. 4, 39. Where one brings it against the other for that is in bar, and per Curiam after verdict it shall not be intended that the moityes were in common, in this case the moityes will discend to the heir, which per Twisden cannot joyn with the survivor. 2. The breach was, that the party did not set out the tenth to me, which is surplusage per Curiam. Foster, If two parceners be of a parsonage, when one brings an action for the tythes of a moiety upon nil debet found for the plaintiff, she shall have judgment though of her own shewing (as here) she hath but a moiety, and per Windham though parceners and tenants in common must joyn, yet when a parish is divided there is moieties, yet each shall have the tenth; though generally upon medietatem found it shall be intended in common. And by Twisden, If two tenants in common of a rectory and the one be outlawed the other must declare of his moiety though this action be but for a kind of contempt. 3. The plaintiff hath entituled himself only to a twentieth sheaf dividedly, and yet assigns a breach in not setting forth a tenth, which by Jones is not sufficient, but it was fine extrapositione decimarum; and by Windham a tyth may be of a tenth part as [127] well as of a tenth, but the postea was for not setting forth both the twentieth and the tenth. In debt upon a bond for performance of covenants, that the grantee of part of a term shall quietly enjoy, the grantor dieth, and this action was brought against the executor. Bigland moved in arrest of judgment, that this grant being of so much of the term as shall be unexpired at his death, which (as Rector of Chedingtons case, and Gravenors case, Dy.) is utterly void, and so the covenants which depend thereon are also void, as Yelvert. 18, Suffrain and Scarrads case, and so of a warranty annexed to a void feoffment: and here both the bond and covenants waited on the interest, as obligation Br. 6. Jones for the plaintiff agreed the assignment of the term void, but this is a covenant by itself, and that breach assigned in entring on the grantee by the executor of the grantor: and the difference by Windham is where a deed is void in the fabrick, there the covenants on it are void, as when a freehold is to commence in futuro, and where there is only want of interest in the party grantor, but that deed is good, which the Court agreed. And by Twisden a warranty must have an estate, contrà of a covenant that may be alone. 2. 57. DR. WITHRINGTONS CASE. Ante.

1 Brant. 23, pl. 67.

Allen against the retorn that its insufficient, 1. In that its said the master and fellows became bound to W. in a bond not to renew a lease, and that afterwards at the defendants request, asserting he had obtained a release of the obligee, they did renew, and the defendant was present, whereas either he had not obtained any, or refused to deliver it upon request, by reason whereof the master and scholars improbe illaqueati fuerunt, per Finch, Angl. trapand, but the Court had ordered the word to be amended; but this is no certain allegation, and if it were, it was but that he said so, which is no cause to turn him out, unless he some ways convert it to his own use, nor is the colledge really prejudiced, but only in particular, and it was in the time of a predecessor master. 2. Its said that H. gave a pension to the colledge for a preacher, and that Dr. W. was appointed to that office, but that he did not preach any of the sermons, but that he fraudulently did make default, and agreed with the heir to take the pension in his own name, which was (1645) when the doctor that had it was sequestred, and allowed it by Dr. W. the thing admitted is not any offence to the colledge, because they had no inheritance in it, nor can default of preaching be any cause to lose his office; and it is only said legitimè autorisatus, and do not shew how, and the pension was to cease by not preaching, and so could not be purchased. 3. Its said he exacted of one M. for one quarter more than the commons did amount to, and divers sums of money of others, procuring false bills to be made by the [132] manciple, which begins 1653, and its not said that he knew that they were false; and exacting is but a demand, unless it appear it be paid, for these causes he was expelled 1661. And 4. its said, being herewith charged, he went away, and being lawfully summoned and required to answer, refused and run away from the examination of the master and colledge, and affirmed he would not submit, but obstinately and finally persevered; wherefore they removed him, but the statute which gives this liberty, if for the honour or profit of the colledge, doth yet suppose they must shew certainly how it is to the dishonour of the colledge. As to the appeal which is only licebit ei appellare, and doth not conclude him from any other way, another statute appoints other persons to expound doubts, but not to judge of offences; for they have no authority to restore, and also that cause relates not to all their causes, but only to such crimes, inter majora that are greivous, but in this crime the statute is express, and the clause of appeal relateth not to this. Maynard the Kings Serjeant for the colledge, The return is said ad damnum as well as periculum: but he insisted on the last exception, that he made default upon the summons and the appeal, and that such writs have not been heretofore brought; therefore they lye not as Litt. upon the Stat. of Disparagement, & many things may be fit to be punished in universities, which are not fit to be examined here, and the consequence hereof would make this Court visitors of all colledges. 43 El. gives away for correction of charitable uses, and after appeal to the chancellor, there is no other remedy; so here the appeal of colledges being naturally to the Ordinary, and better there should be no remedy for such injuries (as denyal of legacies, or for calling women whores, &c.) then let in greater inconveniences which would necessarily follow; Bourman of the Temple was denyed a writ to be restored to an inn of Court, there being none to whom such writ can be directed therein, being a voluntary society; and so he conceived here. Finch to the same intent conceived, that peradventure if they could have no other remedy on appeal they might come hither; but as Dr. James, Hub. 17, not per saltum come hither first, but must observe all the degrees of appeal, Herns case, which was the first mandamus was granted, was only because there was a failer of justice, the arch-bishop being their visitor, but here it is not so, and there Glyn granted it only because he found it. 2. The writ is misrecited. Baldwin to the same intent. There is a local visitor, and therefore this Court cannot have conusans, and the licebit appellare is that he is not forced to appeal, but if he doth he must appeal to such persons as [133] appointed by the statutes, though at the darrein resort, they might have come hither, P. 1653, Jones against Wilmot, error to reverse a judgment upon 2 Ed. 6, which by 34 H. 8 is directed to be brought in the marches, and by Roles shall not be brought here first. 5 Ed. 6. Error F. 89, per saltum: but by Foster and Witherington for the Dr. the Court hath admitted the writ already. Windham conceived the pinch of the case to be, whither any appeal lyeth hither at all, per saltum or gradus where there are local visitors or eleemosinary gifts, to a spiritual end, (Linwood de Relig. Dom. 660, Episcopus) and he conceived licebit, as Baldwin said, and in this case he might have appealed (if there had been local visitor) to the Ordinary, and 8 Assize and 8 Ed. 3 are both against the defendant being upon a deprivation, and thus Coneys case in Dyer, an assize doubtless will lye for the master of a colledge, but not upon a deprivation, Hunts case, he being deprived could, not be here restored, (7 Co. 43, Kens case) this Court being not able to judge of the particular laws, otherways then by the law of the land, he conceived the writ grantable, because it is not certain what it is before the return; and Twisden to the same intent, 15 Jac. Dr. Lewis case, he was chosen Master of Oriel by one number, B. by another, L. appealed to the Bishop of L. being local visitor, and was confirmed, the archbishop to whom B. appealed confirmed him, and L. appealed to the King in Chancery, wherein it was resolved that the appeals to the archbishop and the King were both void; and the local visitors confirmation of Dr. Lewis good. Adjornatur.

In ejectment S. had a sister who had issue Ezech. Susan had a son, Ezech. hath issue Eliz. who hath issue the lessor of the plaintiff, Susan dyed without issue, the defendant claimed under the son of Susan. In evidence to a jury, it was observed, 1. The title being waived as heir, the plaintiff claimed by a lease for years from the two sisters and their husbands; which being delivered upon part of the lands, whereof there were several tenants for years, was allowed to be good for the whole. Contrà If there had been any tenants for life of any parts. 2. A witness having been tenant of the lands, and having sold his lands a week before the tryal, having been summoned as tenant in possession, which subjects him per Curiam to an action of trespass, but he had an under lessee in possession, and so only subject to an action upon the case, but because he claimed peramount both plaintiff and defendant, he was allowed. 3. The witness was convicted of perjury, which by the death of the protector was kept from judgment, and therefore no exception against his testimony, which made the counsel of the plaintiff offer it against his credit after his testimony given. 4. This verdict being null'd it cannot now be given in evidence, either to disable or disparage his reputation, for it is but an information and must be here proved de novo by witnesses: but by Allen had the verdict been defective in point of the drawing, yet it might have been given in evidence, but per Curiam all these proceedings are coram non Judice, and only confirmed by the acts of judicial proceedings as to acts past, not to have any validity in futuro, and by the same reason, such verdict may be given in evidence, the acquittal also might; and so the Court should ravel into another cause, which they would not. 5. The deed under which the defendant claims was with power of revocation, but no counterpart sealed, which (though at first doubted) was conceived good enough.

Slander.

Serjeant Merefield moved in arrest of judgment, Thou hast stoln our bees, and they are hidden under the old womans hempstalls, thou art a thief: upon justification it was found against the defendant, and on 43 Ed. 3, Property Br. 37, except that bees are feræ naturæ, and so no felony, & innuendo a stock of bees will not help, 4 Co. Barhams case, and these singly is not sufficient, Hub. 77, 331, Clerke against Gilbert, till H. 8, his time, as Hub. and Winch said in Lanes case in the C. B. which he observed; but now the law is otherways, but is here qualified with the precedent matter, and the justification alters not the case if the count be insufficient. 18 Jac. Rot. 1755. K. is a false forsworn knave, and took a false oath against me at a commission at Edgham, after justification ruled naught; and there it was resolved that H. may be forsworn before commissioners of the high commission.

Mr. Stroud, senior, admitting the cases before, yet 1 Cr. 52, there they were (2 Cr. 39. 3 Jac. 2 Cr. 114, 231) supposed to be fixed to the freehold, and have been also adjudged since contrary, but bees are not so; and by Windham the constant difference hath been where thief is coupled with such words, and where not; as you stole turnips is not actionable: but you are a thief, and have stoln turnips, is actionable, and so the Court conceived here. Twisden cited a case of a forsworn fellow, justified by an oath at Guildhall in a tryal ruled actionable by the whole Court, and so Rolls in his time, though Bacon to the contrary, with whom Foster here agreed; and Windham conceived, that if it were impossible for the former words to support the latter, the words are not actionable, [137] but contrà where they may support such latter words. Twisden, Thou art a whore, and hast had a bastard, and that will appear by a chain and a pair of cive, adjudged actionable. And so here adjudged for the plaintiff.

Forgery.

An action upon the case for counterfeiting a will, after two trials in ejectment affirming it, Dr. Ates case by Twisden was the first of this kind; and Jones moved to change the venue, which was granted.

68. THE KING against TRINITY HOUSE. November 4. Siderf. 54, pl. 21.

Amendment.

After demurrer by the King to a plea to a quo warranto, the party before he hath joyned in demurrer, may by the leave of the Court mend his plea, because all is in paper till then.

69. THE KING against ANGUISH.

Parliament.

Baldwin moved to quash an indictment of perjury upon the Act of Poor Prisoners, that the defendant had taken a false oath before William Steel Justice of Peace; also the title of the Act was English, and the indictment is Actus titulatus, Actus, &c. and the Court agreed that a Latin title may be of an English Act, if it be proper Latin, but contrary where the Latin is not according to the English; and this was upon a plea, and removal of the presentment before trial, wherefore the Court would not quash it.

Priviledge.

H. after imparlance, pleaded that he was one of the Kings Privy Chamber, and by the law and custom of the realm, ought not to be sued in any Court of England without his consent, but only by licence of the Lord Chamberlain first had, which was intended to the jurisdiction of the Court; but the Court conceived it without colour naught, and enquired the counsel that set his hand to the plea, to have punished him. 2. The plea was venit and defendit vim & injuriam, and doth not conclude, demanding judgment, si Curia cognoscere velit, which is also naught.

Indictment. Action upon the case for false prosecution, 364, pl. 61.

Allen moved in arrest of judgment in an indictment of perjury, because by any thing that appears, it is only a recordatur, having no express averment, whereas there should be besides the recordatur in hæc verba, some distinction of the matter of fact from the recital by record. Wild for the King, The recordatur refers to the whole matter of the record; and it is said & quod prædict. Defendens being testis productus did swear falsly thus, which is well without shewing the particular by any ulterius dat informari of other matter of fact: but the Court inclined that it was a plain fault, and being testis product' doth refer to the recordatur. Adjornatur.

Attachment. Arbiterment. Br. 24.

Finch moved for an attachment upon breach of a rule of Court to submit to an award, which Wild for the plaintiff said was primæ impressionis, and that the award it self was void, and so no submission could be forced, it was that the defendant should have goods, paying so much money, which by Wild is conditional, and no remedy for the plaintiff to have the money; and by Twisden upon a rule to give bond to submit to award no attachment lyeth, which Finch agreed; but here the rule of Court is the only security the parties have for performance of the award: but by Windham no attachmant lyeth upon this rule, but an action of debt may be brought for the money, and then the validity of the award will come in question, and he conceived the payment voluntary, and not to be compelled, and per Curiam very few references have had any effect: and by Wild, When the rule of the Court is for doing a particular act, an attachment lieth; but contra where it is generally to submit to an award: and by Twisden, The making such references part of the rule of Court is not above seven years old; and he remembred a case wherein he was counsel where attachment was denied, and so it was here per Curiam.

[139] 73. SLANY against EGERTON. November 5.

Howel moved in arrest of judgment in trespass, for cutting up duo testa, Angl. Floodgates in S. whereby the water could not come to his mill in Chester, to his damage, which being intire, and part arising in one, and part in another county, an assise of nusance may, but an action of trespass upon the case cannot be brought in Staffordshire, 7 H. 4. But the Court conceived according in Bulwers case, that it is well brought, and it cannot be forced to be in the County Palatine of Chester.

Descent Br.

In evidence to a jury, by Twisden & Curiam, the possession of lessee for years is not the possession of cestuy in reversion, unless he hath a lawful title Br. Leases, that the entry of lessee for years should help a discent where the lessor had no title, is an exploded opinion; and without an actual entry of cestuy in reversion upon the possession no discent can be cast: that nothing can be parcel now that was not so in the time of H. 8, and Embers case, L. Entr. for betwixt the King and his grantee proof must be made thereof by record, and here cannot be betwixt other parties by other common reputation, that the land was parcel of the Priory of M.

75.

Charge.

This day to the grand jury of Middlesex, being three full juries of 24, Mallet first delivered some articles of charge, 1. Of treason. 2. Of the establishment of the Church, so far as it hath any influence on the Government. 3. Of murders, felonies as well on the land as the Thames, as also all other notable crimes, sacriledge, or burglaries of prisons, and that they be kept in due order. 4. All houses of resort, that they keep reasonable times and order. 5. Extortions of officers, especially in publick places, and whatever other crimes they themselves know of. 2. Twisden in confirmation, that they enquire of words, writings, &c. and secure the head, without which the members cannot be well. 2. Innkeepers exacting too great rates, which they [140] knowing, must present without any information: and by Windham this was the first article in eyre, and in this Court; and the Court must see it remedied, as also the high-ways, and that the waggons of too great draughts are nusanses, and ought to be presented upon the evidence barely of finding a great company of horses in their custody loose, or riding on them, 21 Jac. It is holden that this Court is out of that statute, and so they come off for fines. The jury were desirous to have presented travellers or watermen, or others working on the Sunday; but by Windham that offence is spiritual, and by all, if they present not truly things they know, the Court may impanel another jury to enquire of their defaults.

76. DACY against LINCH. Mich. 13 Car. 2, Rot. 1875.

Slandre. Siderf. 52, pl. 18.

D. is a witch, and deserved better to be hanged than W. A. (who was hanged for a witch) to which the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations, to which the plaintiff replyed, that he purchased a latitat, 12 Febr. before the filing that bill, to the intent to declare in this action, the defendant rejoyns that not guilty before the 12 of January before that term, Hil. 16 Car. 2, when the bill was exhibited after verdict. Bear Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment in an action upon the case, that these words are not actionable, M. 15 Jac. Rot. 635, Stone against Roberts, Thou art a witch and an enchaunter, and hast bewitched Strongs children: adjudged not actionable, M. 8 Car. George against Harvy 1 Cr. 205, the like unless some person be thereby hurt, and Harris against Adams, 9 Jac. C. B. that H. deserved to be hanged, it is but a collection from the former words, and will not make them actionable. 2. The replication is not good, and so no issue, this Court proceeding not upon any latitat, and also it is no original; but Curia contra, and that this is the constant course of pleading; and Twisden 10 Ed. 4, 7, said that when a latitat was once purchased, it may be continued by the attorney in his chamber many years before the bill, which being a principle, is not to be disputed for, contrary to 14 Ed. 4, men may in these actions alter the day of their declarations in their replications. But for the words, Twisden and Curia, the words witch without special act alledged to be done is not actionable, and here Foster conceived the words actionable, as well as H. is a thief, and a strong thief, and as very a thief as any in Newgate, is actionable, with averment that there is a thief in Newgate, and by Wind. this is a stronger case, the defendant himself having said he was a witch, and deser-[141]-ved to be hanged as well as A. which sheweth it to be spoken in the worst sense, which the rest agreed, the scandal being as great as if A. had been hanged, as H. hath kild I. S. is actionable, unless it appear in the declaration that he is alive, although he be revera alive.

77. HALE against SLINGSBY. November 7. In Error Br. 117.

H. after verdict and also after the day in B. and before judgment, dyeth without any rules or postea brought in (and here the tryal being in London was ruled the same, and that) judgment may be entred; but if the death were before the day in B. it is error in fact.

78. DAY against GILFORD.

48 Ed. 3, 19.

The Court conceived, that in a scire facias no party against whom judgment is given can falsifie: contrà of a stranger, Co. but whether he may falsifie in another action, as ejectment here; and Wind. conceived that he may by action of a higher nature, as of assize in entry upon disseisin; but this ejectment is an inferiour action. Foster cited Sir William Bowyers case, that here the heir should have pleaded at the scire facias, riens per discent; but now scire feci being returned, it is too late; Twisden doubted whither ever he can falsifie in any other action, as this case is of the recovery only of a term. Judgment for the plaintiff.

79. STEPHENS against BRETHERIDGE.

In Discontinue Br. 38. Stiles 192, pl. 438.

In ejectment special verdict found, Sir F. W. seised in fee, in consideration of a marriage with E. Ayre, covenants to stand seised to himself for life, remainder to her for life, remainder to the heirs males begotten on her, remainder to Sir Fr. W. the son, by a former wife in tail, remainder to the heirs of the father, then they had issue Sarah, who married the defendant, and then they levy a fine with warranty to the use of S. and then the last wife, and Sir Fr. W. the father dyeth without issue male by her, whereby the warranty descended. Allen for the plaintiff. The question is whether this fine be a discontinuance or a bar to Sir Fr. the son by the former wife, wherein he considered what estate the father had by this covenant, whether an estate tail executed [142] in him and his wife, for then the fine will be a discontinuance, but if not (as he conceived) then it cannot operate. And he said that the estates are distinct and several as limited, notwithstanding that it be objected, that the estates tail cover the estates for life, and so the husband and wife are seised of one consolidate estate tail: for 1. In this case all the estates are by one conveyance. And Wescots case makes the same difference betwixt one and several, 39 H. 6, 2 b. whence he concluded, that if lands be given to A. for life, remainder to A. and B. this remainder is distinct, and mergeth not the estate for life of A. The like reason being for the case at Bar: so an estate granted to the wife for life, remainder to the husband and wife in fee, makes them as distinct estates as if the remainder were limited to a stranger, and the case at Bar is but a degree farther, to the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the heirs males which he shall beget on her body, &c. are all distinct estates. 2. If there be an estate limited, equally limited to two, there if the remainder be adequate to it, as to two, remainder to their heirs, these have no remainder, Lewis Bowles case, but one consolid estate: but where there is a particular estate for life, and then a remainder limited not answerable to it, there the estates are distinct; as estates to two, remainder to three or to two, remainder to them, remainder to a stranger; or to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the heirs males of their bodies, these are all distinct estates, as in the case at Bar; nor is there any rule or case, that when the estates may stand severally is against it, but that they may be as limited, and the freehold would else be confounded, and so upon devise they would have it divided, whereas he shall in such case have it for his life.

2. Admitting the estates as before, the fine by husband and wife doth neither discontinue nor displace the remainder in Sir Fr. the son, Lit. 658. Co. 347, because they have not the inheritance of the estate tail, 1 Cr. 321, King against Edwards, is not like the case at Bar, because there are no divided estates but only to two, and the remainder to the heirs of one of them, and they took it without moities, and so the husband had one single estate in fee executed, whereas in this case, although the estate tail vests in both, yet only as a remainder, because their estates are distinct for lives by the former limitation, and this remainder is as a remainder granted over by them. 2. This fine taketh its full operation without harm to any, because an entire fee pas-[143]-seth out of the conusors, though made up of several estates, which would pass as well by a feoffment, Bredons case, being a lawful interest in the grantor; but where there is an interposed estate, as but for life, remainder for life, remainder in fee, there such a fine cannot pass without divesting the other estates, and so all remainders are thereby likewise discontinued, 10 Co. 96, Seamors case, Garret against Blizard, enter H. 24 Car. 1, Rot. 983. A. tenant for life, remainder to J. for life, remainder to T. in tail, remainder to J. in fee, J. levied a fine, which was agreed to be no discontinuance, yet it was ruled a forfeiture, because the estate of the conusors could not make good the purport of the fine; Trevillians case, P. 29 Eliz. B. R. but here is no estate devested; but it hath been doubted whether by feoffment of tenant for life, remainder in tail, a discontinuance be not wrought, but not of a fine. 3. The remainder in Sir Fr. will not difference the case, but is as it were a meer stranger. 4. The warranty shall not bind an estate, unless it be turned to a right, Seamors case, but will determine with the estate on which its limited. Winnington for the defendant, A. seised in fee, covenants to stand seised to the use of himself for life, remainder to his intended wife for life, remainder to the heirs of them two in tail. 1. He conceived, that this fine is a discontinuance to the estate tail, Lit. sect. 28, being not particularly limited to any of their body: and 1 Inst. 22 b. is where an estate tail is limited to the heirs, they are purchasers, 11 Co. 82, that the estate is executed in the husband and wife is manifest, because it is limited by himself; and so 38 Ed. 3, miscalled a remainder, for nothing vested till the inter-marriage, and then they are seised per mie & per tout, and so his estate executed, notwithstanding that the limitation is to the wife also; for it can never be more executed then it is, whichsoever dieth first, Shelleys case, 1 Co. 98. Nor shall the heir be forced to make himself heir to either of them. 3 Ed. 3, 31. F. N. B. 212 b. but unto both, 15 Ed. 3. Brief 324. 18 H. 6, 24 b. per Fortescue: else if one should discontinue, the heir would be remediless, and the case of 1 Cr. is a stronger case than this. 2. Admitting it is no such discontinuance as will toll an entry, yet it is such as will displace the remainder, and consequently the warranty binds before re-entry, 44 Ass. 35. 44 Ed. 3, 31. 1 Co. 67. 1 Cr. 103, although it doth not extend to the remainder; and Seamors case was only of a bargain and sale, upon which the fine operated only as a release; 1656, Musgrave against Scarf, [144] C. B. bargain and sale by tenant for life is no forfeiture: this case differs from Bredons, in that the estates might have been granted severally over; but not so here, because it is intire, and the construction of law will not make them several, when their nature is not so. 2. In that case the remainder is in several persons, in this in the same, Pl. Com. 418, Bracebridge, and without displacing the remainder, it would be no forfeiture. Windham conceived the remainder distinct, and will not drown the estates for life, being by one conveyance, else would all the remainders be confounded; and if the remainder had been to the heirs of the husband, he might have granted it over without attornment, Co. But he doubted, whether being divided by construction of law after a fine, having the whole interest, he shall not be as a real tenant of the whole, and Bredons case, can have no answer. The husband and wife, in the case of King and Edwards are joyntenants, and not tenants in common: and one præcipe must be brought against both, and so to some purposes it is executed, to some not. Twisden conceived it good for the wives moiety, because there is no interposing estate betwixt her estate for life and in tail: but he doubted whether all having the whole interest, it shall be good, and no discontinuance. And if lands be given to two men, and the heirs of the body of one, who makes a feoffment in fee, which all agreed is a discontinuance for a moiety: Foster supposed, that if they can any ways put the estate out of them, it is this: all agreed the warranty in this case will make nothing, because it is only upon the estate tail. Post, 227, 321.

Proof.

Allen for the defendant shewed for cause why judgment should not be given for the plaintiff. 1. That the consideration to make appear is not sufficient, for if by action, such action must be brought against the executor of the husband, and then if the defendant pay not, an action lyeth against her, but not before, if by any other manifestation the averment of always ready; is not sufficient as upon a bond to pay upon imbezelment by an apprentice, the embezelment must first be proved by action against the apprentice, 2 Car. C. B. admitting proof and manifestation to be the same barr, F. 241, Fosters case; nothing more manifest per Curiam, than that it may be by the same action, and by Windham the case of the apprentice, is according as the intent of the parties, that he should be first sued, Allen agreed, that if there were any other consideration then the action would be sufficient: contrà where only to make appear and by Twisden where the proof is limited to a time certain; as two months, there it cannot be intended by jury, and the Court conceived the other a nicety. Post.

Habeas corpus.

He was brought by a habeas corpus, the retorn whereof was for being, aiding, acting, and assisting at the killing of the French embassadors servants, which by Sir Jeffery Palmer, & Curiam, is sufficient in a retorn to suppose it murder without the word murdravit. 2. Assumpsit.

Action upon the case for promise, 25 Novemb. 1656, there being communication of arrearages of annuity of 15 per annum due to the defendant, out of the tenements of the plaintiff, and in consideration the plaintiff would pay tantas denariorum summas, as was due and behind until the day communicated from the date of the indenture, the defendant if he had formerly paid any before, the defendant would repay so much, which by Bear Serjeant, for the defendant in arrest of judgment is not sufficient, because it doth not appear, that [147] the annuity is continuing or of what date the indenture is, H. 7 Jac. C. B. Rot. 131, Kent against Prat, the defendant seised of the vicarage, and the plaintiff of the parsonage house, and strifes betwixt them, the defendant in consideration the plaintiff would surrender his house promised, &c. Judgment was reverst because it appeared not what estate the plaintiff had in the house, and to pay what is due will not raise a promise, 1 Cr. 5, Blight against Crasd. 2. It is said that the plaintiff paid all the arrearages being 188 pounds, which was impossible but some might be paid before: Aderton against Dunslan, 2 Cr. 247. The defendant rejoyned that he paid 61 pound in four years, which was more then the annuity; but the record was of four years and a half, which was just full. Jones for the plaintiff consideration to pay what is due, is good though upon bond; for it cannot else be had without trouble or charge, and verdict being for the plaintiff, and no exceptions taken against the payment before, the Court, conceived all the exceptions without weight, the date of the indenture being needless; and though the annuity was yearly to be paid, and so half a year cannot be due, yet the terms being general after verdict, the Court will intend it payable half yearly: and Twisden cited The Earl of Northumberlands case, count in debt by the heir of rent arrear to him, though it might be in the time of the auncester, yet after verdict the Court will intend it due to him in his own right. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

87. TRIBUTE against REYNOLDS.

Assumpsit.

Tourner moved in arrest of judgment, R. in consideration T. would assign certain closes, promised to pay to M. the wife of T. &c. and her adminstratrix for 3l. per annum, (whereof the promise was made to be so long as the defendant should enjoyn the lands) hath brought against the executors of R. living T. action upon the case, and he conceived the administratrix of M. a meer stranger to the promise. 2. There wants profert litteras administr', which per Curiam is well enough after verdict. Twisden doubted whether M. might have the action, because there is no duty owing but only a collateral conveyance to be made: Foster & Windham agreed if M. had been a meer stranger the action would not lye: contrà here M. being the wife of the assignor, and if the husband sueth he must do it in her name, or at least may do it so; and this will go to the administrators of the wife, who may be other person then her husband, for the cause approved by [148] the delegates. Twisden conceived the husband and wife cannot bring this action, because it is only for her benefit, and an annuity for her provision. Adjornatur.

88. WEDEN against BALDWIN. Ante. November 9. Siderf. 55, pl. 23.

Wards.

In trespass by special verdict it was found, H. was seised to him and his wife and his heirs, holden by knights service in capite and in fee-simple alone of the lands in question in soccage, and so seized, devised to his wife for life, the remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff, the heir entred (after the devisee died) on him, the tenant for life being alive: yet Windham held this devise good for the whole soccage land.

1. At common law, if H. seised of capite land to himself, remainder to another and his heirs, M. 24 Ed. 3, 33, pl. 28, F. Gard. 48, during the life of tenant for life there was no wardship, but a kind of fee did discend to the heir, but he had no fruit of it, because there was a person able to do knights-service, but when that impediment is removed he shall be in ward, not only for his capite, but all other lands. 2. By the statute where H. is seised of lands held in capite, & of other lands of a common person, H. may devise two parts; but where he hath soccage and no capite, he may devise the whole; and though here he seemeth to have a fee as well in capite as soccage, at least in reversion or remainder, yet upon the construction that hath been made on that statute, this is no such remainder or reversion, that shall hinder the devise of the whole, 10 Co. 81, Loveys case, they being jointly seised to the heirs of one of them; or when the remainder is only of a reversion and in expectancy, which cannot be held, as where lands are given for life, reversion in fee, this reversion granted over is such a remainder as is meant by the statute, the consequence hereof falls on the case at Bar; for by the death of the husband nothing discends but a bare remainder, the wife being in by the first grant, and the tenure interrupted by the surviving tenant for life, as where tenant for life, remainder for life, reversion in fee to tenant for life, by the death of tenant for life dying, leaveth a bare remainder to his issue, and it falls on the reason of Butler and Bakers case; for when the capite tenure determines, the wardship ceases, and so though he have lands, yet not such as draw wardship, or hinder his devising during the life of tenant for life, [149] nor shall it ever be good after, being void at the time of the death, he having only a remainder. 3. The proviso of the statute that giveth the wardship of the body in this case by express words, by consequence whereof it seemeth that the devise is void; but this clause is not to be amplified, because it alters the common law, which when in affirmative words implyeth a negative, Amy Townsends case, as here, that he shall be in ward for his body shall intend, and not for any thing else but a bare naked wardship, without any benefit of other lands discended till the death of tenant for life. Twisden of the same opinion, 15 Ed. 4, 11, and Binghams case, F. N. B. 144, that at common law, during the life of tenant for life, 25 Ed. 3, 93. 27 Ed. 3, 80, and Bokenhams case: and so here, when they are joynt-seised, the tenant for life surviving, the heir shall not be in ward, and the statute was made for the benefit of the lords, not of the heir, 1 Inst. 111, and therefore wheresoever there was no wardship they left him at liberty to devise as he pleased, as Loveys case: and if the body of the law will not alter this case, the proviso, which is an enacting clause, shall not be extended, à verbis legis non est recedendum, 33 H. 8, 39. All lands in the seisin of any person liable to the Kings debt, shall be charged; yet the feoffee of the issue, though he come under the tenant in tail, yet because the lands are not in the seisin of the issue, it shall not be liable, because the issue was not liable at common law, 7 Eliz. Court of Wards, Larimors case, H. seised as in the case at Bar, the husband died, his heir within age, the wife surviving, adjudged upon great deliberation with the Judges, that the King shall have no benefit of the soccage lands, because the statute provides only for the wardship of the body; and though, as Jones objected, this would have advanced the heir, and so have been for the Kings benefit, yet it went against him, though there was no devise in that case: Mallet of the same opinion; but Foster contrà that it is void for a third part; the case is entred H. 1659, Rot. 478. The question rests not so much upon the common law, as upon the statute, the whole law whereof, as well as the proviso, is enacting and creating the points that have been moved at common law. 1. He conceived that the husband was so seised, that his heir shall in any real action say that he was seised in fee, die quo obiit, as in some cases cited in Wiscots case. And 2. By the statute, which was as well for the peoples benefit as the lords, for without this statute the subject could not provide for his children by devise, but [150] lest the lord should be prejudiced hereby, there is remedy provided for him, and this inheritance shall be liable to any charge of the auncester, and the heir shall have the inheritance to all purposes, according to the present estates of the husband, especially because non constat, whether this was made during or before the coverture; if before, he might plainly dispose of a moiety presently; and the Judges were divided in Loveys case; though the solidity of the case he doubted not: and this case is not of a bare or dry reversion, but a working and beneficial one, as Bedingfields case, and the heir must claim by a dying seis'd of the husband: and so judgment ought to be for the plaintiff for two parts only, and not guilty for the defendant for the third. Judgment for the plaintiff for all.

89. Dr. Withringtons Case.

Mandamus.

Serjeant Keeling conceived none of the causes are sufficient to justifie the retorn, for none of his pupils complained, 3 Inst. 46, they admonished three times within ten days, which besides the shortness of the time, he conceived cannot be intended (as it must be) for several crimes; and this crime is neither within the greater or lesser causes of their jurisdiction; and they gave him but three days time for retorn, which they judged for the honour and profit of the college. 2. He conceived this Court is a proper place to relieve him, nor need he appeal. Mag. Charta 29 contains the great remedials of the subjects oppression, 11 Co. 98. 4 Inst. 71, the custody whereof this Court hath, and must regulate other jurisdiction, P. 11 Car. Allen against Nash, the last clause whereof this case is grounded on and Registr. 69, and is within the same equity as for mayors, sanctuary-men, &c. for he hath a freehold: but admit they be spiritual things, yet this Court must judge of what causes, as 12 Co. 42, Fullers case, the Spiritual Courts have jurisdiction, but fellowships are purely civil, and lay-men capable of them, Registr. 35, and spiritual persons cannot meddle with them, Registr. 40 b. 41 a. 43 b. A prohibition lyeth if the bishop meddles with him; and though it hath been likened to a deprivation, Kens case, 7 Co. 44, yet without any warrant of law, 9 Ed. 4, 24, that plea being in abatement not upon complaint, he agreed that if the cause appear to be within their jurisdiction, then error lieth not of their deprivation, Huntleys case was discontinued without any opinion, 5 Co. 58. And as refusal, so a fortiori deprivation must be spe-[151]-cially certified, Registr. 38, and upon general deprivation without cause, he may be remedied by prohibition: and this care the law hath to keep them within their due bounds, F. N. B. in a significavit, 14 H. 4, 14 b. the bishop must express the particular cause that the Court may judge whether it be within their jurisdiction, M. 15 Car. Colts case, retorn by habeas corpus, that he was committed for not obeying the judgment of the Court of Requests, which was not good without shewing the cause, 43 Jac. Russels case. So by the Chancery, and so was it in a retorn by the Treasurer, M. 3 Car. Sir Samuel Vassals case, and here he conceived the cause insufficient, and so ought to have restitution: 3. The complaint is that he is minus justè removed from his freehold; and therefore the having local visitors is not sufficient to forestall the jurisdiction of the Kings Courts. M. 11 Car. Lathans case, upon information brought here was ruled good, as well as it might have been below, because the statute had no negative words; every man is master of his own disposition, and may appoint laws to regulate his gift, but the law of England shall interpret such laws, and the visitor is but a superiour intendant over them; but cannot take away the jurisdiction of this Court, so a will appointing H. to expound a will yet that shall not toll the judgment of the Court. F. N. B. 21, 22 will not alter this case, being Courts created by the publick laws of the nation, but this gives little strength to the private laws or customs, but that they may be leapt over; for as this case is there can be no appeal, because they proceeded not upon their particular statutes, but upon matter out of the jurisdiction, appeals in civil being the same as errors by common law, neither will lye unless as the Marshalsea case, the Court have jurisdiction; nor is this case of the whole jurisdiction of the university, but of private colleges, who if they expel according to their statutes are in no danger. Finch for the college, the founder might have appointed that the censure of the master should be final without appeal, and it had been good, and here in effect it is the same, and therefore they cannot come hither per saltum: Kens case is affirmed in Bags case, and where the cases are not expressed to be finally determined, Hub. 14, 15, they are reservate, and pertain to the Ordinary of the place, and those laws are confirmed by Act of Parliament: Maynard to the same intent (being no argument upon demurrer) corporations, as mayors, &c. have no visitors but this Court, the King having given them their being of some corporations, as abbies and ecclesiasticks, which the law also taketh notice

[152] that they are, and their relation is mixed, and in Huntleyes case the Court ruled, they had no conusans of the cause, and therefore general deprivations was ruled sufficient; some corporations are meerly eleemosynary which are given for the education of youth, and might have been for years, and have their rules of internal government from their founders, and he having appointed visitors, their judgments are final to the party, Gayer against Fairchild, 3 Jac. H. makes a donation, the patron may visit by commission, and the party cannot here be restored, and yet whether he is visitor or no may be here questioned, error of a judgment of C. B. in Parliament abated, because B. R. is betwixt; and so here, at least they must come hither at the darrein resort. Wild to the same effect, that these fellows are established by Act of Parliament under these manner of by-laws, and therefore they cannot deviate; but he questioned not, but at the darrein resort this Court may take conusance, though not by appeal, yet as by way of inhibition, 24 Car. habeas corpus to remove a prisoner out of the Admiralty, who being in prison by sentence, this Court would not examine the cause: and Jones against Williams's case, error in the marches of a judgment in Wales: and upon a scire facias, the seal of marches being taken away, wherefore a scire facias was brought here, removing the cause, and the Court over-ruled that it was naught, he being counsel for the plaintiff: also if he hath a freehold, he may have his assise.

Allen for Dr. W. The Act of Parliament makes nothing to this case, because that only confirms it as establisht, which being without negative words do not conclude; and they have no other power then the King may grant, having but the effect of a charter: and so, should a corporation have a law thus confirmed, that they may put out any man without cause, this would be void, Wyndham. Alden against Tottils case. Twelve men incorporated for maintaining of poor hospitals is intended spiritual till the contrary appears, yet whatever the end be, if it be visited by the patron, its lay, 8 Ass. 29. Br. 137, the end being spiritual, though they were all lay, were capable of an appropriation, which a lay corporation is not; and colleges are a mixt corporation, and he knew not upon what ground Keeling denyed (Kens case 8 Assize. 29. 31 Ed. 3) warranting it, 13 Assize 2, and if a jury in Assize had found that he was turned out by the visitors, this Court will not remedy him, but if they have no jurisdiction of the cause, one may have a prohibition. Assise, F. 150. Twisden agreed, Fairchilds case, and that right or [153] wrong upon a deprivation, no appeal lyeth from the Ordinary, who is fidei commissarius (Windham) said that Rolls and Glyn were of the same opinion, as here that restitution could not be granted, though then there were no visitors the Court agree Kens case and Huntlye's to be law. 91. BUSHEL against JAY.

Prohibition.

Allen moved for prohibition to the Admiralty upon a charter-party, the plaintiff declared in an action upon the case, upon a promise made on the high sea upon an agreement according to, but not mentioning the charter-party which was only by suggestion, but the same with the charter-party, which really was made upon the land, and the Court granted it. 93. THE KING against COLEBANKE.

Trespass.

Indictment of trespass for counselling a servant to cheat his master, which being not felony, &c. ought to have joyned the servant in an action, all being principals; but per Curiam, All may be indicted joyntly or severally at election, but here it appears the acts were several which the Court doubted. 2. It was to the house of a feme covert did carry, which was well enough. 3. It was that she converted the wine, cheated and delivered to her to her own use, which per Twisden is not to purpose but. Fines.

In evidence to a jury upon the question of fines of copyholds, it was agreed that the party was admitted, which is the entitling of the lord to it; and it was agreed, that all fines are reasonable, unless the contrary appear it was 40l. which by Sir Jeoffry Palmer needed not be demanded, 2 Cr. Gardner against Norman, Hub. Denny against Leman, but notice must be given thereof, and the time and place of payment ascertain'd, and a refusal must be proved, which the Court agreed; but doubted whether without a demand it should be a forfeiture. And by Glyn for the defendant, that it being a forfeit, it shall be taken strictly; if the fine were certain, no notice is necessary, contrà where incertain. And by Maynard for the defendant, Where the certainty is dubious, the refusal is no forfeiture, which all agreed, but Willis's case, C. B. cited by Foster contrà Parker against Corke, B. R. that H. would appear if it were a Court, if none, he would not, and adjudged no forfeiture. And by Windham, When such doubt is covenously made, the tenant shall have no benefit of it, as was ruled at the trial in Corks case in the west.

95. HENNING against BRABERSON

In C. B. in Ejectment.

Future interest may be granted over by lessee, notwithstanding disseisin of lessor or tenant for life. 2 Brownl. 226, pl. 177. 2 Leonard 99, pl. 121. 1 Brant 25, pl. 76. That such entry is no disseisin, nor hinders commencement of the lease. So to say H. entred virtute dimissionis is also good without the day: only its no disseisin to enter after any communication, if the lease after made relate to it.

Two joyntenants being disseised, one may enter and its good to both by Bridgman Chief Justice, who conceived the estate of the lessee never turned to a right, yet had it by the entry of one of the joyntenant lessors, he doth remove the impediment, 9 Co. 106. M. Podgers case is stronger than this case, and none but the lessor can enter, for the lessees were the disseisees: and had they been disseised, yet such disseisor had been liable to the disseisees charge; and though there were no right to the possession, yet its necessary that the lessor enter to purge the disseisin, which was lawful for him to do; and so makes it as if their had been no disseisin in the case, without question the lessor may expulse the lessee, yet Elvies case, Hub. 322, doth not thereby gain a fee, nor may be said properly to disseise any, 1 Inst. 249, the same case cited to be contrary adjudged to Elves case: and so 12 Car. [155] C. B. Sir Anth. Aucher's case. H. granted an advowson for years in futuro, during which the reversioner usurps it, doth not take away the lease; for by the usurpation or entry of the lessor the term was never turned to a right, the assignment being made off of the land by a termor is good to an under tenant, and so concluded for the plaintiff, as the rest had agreed before: the case being, A. and H. seised, let to the lessor of the plaintiff for 81 years, to begin at Michaelmas next, if the lessor of the plaintiff lived so long, habendum for 31 years after his death, lessee enters before Michaelmas, after H. lessor enters upon the lessee, and then the lessee assigns to the plaintiff being out of possession.

Covenant. Hitch. 23, pl. 63. Seiles 31, pl. 75. 3 Leonard 119. Godbolt 217, pl. 312. H. may have debt or covenant at election on covenant to pay money. So 42 Ed. 3, 9, pl. 7. When covenant is to pay money, its a single bill, but if it be to pay money on the delivery of any thing, an accord is a good plea, Mich. in Baker against Llenial, this is the proper remedy, for accompt lieth only against the receiver, 5 Ed. 3, 14 b. pl. 8. An obligation given for money stated on accompt before auditors doth extinct it; contrà of a parol to pay such money, 29 Ed. 3, 25 b. pl.

Action of covenant, the plaintiff declares upon a writing of the defendants testator, acknowledging himself to be accomptable to the plaintiff for whatever money the plaintiff should charge upon J. S. payable to Sir T. V. And by Bernard in arrest of judgment an action of accompt properly lyeth, and not covenant for money so delivered: But per Curiam there is no other remedy against executors; and had it been against the party himself, such agreement being by one person to pay money charged upon J. S. for which an accompt lieth not, he being not chargeable as receiver or baily, the only remedy is by covenant: and its not like Geens and Resons case, 1 Cr. 128. 2. No notice is given by the plaintiff to Dixon, who upon such bills was to pay to Sir T. Viner, which per Curiam is not necessary. Judgment for the plaintiff.

B. who have a docket book in the hands of each prothonotary, whereby they correct their judgments: but this Court hath no inducement to be amended for the plaintiff, and his pledges are liable the one in default of the other: But Beechers case is that the pledges are only averrible upon a nonsuit. But whether this be surplus or no, adjornatur to search presidents.

Dower.

If the party appeared in dower, and judgment upon tryal be had, error cannot be assigned in default of a mean summons by the common law, per Windham & Curiam. 2. The writ of certiorari is to remove a record by our writ, whereas the record was by a writ of Oliver Protector, the error was assigned that there was no original writ, and the writ was ill being by O. P. which was in the certiorari, recited by our writ in error brought in the time of the keepers, and so no warrant to remove such record, being after diminution alledged, and plea as aforesaid, but the Court after verdict will presume there was another good writ. Judgment affirmed, nisi.

101. CUDMORE against LEWIS. In Assets per Br. 15.

Judgment. Stiles 287, pl. 629. 2 Cr. 85, pl. 10. 1 Brownl. 54, pl. 1 Cr. 437 pl. 513. The heir shall not be fined for denying his ancestors deed Mordancestr. 65, ou riens per discent pleaded if any assets be found the heir shall be charged for the whole, 18 Ed. 3, 51, 6 pl. 59, per Grene. as well in formedon as in debt on obligation, although lands discended after the death of the ancestor, 21 Ed. 3, 9 b. pl. 28, all that he hath die brevis shall be charged, 1 Inst. 102, Com. 440.

So on nihil dicit it shall be general with execution on his own goods, 3 Cr. 263, pl. 1. Tenant in assize was taken for pleading false deed of the ancestor, imprisonment, Br. 61, yet it is said contrà in pl. 62, ibidem.

Error to reverse a judgment in C. B. upon demurrer upon a replication: Allen conceived that the judgment should be against the heir, generally because he pleaded that his father devised for payment of portions beside the reversion, whereof he hath nothing. Plaintiff replyed that the lands are holden in capite, and so as to a third part are not charged by the will, upon which the defendant demurred, and having set out his estate the plaintiff shall not have any advantage by general judgment, Davis against Peeps, the difference is where [157] such setting forth is true and where not, and here the heir sheweth only a reversion chargeable, the plaintiff hath shewn a possession, and per Twisden, it is in the election of the plaintiff to have judgment specially of the land as set forth, but he may also have it generally. 2. It is said the manner was holden in chief by the twentieth part of a knights fee, and doth not say de facto, that it was holden of the King by knights service in capite, all which was assigned special for error, sed non allocatur. Judgment affirmed.

Limitations. Pl. Com. 9 b. Owen 57. Bract. 240 b. The King by proclamation may prohibit all suits for rent incurred tempore belli, 9 Ed. 3, 16, pl. 29, but debt lieth notwithstanding invasion. Stiles 47. Resc. Br. 27. Dy. 241, pl. 47 b.

To say the Courts were shut is a good excuse on voucher of record in B. R. or C. B. as appears Tayler de Rec'. Br. 5 Ass. Br. 201, of 15 Ass. 16.

Action of trespass upon assault, the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations: the plaintiff saith, that Oliver and certain rebels had usurped, and the Kings Courts were shut, so that he could not prosecute by writ: the defendant rejoyned by the Act of Judicial Proceedings and Oblivion; whereupon the plaintiff demurred. And 1. It was a suit by bill, which by Wild for the defendant is not helped by such plea. 2. If the Courts had been shut up for five years, this Court could not help it, especially being by statute to be brought within a certain time: and the Act of Oblivion hath established all things, as if the King to those purposes had been present. Judgment pro defendente per Curiam, nisi.

Debt. Moor 462. Godbolt 104. 1 Brownl. 80, pl. 395.

Debt against defendant as administrator durante minore æte, who said that such a day the infant attained age of 17, and that after he did not administer, which by Allen for the plaintiff upon demurrer is not good; for if he did administer the day that the infant came of age, he shall be charged: but by Twisden, Whether as executor of his own wrong, Chandler and Tomsons case, Hub. or as administrator during minore ætate, as sheriff after delivery of prisoners, so is Knivets case, C. B. 2 Car. but another opi-[158]-nion hath been as in Bagnals case, and Palmer and Livertons case, B. R. 2 Car. that he shall be charged especially: but all agreed that he must plead fully administred; and by him this plea should have been pleaded in abatement, not after imparlance. And Windham conceived that the fittest way to charge him is as administrator durante minore ætate continuing. Judgment for the plaintiff.

104. LORD OF SUFFOLK against BETTISON.

14 Ed. 4.

In debt upon bond in nature of a statute staple defeasant, to pay money upon a purchase; the defendant pleaded performance of all covenants generally, which per Curiam upon demurrer by the plaintiff upon the plea, is naught, special things being to be done, it must be shewed specially how performed.

In action upon the case upon promise to deliver books within a fortnight, the defendant plead that within the time the plaintiff gave him order parol to deliver no more till request, which per Curiam upon demurrer is sufficient. 2. After this the plaintiff prayed to discontinue because the plea was false, which was granted.

Retorn.

Sheriff upon a scire facias retorned that none came to shew the goods, which Winnington prayed might be amended, because unless it appear where the goods were it is not good, but the Court gave only time to make it as the sheriff would stand to it, and if false, that the party in forma pauperis be left to his remedy.

107. SMITHSON against PAIN.

Prohibition.

Serjeant Keeling, on 1 Cr. 97 & 296, said a prohibition shall not go after sentence, in an action upon a charter-party which although it be not for the penalty, this Court would not stay because that Court hath no jurisdiction, as is conceived in that apocripha, in 1 Cr. 296, and nothing more ordinary then to prohibit after sentence or appeal, yet not without very good cause, & 1 Cr. 96, they had jurisdiction of the cause, and therefore being only erroneous, the Court will not grant it after sentence, [159] Jones for the plaintiff said that by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, that Court (which then had jurisdiction) is confirmed wherefore the rule for a prohibition was discharged.

Continuance.

Allen for the defendant. If a new fieri facias be taken out, every year one, continuances may be entred at any time by the attorney in his chamber, otherwise not, which the Court agreed; and that continuances upon latitat is sufficient without renewal. And by Wild for the plaintiff, If there be a testatum scire facias served by the sheriff, continuances may be entered without renewal, Sir John Lenthall and Smithsby, B. R. the difference is betwixt a suit and execution; but per Curiam that was upon a cap. taken out of term; but by Wild & Curiam an elegit taken out once, may be continued seven years, which the Court agreed: and by Foster, unless presidents before 1640, be so, its not allowable; contrà by Twisden, and that they that sate here since, knew and observed process as well as their predecessors; [160] but all the clerks agreed the course to be as Wild alledged; and by the course of the C. 111. FOSTER against FOSTER.

Trin. 1659, Rot. 751.

1 Brant. 260, pl. 623. 1 Brownl. 141, pl. 503. 1 Brant. 36, pl. 105.

In ejectment by special verdict, it appeared Margaret F. was seised, and did bargain and sell in hæc verba, articles of covenant concluded and agreed upon by M. F. of one part, and Matth. F. her son on the other, for divers causes and considerations, and especially of 20 pounds payable to the assigns of M. F. after her death, granted, bargained, and sold to the son and his heirs, and that she should quietly enjoy during her life, and that she should have a ferm of Matthew the son for her life; and after M. F. did grant, bargain, and sell to N. F. another son and his heirs, for affection and covenant to stand seised accordingly, but there wants livery; and therefore by Tourner for the plaintiff, on Colthirsts case, Pl. Com. 25, the first conveyance is not good, being not inrolled according to 27 H. 8, 16, rising neither by transmutation of possession, 1 Inst. 271, nor by way of covenant to stand seised, Winch. 59. M. 6 Jac. C. B. Rot. 2120, Buckley against Symons in quare impedit, these points were resolved, that to raise a use there must be 1. A consideration sufficient of blood, money, &c. 2. A deed to testifie this covenant, as Callerds case 38 Eliz. 3. A seisin of the land. 4. A limitation suitable to the rules of law, the first and last whereof are here wanting, 7 Co. Bedels case, & 4 Co. 4 b. Nokes's case, the consideration implyed ceasing by that express, 9 Ed. 4, 28 b. 5 Co. 97 b. Goodales case, 11 Co. 24, and when money is expressed, the deed must be enrolled. And 2. The juries finding that this deed was as well in consideration of affection as money, Dyer 147, is not material, being not averrable, as 2 Co. 4 b. nor can 29 Ass. 42, the jury be charged therewith, Dyer 140, especially the deed being found in hæc verba, against which they cannot find, expressum facit cessare tacitum, Entry F. 78. F. N. B. 205, and yet there may be one consideration expressed, 1 Co. 76, and another implyed, but not to the same person, Dyer 146, Beaumont against Villers, the objection, that construction may be made ut res magis valeat must be limited by the rules of law, 8 Co. 94, and the intent of the parties, which was to pass it by bargain and sale, and not by covenant to stand seised. But admitting [161] the consideration good and averrable, yet the limitation is against the rules of law, being to pass a freehold in futuro, Baker and Symons case, 1 Cr. 138, after the death of M. F. by agreement of the parties, Tr. 15 Car. B. R. Price against Pitfield, the father in consideration of marriage of his second son, did covenant and grant his land after his death, no livery being made, it was adjudged void, Dyer 55, and so prayed judgment for the plaintiff. Allen for the defendant, Supposing the 20l. had not been mentioned, yet a use would have risen upon this deed, an use at common law being but an equitable right, and whatsoever contract did give such right might raise an use; and the statute alters not the manner of raising the uses, Dyer 229, but only executes the possession to the use, and so agreed, Collard against Collard, Popham 47, & Dyer 296, seeming to the contrary that a use would not rise by parol. Mich. 10, 11 Eliz. Rot. 2200 is misreported, for it was only a promise that he would assure in futuro, and not that a use could not be raised by parol. 2. Such consideration as will now raise a use might do so at common law, and è contrà, 1. Negatively, where it doth appear by the deed it self that the estate is to be conveyed, by common law no use will rise, Foxes case; Tr. 37 Eliz. Rot. 149, B. R. Teb against Pottlewell. A deed made by a feme causa matrimonii prælocuti dedi concessi to one whom she intended to marry, and no livery being, no use would arise by Popham, contrà by Clench and Fenner, although there was a warranty against her, and her heirs: but Popham agreed that an averment might be in such case, and upon grant that J. S. shall have my land after my death, an use did rise by him, but no judgment was entred in the case. And in Dyer 302, the deed had the form of a release without consideration: and Plowden conceived that an averment would lye; but Dyer conceived the contrary: but the elder brother did release. But by Twisden the land was enjoyed against Plowdens conceit to this day: but by Allen that was only intended a conveyance at common law as a release. 2. When there is an agreement for further assurance, Dyer 162, no use will rise till execution of such future conveyance, though a recovery be had in order thereto, Dyer 96, 235, but where there is a present execution it rises. 3. When the deed is not immediately declaratory, 21 H. 7, 18, and where immediately to extinct the possession, Dyer 55 goeth upon the same reason; so 1 Co. 129, & Seignior Pagets case, & Rector of Cheddingtons case; and the case of Buckley against Symons was upon the same difference, the tenure of the deed being [162] only covenants de futuro, and the lands upon granting several rents was to remain and be within words obligatory, which raise no uses, and not declaratory as here all is done and executed immediately. 2. Positively, where the covenants are immediate, and present, a use will arise, though the conveyance be in form of common law by grant, &c. for the word covenant is not necessary, so there be a good consideration, for the covenant in this case hath not properly the effect of a covenant, but is only a writing declaring the use; and Callerds case was not reverst, because the words were only dedi, &c. but because there wanted a deed to manifest it. In C. B. Tr. 1649, Rot. 1549, Wats against Dawson: as to this point, Watson being seised in consideration of affection to his niece, and of several sums of money, the Court conceived it good by way of bargain and sale, yet if not, it had been a good covenant to stand seised, so H. 1655, Rot. 1578, Sanders against Savell, C. B. Sympson against Keitle, M. 1657, C. B. Rot. 2421. H. 1656, C. B. Peer against —— H. in consideration of marriage had absolutely given and granted to his son, without livery found (although it were endorsed) yet it was adjudged that a use did rise, and there is no case against this, but 2 Cr. 127, an opinion in Osborns case in evidence, the case of Pitfield against Price entred H. 11 Car. Rot. 439, upon a special verdict, the jury found a deed made upon an express consideration, and of affection, but found not the deed in hæc verba; yet the deed was, I give, grant, &c. to J. my son, and the heirs general of his body after my death, which is adjudged against the daughter, issue of J. which could not otherwise be; for had it been by use to the father for life, remainder to the son in tail, the father entring and making a feoffment with warranty, that discending upon her, she is bound: but by Foster counsel in that case, this point was not started; but yet this is but an intent future that J. should have it after my death, habendum to him and his heirs, so that the father kept a fee in himself; the deed in the case at Bar is well executed, being I grant all my lands to my son, I enjoying it during my life, the use well rises, and the fee is out of J. presently, as if it had been reserving to J. for life; and this case is not capable of any further execution by livery or otherwise, it carrying an allotment of dower within it; and therefore the construction, although dubious, shall be taken for the better. 2. Point, that the expression of the consideration doth not make the deed void for want of enrollment, because this deed is not to execute an estate by bargain and [163] sale only, Manxels case 4. Feoffment to Use, Br. 26, and had the considerations been both expressed, there had been no question, and although one be expressed, yet Mildmays case, if it be not upon a plain bargain, another implyed may be averred; as a consideration of affection being enrolled, may be averred for money: and Beedles case is rather taken off then agreed in Harpers case, 11 Co. 24, the Court shall not presume any other, but yet another consistent with that exprest may be averred; and Dyer 146 cannot be differenced by being to a third person, for both must be enrolled: but he relyed, that here the deed being for divers causes, 2 Co. 15, and especially for 20l. there needs no averment, especially the party being a son, which implyes of it self a consideration. Post, entred Tr. 59, Rot. 751. So P. 10 Jac. Walter against Dean and Chapter of Norwich, the defendant leased to T. and after to another for 40 years, [165] with covenant in the last for quiet enjoyment, which was resolved with this very difference. 2. Remainder. 3 Cr. 26, pl. 5.

In ejectment by special verdict its found, that M. C. and Ursula his wife, in her right was seised, and in consideration of a marriage of their son W. C. and Margaret the daughter of Bromely, they demise to them for provision of daughters children of W. and M. for 100 years, to begin when they dyed without issue male, in trust for payment of legacies to the daughters of W. and Margaret, then M. and Ursula levy a fine, and suffer a recovery directed by a deed endorsed with this lease, William and Margaret have issue male that dyeth without issue, and whether this lease should commence or no, was the question.

1. Allen for the plaintiff, being to begin from and after the death of W. and Margaret his wife, without issue male, he agreed that the lease is good in point of creation, as hath been by all in C. B. and here agreed, being in the power of him that hath the fee to contract for. 2. The fine doth not destroy the lease, as Chenyes case, nor whether the recovery destroyed it or no, though dubious, he waived as immaterial. But 3, insisted on the words in the habendum, as the single point, whether the words shall be construed without issue male living at the time of their death, then the term is gone; but if it be construed whenever W. and M. dye without issue, then its for the plaintiff, and so is the literal grammatical construction and sense; it being one thing to say H. is dead without issue, another that H. died without issue male; the former being true though he had issue, if it die without issue, contrà in the latter. 2. This is the most vulgar construction to say after the death of the issue male, that H. is dead without issue, and so according to legal construction, which in such [170] points of limitation is to be observed, as in a formedon in remainder such a supposition is made, and not that all the issues male failed, and if so in writs à fortiori in deeds, this being a common limitation to J. S. after the death of A. without issue; Sundays case, lands given generally to A. and after his death without issue, to B. this in a will is tail to A. 4. If the meaning should be at the time of the death, it is common experience to distinguish and express it in the deed, else is there no reason to take such difference but must take the case as it is. 5. When there is a doubt (Bishop of Bath and Wells) it shall be taken strongest against him that made the deed. The objection, that it is made for provision of daughters, it is gone by having issue male, and such contingent can be no provision, yet this is not the bare intent, for if there had been neither son nor daughter yet the executors of William the son were to have the term; and therefore it is as much for their benefit, and countrymen and citizens do usually provide for daughters upon a failer of issue male, and it is usual to limit to sons particularly, and then in trust for daughters, which though minus prudentèr is very frequent, and a remainder hath the same inconvenience as this if in expectancy; and 6. Where the intention of the parties is not certainly exprest, the Court must interpret according to the purport of the deed.

2. Kettlewell for the defendant, agreed the case as opened, but conceived that his purpose, that executors should have it, was as much confined to his death as if it were for provision, and this is a condition precedent and so destroyed by having issue male, Dike against Lake P. 1657, B. R. the possibility being extinguisht by having issue and the commencement after the death of the issue, is only from the event, and so arbitrary, and verdict likewise should this term hold, no alienation could be made by fine or otherwise for payment of debts or provision for children; the Court conceived the words in equilibrio to either construction, and therefore the intent of the parties must be searched by perusal of the settlement. Twisden who argued this case before, as Mr. Kettlewell, yet knew not why upon the recovery. Windham cited the case in Chancery under the hands of the Judges. H. in trust ordered provision for daughters upon the dying without issue male, they certified that when A. had issue male though that issue dyed without, yet the daughters had no portions in their opinions. [171] 129. ALEWAY against ROBERTS. Ante. In Damages Br. 52.

Dower.

In scire facias reciting, that in Mich. 18 Car. the plaintiff recovered against G. heir of C. Roberts, and that she should have judgment against him of the seisin of her husband J. R. and by the Kings writs she had seisin, but no writ to enquire of damages: after which Giles R. dyed, and this scire facias is against W. the heir and ter-tenants who come in; some plead non-tenure, others specially, that Cesar R. made a lease for 99 years to one of them, from whom the lands descended to G. and from him to William retorned heir, and a lease for years if three lived so long, to another: and the plaintiff replies, that Cesar made a feoffment, and so traversed the dying seised. Allen for the defendant, conceived this writ lyeth not in this case: 1. Not for damages only, the defendants being not parties to the judgment. At common law there was no damages: and the Statute of Merton calls him deforceator that must render them, which is he that doth detain the dower. 2. The cause of the damages is for the wrongful deteiner of the dower, for without refusal, if always ready, the plaintiff shall have no damages, nor shall he be charged for such profits he receives not. 3. If there be a writ of enquiry, and judgment given, yet its personal, and affects only the lands of that person that is party to the judgment, and the execution is general by fieri facias or elegit of the lands the heir had at the time of the judgment, à fortiori, where the alienation is before judgment. 4. It doth not appear, till the execution of the writ of enquiry, that she shall have any damages, therefore no scire facias lyeth against the ter-tenants to know why she should not, and whether the damages shall relate to the death of the husband, which is unreasonable as this case is, or to the recovery, he knew not, nor what judgment or execution can be in this case, that she should by this alienation be defeated of her dower is a mistake, and no inconvenience, for she may bring her writ against the heir, who is lyable, & vigilantibus non dormientibus; and should he alien, yet she may proceed, but the damages being a personal wrong, it dyeth with the person; nor doth he know any president that the ter-tenants shall be in this case charged. Also he excepted, 1. To the recital of a judgment in this Court, and sheweth not betwixt what parties. 2. She hath destroyed her own supposition, that tenants pleading leases before the judgment mentioned by her, 18 Car. and she pleaded a [172] feoffment in fee to them long before, and alledgeth both seised; and so she hath judgment against Giles the heir of Cesar, whereas others of her own shewing were tenants. Serjeant Say's for the plaintiff, By the scire facias it appeareth to be error here of a judgment in C. B. and judgment here but in 18 Car. and so default appears in the plaintiff in the scire facias, because this shall relate to that, and the judgment in the C. B. was long before such feoffment pleaded, that the scire facias well lyeth against the ter-tenants of the two parts after judgment for the third, supposing the error well brought, and so the judgment in C. B. perfect, Tr. 17 Car. 1, Steward against Steward, Rot. 1270, before the writ of enquiry taken out, and the error here was a supersedeas to that writ of enquiry, and that this Court may award a writ of enquiry, which takes off any default in the demandant, but that she may come here at any time, Dower Br. 13, although judgment be by default, or upon demurrer, Dyer 313. 14 H. 8, 25. After judgment by confession, this writ was allowed upon search of presidents; for by the judgment the damages are attached by the Statute of Merton, as a duty, and so he conceived damages should relate to the time of the husbands death, and there hath never been any particular means to recover them but only the Court ex officio do enquire of this as of the other points in dower comparable to 1 Cr. 342, 348, Lorton or Corton against , 2 Cr. 175, Earl of Pembroke against Bostok, damages given generally by the Statute of Quare Impedits is ascertained by the Court without any writ of enquiry, if it doth constare of the loss, but otherwise a suggestion and writ of enquiry issue, and yet damages may be against ter-tenant, Yelvert. M. 5 Jac. Bromley against Littleton, where the principal was never charged as the executors were in that case of Yelvert. P. 39 Eliz. Williams against Williams, error in B. R. of a judgment in C. B. and if there the executors be lyable without the principal, à fortiori here where the principal was charged that these are a duty by statute, Vicount Mansfield against Worsley, M. 1658, C. B. debt upon 2 Ed. 6, by Vicount M. as executor, H. 1656, Rot. 148, for tythes not set forth in the life of the testator, which were then a duty, and so not lost by the death of the testator; thus as to the matter that the damages remain. 2. As to the manner it is well brought against these ter-tenants, this land being originally charged with dower, and so most properly lyable and scire facias have often, 10 R. 2, Dower 158, been against others then parties to the first judgment, as against a guardian, 17 Ed. 3, 67, against a meer stranger, [173] 10 Ed. 3, 41, and it is well enough brought against this land only, as Dy. 81, 149, or of all at election, though it would have been hard to have charged the other tenants of the third part of the other lands, 4 H. 6, 49. Br. Assets per 3 is much stronger then this case, and dower is found when as here there is no default in the party plaintiff, but of him that brings error, and so praid judgment for the plaintiff, in scire facias defendant in error. Twisden, A scire facias against bail doth not recite any capias against principal, and they do not recite all, but are short, and therefore it not appearing it was dower unde nil habet, is not material, which the Court agreed. And per Windham, All the cases cyted are after judgments to recover damages, but here is not any judgment; and it is 48 Ed. 3, 19, a question, whether he that in the first had pleaded that he had nothing, and after purchaseth the land in scire facias, may so plead, and this is a personal tort and they are given by death; as per Twisden, In ejectment if the defendant dye before the writ of enquiry executed, the dammages are gone, yet the term is recovered, and the statute will not help, nor per Foster are the other cases like, being certain as here they are not, in quare impedit is quod recuperet presentationem, and the defendant dyeth before the damages be known. Twisden conceived, that if the same jury hath not given them, they are gone by death; which Foster agreed: and by Twisden, The scire facias as to the two parts only is well enough: and the plaintiff demanding dower of John, which might be before all the others, the pleas are frivolous, and had been naught upon demurrer. Windham conceived the pleading suitable to the scire facias, and both strange. Adjornatur.

Drapery.

In an information by bill qui tam pro domino Rege quam pro seipso, for not paying subsidy for new drapery to the aulnager. Finch for the King prayed, that all the Judges here assembled would settle it by order; but it being difficult, and not debated before, as the other cases had been, and the Judges of each Court divided, by Bridgman Chief Justice, and by Foster, this case is not adjorned for difficulty, nor is like Calvins case, which was primæ impressionis; this hath had a course in the Court. Hale Chief Baron, The consequence is so great, and it hath been already adjorned into this chamber; and therefore this was brought hither by the Barons, not by the Kings Counsels advice. Bridgman Chief Justice, conceived it more fit in this case to deliver their opi-[175]-nions at Serjeants Inn, as the Kings Counsel; which Hyde agreed, but contrà by Hale, Atkins, and Tourner Barons, and Bridgman Chief Justice doubted whether in this place any interlocutory order can be made to settle the possession; and 2 Jac. P. & Tr. cited by Foster, that by the opinions of all the Judges, this case was settled upon the Kings sending to them, which Twisden also conceived necessary here; wherefore they waived it.

136. WAGSTAFF against TEMPLE.

Amendment.

After issue or demurrer, the continuances are helped by verdict, but when the plaintiff hath liberty by rule to discontinue, the defendant by proviso must take care to enter continuances; and because nothing was set down in the paper, the Court would not adjorn the jury, to give occasion to the defendants attorney to enter continuances.

142. WEB against MARTEN.

Assumpsit.

Action upon the case upon promise, that if the plaintiff would deliver a writing upon request to the defendant, the defendant would redeliver it, and pay 40l. upon request: the defendant pleaded non promisit within 6 years, to both which the plaintiff demurred, as no good plea to the one, and good to the other, which on general demurrer by the plaintiff cannot be good; the last was a promise in law accrewing by delivery of the deed, and requests no more then the law implies but per Jones. This is fact and collateral and a request necessary, and waived the insufficiency of the plea which reacheth only one part; Twisden conceived that when the promise raiseth a present debt as upon delivery of a horse to pay, request need not be exprest; and per Curiam, such is the payment of this money; and Twisden conceived that a plea in bar of the whole answering but part, is insufficient. 2. The deed which was the ground of the consideration, was the defendants own deed, because it concerned his title, 9 Ed. 4, and so the consideration void, but per Curiam, though this be not good by way of accord in trespass, yet it is for an action upon the case. 3. The promise was to deliver a parchment deed or writing, which per Curiam is frivolous, and Bridges against Hide, such a plea of the statute was ruled naught for the whole, being an annuity to be paid yearly, whereof part was within, part not in the statute. Foster, If the covenant was to pay during the term, the term must be continuing, contrary if it be generally for payment of such rent, which difference hath been agreed in C. B. Twisden, It should have been pleaded, that the defendant had performed covenants specially, paying his rent till such a day that the lessor entred, which the Court agreed, and that this general performance is intended of an actual performance, Yelvert. 3 Jac. Jeoffrey against Guy,

Error Br. 5.

Damages in action upon the case for false imprisonment, are joynt against all the defendants, and several as to the assault, which was agreed well enough; but the error assign'd and relyed on in the judgment in C. B. it was quod recuperet twenty shillings damages pro misis & custagiis, beside the damages de incremento distinct from & ultrà his [179] damages for the trespass; which by Allen is well enough, being surplusage, and only to ascertain how much of the damages are for costs, how much for the trespass, but all are damna, and in the end are sum'd up quæ in toto se attingunt. Jones conceiv'd the forms are so strictly observed in judgments, the concordatum & concessum hath been ruled void. Windham conceived that this is no more expressed then was implyed in true construction, which the Court agreed; but that this is variance from the ancient form, therefore adjornatur to search presidents; though Twisden thought the damna pro misis had been for interest. 2. The writ was directed to remove a record coram Roberto Foster & Sociis, and its retorned by F. and Hyde, which by Wild the Kings Serjeant, is not good, but both should have been named in the certiorari, which is the course of fines pleaded, 1 H. 7, 10 b. 147. JAMES.

Treason.

He was indicted (and found guilty) for compassing and imagination of the Kings death, and intending his deprivation, manifested by preaching at White Chappel, after the 24 of June 1661, viz. 18 October, affirming of the King and his nobles, that the King was a blood-thirsty and tyrannical King, and so of the nobles; and that the cup of their iniquity was almost fill'd with the blood of the saints a year ago, but the putting of the Covenanters to death in Scotland, had (to fit them for destruction) filled it fuller; and he was sorry he had neglected his opportunity of fighting the Lords battel, but hoped that if ever he had it again, he should consider it more fully. Serjeant Keeling opened the indictment (the Court on his desire refused to allow any friend to take notes for him), Mr. Attorney General further observed, that the intent and imagination was the prime treason, the preaching an evidence of it, which was the law before any [180] statute made in the world, as antient as monarchy it self; but the uncertainty is bounded by the statute, 25 Ed. 3, which is only declaratory of the common law for the ease of the subject, bare words at common law being treason, this is more then that preaching is an overt act, at least by the statute of 13 Car. 2, cap. 1, of preserving the Kings person, that he endeavoured not only to overthrow the King, but monarchy (that divine rule from all antiquity) in this land. After the evidence that swore the words punctually, the prisoner objected against the testimony. The Court summ'd up the evidence, and verdict pro Rege.

In Tr. 1660, the defendant pleaded not guilty; the words were spoken in July 1659, and Wallop conceived the judgment ought to be upon the Act of Judicial Proceedings, which by the word proceedings had confirmed the pleadings, as here the words being indefinite in the title, and so what is not excepted is confirmed; the intent of the lawmakers being evident in what they intended not to confirm. 1. Process in High Courts of Justice. 2. Outlawries or indictments of persons for their loyalty, these as malitious were left out; but all civil proceedings were intended to be confirmed for civil peace, not only such as were executed by judgment, &c. but such as were executory, and depending not only upon ancient, but also by any latter laws, which was the principal provision of the Act, and so the declaration being well begun, here they are as effectual as upon a good Act of Parliament, though [181] by the reason of the common law these words might be proved a foul scandal, and it would have been fruitlesly confirmed if proceedings cannot be upon it. Bartholomew contrà, and that the Act doth not extend to make these words actionable, but only to be so far good as in English or wanting legal power, and the words were only actionable, as a consequent of a pretended Act that inflicted a punishment on such offences, which is now taken away, and so the words cannot be said actionable at the time of the speaking: and had there been a libel for fraight pending without sentence, he conceived this Court would send a prohibition. Twisden, If H. before the Act be indicted for adultery, he cannot now be hanged for it; and per Foster, according to this rule all actions pending by writ or declaration should receive judgment now as upon effectual Acts which he conceived not in private interest, but only in matters of publick concernment and good, and by Windham it would be dangerous thus to proceed, because they made many laws against the King himself, and therefore the Acts were only to help defects of power in the Courts, not of the laws made, unless only that they were in English, but if any of these actions had received judgment, they may be said pending within the Acts. 2. The words are actionable, because this Court may punish it by fine and imprisonment, 3 Inst. 206, 1 H. 7, which the Court denyed, which is the ground that a procedendo is grantable to London where such words are actionable, and no appeal lyeth hither, though a bawdyhouse is punishable as a nusans, so of a pimpe, Dimmocks case, nor was ever the jurisdiction of this crime of adultery in this Court. Marriage.

In trespass for entring his house, spoiling his goods, and taking away his wife: as to the former, they find the defendant guilty; and to the wife, they find the Act of Marriages (which was made 1656) and that after Febr. 1658, the Act was to end:

and that the marriage was in April 1657 and dissolved by the justices in their sessions within six months after the marriage, according to the direction of the Act, by petition of the wife and her parents, being without their consent, which is confirmed by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, which comprehends orders of sessions. But by Windham, this sentence should have been upon the verdict of a jury, not by petition; which Foster Ch. Justice agreed, the words of the Act being, that they should do it by tryal, which cannot be by private information in this manner, but by jury; and their proceedings being erroneous, are not confirmed. But by Allen for the plaintiff, this was the general way of fact that was practised in those irregular times, and the consequence of this would be great: and (by Windham) when they are once well married, all the world cannot dissolve the marriage; for an Act of Parliament in this sense, against the law of God, is void; and this doth properly belong to the Ordinary: and Bales case, being a second marriage, at which sentence (by Wild) Rolls Chief Justice would not be present, that dissolved her first marriage, but conceived it could not well be dissolved. And by Twisden it hath been resolved, that a process by petition before the justices of peace is void upon the general law, and the same causes that might legally adnul it then, will do it now in the Spiritual Court, and therefore the party is at no inconvenience: but the Court would give no judgment, because the verdict hath found that which is not here examinable; and this is not by force, but only without the consent of friends. And by Allen the power of the Ordinary is delegated to the justices: but per Curiam, not that they may proceed by the course of the civil law. Curia advisare vult.

[189] 170. HELIER against GRAY.

Tryals.

Error of a judgment in Bristow, if they trye by twelve, they may summon an hundred by custom; but by custom a tryal cannot be by fewer or more then the law appoints, per Curiam. 2. In Inferiour Courts it is needless in the distringas to retorn the jurors quorum quilibet habet so much, because the statutes only include the greater. 3. The venire, by Jones for the defendant, by custom may be to 24, ad recognoscendum, so but twelve execute it. And by Foster, it is in pursuance of the rules of law, and so good, which Twisden agreed, although they cannot nominate by general allegation of custom; but it being here specially pleaded, the Court conceived it well enough. Judgment affirmed, nisi.

171. BARS against DESMAN. See Baron & Feme, Br. 1.

3 Cr. 370, pl. 9. 1 Brownl. 46, pl. 254. 2 Cr. 445, pl. 23.

If the sheriff retorn cepi corpus, the wife may have an idem dies, 2 Cr. 58. 11 H. 4, 71, 89. Dy. 271. And upon an exigent if the feme will appear, she shall be received, and he have an idem dies; and so if he be outlawed the wives appearance may be received, and when the husband comes in by process after, he shall not be received, as Mayherns case, till he bring in his wife: the case at Bar being an action of det against baron & feme, upon the latitat the feme appeared, and shall be accepted, per Curiam; but where the feme is in execution, she shall not be discharged; nor could the Lady Baltinglass, who was in custodia only upon process. But per Curiam, she ought to be discharged, and that without bail, if it appear upon the writ that she is a feme covert, but if she be sued as a feme sole, she shall put in bail. And per Twisden, it is an unreasonable course, that the wife because she cannot appear by reddidit se, but in custodia, therefore she should not be dismissed, as in C. B. else would this be as good as a divorce, a continual non est inventus being retorned against the husband, and no declaration can be against her, and so she shall be always in prison; and the clerks conceived, by the course of the Court, she could not appear, and discharge her self. Sed adjornatur to search presidents.

[190] 172. RUMSEY against ATKINSON. Ante.

Jurisdiction. 3 Ed. 1, cap. 35. 3 Cr. 105, pl. 15.

In consideration that the plaintiff had taken pains at A. about a house in B. which appears not to be within the jurisdiction of the Marshalsey, which was here assigned for error: but by Wild for the plaintiff in error, defendant there, that the principal cause of action is on a thing executed, and the promise the ground of the action, and is not for a quantum meruit, whereby the house should come in question. Allen for the plaintiff. It is not enough that it doth not appear to be out, but it must appear to be within the jurisdiction, which hath been a constant rule. 2. Though the consideration be past, yet if it had been for going to Windsor, it had been naught; which Wild agreed. And here this procurement of the lease of the house in B. is local, and must be shewed to the jury: and by Windham, had this only sounded in damage, without the jurisdiction, 1 Cr. 570, it had been well enough; but this procurement is part of the thing it self, which the jury mus tenquire of in the issue; the taking pains is not sufficient, or about a lease generally, but about a lease of this house in B. particularly. And so by Twisden; all Inferiour Courts are tyed up, but these Courts may enquire, any where; and he conceived this a flat error, and Foster likewise. And this is not like a promise at Hull, that if the plaintiff would deliver his horse at Hull for the defendant to ride to Beverly, the defendant would deliver him at Hull again; here all enquirable is only at Hull, & not the riding. Judgment reversed.

173. SERJEANT MORTONS CASE against SPENCER. Siderf. 65, pl. 28.

Priviledge.

He being to attend in C. B. the Court conceived, that this Court could not award a prohibition to the Admiralty, in a cause wherein he was concern'd: but by Allen the Court may be prohibited, although any party could have priviledge, because it appears upon the libel, that the cause is not within their jurisdiction, and priviledge in this case lyeth not, for no suit is commenced against him. And if a serjeant would sue in an Inferiour Court, this Court might reverse that judgment by error. And by Foster, this action was commenced before he was serjeant, and he was not named serjeant, and therefore non constat he is the man unless he comes in by plea. And by Twisden, If a serjeant had sued in Spiritual Court for a legacy due out of the Orphans Court in London, a prohibition would lye here: but by [191] Windham, priviledges are not to be pleaded as other pleas, and therefore this Court waiveth not their jurisdiction by leaving it to the C. B. where he is resident; but they can also award a prohibition, and conusans is thus demanded à latere at the Bar by motion, as this is. But by Allen, Conusans is ex debito justitiæ, and without special favour, its claimed by matter of record put into Court; but this priviledge is not claimable of right, but of favour without a plea; and plead it he cannot, here being no prohibition: but the Court refused to allow his priviledge without plea, otherwise than by agreement of the parties. Post.

Supposing that there had been but 23 retorned, if 12 had tryed, it had been good enough. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

175. SABIN against SABIN.

Franchise. Procedendo.

An ejectione firmæ brought in the City and county of Canterbury, and removed hither by habeas corpus; and because the Judges of Assize come not hither, a procedendo was prayed: but by Twisden its not grantable, but the rest doubted. But because bail was here put in, all the Court denied it, because thereby they were seised of the cause. And by Wild, the Kings Serjeant, upon an ejectment in the county, H. may declare on a demise in any part of the county of Kent, and so try it at Maidstone; for the venire facias comes always from the place of the demise; which Windham denied, the body of the county being as another county from that of Canterbury.

177. TRIPPIT against REYNALDS. Ante.

Assumpsit. Stiles 393, pl. 861.

H. possest of a term, and being in treaty to assign it to B. B. promises in consideration thereof to pay to the wife, which by Lindley for the plaintiff is good enough, being advantage to the wife, M. 1654, Thomas against Geere, B. R. in consideration the father would assign to A. A. would pay to the daughters, who brought an action, and adjudged good. And so in the case of Sprat against Agar, M. 1658, and the same term the like betwixt Fountain and his wife, there being a relation betwixt them, it is sufficient to support the action. And 2, although of right it belong to the husband to be administrator to the wife, yet he may refuse, or for consideration, the Ordinary may grant to another. Tourner for the defendant. It doth not appear the husband of Mary the executrix is dead, and so her administrator not entitled. 2. The wife is a meer stranger, as in De la Bar and Golds case, and not like the case, Yelvert. 1. But the husband is intitled to all the arrears in his life time. And 3, it appeareth not to whom the promise was made, as in H. 1651, Rot. Shun and Beelby, in consideration that H. would surrender, the defendant promised to pay, and said not to whom, ruled naught; but per Curiam the promise shall go along with the interest and consideration, unless it be collateral, and vests no duty. And here by Allen for the plaintiff, needs no promise to the wife; or if it had been made to the husband, yet if the duty accrue to the wife, she after his death may have the action, and lay it as [193] made to her self, for by law it redounded to her: and by Windham this is a plain bargain: but upon promise by A. to pay to C. for wares sold by B. B. only shall have the action, as hath been ruled, unless B. were in debt to C. And if it had appeared, that if the father would assign to A. he would promise to pay to the son, that vests not any interest in the son, unless it appear in the declaration that it was intended a gift of the father to the son, and so in the case at Bar. But by Allen for the plaintiff, the payment is to be to the wife, her executors and administrators, and so the propriety appears hers, which the Court doubted. And by Twisden, this rent is collateral, as a promise to stand to an award is not good, unless it appear to whom it was made; but when the consideration is of marriage of his daughter, there the son performs the promise, yet either may have it, French against Evans, in consideration of conveying land to the son, H. promised to pay, here the son hath no remedy, because its collateral. By Foster, the declaration is upon a communication betwixt the plaintiff, tenant to A. &c. and said not what estate, which is ill, although the promise be to assign all his term of years. Post. Adjornatur.

In this very point, by rule of Court, it was amended misericordia for capiatur, 1 Cr. 474, Heling against The Mayor, &c. of London, cyted by Wild for the defendant to the contrary, that this is not amendable; and the difference betwixt B. R. and C. B. taken, 3 Cr. 497, Harecote against Bishop, and the difference betwixt Bosvills case and this, is great in respect of the consequence; this alters the nature of the judgment. Baldwin for the defendant: in Nelsons case, there (as 2 Cr. Mason against Foxes case) was reason to apply the misericordia to the baron, and not to both; and the want of eat inde sine die the judgment was not compleat without it, and therefore it was amended. Twisden said three opinions have been; one that she should lye in prison till the husband come in, which is unreasonable. 2. That she ought to file a common bail if another will be bound for her, which may prevent a fraud in arresting her at the beginning of a long vacation: this the Court conceived reasonable; but at the election of the wife, whither she will or no. Twisden doubted whether when 23 are retorned in distringas, though the venire facias be 24, and 12 sworn, it be not good at common law: and by stat. 21 Jac. that remedies only informations upon penal laws are excepted, all others may be examined, as well as in an action betwixt party and party, and so this being an information at common law: but by Allen, that statute is only where the parties be sworn; but per Curiam, à fortiori where he is not sworn. For the matter, this Court will scarcely grant any prohibition (however grantable) if once denied in C. B. before, especially after long proceedings and appeal hanging, which was the reason that (it being in discretion of the Court) was denied in C. B. But by Allen for the defendant, A prohibition is not ex gratia Curiæ, but grantable ex debito justiciæ; and if they proceed, H. may inform against them: but by Windham, Though the hanging in appeal will not alter the cause, yet if they have conusance of the principal, any incident property there arising (and of such nature might this cause be originally) may be tryed by [202] them. But by Windham, (who would be as near to an amendment as possible) This is the very standard of all, and more stronger then that case of a misericordia against the wife, made against husband and wife, 1 Cr. But the case of Everard and Boswill in debt on 2 Ed. 6, on not guilty pleaded, part was found for the plaintiff, and part against him, and no eat inde sine die for the defendant: but Twisden doubted upon the books, Beechers case 59, & Blackamores case, & Hut. Baron & feme.

If the husband confess an action for a debt against baron & feme dum sola, the wife may be baild; but not so where both are sued and taken by mean process, she cannot be delivered till the retorn of the writ or habeas corpus, if no prosecution be within three terms, by Twisden, which the Court agreed.

Lindley moved to quash an indictment of conspiracy to charge H. with having carnal knowledge of a woman, and did so; and that the child she went with was H.'s, which he said was matter not within the conusance of this Court. But per Curiam This is likely to be a charge and loss to H. and therefore the indictment is well layed; contrà if it were only for getting J. S. with child, especially being after verdict against the defendants, though there were no child born. And by Foster Its no ground, that because the Court have no conusance of the principal, therefore they may not punish the conspiracy; for if it be to do an act unlawful, the very conspiracy is a crime, & præsentatum extitit, per Windham & Curiam, is (and hath been ruled heretofore) good enough. 9. PRIDEAUX against WELLER. Ante. Debt Br. 22.

Limitation. Bar.

In false imprisonment, Bear for the plaintiff agreed, that being laid (10 Oct. 57) for 18 months, to which the defendant pleaded 21 Jac. of Limitations, alledging the session to end 29 May, and that the assault and imprisonment, only named in the writ, was done (29 Oct. 55) and a bill exhibited 12 Car. 2, which is not within one of the sessions, or four years of the cause of action, the count being of assault, battery, and imprisonment. The plaintiff confesseth the trespass to be the 29 Oct. 55, from which time till 29 May, 1660, no Court was open, where the subjects might have justice, by reason certain rebels had usurped till 29 May, the Kings retorn: the defendant confesseth the replication, but pleads the Act of General Pardon, 13 Car. 2, (not shewing he is no person excepted:) also he pleads the Act of Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings specially, &c. and that the C. B. 29 Oct. 1656 to 29 May, 1660, were open, & hoc paratus est verificare, not saying prout per record. The plaintiff demurs, and sheweth for cause that the defendants plea is a departure. 1. The Act pleaded in the bar is not good, because he saith nothing of the battery, wounding, and ill intreating, and every one of them is a special trespass, which the statute names particularly, and no vi & armis, whereby the fine is due to the King for every of them, Dyer 65, and the rent abridged, cannot be the same as that whereon H. counted. So Dyer 36, when one answers not vendition, though he answers all the rest of the count, its no plea: and so in the case 6 Ed. 6 of Cliffords, error, one must not answer non ejecit generally to ejectment, and carrying away of goods; and so the statute being only pleaded as to the assault, its ill: but by Wild for the defendant, One never pleads to the vi & armis, where he begins with the Statute of Limitation, which the Court agreed: and as to the other, the record was quod transgressio insultus & imprisonamenti. Bear excepted to the day, which is impossible, being but of one day, 1 Cr. 370, Thornton, & 414, Owen against Long, and this for 18 months, Read against Price, 1 Cr. and the 18 months are within the four years given by statute, and so repugnant to the plea. 3. The imprisonment was till the defendant paid 100l. to a stranger, which extortion is a new trespass not before mentioned, but distinct, [205] Cramp against How, Tr. 11 Car. Rot. 308, B. R. in trespass of assault, battery, and imprisonment, till the defendant paid a fine. The defendant justifies the imprisonment by a warrant, whereby he took the defendant in execution till he paid, &c. and as to the rest, pleaded not guilty; and not answering to the fine, which was held a distinct trespass, not depending on the execution, it had been ill, but that it was held to be within the not guilty pleaded to all the rest. And here the plaintiff procuring, the defendant is trespasser, as 27 Ass. 59, commander of a trespass is a trespasser. 4. The replication sheweth that it was impossible for him to commence his action before he did, and so not within the purview of the statutes pleaded in bar, West. 2, c. 49, as where plea abates for false Latin, one shall have the view, because its apparent to the Court he had it not before, Pl. Com. Stradling against Morgan, 25 Ed. 3, 16, and so Marlbridge 21, for necessity the sheriff may enter a plaint before himself, and after returns it to the County Court, that so the cattle may not perish; and for this reason of impossibility, uses in contingency shall not be executed; and by reason of this disability, the Statute of Fines hath excepted feme coverts, infants, &c. And here is an apparent disability, that the plaintiff could not prosecute, there being no Courts of the King, and there was a disability in the person, who could not sue without taking an oath of engagement; and had he sued all the process had been coram non judice, as all had been if the Act of Judicial Proceedings had not been made, Pl. Com. Chapman against Dalton, lex non cogit ad inutilia: so Butlers case, when men are disabled to render benefit, the other need not perform the condition; likewise here were none of the justices of the King sitting, Dyer 270, and therefore proceedings could not be good, 2 Cr. 230, Point's case. And the rejoynder pleads the Courts of the C. B. were open, not saying the Chancery was open, without which the C. B. cannot proceed; and whether they sit or no, cannot be tried per pais, but by the records: and by Foster, the rule being judgment, nisi better cause, &c. the counsel cannot argue de novo, but ought strictly to observe the rules of Court. Wild for the defendant, The plea concludes with a traverse absque hoc, that he was guilty of the assault, battery, and imprisonment, prout, &c. which is well enough, being but inducement; else by Twisden he must plead not guilty. Hereby also all that is in the plaint is taken in, and had been by the word trespass only, and being modo & forma, it goeth to the whole 18 months; and if it be false in part, the plaintiff shall recover pro tanto, [206] and the payment of the money is but an aggravation of the offence, and depending on it; and the replication is ill, the engagement being not pleaded, and the action being per billam, and he saying he could not have any writ, which is naught; and so the bar being good, and the replication naught, the defendant ought to have judgment. Windham, The trespass can be pleaded but at one day, and the aggravation from it continuando, &c. which if any part be within the statute, the plaintiff must shew it, and all is taken in by the travers, & per Curiam, Had those persons not been excepted, they had been bound, as all else had, as casus omissus. Judgment for the defendant: and by Windham, The bar is better pleaded then if it had recited particulars; but he conceived the recital, that no writ could be had, was sufficient, and that bill is but a special priviledge, but the Chancery being shut, its tempus belli: also men might have sued heretofore without taking the engagement, though his suit would have been staid; and those proceedings are by these Acts owned and aided.

10. MANBY against SCOTT. Ante. January 25. In Contract. Br. 15.

Baron & feme.

In the Exchequer Chamber, all the Judges of England being present, Jones for the plaintiff, that the husband is chargeable, because what ever she had, or can acquire, must be to his benefit; and so nothing more reasonable, then that the husband should allow his wife, in his life time, as well as after his death, they being but one person. And 43 Eliz. 2 doth provide, that impotent children shall be kept by parents, and è contrà; but no provision for this case, wherefore it was intended not to be questioned; and the Spiritual Court hath no power to give any remedy, Registr. 34, 38, or at least not sufficient, though marriage doth appertain to the Spiritual Court; and de catallis, as necessary thereto: but where the marriage is not in question, 31 Ed. 3, attachment upon prohibition, F. 8, they cannot hold plea de catallis, as the principal prohibition F. 21 doth also implye this difference, when they have adjudged a divorce, they may allow maintenance, 1 Cr. 220, but not originally upon suit for alimony, Waters case, 21 Car. in the House of Lords, referred to the Judges, Bacon, Rolls, &c. who allowed, that the wife might charge the husband, as here alledged; (but the Judges disallowed that case, because of the irregularity of the times, and they no rightful Judges:) and that the reme-[207]-dy in the Spiritual Court is not sufficient, is evident, in that the wife can have nothing to enable her to sue; to this end was the quarentine allowed to them, Magna Charta 7. 1 Inst. 32, and the common law would be deficient, if no provision be to maintain her in the mean time; and all the Spiritual Court can do, is but to excommunicate; and if he will obstinately lye in prison, they have no jurisdiction over the estate to compel it. 2. All the books agreed, that the wife cannot charge the husband, without assent precedent or subsequent, expressed or implyed, but those cases are not understood of necessaries, in which cases persons otherwise unable are made able; as infant, upon a promise in law, may plead nil debet, contrà if for necessaries, there his contract shall bind. And a feme covert, if the husband be exiled, may contract, rather then be without a maintenance and subsistance, 2 H. 4, 7, and so of a moin in the vacancy of an abbye, 13 H. 8, 3, and the inconvenience pretended; if the wife may charge the husband, this is not greater than that will be on the contrary; for women will be more tempted by want of maintenance than by abundance, 11 H. 6, 20, by Marten is express in this point; and of latter times, the opinion and practice hath been this way wholly 22 Car. Rot. 1151. Tr. B. R. Dent against Scot, in this very point, which the Court agreed; though for want of an averment in pleading, the judgment was not given, and trespass or trover lyeth against the baron and feme for her default or conversion, and the count shall be ad usum of the husband: 2. The finding she lived from him, or that he prohibited, will be little material; supposing the former true: and at common law, although the wife elope, 2 Inst. 435. Westm. 2, 34, she should have had her dower, and here being no cause, the best shall be intended, that she went away for good cause; Baldwin for the defendant, That the husband is not chargeable at the common law, nor was ther ever such an action brought before, Debt Fitz. 163. 20 H. 6, 22, by Newton. F. N. B. 62. 21 H. 7, 40, per Fineux. F. N. B. 120 G. Dy. 234, Points case. M. 5 Car. Bi against Lake. C. B. Hull 106, all which books shew the law to have been to the contrary, that she cannot charge him: and the opinion of Marten sheweth not by what course or action she shall charge him, and this was but obiter, not the principal point. 3. The law in no case doth charge the husband without his consent, to which the will of the wife is subject, and so all contracts by her, by all laws what ever, is a nullity; but an infants contract is only voidable, she cannot confer a benefit on him, à fortiori, 27 H. 8, 25, [208] not a charge without his consent, 2 Cr. 917. A feme sole leasing, rendring, rent payment to her after coverture, without notice of the marriage, is nul; and to allow her a will against her husband is to erect a double judicature in one family, and very inconvenient, and an occasion to make them unchast, 1 Co. 139, which is the reason of the not maintaining contingent uses, and this is a necessity of her own making by departure from her husband, which the law will not favor; and though it may be an excuse against, yet it shall never introduce a charge upon a third person; and there is a proper remedy (if any) in the Ecclesiastick Court, by the Ordinary, taken notice of by the Judges here, and always allowed by the King; and all the prohibitions are, that they hold no pleas except de causis matrim. & testamen. Old Mag. Chart. 78, which only appertained to them, all the rest to the Crown, Linwoods case de foro competenti; and till 13 Ed. 1, Circumspecte Agatis were, excepting only those two sorts, and that statute introduced the rest, which now are in them and alimony, divorce, and promises of portions, and all other accessories of marriage, as well appertain unto them, as the principal, 14 Ed. 46. F. N. B. 44. Dr. & St. 16, and for these reasons, legacies, bastardy, and legitimation, which are accessaries, Dr. Cozens Apology; for this reason concerns, divorces, though for the dissolution of the marriage, do belong to the Ordinary: and Westm. 2, c. 34, doth implye, that the Ordinary may compel the husband to receive his wife, and to separate them for his severity, and to enquire who of them is pars peccans, and the Temporal Courts never medled, but in aid of the Spiritual, Rot. Cl. 7 H. 3, Membr. 7, Emie de Pinckney, she, when he is excommunicated, may have a writ de estoverio capiendo: and a little after this, the next term. Membr. 14, it appears that the sheriff had seised the land for her maintenance, according to the like case the year after, 8 H. 3, Memb. 19, Frechingtons case, donec maritus ipsam lege matrimonali tractaret, and conformed to the award of the Spiritual Court, or put in a cautione admittenda; and though this course hath been neglected, and not mentioned in Articuli Cleri, Circumspecte Agatis, it is not material, because this was at common law, and those statutes introductive of new laws: and upon this reason, 2 Cr. 364, Hiats case, the Court denyed a prohibition, because the Ordinary had power Mich. 1 Car. Gr. Greens case 16, and the Spiritual Court, when constat, that there is a marriage, do allow maintenance presently ante finem litis; and a prohibition was in Drakes case, because the High Courts [209] had no power, but only the Ordinary. 2. Admitting for all this, that the husband is chargeable, yet not against this prohibition; no more than if she had lived with him; for without his fault or assent, he cannot be charged. Bridgman, If none will trust the wife, what remedy? Jones, No more then if none would trust the husband: Hyde conceived the opinion of Marten not valued to this purpose: and if the husband might have waged his law, this remedy had been nothing worth, and de debitis & catallis that concerned not matrimony, they have no jurisdiction in special Court; nor for alimony, as such, no remedy were in special Court originally, nor unless she be pars læsa, at all; but when constat de matrimonio, if no default be, she shall be allowed it. Hales agreed the proper remedy to be by excom. cap. Adjornatur.

11. THE KING against FIELD. Ante. January 27.

Religion.

Field, a parson in Lincoln, was indicted on a clause of the statute 13 Car. 2, c. 1, for preservation of the Kings person, for preaching, that the government of the Church of England was popish, superstitious, and will-worship; and that God would say to such, as observed it, the last day, who required this at your hands; and at the same time, that an other day would come of their delivery, whereby he encurr'd a præmunire, 11 Aug. 13 Car. Mr. Attorny enlarged upon the charge, that sedition was either armata, in open hostility, or togata, which was the worse of the two, being secret, and enflaming more than the other; to prevent which this Act was made, and because this was the first offence of this kind, he desired the preamble and this clause of the Act might be read, et ei conceditur, which was, that if any said the King was an heretick, or Papist; or any thing to the disturbance of the Government now established, &c. This by warrant of the council came to tryal here, (which was read) and Mr. Attorney conceived, that if the words were spoken before the time in the indictment, yet if they were spoke after 24 June it is sufficient, which the Court agreed. Allen for the defendant, excepted after evidence against the order, which was grounded on a petition of the inhabitants, and recited, that the attorny should indict for treasonable or seditious practices, not naming any point of the Act particularly, there being divers branches of the statute. Glyn, ubi lex non distinguit, non est distinguendum; and the law that requires this order, doth not re-[210]-quire particulars, which the Court agreed; that notice of the crime, so it be any within the statute, is needless in the order; but the attorney may prosecute, as he thinks fit, were it only by personal parol, command. Moreton excepted to the indictment, that it was voluntaria adoratio, Anglicè will-worship, which the Court over-ruled as immaterial: and by Allen, The words must be malicious and advised; which by Twisden, being by preaching, it is so intended; also the Court refused to examine witnesses, whether they were indicted at the suit of the defendant for forcible entry, but they must shew the indictment: but by Allen, They may be asked at large, whether there were no suits or differences betwixt them. Post.

12. RAYMOND against MATTHEWS IN DEBT. January 28. Br. 43.

Jones for the plaintiff, moved for repleder in action of covenant to perform articles, and payment of money. The defendant pleaded payment of the money after the day, which the plaintiff accepted, which being not pleaded by way of accord and satisfaction of the covenant, wherein damages also is recoverable, is ill, 3 Cr. Nichols 455. But this issue being insufficient, and found for the defendant, its not aided by the Statute of Jeofails. And by Twisden, Payment pleaded to a single bill, if found for the plaintiff, he shall have judgment; if for the defendant, there shall be a repleder. Adjornatur.

Trover.

In trover for fifteen tun of fur-stake-wood, the defendant pleads, that before the trover J. S. was seised and indebted to the defendant, who by custom of Bristow attached it in the hands of J. S. The plaintiff said, that he was possest at the time of the plaint, and ever after, absque hoc, that J. S. was ever possest: to which the defendant demurred, because the replication was at large. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

Wild for the plaintiff, No greater scandal can be to a justice, then to call him fool. Adjornatur.

Prohibition.

Wild for the plaintiff, that the Court is not bound de jure to grant a prohibition, upon a bare surmise after sentence against the libel, 12 Co. 77, (Winch. 8, Jones case Hub. 79) this prohibition is brought by the defendant to his own appeal five years after sentence. Stroud Senior, for the defendant, The libel it self is of a property, (Hub. 10, Bridgmans case) not mentioned to be done on the sea, and so they can have no conusance; and to have a prohibition after sentence is usual, and the Court ought to grant it de jure, as in 2 Cr. 252, Worts against Bliston, because it is a thing coram non Judice. Allen ad idem, that it ought to be granted it is evident, because nothing appears proper for their jurisdiction, else a suggestion contrary to the libel should not be received so long after without scruple; but this Court doth regulate all inferiors when ever complaint is made, and the defendant is a proper person to come in, because he is a creditor, and comes in for his own interest, and so the question was whether the property were in Harrison or the defendant Spencer; and so the original cause of action is in nature of a foreign attachment, or else he might have trover. Powis for the plaintiff, All is confirmed by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, being conusans of such bills of lading was given heretofore to them by a former Act of Lords and Commons which upon perusal reached not this case: Twisden, I cannot admit, that prohibitions are prudential, but if they do incroach, this Court must prohibit. But if one will lay a transitory action on the sea, and the other admit it, then the party against whom the sentence is, hath only remedy on the statute. But when one against whom sentence is given, will appeal after execution made, and the money delivered, the Court think fitting that he should reimburse the money before (Spencer) he have a prohibition. And by Windham, Things done beyond sea are of a mixt jurisdiction, but do not properly at common law belong to this Court, 48 Ed. 3, 3, 4 Inst. nor to the Admiralty, but to the Court of the constable and marshal; but 4 H. 4 is that they shall fight in debt for such a thing; but this Court hath given relief of late for necessity, suggesting the fact done in England; and the thing being not properly invasive of the com. law, he conceived it in discretion of the Court, to which Mallet agreed, but Foster denied it to be meerly of discretion, though much of discretion be in them, to keep them from doing [213] any oppression, for the party grieved hath another remedy by action upon the statute 2 H. 4, to which when any seek delay by prohibition, the Court will leave them: also the defendant being not wronged in his property, which is tryable in trover, he conceived he should have no prohibition, (which was upon conference also, with the C. B.) unless he would redeliver the money to Serjeant Moreton, parties may consent verdict shall be final, or that no writ of error be brought, but not that H. shall not sue by statute; and by three Judges, whose opinion was, that Spencer should have a prohibition, because Moreton refused to bring the money into Court, and try the property. But after Moreton agreed.

20. THE KING against READ. Ante.

Perjury.

Keeling for the King. There are three perjuries assigned in the warrant of attorney, and that he owed not the money and that J. S. was not a witness produced, and if any of them be well assigned it is well, and therefore the information being of a warrant predict. pro ducentis (omitting libris) is well enough. Also the communication was of a writing, which H. affirmeth to be a warrant of attorny; and the issue by the defendant, is, that it was a warrant of attorney, and so sworn by him to be sealed, and the plaintiff cannot call it a warrant of attorney in the information. Windham absente, adjornatur: but the Court conceived it well enough, the course of information by a memorandum quod recordatur, &c. was since 5 Eliz. and begun by Twisden, upon custom to bring in the issue to transcribe it, by which referr'd to a record of another term, and recited a bill to be filed (which was usually never filed) and falsities crept in hereby, which was the reason of introducing this course lately. But all the Judges doubted of the recital of the irrotulatur. Adjornatur 214, pl. 22.

21. CRANMER against ANDREWS. January 31. Baron & Feme.

In Default Br. 52. Stiles, 226, pl. 511. Goldsb. 127, pl. 19. 40 Ed. 3, 34 b. pl. 1.

H. was arrested in London, and there charged with a latitat against H. and his wife, and so turned over to the Marshalsea, and process against them as in custody, but by Wild, for the feme, that judgment cannot be against her, she never having been arrested, nor the husband having not appeared by attorney; which if he had, he must have filed a common bail for him and her, but not so where he enters in-[214]-to custody. But by Hern Secondary, The course in both cases is, that the husband though only arrested, must put in bail for both, though she were never arrested. Twisden, Elsey against Mandit an attorney and his wife, who was forced to appear, though he could not have priviledge for both. Adjornatur.

22. THE KING against READ. Ante 213, pl. 20.

Perjury.

Upon a communication betwixt Dunne and Dawson, of a writing, which Dunne affirmed to be a warrant of attorney, whereon (if he proved it so) Dawson would pay, &c. And on issue thereon, the defendant R. swore that he sealed the said warrant of attorney, and that R. Rumsey, a witness to the warrant of attorney, shewed a wrong person to the plaintiff Dunne, &c. Keeling moved for judgment after verdict against the defendant; as to the recordatur, he left it to what exposition the Court would make, because its dubious. 2. The habeas corpus is R. D. junior, of H. whereas he was only named R. D. in the other process, but 24 in all; and additions are by 1 H. 5, 5 given, and so not necessary in retorns of the sheriff, as the case 3 H. 6, 16, which because process of utlary lay not, it was ruled the addition was well enough, 44 Ed. 3, 34, because needless. 3. Its said that Dawson sealed and delivered the warrant of attorney aforesaid. And 4. That it was for 220, not saying what, which being but the cause and ground of sealing the warrant, and is several in it self. Allen for the defendant, The recordatur is but new, and therefore making no distinction, but only (& quod) which may be intended either way; but indictments shall not be so aided. 2. As to the retorn of the habeas corpus, its but of 23, and so not holpen by the statute, being in an information, no more than in a quo warranto, and here this person cannot be intended the same, as when one writ relates to another that may be supplyed with averment, but not so in a retorn, where no averment can be, being at large, and so its insufficient at common law. 3. The oath is relative to that which is not (viz. the warrant of attorney) but as to the pro 200 he waived it. Winnington for the defendant, as to the recordatur, cited Wimbish against Talbois in Pl. Com. That the plaintiff must positively affirm the record, and a recital is not sufficient, as Browning against Bestons case. And as to the second, he cited Gregories case, 5 Co. And by Windham, Blackmores case is express, that an information at common law is within the Statute of [215] Jeofails, contrà if upon any penal statute. But by Allen, The body of the statute is of suits betwixt party and party, 32 H. 8, which yet extends not to retorns. Also by Keeling, In all indictments, when new matter is offered, it begins only & quod, and not dat Curiæ intelligi. Windham, Judgment, notwithstanding the exceptions, ought to be for the King. And 1. The recordatur runs not through all, but is guided by the subject matter, which is only till the issue joyned, not what the witness said, which is only matter of fact not entred, and so shall not be intended to avoid a perjury found. 2. For the variance of the venire facias and habeas corpus, I shall not intend it to be another, but a farther ascertaining of the same person, 24 being retorn'd; and had there been no such, yet it had been good; and so if any real variance had been in the name, if that person were never sworn, which is parcel of all those cases that are cited to this purpose; and he said he had seen a judgment in the Exchequer with this difference. As to the third point, that informations at common law were within the statute, but not so of such as are on penal or popular actions, which may be vexatious: and the stat. 18 Eliz. is in any action or suit (not only betwixt party and party, but generally) and this information is a suit grounded betwixt the coroner and the party. And 4. Its better being pro 220 (without libris) then with it, the substantive only giving the signification, and so warrant. prædict. is full, and not contraried by the other Twisden ad idem. Though he generally disliked the recordatur, as not being in old Keelings time, but since; and is but an argument that there was such a thing, and no positive crime charged; yet as this case is, its positive, because only the suit is recorded; but the usual way was, dat Curiæ hic intelligi, that at another time isto eodem term. such a one placitasset, which was supplyed by the former records; and so this allegation is, that the defendant was produced as a witness in causa prædicta, which is a sufficient averment of it self; and as to the variance, its well enough, and 24 retorn'd, and good at common law: and 39 H. 6, 46 by Prisot, the addition of junior doth but ascertain that which before might be intended to either, and tried by examination of the sheriff, if he had for this reason been challenged, and might have affirmed him to be the person intended. Also 3. This is not within the 32 H. 8, or 21 Jac. which are pursuant one of another, but its within the equity of 8 H. 6, which is generally of amendments in all cases, except appeals and indictments, &c. And 18 Eliz. hath a proviso, that this shall not [216] extend to popular actions, but informations, as an appeal of maihem is out of the statute, it is not an action, because no queritur, nor any suit, because no producit sectam; but he conceived it might be within the word demand, because the informer petit advisamentum of the Court: but he waived these, and relyed on that, that he was not sworn. And for the warrant of attorney nothing could have been said better: Mallet, ad idem; being after a verdict, and so Foster in omnibus, judgment for the King. Post.

26. COLLINGWOOD against PACE. Ante. February 1. In Denizen. Br. 7.

Alien.

In the Exchequer Chamber in ejectment; Allen for the plaintiff, R. hath issue four sons, aliens, one hath issue after the union, then another is naturalized, and deviseth to N. and his heir, and the heirs of such heir, &c. The first question is, whether the issue of an alien may inherit to his brother, both the brother and his father afterwards being naturalized; he conceived that he might: and that which is the foundation of discents in nature is love, [217] as Grotius de Jure Belli, l. 2, c. 7, § 4, 5, & 9, and him, whom one is presumed to love most, he shall take. And this is regulated by particular customs of nations and places, whence comes the distinction of sanguis naturalis, which is the same among all, or civil, which is either by birth or donation, as denization by patent or naturalization; and to be inheritable is a term of relation, which requireth a person from whom objectivè, and by whom subjectivè, the copula of which is the blood, which is either hindred per defectum, which only incapacitates, or per delictum, which destroys the inheritance it self; and this is a necessary introduction to the main question. R. having issue three daughters, aliens, and N. the second son had issue P. Angloy, neither of which can hinder the discent to John the son, 42 Ed. 3, 2, of George the youngest son, 22 H. 6, 38. P. 31 Ed. 3, tit. Cosinage 5, from John Earl of Holderness, 1 Inst. 8, both Dr. & St. 13. Denizen Br. 7 being under that like reason; and this point hath been already admitted, and therefore he only takes it in transitu to the main point, whether J. the son of G. the brother of John Earl of Holderness (both being naturalized) may inherit to J. Earl of Holderness. The only objection hath been, that by the Act of Parliament the brothers are but in the same case, as if subjects born, in which case 1 Inst. 8, they could not inherit to each other, R. the father being an alien: and as to this its answered, 1. Though the Act seem relativè, and here to terminate in making them subjects, yet is it express, that they may resort to their pedigree to convey their discents, which had else been idle: but admitting they are only as subjects, he conceived them inheritable, which he proved by answering objections, because as this case is, few ancient proofs affirmative can be had. 1. He denied the rule, that where the sons cannot inherit the father, they shall not inherit each other, unless when the son conveys by the father, 1 Inst. 84, its admitted that no dower shall be given to a feme alien, or who marrieth an alien, 7 Co. 25. Calvins case 3 H. 6, 55. 1 Inst. 31. And in case of attainder, the right line is not disabled, unless he conveys by the father, 3 Co. 38, 41. 13 H. 7, 17, the husband shall be tenant by the courtesie by issue after attainder, Bract. l. 3, c. 13, & Brit. c. 5. 1 Inst. 12. And though it be here objected, that the blood of the mother is uncorrupted and pure, yet the son must convey by the father, though not from him. 2. In relation to the collateral line, the same reason holds in Hobbies case, which in the record, Rem. Escheq. M. 43 Eliz. Rot. 292. In information of intrusion, it was adjudged that the [218] daughter might inherit to the brother as heir to the mother, though the father were attainted, because there were no heirs of the part of the father; contrà where there wants no heir on the part of the father, but he is disabled to take, 3 Inst. 241. It was also objected against Hobbies case, that there was once hereditable blood, which is a worse disability notwithstanding, then that of nature, and therefore the true reason is, being a denizen, which is not in this case; so it is, had the father been made denizen any time before his death, though after the death of his son, these are all as bastards, beginners of new families, and so their collateral line not inheritable to each other; and their case cannot be better then if they had been born subjects, in which case they could not inherit, and they have no auncestors created by the Act, but only they are enabled to claim from auncestors, from which a subject might have claimed. And that this case hath received two judgments, is a mistake; for as to the one, betwixt Dawson against Pace, 1655, was but a nonsuit for want of an entry sufficiently pleaded, and no judgment entred; another 1656, betwixt Foster and Ramsey in B. R. and so not being satisfied herewith, he prayed judgment for the defendant.

Priviledge.

The defendant pleaded priviledge after imparlance specially made, and concludes ill, being unde petit judicium si H. respondere compelli debet, which ends in piscem in a different manner, 36 H. 6, 17, by Billing, from the matter, being rather to the writ, or in disability, then to the jurisdiction: in all cases the conclusion must be directly warranted by the substance of the plea, 7 H. 6, 36. Bract. l. 5, p. 415. 36 H. 6, 18, per Littleton; and this should have been, judgment si Curia cognoscere debet. 2. Here is no averment (which is necessary in all pleas traversable) 36 H. 6, 37 b. per Choke. Pleading Br. 135. 1 Inst. 303, and the omission thereof is erronious, Amendment Br. 112, especially as to the clerk of the philizer, though he himself be an officer of record, 9 Ed. 4, 53. 3. The imparlance is salvo of all exceptions to the bill only, after which he cannot plead to the jurisdiction, 9 Ed. 4, 35, though where it is apparent the Court hath none, they ex officio will oust themselves of jurisdiction; and a plea to the jurisdiction is within the salvo of pleas to the bill, and so he is estopt 7 H. 6, 36, by the general imparlance, whereby he hath admitted it, 22 H. 6, 7. Windham conceived this is no plea to the jurisdiction, but apt enough for priviledge, which Twisden agreed; but per Curiam, the plea should be amended, unless he produce the record, and is ill without it. 2. Unde non intendit quod Curia cognoscere velit, is not so apt as this: the case of Crumpton against Colling is express, that such plea, though brought in in person, must be averred. Adjornatur.

30. HORN against MIDDLETON.

Condition.

In consideration the plaintiff would continue his horses with the defendant, he would save him harmless from all differences against Anne Godfry, who had done a wrong to the plaintiff, in beating his horses from watering, by reason whereof varyances arose betwixt her and the plaintiff, and she had arrested the plaintiff, and made him spend divers sums of money, by reason of the said difference, and so the defendant had not saved harmless: which by Jones in arrest of judgment, is totally incertain, and no cause of dammage to the plaintiff by the disturbance of Anne, which was in a watering place. But per Curiam, this was but the ground, and causes of action may arise on both sides. [222] 2. It is said, that Anne and her husband caused the plaintiff to be arrested, not shewing by legal process, which per Curiam after verdict, shall be intended: but had the arrest been illegal, being by reason of those controversies, the defendant is bound to save harmless from it, per Curiam. But by Windham, The better way is to have error, which the Court agreed, and that it was erroneous. Post.

Jones demurd upon the replication, because it answers but to the interposition of part of the closes in which, &c. and so verdict for the whole, 10 Ed. 4, 7, by Bear for the plaintiff, is express, that if cattle estray through the close of a stranger, who ought to repair, into mine, the defendant shall pay dammage for the whole, because the plaintiff is not bound to enclose, and the defendant cannot justifie in the lands of a stranger, 22 Ed. 4, 5, 49 b. pl. 15. This is the reason why H. shall pay dammages for delay in turning his plough, though not for a sudden. 2. The bar is insufficient, because being a justification against inclosure, must prescribe in the person. Bar F. 168. 10 Ed. 4, 7. 22 H. 6, 36. Dy. 365 b. Baker against Breman, in action upon the case 15 Car. 1, Rot. 352 being a local thing, is ill; so Semains case: this is more properly a personal previledge, and it doth appear the defendant hath no title to that close where the beasts strayed. But by Jones, This prescription in the person was not the constant way of pleading; but being uncertain, and the defendant not knowing what estate the plaintiff hath, it is better to plead it as a custom, being alledged in another man, contra, if it were made in himself; which the Court agreed. And by Windham, If cattle stray into one close in default of the plaintiff, and so through other closes of strangers, which the stranger ought to repair, into other closes of the plaintiff, the defendant may justifie in all, for causa causæ, is causa causati, though he [224] shall not have benefit against the stranger, like a disseisor that conveys in the per cui & post, yet if it comes to the disseisor again, an assize lyeth as at first. Windham, Suppose the bar ill, the trespass being laid in three several places, and the defendant saying that the owners of one ought to inclose against his, out of which the cattle strayed, which is no good justification of the cattles going into other closes, that were fenced, if it had been out of repair, and so the plaintiff had been in default; (entred M. 14 Tr. 13 Car. Rot. 151, Hudson against Binion, Yelvert. Child against Durrant, 21 H. 6, 2, for the park of Chedinglye is contra) to all which Foster agreed, 22 H. 6, 33. Tr. 2 Jac. Goldsmith against Harris in replication, taking cattle in five acres, the defendant pleaded they escaped out of the way into a yard into the plaintiffs close, and so into a strangers, and so into the plaintiffs, or continue always in the plaintiffs closes, adjudged a good justification. Twisden, This special prescription, is but in nature of a licence to put cattle into Bl. Acre, which cannot go into other closes, unless contiguous and out of repair, which Foster and Mallet agreed. 3. The defendant said the fences of the plaintiff were minime reparata; the plaintiff sayeth, they were sufficiently repaired; the defendant, ut prius, saith, that they were out of repair, Dy. 22 Eliz. absque hoc, that they were sufficient, which is the proper way of pleading. But by Twisden, When the defendant had said they were out, and the plaintiff after saith they are in good repair, he must conclude & hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam, and not leave the defendant to a traverse; but if the defendant had not positively affirmed they were not repaired, then the plaintiff cannot conclude the defendant from his traverse, by concluding & hoc petit quod inquiratur, &c. which Foster agreed. Assurances.

Demise, grant, bargain, sell, and set over, were the words in articles of agreement, the causes being divers, especially for 40l. to be paid to her assignees after her death, betwixt Margery and Matthew Foster, the demise was to commence after the death of Margery, and she to have a [226] ferme of Matthews, during her life: and this deed is found to be made as well for love and affection as 40l. and after there was another feoffment for affection and money to Nicholas the brother of Matthew, and son of Margery, executed by livery. Raymond for the plaintiff, conceived nothing passed to Matthew, which had been clear if the 20l. had been left out. He agreed, Tib & Poplewells case, and Foxes case, and Wingfields case, Dyer, that uses will not arise, but according to the intent, 21 H. 7, 19. Dyer 59. Pl. Com. 301. Crompt. Jurisdict. 60 b. & 27 H. 8. By the word agreement use at common law might have risen by parol: he also agreed Beedells case; but nothing will arise by such bargain and sale for affection and money without enrolment, 11 Co. 25 a. 4 Co. 81. 8 Co. 118. 8 Co. 154, Pagets case in the Rector of Chedingtons, comes to the case at Bar, that no averment could be contrary to express one in the deed, Wats against Dixe, Stiles 189, pl. 431. 2 Cr. 127, Osbornes case, 3 Cr. 394, Ward against Lambert, so Althams case, the finding of the jury shall not alter the case, as that a deed to H. and his heirs was in tail, or the like; 5 Co. 26. 1 Co. 176. Pl. Com. 114 b. 2 Co. 75 a. 2 Co. 24, and here the finding of the jury consists not with the execution of the estate, nor with the estate of Matthew, nor with the interest of Margery, who was to have money for it; also the intent of the parties, which is to be observed, Dyer, 56 b. per Shelly, must be construed ut res magis valeat, 3 Cr. 601, but yet that is to be collected by the best consideration, Dyer 261, Bridgman 100, Nusam against Carew. 2. He conceived this to have reference to a future conveyance, and so not effectual to pass an estate present, Noy 128, P. 33 Eliz. Ashford against Barton, B. R. Covenant that H. should have in tail after the death of J. S. was ruled ill. 3. Margery hath not title to the barn of Matthew but by the covenant, and so neither should

Matthew take otherwise. 4. Here is a particular estate reserved out of the feoffment, which is void, 1 Co. 129. 26 Eliz. Tr. 3 Cr. 29. Clamps case, Dyer 309, the case of Pitfield against Price. Also this appears by the acts subsequent, 9 Co. 11 a. not to be the intent of the parties, because she made another deed: also her mentioning the 20l. appears she intended it not as a covenant to stand seised, for then her executors have no remedy for the 20l. which would be mischievous, 2 Co. 35 b. and hereby also it would be unsafe for relations to article upon valuable consideration, because all would be wrapt up in the covenant to stand seised, Darby against Bois, Yelvert. 123, and no recompence can be had for it; and the case of Symp-[227]-son against Guines, Mich. 59 C. B. Dyer 19 a. 7 H. 7, 14. Owen 33, and the case of Sanders and Savil, come not wholly to this case. Windham conceived the defendant may well be sick of this case, it being now found mischievous to construe deeds otherwise then the clear intention of the parties; and the case of Pitfield is unanswerable, which was, give and grant to his son, which of their nature transmute an estate, and shall not be a covenant to stand seised without particular intent. A second reason of that judgment (which was after long argument) was, that it was in consideration of marriage; also the fair and plain meaning of the deed in the case at Bar was, in relation to a future settlement; Twisden to the same intent; and Symson against Calye, in ejectment, the father for affection to his son, and marriage, did give and grant, and livery was indorsed, but not found by the jury, and that was adjudged to be a good covenant to stand seised, which was a hard case. Also Wats against Dixes case, where Pitfields case was cited, it was given as a rule, that if the intent was to pass it one way, it shall not pass another; and he was counsel in that case. Foster was counsel for Pierce against Pitfield, which was said to have the opinion of the C. B. (but he decryed Noyes and other private reports). Adjornatur.

Tail. In discontinuance Br. 38. 1 Inst. 322 b.

A. covenants to stand seised to the use of himself and his wife for life, and to the heirs of their two bodies, the remainder to his eldest son by a former ventre, and after they have issue a daughter, and then they levy a fine after feoffment, &c. 1. Jones for the plaintiff conceived this but one intire estate executed, however called a remainder by the parties, 35 H. 8. Estates Br. 75, but when there is an interposition betwixt the particular estates and the remainder that hinders their union, and the law will construe them to be distinct estates, because they may serve to several purposes, 37 H. 8. pet. Br. 303. 3 Co. 5, Morgan against Owen. And in the case at Bar, the baron and feme do not take by moieties, the estate being not made before coverture, and so by a divorce the wife cannot take the profits during his life, and at common law upon such an estate before, 32 H. 8, c. 28, the wife might enter for a forfeiture of the husband, and so his estate, and the reversion to the son, cannot unite. 2. Admit the estates distinct, by this fine and warranty there is no discontinuance; not by the fine alone, Litt. no discontinu-[228]-ance can be of an estate tail, unless he were once seised of it. King against Edwards, 1 Cr. 320, was by three against one adjudged: and the reason all go on, is, because the estate tail is executed; yet contrary to Owen against Morgans case, and so is not like this case at Bar, though to many purposes, as to have a mortdancestre, or writ of right, 1 Inst. 184, &c. such an estate shall be said executed; and here the baron & feme take not by moieties in that case as they do in this. 2. The warranty doth not make any thing, unless there be some precedent devesting of the estate, 10 Co. 95, Seamors case, that cannot operate; and that there was none here is evident, no more passing by the fine then what they may pass, and this is expresly Bredons case, when the estates are in several persons, which judgment was never denied, though the reasons of it have; and in this case the baron & feme have several rights, 3 Cr. 828, as Pecke against Channels case, 13 H. 7, 14, and so the warranty can never affect them, being not devested or displac'd.

(2). Maynard for the defendant, agreed the case, and conceived the first point to be, whether this fine be a discontinuance properly so called, which he conceived it was, because the estate is executed, that is, in him that makes it, but it is not requisite, that he be seised to all purposes; this is evident by the very conveyance it self, the limitation being as to the baron for life, reversion to the feme, which shall be for life, the reversion to his heirs of her body begotten, which makes them tenants in tail of the same inheritance which is limited to the husband; and though it be not altogether the same, as if limited to the husband and wife, and the heirs of their bodies, yet it is as much in him without any severance, Lit. sect. 672, and they must be remitted to the whole: and Bredons case went far enough, and hath been often questioned, but yet differs toto cœlo from this, being several persons of separate estates, and this reversion in the wife is inseparable, and not to be granted alone, Hacker against Baker, 1 Cr. 387, was upon this reason adjudged a discontinuance; and in the case of King against Edwards, it was said, that the estate tail was so in the husband, that he might discontinue, though not so as to bar the issue from his mordancestre, or writ of right, or scire facias, &c. and the surviving of the wife in that case was considered, and though H. in reversion, as well as the wife, shall by 32 H. 8 take advantage of a discontinuance by the husband, by feoffment alone, yet fine it self would not have alone made a discontinuance, but both together, being but one assurance; [229] and the fine in the case at Bar, is come ceo, which supposeth a feoffment before. 2. This will at least devest the estate, according to the plain intent of the parties, in the second fine, which passed a larger estate then the base fee before, limited at least by the intent, and on the reason of discontinuances many estates depend, and is the security of most purchasers, and therefore not to be weakened, the learning thereof being for quieting possession, is to be favored, as it hath been against the church; yea, Acts of Parliament themselves, as quod ipso jure sit nullus, Pecke and Channels case, could not be a discontinuance, because the husband could not surrender to the wife, and she could only pass her own estate, and there could not be an union; and so being divested, the discent of the collateral warranty doth bar the plaintiff. Windham conceived the present freehold of the husband is not drowned by the limitation, but the estate is in him quodam modo, all joyning in the fine, he is tenant to the præcipe distinct, and they had all the estate in them. And by Foster this may be granted, and if any way this; and by Twisden, this estate is executed, and there is not any case to the contrary, but only for the benefit of a survivor, or a benefit to a third person, which here is not material; and a devesting may be without any discontinuance properly so called: and by Allen, Bredons case is agreed in Clanrickards case, Hub. for good law, for else it would be a forfeiture of the tenant for life, if it were a devesting. Twisden conceived they could not amend it in another term, Beechers ca. 59, 1 Cr. Nelson against Skeer, Hut 41. Shirly against Underhil, 1 Cr. 580, though in the C. B. it may; and the course in Secondary Brooms time altered, by reason of the multitude of cases, which increased, and were not at large to be entred, which was the reason of Keyes against Ireland. Covenant. Entr. Congeable Br. 2.

Jones for the defendant, conceived the difference to be betwixt condition to perform particular things, and when, of covenants in general; which by Twisden is not material: and by Windham, this is but an excuse after a particular affirmance, that he had actually performed; Mallet, contrà, that the plea is good; and by Foster, the plea though not fully pursuant to the former, is not contrary to it, nor dissonant from it, because no rent was due, and so he hath paid all that was due, but by Twisden, he could not have pleaded such an ouster after payment of rents pleaded, because payments is intended actual, and so of performance of covenants, 1 Inst. 204, or 304. And it is not sufficient to shew an offer or performance in law. Adjornatur.

48. JOHNSON against BRIDGES.

Condition.

In debt upon a bond for performance of covenants, the condition was in the disjunctive, that H. should make a conveyance when he came of 21 years of age, or in default thereof that the defendant should pay 50l. The defendant pleaded no notice of any conveyance before the death of H. on which the plaintiff demurred, as not material, the defendant having election to pay or convey; which the Court denyed: and that as this condition is, if he do not one, he must do the other at his peril. Adjornatur.

[231] 49. THE KING against BODISH. February 7.

Perjury.

Stroud sen. on 1 Cr. 180, moved to quash an indictment of perjury for the King, the verdict being for the defendant; 1. Because it was taken on depositions out of the Chancery, The King against Apsley, H. 23 Car. 1, and Hunters case 14 Car. ruled that they ought to say (being by commissioners out of the Chancery) under the Great Seal. But by Allen for the defendant, that's needless, because its said that the commissioners had authority lawful, which is sufficient. But by Windham and Mallet, he ought to specifie the authority: but by Twisden 1 Cr. Stone against Numan is general. 2. The venire facias is but of twelve, but four and twenty being retorned on it, its good enough per Curiam; and if there be a full jury, the names are not particular in the postea in the retorn, contrà if there be a tales. 3. He excepted that there being a change of government pendant the suit; and no mention made of it, its ill, sed non allocatur. Adjornatur.

50. THE KING against ALCOCKE.

Treason.

But it appearing to be a malitious prosecution, the jury acquitted him, and taking the oath of allegiance, he was discharged.

Certiorari.

If any of the persons indicted put in security, the indictment must be removed for all, because its only to secure costs, by Twisden & Curiam; and Sir Humfrey Mildmay was fined for not returning such certiorari, and the hands of the justices need not be set to it, no more than the sheriffs, by retorn of the under-sheriffs, and habeas corpus, though not to be allowed if under 5l. yet it must be retorned that it is under 5l.

[232] 52. WINTERBORN against KENDALL. Ante.

Amendment.

Allen prayed the record here being right in Court, and amended below, and only (sw. i.e. sworn) omitted in the memorandum upon the retorn of the postea, that it needed no amendment, but was well enough; which the Court agreed.

53.

Apportionment.

In an action of debt upon several obligations, having but one count and several issues, some found for the plaintiff, and some for the defendant; and several damages, but intire costs. Jones prayed that the judgment may be reverst only as to part, as Miles against Jacob, Hub. 6. But Allen for the plaintiff said, that case had often been denied to be law, and that neither as to the person, nor as to the things, a judgment cannot be reverst in part no more than a fine, as Odyhams case; to which the Court also enclined; sed adjornatur.

The defendant said there was no demand: whereunto the plaintiff said, that he did demand security. To which the defendant demurred generally; and now sheweth, 1. That no demand was of the money at the day, and the obligor hath election to pay or secure, which the Court denied as this case is. 2. The action was brought by A. administrator of B. de bonis non per C. &c. and averreth that H. had not paid to B. nor to A. (not saying he had not paid to C.). Sed non allocatur, because the count is quas ei injustè detinet, which per Curiam cannot be if it were paid to C. Also this lieth on the part of H. to plead in discharge of himself.

Visne.

Twisden doubted whether visne after a nonsuit before, may be laid in any county at the plaintiffs election, by consent to examine witnesses that were officers in the Admiralty here, because they may be in person at either place: but per Curiam its well enough, when it appears they cannot reasonably be present, the principal issue being whether H. sued there or not. Post.

56. THE KING against FIELD. Ante.

Treason.

Allen moved in arrest of judgment, 1. Because the indictment is not pursuant to the law, the words not being said to tend to bring people in dislike of the Kings person, which should be; and not only to say, that he intended to bring the people in dislike, &c. 2. The words are said against the Government, which is generally intended of the realm, not ecclesiastick. Glyn the Kings Serjeant, conceived the statute to refer to the intent, and not that the words should be such as should actually incite. 2. The Government of England is all one, and all from one fountain, though in several parts. Windham quered if it had been said, the Government by justices of peace, or in the Kings Bench, had been inconvenient. Keeling the Kings Serjeant agreed, if he had said such a bishops Court had been inconvenient, that had not been within this law; but the indictment mentions no distinction, but is of Government in general. Twisden, The Government in this Act had a particular reference to that which had been before abolished by an ordinance of the Lords and Commons, which was episcopacy: but to say the civil law is better than the common law, that the Chancery or B. R. is an unnecessary Court, is not within this Act; which Foster and Mallet denied. Windham conceived ea intentione to refer to all the indictment, and that the ecclesiastick is the prime part of the Government of England, and was the chief intent of the Act to re-establish; though he did not conceive every particular subordinate jurisdiction to be within it: but all agreed this to be within the Act. And so Foster pronounced judgment, that he be disabled to bear any office, and be fined 500l. and imprisonment till payment.

The plaintiff saith he paid not 10l. according to it; the defendant rejoyns he did not pay; and the jury find he did not pay. And by Allen for the plaintiff, though the verdict be impertinent, yet without relation it, there is sufficient title for the plaintiff, 9 H. 6, 37, 36. 6 H. 7, 11. The defendant saith that the covenant was ulterius that the son should enjoy it notwithstanding any act done by the father, and that he did no act, which by Allen for the plaintiff is ill. Jones for the defendant, This later covenant doth restrain the former, and is pleaded to be in the same indenture, all the parts whereof shall be taken together, as Nokes 4 Co. 81, and the particular shall qualifie the general, the covenant being, that the covenantor tantummodo warrantizaret, &c. which Wyndham agreed: but by Allen they ought to have set forth the inden-[235]-ture: but by Twisden and Wyndham that is confess'd by the demurrer. Rents.

In debt for rent, the plaintiff counted on demise of a rectory for 21 years, yielding 100l. yearly rent, if the lessor or his deputy should so long officiate. The plaintiff avers he did officiate, according to the covenant, &c. And the defendant said that he did not by himself, nor his sufficient deputy. The plaintiff replyed he did officiate by himself and his deputy: on which the defendant demurred, because double, and not pursuant to the indenture, Pithie against Jacob, which is averred to be done by the plainiff himself only; and he must have shewed who did officiate in his absence by [236] particular name. But by Twisden this is needless, and its well reddend' singula singulis; and a great mischief by Windham would ensue, if every deputy or assistant should be named, being not a single act, but of continuance, (as issue upon payment to H. is good, when payment is to H. or his assignees): ordered that both parties amend, and go to a good issue.

68. THE KING AND CLERK against THE CHURCHWARDENS OF C.

Poor.

Keeling moved to quash an order of sessions, on 43 Eliz. 2, which enables the churchwardens, together with the overseers to tax for the poor, with the consent of the two next justices, this being not made in the same, but in another year, and directed only to the churchwardens. Wild pro Rege, This very case, he said, was one Peckhams at the Assize at Maidstone, where the intestate having laid out moneys as overseer, he was re-embursed by order of the General Session, which by Hale Chief Baron was good within the statute: and by Windham, I know at Salisbury the justices of peace, by very good opinion, having the original care of these things, this being casus omissus (that the overseer is obstinate, and will not [237] disburse any thing) the justices may compell them, and make a tax for the poor of themselves in the same, or another year, and so here, Dalt. 40, p. 116. But by Stroud, That tax was made in the same year. Twisden, It is doubtful whether any provision were for the poor before the statute 43 Eliz. they increasing on the dissolution of abby lands. But by Foster, he disbursing without consent of his partners, and no care being taken monthly for to take accompts, this order is null. Windham contrà, that the order being good of it self, the Court will not quash it for matter dehors suggested. But by Twisden, The order not being to the churchwardens and overseers, it must be quasht, and so it was per Curiam.

On motion for a new amendment of an order made for to reimburse Clerke overseer of the poor in St. Giles's Cripple-gate, but the former being quasht, the majority of justices in Hicks's-Hall (viz. 17), refuse to grant any new one, because not in their power; but mainly because the order was grounded only on an accompt stated by the oath of the party, and never allowed by the two next justices: yet it was urged that such default maketh not void the accompt, but hath a particular penalty annexed. 2. That the two next justices refused to allow it, in which case the two next must be sought to first, before H. can go to the sessions; contra in things to be done by two justices, &c. That the inconvenience would be great, if not allowed here at the sessions, the poor being but ill provided for at best, and now would fare worse. 3. 3. THE KING against BARKSTEAD. Wednesday, April 16. Siderf. 72, pl. 1.

Treason. In action upon the stat. if the party fail, the King cannot sue till apprise by information or indictment; contrà in attachment upon prohibition, or any offence, contrà Coron. & dignit. 7 Ed. 3, 26 b. pl. 12.

Barkstead, Okey, and Miles Corbet being brought by habeas corpus to the Bar, Mr. Attorney Palmer moved upon the Act of Attainder 25 April, 12 Car. 2, cap. 30, and the confirmation thereof in 13 Car. 2, removed into the Chancery, and transmitted hither by mittimus (which he desired to be read) and that they might have execution thereon without information, indictment, or other trial. The prisoners only desired counsel, which the Court refused, until matter of law shewed by them. Twisden, There is only, that they are not the same persons, or the Kings pardon pleadable, the Act making all the rest void. 2. Windham conceived the Court should waive the advantage of the prisoners holding up their hands (because the Attorney General was ready to take issue that they were the same persons, and to prove it presently) and so it was offered with a modo & forma, which the Court refused, but took it absolutely; and the oath of the jury was only to try the issue, &c. to which no challenge is allowable, but for special cause: to prove which issue, the evidence was of their sitting in the Court of Justice, and signing the warrant of execution of the late King, as against the prisoners in the Old Baily before: and they being found the same persons, Corbet excepted, that here was no indictment or information, as in Sir W. R.'s case: but per Curiam they being attainted by Parliament, they are need-[245]-less, 1 H. 7. Stafford was so proceeded against; and these proceedings are not new. Also by Corbet, This Act to this purpose is but a judgment, on which the year and day being past, there ought to be a dat Curiæ intelligi: but by Twisden, A scire facias extends not to attainders by Act of Parliament, as Hut. 21, Sir W. Raleighs case not being grounded on Westm. 2 cap. 45, and must be of an offence, (whereas here is none but that of which they are convict) wherefore Foster and the Court awarded execution against them; and soon after all three were executed at Tyburn.

4. BROWN against BURDET. Thursday, April 17. Siderf. 74, pl. 4.

Audit. querela.

In audita querela by the course of the Court, the plaintiff enters into recognisance to discharge himself, if the suit go against him, by Twisden: but by Hern Secondary, That is only when execution is superseded, or the party taken out of prison; but if the money be on the first judgment paid to the party, there is no remedy for it; but if to the sheriff, the Court upon the audita querela may order it to remain there till the suit determined: if the plaintiff hath judgment in audita querela, he shall only be discharged of execution, but shall have no restitution; wherefore (because the plaintiff could not have been taken in execution on the first judgment, but only upon the judgment in the audita querela) the Court ordered the money to be brought into Court, and remain till an end made.

5. MATTHEWS against RAYMOND. Ante. Debt Br. 43.

Amendment. 46 Ed. 3, 29, & 47 Ed. 3, 13 b. In Debt Br. 43. Moor 47, pl. 142.

Raymond moved against a repleader in an action of covenant to pay money on articles. The defendant pleaded payment after the day of 5l. in satisfaction of 50l. mentioned in the articles; issue thereon found for the defendant, who pleaded it, which he conceived sufficient. But Jones for the plaintiff contrà, The action of covenant was for not payment of money at a day; after which the defendant pleads this satisfaction, which by way of accord might have been pleaded in satisfaction of the debt and damages, but not in satisfaction of the debt, but only in mitigation of the damages. Allen for the defendant, This action is in nature of debt, a præcipe, & quod adhuc detinet, so that an acceptation after will bar the action of covenant, which Wind-[246]-ham agreed: but by Twisden, The pleading is not sufficient in discharge of the 50l. But there being a full issue on an affirmative and negative, it is well enough, as it had been by Allen, if it had been pleaded in satisfaction of the breach of covenant; and here it doth tantamount, being in satisfaction of the thing covenanted to be done; and Nichols case, the Court agreed; but if any negative and affirmative be found against him that pleads it, it is good, but not so when it is found for him. Vid. Lightmans case, Hut. & 2 Cr. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

6. JORDON against CLERK.

Assumpsit.

Jones moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case, upon indebitatus assumpsit of the testator, against the executor, upon promise to pay in consideratione præmissorum, the plaintiff intending to sue him as executor; which by Jones is insufficient, which Twisden agreed: and that the case of Howard against Ducket in this Court, was on the same point ruled void, being upon promise if H. would forbear to sue D. as executor. 2. The consideration is void without assets, or being not made as executor, stayd quousque first moved on the other seide.

7. Sir Hugh Middletons Case.

Ejectment.

Nota, pro Rege, that judgment against ones own ejector cannot be entred till the postea returned and endorsed, that the nonsuit was for want of confessing lease, entry, and ouster, which the Secondaries agreed.

8. Goodier against Clerk. Ante.

Leases.

Finch solicitor, for the plaintiff, that claimed under the lease for 100 years, the case he cyted to be C. leased to begin on the death of W. C. and Martha, on their death without issue male: they dye having issue, which dyeth without issue, yet this is a good lease; it is admitted to be so in point of creation, that it tends to a perpetuity is no reason of moment, for the law shall never construe words of limitation to make a contingent, which may commence in point of estate: so if H. had granted a rent to commence when J. S. dyeth without issue male, it shall begin when the issue of J. S. fails, as well as if the words had been so expressed; and yet the objection of the perpetuity would have been the [247] same: and however imprudent provision this be, its not material, if it be good but yet this lease is dockable, as Manwood held in the Eschequer, lessee for years in futuro, or on contingent, cannot falsifie; also this issue goeth to all; but it might have been otherwise, if it had been on the death of J. S. without children, which would not have extended to grand-children: also the words are not on the death of issue male begotten, but also to be gotten, which refers to all generations; and this is a proper provision for the daughters to begin, when the male line fails, for which end this lease interposeth betwixt every branch, and the main inheritance which is valuable in the preferment of the daughter, and shall go to her administrator, though she cannot sell it, nor perhaps may never enjoy it. 7 Car. Keble against Hall, lease to begin within 20 years, or on the surrender of former lease, here for the uncertainty the lessee hath election. Jones for the defendant, put the case that H. on the marriage of his son, makes a lease for 100 years to begin when the male-line of the son fail, and on that deed of settlement, there was a trust for portions to be paid to daughters, its considerable, whither this lease be good in point of creation, or not; being not on the life of any person, but upon such a remote contingent; but this he admitted now. But the main question is, upon the words of the habendum, which he conceived capable of both constructions; but according to the most common intention of the words, must refer to a dying without issue at the time of the death of the lessor, as according to common parlans, Pl. Com. 233, though not according to legal forms, as in formedon, &c. If H. makes a will and the executor thereof dyeth intestate, here (as in our case) H. may be said in law to dye intestate, 26 H. 8, 7, but not so in common vulgar speech, Pl. Com. 279, for which reason this was ruled within the equity of the statute. Also the intention of the deed, doth manifestly shew that it should commence at the death of the lessor; being in trust for provision for daughters then unmarried; and there is a proviso, that if the males fail within a year after the death of the lessor, then there were payments to be made to them both, which must else be destroyed: and this is the only reason to avoid perpetuity, which shall be taken, rather then any other, in equal construction, which was the reason of Blunket and Holmes case to avoid inconveniencies. Finch, The case of executors refusing hath no resemblance in propiety; but by Windham, in point of pleading he is said to dye intestate. Twisden, The sole point here is, what the devisor meant, [248] and lessee to begin 5000 years hence within the words of the statute (of future interest) may falsifie, if any future interest may; which Berclay held could not. Windham said, that Rolls was of opinion, that this settlement was intended to continue only till issue-male had by the son, at which time the estate was said setled, and no clog of provision for daughters intended to continue: there was an opinion certified in a case referred out of the Chancery to counsel in this point, 13 Car. 1, Bret. & Pildrim against Cole. Adjornatur.

9. BARBER against WINTER.

Infant.

If an infant be sued, he shall be in custodia, and shall not be delivered by appearance per guardianum without special bail, which the Court said he must find, though he cannot secure them, because as to this purpose there is no difference betwixt appearance by guardian and attorney.

10. BROWN against MARTEN. In Detinue Br. 2.

Trover. Action upon the case, Br. 111.

In indebitatus, the defendant pleads delivery of a pledge, and it was said in a trover and conversion, such a plea is not good. And Twisden doubted here; but being a special demurrer, for that cause the Court conceived it to amount but to the general issue. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

11. FEN against DRIVER.

Trespass. Stiles 182, pl. 416.

In trespass, Bugging moved in arrest of judgment, being quod 10 equos ceperunt, abduxerunt, & fugaverunt, by which he lost one hundred loads of hay, not saying ad valentiam, nor pretij, which the Court conceived ill, being quod ceperunt, abduxerunt, & fugaverunt; contrà if it had been quod fugaverunt only. [249] 12. FRANKLAND against SAVILL. Friday, April 18.

Proof.

Examination of witness cannot be by consent of the parties before any Judge that is not of that Court, out of which the cause went to the Assizes, by Twisden and Foster; because the depositions are not taken before him, as Judge of Assize, but as Judge of this Court; contrà by Windham: but per Curiam, Though one consent to have a letter read, yet the jury in pain of attaint, are not bound to find it; therefore it was agreed, that a bill should be exhibited in Chancery, and answered, and commissioners, by consent, go out thence into the country to examine such witness in the country, whereby the depositions may come in hither judicially.

13. FRIER against HEN.

Utlary. Assurances Br. 1. Dyer 310, pl. 78, such remainder is in obeyance.

In evidence to a jury, it was observed, that conveyance to A. for 99 years, if he so long live, is forfeitable by utlary, and so scarce so good as for life, remainder to the feoffees, and their heirs, during the life of tenant for life, yet both do prevent the cutting off the contingent remainder to the first, second, or third sons in tail; which yet Jones for the defendant against Cholmeleys case, prayed to be found especially, but the Court denied it, most conveyances being this way. 2. One may forfeit, during his life, and yet the remainder not destroyed, as Jacobs case, contrà to Sir John Lydalls. 3. Non-claim upon a fine levied under usurp'd powers, confirm'd by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, shall bar, (of estates sold or disposed by such powers for any delinquency against them) but only such as are parties to the fine, and their trustees; not such which could not enter by reason of such powers, and such as might then have entred before, shall not have new five years now, per Curiam, but directed it to be found specially.

[250] 14. BRAYDLE against HENBRIE.

Assumpsit.

In action upon a promise against an executor to pay if the plaintiff would give day per paululum tempus, to sue him for debt of the testator. Baldwin moved in arrest of judgment, that this is insufficient, as well as per breve parvum, or aliquid tempus: stayd per Curiam usque.

15. BOWCHIER against COSTER.

Apprentice. March, 3, pl. 6.

In action of covenant, Scrogs moved in arrest of judgment, shewing the custom of London to turn over an apprentice from one to another; and that such to whom such apprentice is turned, may have an action of covenant upon special issues on the several breaches assigned, and verdict for the plaintiff. 1. That the breach is quod abstraxit se a servitio so many nights, and during that time, did not serve him, which per Curiam being found against him, is good enough. 2. That he did not serve according to his covenants, whereas no covenant was made with the plaintiff, yet if this second covenant had been omitted, it had been good enough, and the conclusion, & sic non tenuit conventum made with the plaintiff, is as well as could be. 17. THE KING against TRINITY-HOUSE. Ante. Saturday, April 19.

Franchis. March, 16, pl. 38.

Baldwin pro Rege in an information in nature of a quo warranto, for digging of ballast and lastage: the defendants pleaded their incorporation and grant of that office, betwixt London Bridge and the high sea, by the King, which is insufficient, they being a corporation only capable to sue and be sued, and therefore cannot take lands of the purchase of a common person, nor of the King 2 H. 7, 13, by Keble, 21 Ed. 4, they being but a corporation to the parti-[251]-cular purpose, and they cannot here be to other, because no rent is reserved. 2. It is not said to be an auncient office, and no usitatum by such as enjoyed that office can be pleaded; so Dy. 76, Isams case; and to say that the King and Queen of England, time out of mind, have had the grant of such office, is but an implication, and impossible to be true, Queen Elizabeth being the first grantor of it: but the prescription should have been annexed to the office, &c. that Queen Elizabeth, and all her predecessors, Kings and Queens, &c. 3. This priviledge to digg in the river, ought to be alledged to be ratione officj, and as appendant to the office (admitting the office to be sufficiently pleaded) for this cannot be parcel of, nor an incident inseparable to the office; and therefore can be only appendant, 1 H. 7, 29, and must be so pleaded, and not that they have used to digg generally. 4. Admitting it be appendant, nothing passeth out of the King by this grant (of the office lastage and ballastage) without saying cum pertinentijs, being a thing of considerable profit 8 H. 7, 4. Dr. & St. 35. 5. The information is, that the defendants, without warrant, have used to digg in any place of the river betwixt the bridge and the sea: the defendants say, that by virtue of this grant they might digg in aliquo convenienti loco, which (not shewing in what place) is insufficient, sed non allocatur, the King having demur'd thereon, this is a disclaimer in all the rest. Also it is said, that all grantees of the King and this office have used, &c. which is not good, no prescript being to be layd in lessee at will 7 Jac. Sir Thomas Grimes against Peacock, B. R. no more then every tenant may prescribe for common, because no interruption ought to be. Allen for the defendant, By the very constitution of a corporation by the King, they are made capable of this grant, and they have appeared as a corporation; also the grant of this office is only described by the usitatum, the liberty and office being the same thing, and therefore is not necessary to be said appurtenant to the office, it being doubtful, whither it be an office or not: also none can ascertain which are convenient places, by reason of the accidental rising, and full of the sand; also the form of this grant is not as to the corporation in their own right, but only interpret the right in the Kings grant by the usage, but the record being, that they should be a corporation by such a name, and that they might sue &c. the Court conceived it well enough; and though the office be only to survey the ballast, and order the wharfs and manner of the landing and drying it, and by the Attorny-General may be without digging the ballast, which is a profit, a prejudice in anothers soil; yet Twisden [252] and Windham, conceive this an incident inseparable to the grant of lastage and ballast, as Spilman Glos. verbo Lastage. Howel pro Rege, conceived this office only of supervisorship. Foster ad idem. Post. Adjornatur.

shall be my heir that is not so at common law, is no revocation; but if he were heir it may be, or not be, (as in 20 Car. per Curiam was resolved) but if H. take notice of his will, but that J. S. is his heir and shall have it, is good revocation, by Twisden & Curiam, and in the case at Bar, the devisor said without reference to his will, that his heir at law should have his estate; which Foster conceived a revocation, being spoken to a person that knew of the will; which Twisden denyed, without deliberate taking notice of the will. Verdict for the defendant that the will was revoked, if any.

Slander.

Wild conceived the words (You set on folks to murder J. S.) actionable, fine and imprisonment being due without averring J. S. to be dead, 1 Cr. 140, pl. 147, of Leukner against Crutch, for the words are scandalous, as that my Lady Cockain offered money to give her poyson to kill the child in her body. Twisden, If it be criminal to charge H. with fact done, as that he is a barretor, though only fine and imprisonment be due, yet it is actionable; and this is pregnant in it self, that the husband was murdered; Cronye against Prat, 1653, B. R. There was a man murdered in your house, and you conceald the murdered; which by Twisden counsel, supposed a fact done; also the case at Bar is the husband tunc defunct. which supposeth him dead, and by Foster no good sense can be put on these words, and you set on rogues to rob me, hath been adjudged actionable, and the words implye that he caused the husband to be murdered. 25. THE KING against TYMBERLY. Ante. Tuesday, April 22.

Conspiracy. So conspiracy lyeth for procuring H. to be indicted of common trespass 3 Ed. 3, 19, pl. 34.

Barwelt moved in arrest of judgment, for that matter of the indictment, it being to deprive the plaintiff of his credit, and to extort several sums of money from him; but said not that they charged or conspired to charge the plaintiff before any that had jurisdiction; and as Poulters case, by the common law, no conspiracy lay till after acquittal; but doth now lye for a conspiracy to indict; but it must be such as may draw the party in peril, and this is the description in the Statute of Conspirators, 33 Ed. 1, 3 Inst. and the reason of that severe punishment against them. 2. This is not matter of slander 1 Cr. Salter against Brown, nor would be actionable, unless for matter that were determinable by the Ordinary, 2 Inst. 206. Windham, The crime is the conspiracy, which whither it be only to defame, or disgrace men, or had it been to charge him with heresie, it had been punishable by common law, though no prosecution be had thereon. And by Twisden, This is no indictment for having a bastard, which is seldom, but is a conspiracy for lucre and gain, to discharge and disgrace one with a bastard, which is well actionable: Mallet ad idem, Corporal punishment being due: and by Foster, The very act of conspiring is so odious, for the ill consequences, that it cannot have good intent. Judgment pro Rege.

The letter bore date in the middle of that term, when the action is brought; which, per Curiam, if it be before the bail filed (which may be of any retorn of the term, but is usually of the last) is well enough, but contrà if after. 2. The defendant claimed the woman as his wife, and therefore though it is found by verdict, that the defendant falsly and malitiously affirmed a precontract, yet the defendant making title, it is not actionable; Mildmayes case, Banister against Banister, Sir Gilbert Gerrards case; else by Twisden, none can ever make his title, if when it is found, that he made it falsely he should be sued. Amendment. 2 Cr. 569, pl. 8.

In assumpsit laid several wayes for several sums of money, the toto se attingunt was more, but the jury in one found less then the particulars; which by Wild, Recorder, for the defendant, is well enough: but the other action being in toto se attingunt more than the particulars, and the jury find the sum computed, this is ill; which difference, by Twisden, was agreed by Roll upon perusal of several cases in Jones and Barclays time: but Allen for the plaintiff, cited Syms against Gregory, where a repugnant trespass as 20 H. 6, with continuando beyond the test of the writ, and the jury gave damages for all, it is intended that they only give damages for that which they lawfully may, and so were the resolutions in Parmiter against Cresser, trover pro duodens fili, damages were affirmed well given, though it be nonsense: but by Twisden, No jury can believe trespass can continue after the writ brought; but this doubt ariseth on their belief of a sum which is miscast, and so the difference is evident; and three or four cases have been thus adjudged, which the Court agreed, and gave judgment for the first, and adjorned the last.

Office. Stiles 208, pl. 471.

In an action upon the case for taking the profits of the under-clerk of the Treasury, whose admittance was usually by the master of the office, and fees ancient in a table under the Judges hands, 18d. every præcipe, and not removeable at the masters pleasure, nor at the Judges. 2. Petitions to this Court are seldom signed by the party himself, as they are to Higher Courts, per Curiam. The defendant relied on, that this is no office though the fees be certain, [259] but only an imployment at the masters pleasure, and all the admission is only the masters permission of him to work, without rolls or grants. 3. A note obtained by the Lord Finch, master of that office formerly, of the officers subscription, that they were but servants, which by Allen for the plaintiff, is no more then some parishioners subscription to pay tythe in kind which will not bane others; which the Court agreed, and refused to give it in evidence, especially part being cut off. 4. Though this be no office, 29 H. 6, the Duke of Norfolk in Reynolds case, 10 Co. yet its such an imployment which is allowable by the Court, and to be placed on men of ability, whose defalt shall not prejudice the master, nor can he remove them without cause; they must first serve a clerk, then are admitted by the Chief Justice by allowance of the prothonotaries, which must be after they have served their time, unless cause be to the contrary; and though the office is not forfeited by defalt of the clerk, yet the superior may be fined for it. 5. Money given to an inferiour clerk to resign, is not within the statute, by Twisden, not being bought of the master; and these offices are particularly excepted in the statute. 6. It was moved for the defendant, that the taking of the profits, being by colour of an ordinance disabling the plaintiff, being a delinquent, was pardoned by the Act of Oblivion, 12 Car. 2. But by Allen, The Act relates only to publick differences, or such private injuries as were done under colour of, and relating to them; and it doth not appear that the plaintiff was a delinquent: but per Curiam, This being but an ordinance, Jan. 43, notice thereof must be proved; and by Twisden, The Act extends only to indempnifie such as received rents of delinquents, and paid them over to the State, 25 Dec. 1643. The Court conceived it an office, and that the master could not turn any out of it, and directed only as to damages, which by verdict were given to 600l.

In action upon the case, the plaintiff counted that he was seised of mills, and that the defendant and occupiers of such ground (not saying by what reason) ought to repair a wear, by not doing whereof the plaintiff lost the benefit of his mills; which by Jones, in arrest of judgment, is ill; but especially because the prescript is laid only in occupiers, 5 Co. 99, which may be tenants only at will. After Curia advisare vult, by Allen, the judgment might be entred of the same term the verdict is given, though the party be dead, as in Waldron and Wards case; which Foster agreed to have been done, as well in this Court as in C. B. and by Hern prothonotary, as the common course; but otherwayes where the party by his voluntary act defers his judgment, there it shall be entred only of that term when its prayed; or if the defendant stay it by injunction, if rules be given to move in arrest of judgment on the postea, the plaintiff may enter his judgment, as of the term when the verdict is given; so on special verdicts which are continued by act of the Court: wherefore Wild for the defendant prayed that the elegit, being executed, might be returned and filed, that so no capias might be after award, which the Court granted. Post.

Executors. 2 Cr. 15, pl. 20. Stiles 385, pl. 836.

In action of debt against one as executor upon a judgment against the testator; she pleaded that such a day (which was) that administration was committed to her, which on demurrer after imparlance, was by the plaintiffs counsel conceived to be ill. It hath been objected, because in substance it is no more then ne unque executor, which is not in bar, 7 H. 6, 36, per Goddard, & 37 H. 6, 24, per Davers, and therefore cannot conclude in abatement, and the matter, not the conclusion, denominates the plea; yet by him this is but a misnomer of the person, as Robinsons case, 5 Co. 32, & 35 H. 6, 21 b. the word executor being parcel of the name, and traversable, 35 H. 6, 55, which showeth it so to be: and this plea differs from unque executor, confessing her self chargeable with the debt, but not in that manner, 21 H. 6, 19. But admitting the pleas to be alike, yet the conclusion doth restrain the election to one way. 36 H. 6, 18, per Littleton, 3 Ed. 3, 46. 37 H. 6, 24. And supposing this a plea of misnomer, it cannot be pleaded by attorney, being contrary to his warrant, F. N. B. 27 a. 2 H. 6, 11. 6 H. 7, 14. 32 H. 6, 30. Nontenure after the view may be pleaded, but not after imparlance, 19 H. 6, 1 & 2. Yelvert. 15 Jac. 112. 32 H. 6, 27 & 28. 35 H. 6, 36. H. 2 Car. Ratcliff against Bucke, Ow-[262]-en; & Latches Rep. But this plea demanded judgment de billa, and began not actio non, which by Twisden is but in abatement; which Windham agreed; and so cannot be pleaded after venit and defendit vim & injuriam, which is general imparlance. But per Curiam, The attorneys authorities are now general by the parties name, without any addition of executor; but in the old book the warrants of attorney were filed together with the pleas, which is not now used. 45. THE KING against BREWSTER. Friday, April 25.

Perjury.

Jones shewed cause against judgment upon indictment of perjury on 5 Eliz. because it doth not appear how the oath made was material to the point in issue; saying only quod defendens, being testis productus in assumpsit, to pay all such sums of money as the plaintiff should expend, in consideration he would bring an action, issue non assumpsit; the oath was, that the plaintiff received mony paid by the defendants servant in discharge of all actions; but by Twisden, though this be not direct to the issue, yet it is material to the end of the action, which is to recover damages: and by Twisden this payment being before the action brought, may be pleaded in bar; but however it is material per Curiam, 263, pl. 47.

But Twisden conceived the interest, vested by this crime in the next of kin taken away by the Act of Oblivion, which was of as high nature as the other statute: also the King hath not an interest, but as 13 Eliz. 3 of fugitives hath a perception of profits, which upon return is gone. Windham, doubted; also he conceived that any other cause is not meant of any what ever, but only of causes like the first, to prevent his education. The Court inclined to a special verdict; but by consent of parties a juror was withdrawn.

Alien. 1 Cr. 151.

In the Exchequer Chamber, all the Judges (but the Chief Baron) being present, in ejectment, Archer Serjeant for the plaintiff, for the discent against the escheat, postnati 25, this is quæstio juris, as Ratcliffs case, & pref. to the 2 Rep. which is in our law certain; 1. As considered without the act that the brothers, English born of alien parents, shall inherit each other; the objection that there are elder daughters hinders not the younger, Dr. & St. 13, Denises 7, Discent 57, but otherwayes of an attaint which is not out of the consideration of the law, as the other is, Entr. Stanford 58, because he cannot make his pedigree, Dyer 274, which he must do to take any estate; but the single point is, whether the brothers may inherit each other, Pl. Com. 303. Pl. Com. 445. How far blood is necessary is considerable, it must be intire, 1 Inst. 7, and of lawful marriage, but is not necessary to be as well by father as mother, but any one will suffice to convey the discent betwixt brethren in case of purchase by either of them, 13 H. 7, 7 b. Stanford 195. 1 Inst. 84, so is 2 Cr. 601, Bacon & Bacons case, & Denizen Br. 21. Abr. Ass. 39 b. The verdict doth not find of what woman he had issue, 1 Inst. 198. Rast. Entr. 252 b. [266] therefore it shall be presumed she was English, for iniquum jure non est præsumendum, but its found the issue is of Scotish parents; yet by reason of the constant and usual amity betwixt the nations in King James's time, therefore postnati 9, such born in one, as well as the other realm, are declared to be inheritable since Queen Elizabeth's time before the union: and the objection 1 Inst. 8 is answered in 2 Cr. Godfrey against Dixon, there is here natural blood, whereby one conveys his pedigree, which is sufficient without inheritable blood, which is only to make title, 2 Cr. 685, every man hath a personal and an auncestrel blood, 49 Ed. 3, 9. Rot. 199, as to the naturalization, 1 Inst. 129, being of an alien in amity, its more on policy to enable him to traffick, then to take off any disability, 5 Co. 52. Dyer 283. 7 Ed. 4, 30. 10 H. 4, 26, for such persons may purchase and maintain an assize, and his lands shall discend till an inquisition found, 1 Cr. 9, so far the law takes notice of his blood to be true, and not corrupt or disabled, Tr. 9 Jac. B. R. An alien may have action for slander, 7 Jac. cap. 2. Naturalizations are acts of grace, and so to be taken liberally, being but a restitution to those capacities which are restrained for reasons of State, 3 Inst. 241, that they shall, to all purposes, be made natural liege people, are operative words to this purpose, and may do any thing that two brothers born in England might, Pl. Com. 130. 3 Inst. 242, and the contrary would be of ill consequence, and against the publick faith of the nation. The Duke of Lenox's case, he was naturalized, and the Lord Aubeny likewise; and though their auncester was antenatus, yet they enjoy to this day upon this point, as was said by Sir John Davis in the argument of Godfry against Dixon; which case, [267] though the father were a denizen, doth not alter it from this. 7 Co. 7. 1 Inst. 8, 129. 22 H. 6, 38. Denizen Br. 9. They are like two grafts on a wild stock, which concockt the wild sap into their own nature; or like branches of a candlestick.

(2.) Finch for the defendant, The difference betwixt alien and attainder is denied, 22 H. 6, 38, yet he agreed the case only, that the sons of aliens cannot inherit each other: he agreed, that the children of an English woman are as lawful issue, as if the father were so. And here it cannot be presumed she was English, because its found that the issue was alien born: and as to the Act of Naturalization, nothing therein puts them in better case, then if they were subjects born, this being but an imitation of nature; wherefore bastard & mulier, or brothers of the half blood, cannot inherit by such Act: and the words of the Act are in reference and similitude, and can have no other construction, then that they shall be like English sons, born of alien parents; the intent of the statute being not to create any new course of discent, but to take away his personal defects; and the clause of resorting to any auncester, concludes as any born in England might do, and so are meerly redundant. In ancient times the method to introduce aliens was by letters of denization, which were after confirm'd in Parliament, as 8 H. 4, numb. 99, Davis, 2 H. 6, numb. 31, Jaques and the Dutches of Bedford, 1 H. 5, numb. 17, Rice ap Thomas, 2 H. 5, divers others were naturalized without any denization, 3 H. 6, 55, and this term is not mentioned in any old book, nor before Calvins case, yet was the benefit then as great as now, 24 Eliz. Hye against Hill, 3 Cr. 3. 1 R. 3, 4. 22 H. 6, 38. Issue of English parents born beyond sea, after licence expired, shall inherit the capacity of an alien; but being born of an English man, is not alike with this at the Bar, yet is the Act in the same form; these Acts must be taken strictly, 50 Ed. 3, Petitions, numb. 204, being against the liberty of the subject, strangers being spies, 1 Rich. 3, cap. 9 (doubted whether repealed by 1 H. 4). Hut. 132, yet always expounded against the alien, Harmon against Jacob, 1650, & Tr. 55, in an indictment against Petit a French taylor, 18 H. 6, Roll of Parliament, numb. 29, because they are presumed to have animam revertendi, P. 3 Car. Gret against Wood in Exchequer, the son of an alien of the first discent, born in England, shall pay double custom. We do allow aliens to traffick, and gain personal estates, and dispose them by their wills, but they have no favour when they purchase [268] lands; and this is different from an act of restitution; which last hath some merit, the other none. Naturalizations in France, by reason of the great fines the King there taketh, which are the tenth part of his estate, is much favour'd, but not so in any other nation, 10 Car. All the antenati in Scotland are naturalized in Ireland, which doth not extend to England; yet natural birth in either nation giveth capacity in the other. The arguments taken from nature make nothing for the plaintiff, because there are elder brothers; but all inheritance betwixt all persons is grounded on true and legal consanguinity, natural without legal being not jus consanguinitatis, but call'd so, having no legal root; and where the brothers could never inherit the father, they shall never inherit each other; for if there be defect in the root, Bract. 64, there can be no capacity in the branches, Rom. 11. The disability ex culpa supposeth natural blood, but the root is corrupt by attainder: so if baron & feme have issue, and then are divorced causa præcontractus, the issue cannot inherit each other, none can distinguish the whole from the half blood, or compute the degrees of cosinage, but by recourse to the common stock, Stanford 195. 1 Inst. 8. Courtneys case doth admit no collateral discent could have been without the Act of Parliament, 1 Inst. 244. 1 Inst. 2 b. A denizen cannot be inherited collaterally by a brother, Denizen, Br. 9. The laws of other nations guide this way: in France an alien cannot devise; and such as are born there, may devise, but cannot inherit as if they were naturalized. We are to treat strangers as they treat us, Mag. Chart. 13. Bract. 427. Dower F. 179. Stanf. Prerog. 139. 1 Inst. 129 in Hobbies's case, there was always an apparent possibility for the children to inherit their father. If the second brother be attainted, Stanf. 195. Dr. & St. 16, the youngest need not mention him in conveyance from the eldest, yet is barr'd by such disability against Ratcliffs case, 1 Inst. 187. The fathers blood is causa sine qua non, but the mothers is the inheritable blood, and bastards are not of the blood of the mother. Dyer 374, 296. Adjornatur.

Slander. 3 Cr. 325, pl. 17.

The latitat appeared to be retorned after the cause of action, which is well enough; but on original, the teste must be before the cause of action: and per Curiam, the teste of the latitat is not material; but the putting in common bail, is the beginning of the suit. The second objection was, that the letter was not actionable, being that she was before God wife to the defendant, which was found for the plaintiff, (but for other words for the defendant;) yet by Jones for the plaintiff, when there is no probable tytle or cause there to affirm he hath tytle, the action will lye, by Windham, this would let in great inconvenience, should it not be actionable; and more then making a title to land, for this is imposing an impediment to the marriage. Twisden contrà; I see no difference betwixt this and slander of title, which must be layd precisely, that it was spoken without colour falsely, as Caves case against Golding J. S. hath no title to a rectory, but I have more title than he, adjudged actionable: but yet here it is only a general claim of his own interest, so it was not said in that case, that there was any purchaser. Foster doubted, this letter being private: but by Windham, then the directions by the Judge at the tryal should have been for the defendant; but now it shall be presumed maliciously after verdict, though the name of God be used; but by Twisden falsly, &c. as in Guilbert against Gerrard, signifies nothing, if the matter appears, as here it doth; and that the law doth not make such construction on it: which Foster agreed, because the letter imports the contrary, and the party can never prove his own private contract. 3. It was excepted, that no place was mentioned for the letter, but only Civitas Exon in the margent; which, by Jones for the plaintiff, is well enough, no other place being mentioned, and the city being a county of it self. The defendant have not made title to digg in the Kings soil, but only as an use of such persons as had that office, not saying as spectand. & pertinent. nor that their office is an auncient office, which is necessary, Dy. 70, for incidents are universally necessarily inherent, Lit. sect. 131, and as fealty to a tenure, or rent to a reversion, 34 H. 6, 49, a court baron to a mannor, quo warranto, Br. 4, and it may be said, eo warranto, without any special prescript appendant, is such as by construction of law follows the grant, 4 Co. Terringhams case, as common or an advowson to a freehold, which only can be said appendant: offices or other things are to be said appurtenant, and are supposed to begin by special grant, 1 Inst. 121. 1 H. 7, 28, though they be claimed by prescript; (but sometimes these words are used promiscuously;) and by considering the nature of this office, its apparent, that this digging cannot be incident, the principal thing necessary here is only supervising, else might any digg as well in Greenwich-Parke, as in the river, and this were to give another person interest in the Kings soil by implication of law: also by grant of such office, at this day, digging passeth not, 27 H. 8, cap. 18, being said to be a new thing, and so cannot pass as incident; and if he that hath this office is not bound to provide ballast, then it cannot be incident: by lastage is only meant lading, as Cowell interprets, into which they enquire, but are not thereby to provide all lading for ships, but only to see it be well laid on convenient wharfs, well dryed, &c. which appears also by 27 H. 8, cap. 18, and the patent pleaded, doth shew this, being of all ships veniend. exeund. of the river Thames, and they cannot provide ballast for ships that come from beyond sea; and its also with whatsoever ballast its laded, they are to judge of it; and 10 Car. it was certified by Noy on petition of Trinity House, that by virtue of that patent they could not dig gravel; all which shew it not incident, and as appurtenant, 11 Co. 9, they have not laid good prescript, 8 Co. 122. 6 Co. 60, because their foundation is not to an ancient office, and the use of the Kings and Queens is but an implication, which [271] is not sufficient; and they do not annex this privilege to the office as pertinent, 1 Inst. 121. 1 H. 7, 29. 4 Co. 36, being an interest in another soil, P. 14 Car. 1, Lord Say against Young, Hill. 13 Car. 1 Rot. 464. That the plaintiff had used to have common for all his tenants, which after verdict was ruled ill, because it was not said for him and his tenants, as pertinent to the house whereof he and all those, &c. were seised.

Newdigate for the defendant, That this usage is sufficient to shew it an ancient office, 1 Cr. 555, 279. Young against Stowell, 4 Inst. 10, and the fees of the Judges pass by their patents without special words, 44 Ed. 3, 2. 10 Co. 14, and so an advowson before prærog. Regis, 4 Inst. 75, passed by grant of a mannor cum pertinentiis, and this being but a liberty, 9 Ed. 4, 6. 11 Co. Lyfords case, need not be mentioned in the grant, being incident to it, 12 Co. 14. Dyer 71. 1 H. 7, 8. Minshal verbo ballastage, 21 R. 2, cap. 18, Stat. Calice. Ballastage is the materials, lastage the ordering thereof, as 27 H. 8, cap. 18. This case is like the case of the lead mines in Derbyshire, he that hath interest in the Peak may dig in any mans ground in the Folly. And the King may grant such an office, as a subject cannot, Dyer 259. 30 Ass. 4, and that the persons to whom such grant is made, 2 Ca. 665, debent & solent dig, which is a sufficient prescription, Curia Claudenda, F. N. B. to shew that its ancient, this quo warranto supposeth it a liberty, and no interest in alieno solo: and therefore the defendants are only to excuse themselves of a contempt, Hub. 40. 3 Cr. 419. Yelvert, 148, Woodman against Aylin, and this only demurred on without issue, and therefore all informally pleaded is well enough. The Court disallowed the certificate of Noy, though as it was by Twisden, it cometh not to this case, because that was only that others, as well as Trinity House, might by grant of the King have liberty to dig ballast. Also Windham doubted, whether this usage do not make this liberty parcel of the office. Twisden agreed, especially here by way of excuse; contrà if he were to claim and make a title to it: he remembred a case of Watlin against King, where it was alledged that time out of mind the sum had used to come in, yet because the plaintiff had not said his house was an ancient house, they were fain to have a new trial. Windham, If it be an original grant by several words, it can inure but as a grant, but otherwise if it were an after grant. Another exception was, that the information in the nature of a quo warranto, was for digging à ponte London, and the plea was [272] infra pontem Londinensem, & altum mare. Also by Windham, This being an information, and not an original quo warranto, as Bacons case, is not final. Post. Adjornatur.

Attorny.

A reteyner in B. R. by an attorny of the C. B. parol, though the attorney in C. B. as Childs case, have no warrant, is good, and the party is put to his action upon the case against the attorny in C. B. but the Court will not undo the judgment, F. N. B.

Audita Quer. especially being a judgment had about five years since; but had there been any practice appearing in the party, the Court would have considered on it; but execution being done by cap. ad sat. and judgment on an action upon escape had, the Court would not examine it, but ordered the attorny of C. B. to attend.

Error.

He retorned a writ of error, that there was no such record; which by Twisden he cannot do, but ought to retorn the record, and if there be any real defect in it, it must here at the retorn be shewed to make void the record; which Windham denied, as this case is, because no such plaint as is specified in the writ is pending at the time; contrà if names in the record be mistaken only: but per Curiam, he must retorn the writ whether the party will pay him his demands or not, and the Court will on the retorn allow them. Twisden conceived, that when a writ of error is brought, though the officer will not retorn it, yet the Court may award restitution, which the Court agreed, but awarded not restitution till other writs were retorned.

But per Curiam, though to forge a writing be not actionable, yet to forge a deed, or any release, &c. it is, and no colloquium is necessary, more then is alledged. 2. Office.

Maynard moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff declares of two offices by several names, which cannot be understood but as distinct, and both being pro scriptione omnium exemplificationum, which can be incident but to one. 2. He is not an officer sufficiently entitled to an action, 8 Ed. 4, 5, because he is not said to be juratus, but only admissus debito modo, which not being by patent, is ill. 3. Its not said for what time, whether at will or for life; and cannot be understood to be for life, because he is not said seised, but possessionatus & interessatus; and if it be but at will, he may be turned out at will. 4. He sheweth no particular fees, and so may bring a new action for the same, or some of the same fees. Allen for the defendant, As to the last exception, it's certain enough, being in toto 500l. especially this being only an action upon the case for a disturbance, which is a sufficient answer to the second and third exceptions: and as to the first, there was several persons have power to write all, not exclusive of any other: also by Jones for the plaintiff, to particularize the fees, would be infinite, therefore is the value sufficient: all which exceptions the Court overruled. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Assurance. Moor 102 & 381. 3 Leonard 16, pl. 39. 1 Anderson 113, pl. 157. Entr. Congeable, Br. 140. March, 50, pl. 78.

Jones for the defendant, To make good the first conveyance, and that the use thereby was changed, the words of the indenture were, articles of agreement, whereby the mother did bargain, sell, grant, demise, and set over; which was found to be as well for natural affection, as for 20l. whereby he conceived that there is a sufficient consideration to raise a use, by way of covenant, to stand seised, had it been expresly as well for one as the other consideration, (as Manxells case, and the Statute of Enrollments) it had been undoubtedly good: he agreed the opinion in Bedells case, though some cases contradict it, as Dyer 146, Beaumonds case; so Osborn against Church, 2 Cr. 127. And as an averment is allowable that mony was paid where none is men-[275]-tioned to be paid, so may affection; but in the case at Bar, there is that which doth admit of this averment, as well as of the other of money, being for divers other good considerations, Ward against Walthew, Hill. 3 Jac. Rot. 1161. 2 Cr. 173, (on which he relied) is express in this point. 2. The main question is, whether the words and intention of this deed will bear this construction. 1. There are sufficient words to raise a use at the common law, any words which declared the will of the owner of the land, Dyer 235, how he would dispose the profits, were sufficient, Dyer 96. And since by the statute, 2 Cr. 400 pl. 9, though there be a greater ceremony requisite, yet as to the words, there is no authority to change the common law. If one covenant to stand seised, as Bedells case, and Dyer 96, for good consideration, though he use no apt words, nor although the words do properly import a conveyance at common law, as Foxes case, yet it may pass by bargain and sale, or by way of use, and betwixt the words in Foxes case and this at Bar, there is no difference, though there be in the consideration which will not alter the case, but is rather here stronger: Foxes case might have enured otherwise then by way of use, but here no other. 3. That the intention of the parties was, that it should thus enure is evident, in that there is nothing shews the intent to the contrary; for though the articles are by way of covenant, which refer to a future conveyance, yet upon consideration of the whole deed, it appears the deed terminates in it self, when the operative words of demise and grant are executed presently; and it's no ways repugnant, but suitable to all conveyances to reserve a particular estate, because this is good in covenants to stand seised, and is an evidence of the intent to pass it by way of use: there is a remedy for 20l. to be paid to the assignees of Margery by action of debt or covenant, on the indenture, and therefore that's no objection. The agreement that Margery shall have Matthews barn in full of her third part, doth not appear to be part of the consideration of the deed, but a collateral covenant; but if it were part of the consideration, yet this barn passeth to Margery by the deed, for she was entitled to dower, and the defendant the eldest son that was to render it, and so this must be intended an assignment of it, and so both estates mutually executed: the authorities cited of weight, are 2 Cr. 127, in which case there are words of bargain and sale, and the enrollment after did declare the intent of the parties; but this case went off on another point, because here it might enure as a confirmation, if it enures as a bargain and sale. [276] 2. The case of Pitfield against Pierce hath been looked on as a hard judgment, but distinguisht from our case, because the words imported an estate at common law, and no intent appeared to pass it to the contrary, though it could enure no other way. But here the father granted to the son after his death, and so mentioned nothing of the freehold to be in himself, which is done in the case at Bar, Hub. 301. In that case there could be no proper covenant to stand seised, being future, and never taking effect in his life, 21 H. 7, 18, which could not be good, nothing being presently executed; but Dyer 235, where there is a present use limited to the father, H. 20 Jac. C. B. Buckland against Symons, covenant that the son, after the death of the father, shall have the land, is void; contrà where the father expresly reserveth an estate to himself. Twisden in Wats against Dixies case, the case of Pitfield and Pierce in special verdict, was affirmed for good law by all the Court. Windham, In ancient time, as in Vinians case, there was such an opinion as Jones conceived, but now it hath been setled, that if no intent appear but one on the deed, it shall rather be void, then enure to any other: and the difference mentioned by Jones of the reservation, was never mentioned; but the point relyed on were the words give and grant; and it was granted, that if the covenant had been to stand seised after his death, it had been well enough in Pitfields case, March, 50, pl. 78. And Justice Jones conceived, that the father intended never to make himself tenant for life punishable of waste by his son, but that there were other agreements which may be presumed in this case; and the intent appears here by her after feoffment to be to pass it by bargain and sale. Twisden, In the case of Saunders and Saunders in C. B. the jury found that livery and seisin was indorsed on the deed, but did not find it actually made: and therefore per Curiam, it was ruled to enure as a covenant to stand seised, which he conceived a hard judgment. Post.

H. cannot, and that the avowant hath not gaged deliverance or is hucusque seised, because no dammages are recoverable, for the not delivery where the taking is not tortious 21 Ed. 3, 20, pl. 8. Gage Del. Br. 6.

In replevin, the defendant pleaded not guilty of taking within the six years; which by Allen, is ill, and should have been not cepit, or not guilty generally, because as Sir George Stroud against Bacon the defendant, had deteyned the cattle during that time; and the dammages are as well for deteyning, as the taking, though the one be not a continuance of the other. But by Windham, If he that took, keeps the beasts in his possession, every day is a new taking, as trespass continuando, in which case the count is, as well on the continuance, as on the trespass: but by Allen, The deteiner, as well as the taking, must be justified, being distinct points; and this action doth suppose the property to remain, (Co. 140, F. N. B.) but trespass alters it. Also if the beasts return to me, and after estray into the lands of J. S. who took them before, yet J. S. is chargeable with the deteyner; and this declaration is distinct, being of a taking in the life of the testator, and deteyning in the time of the executors. Twisden, A replevin can never be barr'd by the Statute of Limitation, if this plea be not good. Windham, Non cepit is the proper plea in replevin: yet Allen conceived this ill, because if the taking were before, and deteyning within six years, if non cepit be pleaded, I cannot reply that he did take, &c. But by Windham, Every day is a several taking, and though the first were pardoned, yet the others may remain, and be made as the first taking, and so after amends tendred on involuntary trespass, if the cattle be deteined, replevin lyeth, and shall complain of an unjust ta-[280]-king, though that taking was good. In evidence to a jury, challenge was made of the Bishop of Salisbury, because the lease he was to testifie, was only by grant and demise, which implying a general warranty, he could be no evidence; and though there were a special covenant against him, and his successors, yet by Maynard for the defendant, the lease being void, that is no derogation: contrà if it were but voidable: but per Curiam, this lease is good in point of creation, though fruitless whilst another is in being; and he was admitted. 2. The father testified a deed in pursuance and affirmance of a lease made to his son by himself, which the Court allowed, his interest being passed away 3. It was doubted, whither lease by prebend, confirmed by dean and chapter and bishop, who is patron of lands lying in another diocess, whereof D. is Ordinary, be good without confirmation of D. Presentation.

Special verdict found, that Dr. Griffith was incumbent of the rectory, and that the Earl of Shrewsbury was seised of the advowson of it, and presented Mr. Griffith, lessor of the plaintiff, being then recusant convict, and that the presentee was instituted and inducted, and was in actual possession, and then found the Act for Ministers, 12 Car. 2. Jones for the plaintiff that was sequestred, and another in orders put in by usurper, and this action may be brought notwithstanding the Act of Minsters that commissions several persons to determine differences, and that all verdicts shall be conclusive, this action being by bill in Trinity after the Parliament began, and so not within the intent of the Act, Br. Parliament 86, being not commenced before the first day of the Parliament, to which all their Acts relate. 2. That the presentation is void in it self, 3 Jac. cap. 5, he agreed; but yet when the Ordinary doth admit, institute, and induct thereon, it will be good to some purposes; as against all strangers that claim not under the rightful patron; so at common law, if the King present, mistaking his title, that is void; but the Ordinary inducting thereon, its as an original collation. 6 Co. 29, Greens case, Hub. 302, in Sir H. Gawdyes case, its direct in this point, that such person may sue for tythes; and if the patron will admit himself out of possession, he must name such clerk in the quare impedit, which shews that he is incumbent. 3. The statute shall not be taken beyond the words, being penal, as the Statute of Symony makes void all the Acts of Presentation, Institution, &c. this statute, only the presentation: and the intent of this statute is rather to intrust the patron with supervisorship then interest, and so leave it to him, whether he will turn out the incumbent or not. 4. None is confirmed by the Act of Ministers, but such as are in such livings as are void against all men, as well as against the patrons.

[283] 2. Powis for the defendant agreed, that if the church be not void, he is not confirmed: the words of 3 Jac. are, 3 Co. 59 b. That such presentation is void; and the induction thereon is also void against the true patron, 6 Co. 50, Boswells case, and it shall not amount to a collation, but a meer provisional care of the bishop to supply the cure, else will it be contrary to the express words used in institution and induction. 2. The bishop intends not to transfer any right from himself, but is a minister, 1 Inst. 52 a. and only an instrument, as cestuy in reversion, making livery by letter of attorney from tenant for life, which hinders not his entry afterwards, 14 H. 8, 3. 1 Cr. 99, Stephens against Potter, for institution without a presentation is meerly void; contrà if the bishop collate by special words, 11 H. 4, 7. Also the Act of Ministers, 5 & 9, doth take in this case, the lease of ejectment being seal'd the 20 of April before the Act. Twisden, Collation within six months will never grow to a plenarty, no more then one that enters on the King, can be a disseisor by the Kings granting over. Also by Windham, The opinion in Hub. 302, is against Greens case, this being a plenarty against no man, though the incumbent may, during his being so, sue for tythes. Post. Adjornatur.

It doth appear that here is more then is necessary for enlarging of a curtelage taken, being two of three acres, 7 H. 4, 38, which by Jones is ill, in trespass for breaking his close, which Windham agreed: but this Court cannot judge that this taking two of three acres is unreasonable, for all circumstances considered, as the condition of the inhabitant, &c. and by Foster and Twisden, this plea being demurred to is frivolous, and he ought to shew that the house is ancient, though the party makes no prescription, but on-[284]-ly a priviledge, which is given by the statute to houses in general. And by Allen for the plaintiff, There needed no averment that he left sufficient common, which Windham agreed. And though the labour to build the house were several, yet the matter being contained in a deed, is joynt; but when the joynder is only on delictum, as two joyn in service of J. S. if one do not, the plaintiff may recover against him alone. By Foster, As this case is, the one defendant having pleaded covenants performed, and found for him, here it appears the plaintiff hath no cause of action against any, which the Court agreed. Also the defendant prayed costs against the plaintiff, there being here a nil capiat per billam awarded by the statute, which the Court granted. Also in a writ of conspiracy against two, one Assets. Moor 2, pl. 3. 1 Brownl. 103, pl. 443.

In action by B. administrator de bonis non of C. against the administrator of the executor de son tort, the defendant pleads that the executor de son tort of C. had laid out in payment of debts to a greater value then the personal estate of his testator the lessor, which per Curiam doth enable him to retain the lease: and this being pleaded by administrator of an executor, or executor of administrator, that the executor or first administrator had paid, &c. he per Curiam, needed not to shew that the first administrator paid to this purpose and intent; for the property is altered by operation of law, without election made by the party, Woodward against Darcy, Pl. Com. 185 b. And if election were to be made, yet the administrator of the administrator may make it. 2. Its not said, when the administrator paid, whether before or after administration committed; which, by Windham, is good enough, were it paid as executor de son tort against all but creditors: but none may be supposed for to pay contrary to his express authority. Also by Foster, This retainer is not by payment of his own, but others debt; and in such case executor de son tort may retein so much as he payeth, especially if administration be after committed to him only, which the Court agreed; and that else such a person can never plead fully administred: Teb against Long, in evidence to a jury, it was held, that when once administration is committed, he is so now ab initio, which is the reason he may retein to himself; also payment pleaded in vita testatoris, without other particular time, is well enough, per Curiam, in action of covenant for rent arrear against the testators under-lessee. 95. HOWARD against GOLDING-PRENTICE.

Pardon.

In evidence to a jury, in action upon the case, against one convicted of perjury and pardoned, to recover dammages only; the former conviction, by Foster and Windham, may, notwithstanding the pardon be given in evidence, being collateral: as in calling one thief, after pardon, his former ill conversation may be given in evidence in mitigation of dammages, which Twisden denyed; for he may falsifie or travers it in this collateral action; but by the rest, though it be not conclusive, yet it is good evidence to induce belief.

96. THE KING against PILL, AYRES, &c.

Nusance.

Allen moved to quash an indictment of nusance, for throwing corrupt water ad nocumentum inhabitantium & legiorum transeuntium, which by him is ill; as also because no place unde ducens is layd; which being in a highway, by Windham, is well enough, but it wanting vi & armis, it is ill, per Curiam, as also by Foster and Twisden, because no place is alledged from whence and whither the way leads.

97. TRADAHAM against ———.

Prohibition.

After nonsuit on tryal of a suggestion, no new prohibition shall be granted, per Curiam, though such nonsuit were sworn by default of a witness necessarily imployed.

[287] 98. PATESON against DANGES. LORD SALISBURIES CASE. Wednesday, May 7.

Copyhold. 2 Cr. 511, pl. 22.

In evidence to a jury it was held, that proclamations, whereby the lord claimed forfeiture, ought to be proved viva voce, and not only by the court rolls. 2. Glyn for the plaintiff against Maynard for the defendant, held that forfeiture upon default at three proclamations made to come in, is by common law, which the Court agreed: though Branch against Lee, 10 Jac. for forfeiture present by the homage, the lord may distrain or seize, but not make proclamation; but by Twisden, He cannot distrain or seize on forfeiture, but by custom. 3. The proclamation was, that J. S. come in and be admitted to the lands discended unto him; which, by Windham, The certainty of the lands being before declared, is sufficient, unless the custom be contrary, and not like a demand of rent, which being generally of so much as is arrear, is ill, which the Court agreed; the custom of the court being to demand it generally, and not to specifie the lands. 4. As Havergills case, the Court agreed, that upon entry of feoffor (for rent reserved, and entry till satisfaction) he may upon such interest quousque maintain ejectment, and so the lord upon seisure of a copyhold, till the heir come to be admitted. 5. Allen for the defendant conceived, that though the lord, without custom, might seize quousque, yet he hath no interest to seize for a forfeiture upon such default on proclamation, without custom or personal notice, which the Court denied: but they agreed, Cocke against Lees case, that one saying he would come if the lord had a court, otherways not, which is no forfeiture; but contrary, the lord on such refusal might seize quousque: and by Windham, Its not like the demand of a fine which groweth due by refusal and contempt, not by default, as here.

Partition. In Custom, Br. 44. Goldsb. 115, pl. 10.

On evidence at Bar in ejectment of certain lands in gavelkind, doubted if only by custom devisable, and may be so disposed by parol, or that they cannot be devisable otherways then as gavelkind, because the custom to devise is not through all Kent, as capite land is not devisable, by Allen for the plaintiff: but by Wild for the defendant, The very issue must admit that the lands are gavelkind; yet Brooke against Lander, 15 Car. 1, B. R. agreed, 1 Cr. 561, that to be devisable is collateral to the gavelkind, and some gavelkind is not devisable; therefore special prescription & proof must be made thereof, but that it's partible, it is incident to the nature of gavelkind; but that father to the bough, &c. or that the wife should have a moiety, these are collateral, and must be pleaded specially. But by Twisden, This custom to devise is incident to gavelkind; and by the attainder of such tenant, or by any Act of Parliament, as 2 & 3 Ed. 6, that disgavels it, this power to devise is taken away, which was direct to be found, especially admitting all lands gavelkind is devisable, whether by 2 & 3 Ed. 6, which disgavels these lands, as to the partibility, making them discendible, as at common law, this incident to devise be destroyed. Post.

100. SIR HENRY HERBERT against PAGET. Siderf. 77, pl. 12.

Action upon the case. Dr. & St. 135, in Baily Br. 42.

In action upon the case for negligent keeping records, whereby judgment against the plaintiff at the suit (begun 1656) of Walker in action for slander, being in the Exchequer, 1659, like to be reversed, a capiatur being entred for a misericordia, and afterward was in the defendants office, being keeper of the records, razed, and made in misericordia, for which per Curiam, an officer, de facto, only is responsible for, as well as de jure, being a misdemeanor: but the clerk of the errors, the Philizers, and clerk of the Nisi Prius, and the prothonotaries, and their clerks, have uncontroulable priviledge to go into the Treasury, and have free sight of any record within six terms, but after pay 6d. for it. 2. An officer without special negligence shewed, is not responsible (as the keeper of the goal) at his peril, especially the attornies having power to alter and mend their own rolls without controll.

[289] 101. VANDEVALDE against LLUELLIN. Friday, May 9.

Assumpsit.

In action upon the case on assumpsit to pay the value of such goods as were of J. S. and his partners, the defendant pleaded that the goods were not J. S. and his partners, and issue thereon, the verdict found the value for the plaintiff. Finch for the defendant, moved for a repleder, which by Twisden cannot well be, but rather a venire facias de novo. Adjornatur. 291, pl. 108.

102. THE KING against DAWSON.

Perjury.

In evidence upon information of perjury, it was observed; that one indicted of perjury, may be a witness in the same point, upon tryal betwixt others, till conviction, as Sir Ed. Powels case. Post.

103. DR. PATRICKE.

Mandamus. It is visitable by the Kings commissioners, 25 H. 8, c. 21. Poult. 556. Where the King is founder he shall visit and not the Ordinary. Lit. c. 96.

Keeling moved for mandamus to admit him, being by a majority of the fellows, chosen Master of Queens Colledge; which the Court denyed, though the statutes of the house appoint no particular visitor, to whom appeal might be made. Windham conceived it a mixt corporation both lay and ecclesiastick, and so to appertain to the jurisdiction of the Ordinary of common right: but by Twisden, This is a meer lay corporation: and per Curiam, The writ for Dr. Willington was granted, only because it had been so once done before, but ought not to have been, had it appeared (as now) to be upon differences in colledges. Twisden cited the case of Lewis and Day. Post, 294, pl. 220.

Peace.

Spilman moved for a supplicavit, as the best way to quiet possession, upon articles exhibited; wherein it appeared that several persons had made a disturbance in the church, and pull'd the minister, reading the divine service, (viz. the common prayer) in the church, and carrying him to the compter; which the Court granted; and further advised to inform against them for a riot; this, by Windham, being little better then the beginning of a new rebellion.

105. SIR CHRISTOPHER GUISE against ADAMS, FENNE, &c. TENANTS OF PUREFOY. Saturday, May 10.

Fish. The visne is of both countries Dyer 267 b. pl. 14. Rast. Entr. 665 b. § 1. 2 Rolls Abr. 258, tit. Piscary. Entre F. 2. 1 Cr. 492, pl. 571. 46 Ed. 3, 28 b. pl. 21. Da. 57 b. contrà.

In evidence to a jury at Bar, in trespass for a several fishing: upon not-guilty pleaded, if the plaintiff derive a title as high as the abbies, he need not shew any patent, or derivation from the Crown, but the constant enjoyment is sufficient, unless one be sued by the Crown; which, Twisden said, he knew to have been ruled in a former case wherein he was counsel. 2. A several piscary usque ad filum aquæ cannot be counted on. But, by Windham, Such evidence might be given of such a piscary by meets and bounds, Kell. 53 b. pl. 11. Trespass Br. 426.

Variance.

A writ of error direct to Sir Orlando Bridgman & socijs, of a record, quod coram vobis quia in recordo & processu ac, etiam in redditione judicij quod coram vobis; whereas all the process, till the judgment, was coram Olivero Saint-John, but the judgment before Sir Orlando; and, by Keeling, it was moved to quash the writ of error, because it ought to have been especially of the record and process before one, and of judgment before another: but, by Stroud for the plaintiff, A record in Curia domini Regis, which was in the time of the keepers, was ruled here good, which the Court, Foster absente, agreed, yet doubted here. Adjornatur. 294, pl. 291.

[291] 107. THE KING against MUCKLOW, &c.

Force.

Newdigate moved to quash an indictment of forcible entry; 1. Because its said at the sessions of the peace at Leicester, in the feast week of St. Michael, which began on Sunday, and they have no power by 2 H. 5, cap. 4, to hold sessions till after that week. But by Windham, Its ill, because the feast continueth eight days from the Utas, and the sessions cannot be held till after the eight days. 2. Its said juratores sworn to enquire for the King, and for the body of the county, which per Curiam is ill. 3. Its said that they entred not, shewing that quilibet eorum entred, which by Twisden is an old exception, and fatal: but these being taken the last day but one of the term, the Court would not grant restitution; but adjornatur. Post 293, pl. 118.

108. LLUELLIN against VANDEVALDE. Ante 289, pl. 101.

Verdict.

The jury found the issue & ulterius an impertinent thing, which, by Twisden, is well enough; and therefore the Court would make no rule for any repleader.

109. PRICE against GIBBONS.

Legacy.

Carpenter prayed a prohibition upon suggestion of a suit in the Prerogative Court, of an administrator of an executor, for legacy left by the first testator, which the

Nusance.

Indictment for nusance in alta antiqua via vehicularum in Cretingham, leading from A. to C. not saying regia; yet the Court would not quash till a certificate that it be removed. Stiles 108, pl. 226.

111. READ against DAWSON. Ante. Monday, May 12.

Perjury.

The Court stayed execution upon verdict had against R. upon conviction of perjury, on affidavit by several credible persons, that the plaintiff had sworn truth, until trial had against D. who was after convicted upon that point of convicting R. Post.

[292] 112. THE KING against ROBERTS.

Poor.

One was indicted for not performing an order of sessions, which licenced J. S. to build a cottage, which being removed out of Dorcetshire hither by certiorari, was quasht per Curiam, no time being when the tenant refused to perform it, nor before what justices.

113. HODGES against HODGES. Ante. Error, Br. 90.

Bail. Hub. 264, pl. 341, 342. 1 Cr. 594.

Want of pledges in C. B. by Windham, as this case is, cannot be assigned for error, because upon diminution alledged, the prothonotaries certified that there was no original; and also by him pledges might be put in Chancery in writs si fecerit te fecurum, and they are to be indorsed, and so cannot appear to the Court without the original certified; and by the statute, want of original being helpt, want of pledges is so. Twisden, Hussey against Moore, 2 Cr. 413, is contrary; and so he held 18 Ed. 4, 9. 4 Inst. cap. Justices of Peace, pledges may be found any time, in the Court out of which the writ issueth, 1 Ed. 3, 5, b. pl. 23, hanging the writ: and so the plaintiff must take order, that though there be no original, yet they must be filed. Post. Adjornatur.

114. THE KING against FINCH.

Poor.

Procedendo awarded upon indictment, removed hither by certiorari, and no prosecution made; the indictment being for not executing the office of overseer of the poor.

115. THE KING against GROVE.

Trades.

Procter moved to quash an indictment for using the trade of a mercer, against the statute of 5 Eliz. being an art used at that time without express averment, which, per Curiam, is ill; so of a draper and haberdasher, not saying contrà pacem; therefore both quasht, and the clerk of the peace fined.

[293] 116. ORTON against FULLER.

Slander.

Orton saith that I am a perjur'd rogue, but he is perjur'd as well as I; for he and J. S. swore one for another; which, by Wild Recorder, is ill, without averment that Fuller was perjur'd, which the Court agreed; being moved in arrest of judgment, stay'd quousque. Post.

117. WARNER against ELLISON.

Slander.

The words of a libel need not be actionable; but if they tend to publick scandal, its sufficient, per Curiam, as by Foster, to send a challenge if the thing be a lye; by Windham, its sufficient if the party be wronged, also publicavit, declaravit, & notam fecit; though it were not said that he knew the matter of it, yet its actionable. Judgment for the plaintiff after verdict.

118. THE KING against MUCKLOW. Ante 291, pl. 187.

Peace.

Upon 2 H. 5, 4, the sessions held within the week is good, being not made void by the statute. And when its said many did an action in the affirmative, it needed not be said & quilibet eorum; but contrà when its said in the negative, that many did not do such an act, as non comparuit, there he must say nec aliquis eorum, which the Court agreed. And thus is the common course in indictment that they entred, and not to say & quilibet eorum. As to the second exception of the enquest taken for the King, & pro corpore comitatus, which in forcible entry is ill, all the presidents being pro Rege, pro corpore comitatus. Adjornatur.

119. BILL against NEAL. Ante.

Slander.

The words relate ad proximum antecedens, and here by saying you would be a justice of peace, like the plaintiff, a fool, an ass, and a coxcomb, and a buffle-headed justice, the words are actionable, 14 R. 2, 11, the justice losing his wages thereby, or being in peril thereof. The case of Brisco, 2 Cr. is not like this, which reflects on him in his very capacity to be a justice. Post. Adjornatur.

[294] 120. DR. PATRIKE AND DR. SPARROWS CASE. Ante 289, pl. 103.

Mandamus.

Keeling moved for mandamus to Queens Colledge in Cambridge, which, by Windham, ought not to be granted, whilst cause may be shewed to the contrary. And though it doth not appear to the Court what corporation it is, yet they ought to be tender in these cases: but the Court granted the mandamus, because upon the aliàs or pluries they may shew cause against it. Post.

121. EYRE against EYRE. Ante 290, pl. 106.

Error.

The writ of error is only a commission, and so being of record and process, and judgment before J. B. whereas only the judgment was before O. B. therefore Williams prayed it might be quasht, being not special, which ought to be as well now, as upon the death of any Chief Justice, as all the presidents are. But by Wild for the defendant, it hath been ruled in the Exchequer Chamber good enough, and so is the opinion of the C. B. that its well removed; therefore this Court would not decide it (though they conceived it ill) till conference with the Justices of the C. B.

122. DAVIES against THE CORPORATION OF DROITWICH.

Verdict.

Upon verdict against all evidence, the Court will tax costs, and will not suspend it till the new trial.

123. THE KING against SAGRENE.

Indictment.

Indictment for taking away of two obligations at B. not saying in comitatu prædict. (the county being in the margent). 2. No time of the taking or carrying away of them, for which reasons Twisden conceived it ill: but Windham and the Court held it well enough. And by Twisden in forcible entry, to say he entred, and held him out, not saying how long, or when it was held, ill. Adjornatur.

Imprisonment.

125. THE KING against PEACHIE.

Religion.

He was indicted for not using the Book of Common Prayer, which the Court would not quash, till the parties pleaded to it; though it did not appear in the indictment, that he was such a person as ought to read it.

126. POWERS against POWERS. In Error, Br. 55.

Bayl.

Error of action upon trespass of assault without bail, it was mov'd to be good, & not to be within the stat. 13 Car. 2, c. 2, that orders bail in trespass: but, per Curiam, this is a trespass, and therefore within the Act, 21 Jac. doth name trespass generally, but ejectment is not within the Act.

Peace. Hitch. 161 b. pl. 447.

Indictment for riot and assault, laid in ecclesia parochialis de H. which is sufficient place of venue, prædict. being added. 2. It was not said, that they riotusly assembled, but only, quod vi & armis, did commit a riot; which, per Curiam, is good enough.

129.

Error. Error Br. 6.

Upon a scire facias on error brought, the defendant ought to non pros. the plaintiff, and not to bring a scire facias quare executionem non, which is in effect only to cause the errors to be assigned. Adjornatur.

[296] 130. NORPIL against MAY.

Days.

In action upon the case for disturbing one in the office of water-baily, the Court refuse to hear motion in arrest of judgment; or for setting aside judgment; or to grant prohibitions; or to make reports; or any difficult matters of law on the last day of the term.

131.

Bail.

Nota, By the course of the Court, when the bail is to be changed, the principal must be committed, (whereby the first bail is discharged), and then a new bail may be filed; but by consent the bail, may be sworn as a witness in the same cause.

132.

Variance.

Scire facias teste 23 Jan. Hill. 13 Car. 2. The second is teste 31 Jan. 13 Car. 2, which, the King changing his reign in Hillary term, is ill, by Allen, who, for that cause, prayed judgment might be staid. But this being moved after nul tiel record pleaded, by Windham, is well enough; which the Court agreed. 2. Upon bringing in the record, upon notice of it, judgment must be entred; but notice is not absolutely necessary.

133.

Bail. It is said against law in Ecclesiastical Court to tyth H. pro salute animæ generally without shewing the cause. Fulb. Paratit. 15.

Nota, The attornies do usually avoid the late Act made against general writs of trespass taken out of B. R. and not shewing special causes of action, whereby they ought not to have special bail, unless for above 40l. but by feigning on the latitat, that the bail answer to the trespass counted on; and also to a bill of 100l. (feigned) that shall be brought against them, by color whereof they take what bail they will:

1. THE KING against DAWSON. Ante.

Pardon.

The Kings Attorney moved to restore one Read, formerly convicted at the suit of Dawson, by reason that conviction was disproved in a trial against Dawson, which Foster agreed. But by Twisden, The conviction remains, and till pardon, the Court cannot restore him to his practice, as attorney in the Court, though this be but a grace of the Court, and not taken away by the conviction, but is a consequent of it. But per Curiam, Till pardon, he cannot be admitted as a witness. Windham agreed with Twisden. Advisatur that Read procure pardon.

Mandamus.

Keeling moved for an aliàs mandamus to restore; but the writ being retornable but this day, the Court refused it till default made.

3. WINDIBANK against BEAR. Ante.

Assize.

The tenant excepted to the writ, because it was octabas for octavas &, and wanting & only. And also it was retornable at Westm. coram Rege, which ought to be ubicunque, &c. And this after a special imparlance, the first exception was waived; but Twisden held the last invalid, according as Stiles . But all the presidents are contrary ubicunque, and this is an assize which will not lye out of the county. Windham doubted whether now the Court shall not intend it well enough, being it sits at Westminster. Post, 303, pl. 13. Adjornatur.

4. LORD DUNBARRE against THE COMMISSIONERS OF SEWERS. Siderf. 78, pl. 2.

Sewers.

Witherington excepted to a retorn by commissioners of sewers; 1. The jury presented, that there is a gettee repairable by the King or the lord of the mannor of Preston, distinct from that which the plaintiff ought to repair at the lower end of the pasture, not saying where this is, or of what quantity it is; all this is in English, which, per Curiam, is all well enough, a gettee being certain, and the form usual. 2. The presentors are impannel'd to see and present only infrà medium ballivæ de H. and it doth not appear that this place is within the bailywick; but the Court would not willingly quash this till the place be repaired, especially here the commissioners being bound to no legal forms in strictness; but something must appear whereby they have no jurisdiction which is issuable. Ante. Adjornatur.

[299] 5. HODGES against HODGES. Ante. In Error, Br. 90.

Bail.

After verdict in ejectione firmæ, and judgment given, Powis moved that where there is original, and no pledges, it's error, 2 Cr. 414, but where there is no original, M. 16 Car. 1, Cr. 594, Tregose against ——— and so it cannot appear whether there are any pledges or not, it is none, but aided by the statute. Twisden denied the ground, because pledges may be retorn'd in Chancery, or without the original. But by Powis for the defendant, in C. B. the pledges must be indorsed on the original, though they may be filed any time after the retorn thereof, which Windham agreed; and that this is aided by the stat. lest all the judgments in C. B. be overthrown. And whether pledges be found in Chancery, or before the sheriff in the county, it must appear by the original error, Young against Young, 4 Car. because an infant found no pledges, coming of age before the trial; and this judgment was affirmed, because the plaintiff in the writ of error had not removed the original, whereby it might appear that there were pledges. Twisden, This is expresly against Moore and Hussyes case, 2 Cr. 414. And the writ summoneas si A. fecerit, &c. warrants not this indorsment: and though the statute aids want of original, yet not this benefit and security of the Kings amerciaments, being collateral to the writ it self. But by Twisden in 2 Cr. 414, the original was certified, and the plaintiff not having alledged diminution in the case of Young, whereby the original might be certified, judgment was against him. Foster remembred well the case of Moore and Hussey, and this is far different from it, and will be of greater inconvenience. But by the clerks, no diminution is here prayed by the plaintiff in the writ of error, and so this regularly cannot be assigned: but the defendants having prayed it, the Court conceived it well enough by whatever means the record cometh in; but here diminution is only alledged in the venire facias and habeas corpus, and so the original is not certified: wherefore, per Curiam, judgment affirmed, nisi. Post.

[300] 6. THE KING against POPE. Saturday, May 31.

Peace.

Hoskins moved to quash an indictment for not obeying an order of sessions in Dorset; 1. Because it doth not appear that he doth inhabit in the county. 2. The defendant was bound to two overseers, and one dying, and the other becoming indigent, the parish warned him not to pay it to the other, and yet he did it, being bound; and the justices have no power to call Pope, but only the overseers, to accompt. 3. They ordered that another bond should be assigned to Pope in lieu of his own made to the overseers; but it doth appear that the payment was by collusion, and that the money is yet in the hands of Pope, and therefore the indictment was to stand, unless the defendant consent to stand to the award of the Judges of Assize.

7. HUNT against LOCKE.

Verdict.

To set aside a verdict given for the plaintiff, it was sworn that the defendants servant had talked with a juror, and that before that, that the jurors were most of opinion for the plaintiff: and, by Twisden, This is sufficient to set aside the verdict: but if the verdict had been for the plaintiff, such offence had been only fineable, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

8. THE KING against TRINITY-HOUSE. Ante.

Franchise.

Howel pro Rege, exception 1. That it is said that they do fodere, extrahere, &c. taking and carrying away, and the plea is only to the digging and taking away; and saith nothing of the application thereof, which cannot be but by asportation and extraction, and hereby that is disclaimed. 2. It is said, as to the taking infrà Pontem Lond. and the high-sea, he justifies, which is impossible; but ought to be, as afterwards is said, quod inter Pontem L. and the high-sea; and here he hath applyed the taking to infrà, whereas the charge is for taking it à ponte ad mare. But, by Windham, inter & infrà are all one: but, by Howell, infrà must be either of one side or other of the sea, and so must exclude the contrary side of the bridge. 3. Its said, eo warranto, without applying it to any place certain; so that the taking is [301] every where betwixt the bridge and the sea. 4. Its not said, that the master, wardens, and assistants were denizens according to their incorporation, aliens being excluded; as to the matter in law, whether this be an office, or a liberty only, as an office, its not sufficiently pleaded, 2 Cr. 615. That the Kings and Queens have used to grant it, unless the thing it self be said auncient, or created by certain words; contrà of a messuage or mill. 2. Its not said, that this taking of ballast is parcel of the office, but only that such as had the office have used to take, &c. Whereby being in aliquo convenienti loco, the King may be excluded out of his own inheritance, they being judges of the conveniency, Dy. 326. Lands gained out of the sea, or navigable rivers, is the Kings as auncient as his Crown, Dy. 11, 7, which is the reason that Royal fish belong to him; and no custom can fetch lands farther then the low-water mark, being against reason. And granting power to dig in my own land, cannot exclude my self, Stanf. Prerog. cap. 15. Bract. l. 1, cap. Quæ res dari possunt, this being auncient inheritance, nullum tempus occurit Regi: but its otherways in new purchased lands, L. 50 Ed. 4, 121, the King shall not be bound by any custom, that goeth to the person, or the goods, 35 H. 6, 25, as of London, that pawned goods may be deteined against any owner, 8 Ed. 4, 18. Allen for the defendant, As to the first, the digging and ballasting is all the defendant claims, for he hath no power to take it, and carry it whither he will, but must use it for ballast. 2. Infra pontem must be intended betwixt, and not below the sea; and that H. is infrà quatuor maria. 3. That the corporation is made capable of purchasing, by being enabled to sue, Hub. 211. Grants

F. 130. 4. There is a place of the grant of the letters patents, but the want of place in the plea is not so fatal, as the want of it in the information, which layeth no part of the usurpation to be in London, where the action is brought, and Juxta Lond. is not sufficient; and the plea answers to the usurpation fully. 5. The quo warranto it self doth suppose, the master, wardens, and assistants were subjects, especially no question being here upon the charter. 6. The charter is pleaded as grant and confirmation; which being hic in Curia prolate is well enough, and needed not plead it only one way, especially where the conveyance cannot operate several ways, as by feoffment or bargain and sale. As to the matter in law, he agreed, that in prescription for house to an office, he must say ad officium præd. spectand. but where a thing is claimed, that is of the essence of the thing granted, [302] its needless, as in quo warranto for the office of cole-meeter, its sufficient to say the Kings grantee have used to meet coles, &c. So of gaugeor or garbler, which are but imployments, and all alike in the conusance of the Court. That the officers thus to dig ballast, and order it, is evident, in that no such office was ever in being, as to see that ships were well ballasted; and the statute, 27 H. 8, 8, cyted to the contrary, doth take notice that such officer hath this liberty. But admitting it an office of survey, yet the plea is good; for the digging is not claimed as parcel of the office, but by the grant of lastage and ballastage, which is the very thing proper to ballast ships, which as Spilman, Glos. verbo Lastage, who cites 22 R. 2, 8, the Statute of Calice, the grant is by whatsoever name or kinds the lastage was then used, known, reputed, or exercised; and the usage is declaratory, that such as had grant used to dig, and so is not in nature of incident to office, or grounded on any prescription. Twisden was not satisfied with the exception of pleading it with several words: but Windham was satisfied with Allens difference: so Foster; This cannot enure any other way then as a grant, there being no precedent grant made. Twisden, To plead a former patent, and after say dedit & confirmavit, it can enure but as a confirmation; and yet it is naught, being against the King. 2. The visne ought to be alledged in the plea, to entitle the defendant against the King, who else shall have judgment, whither he hath title or no: and by Foster; Ballastage is not so properly the gravel, because it may be of other materials, as cole-ships are often ballasted with coles; and this is not well pleaded as incident or appurtenant, 4 H. 6, 13, because neither are relied on. Adjornatur.

Because he had forged an attachment of priviledge as an attorny (and was none) against 100 persons, and had arrested one or two of them, and made them compound: the Court committed him to the marshal, and ordered an indictment of barretry, and another of forgery, to be exhibited against him.

But by Allen, The bill being only for discovery prefer'd against the son, whether it were made by him, or by whom, and so the interrogatories differing from the charge, makes no fault in the indictment, especially after the defendant is found not guilty. Assize. Ravishment of ward retorned coram justic. nostris, without saying where, is good, 3 Ed. 3, 2 b. pl. 4. 2 Brant. 23 b. pl. 24.

Jones for the plaintiff, As to the retorn coram Rege apud Westm. the assize being in the same county, is according to the register; and where any writ is retornable at a day certain, and not on the common retorn, it is retornable always at a place certain; and it had been a good exception had it been otherways, which Twisden agreed: and 2 octabus or octavas is alike, and all the records are octabus; the Court conceived both well enough; and audit. for ad audiend. is well enough, per Curiam, some writs being ad audiend. F. N. B. 178 b. some audituri only, respond. ouster awarded per Curiam. And Twisden cited a case brought here by error in [304] venire facias, per quos rei veritas melius scire potest, which was ruled error; sciri being by custom made allowable, though no Latin word, and notwithstanding Calvins case, or that this lay in Middlesex, which Glyn urged fortitèr to be different from all other places, because the Courts are constantly there, and the C. B. also; but when the Kings Bench is removed it may be otherways. And by Windham, This action is not brought before us as justices in B. R. but as having the power of justices in eyre, F. N. B. 71, 72. Coram nobis in the register intends only justices in eyre, and only ubicunque distinguisheth this Court from it: but presidents being doubted, adjornatur. Fairfax against Fairfax was returned coram nobis in Superiori Banco apud Westm.

14. THE KING against SIR HENRY VANE AND LAMBERT.

Treason. Siderf. 84, pl. 13.

Vane was indicted, that intending to bring the King to death, he had compassed the same by endeavouring to change the Government; and to fulfil such intent, 11 Car. 2, had assembled (30 May, 1659), with others to consult of, and had usurped the Government; as also by regulating the forces of the nation then raised against the King; and that (20 Dec. an. prædict.) had been in the head of 1000 persons armed. The prisoner desired to hear the indictment read in Latin, which the Court refused, 36 Ed. 3, being that the records must be entred in Latin, but discussed in English; and the indictment was read twice in English, which was conceived more then usual. 2. He excepted, that the indictment doth not pursue 25 Ed. 3, 2, no particular acts of levying war having been charged certainly, by reason it wants place, which was mistaken. Post.

2. Lambert was indicted for levying war at the same time; he pleaded, that the Commons had excepted him only as to pain, not extending to life, which the Lords refused, and for expedient, the proclamation was made for persons to come in, which the Lords now have comprised him in, which was a full consent of the two Houses to save his life: and pursuant to this, the letter by the King to the Commons, to whom he left it to make provision; and thus the consent of the three estates concurred in his pardon, nothing that is essential to a law, but is in this particular. Sir Jeffery Palmer, Kings Attorny, conceived this is a petition of the two Houses to the King, and his grant of their desires: but this being not under seal, cannot be pleaded, but is an inducement to the Kings pardon; which the Court agreed. Post.

Habeas corpus.

He was committed for matters of high treason, 23 March 1660, which being long, though the Kings Counsel had no notice till the delivery of the habeas corpus, the Court conceived it ought to be filed, though delivered but one Court day before; though they conceived the three days by 17 Car. 1, to be exclusive of the day of delivery of it, and ordered the retorn to be filed to morrow, and he bailed, unless cause be shewed to the contrary. Post, 305, pl. 17.

16. DEVOE against DR. CORIDON. Tuesday, June 3. In Detinue, Br. 2.

Trover.

In trover for jewels, it was said by Twisden, there is no plea in trover, but a release or not guilty, every special plea in justification being but tantamount: but the defendant being in the Kings service command, after the declaration delivered, the Court gave an imparlance nisi, but upon motion the next day of the Kings solicitor, ordered the trial.

17. THE KING against CROFTON. Ante 305, pl. 15.

Bail. 1 Cr. 219, pl. 10. 1 Leonard 70, pl. 94.

Sir Jeoffry Palmer conceived him not bailable, but (by the solicitor) only at discretion of the Court, not ex debito justiciæ, and so the filing of the writ would be to no purpose: and by Wild, the Kings Serjeant, the particular treason is not necessary to be specified. And by Keeling, the Kings Serjeant, the whole House of Commons, 3 Car. conceived this general retorn good, and the King needed not discover the particulars, which may be inconvenient, and he offered to indict him this term. Newdigate for the prisoner, conceived the Court not possest of the cause till filed, and both are the Kings prisons, and no inconvenience in either; and the Court cannot debate the cause till filed; Windham agreed with Newdigate, that whatever the retorn be, if it appear to the Court that there is a default of prosecution, there is no cause but the retorn ought to be filed, else the party may lye for ever in prison, and this delay was the reason of the habeas corpus. The attorney cited Russels case, where three months was conceived a very reasonable time, and in dangerous times, as now, imprisonment may be for punishment [306] for prevention as well as for custody. Twisden agreed with Windham, that this Court cannot remand him till after the writ filed, after the committitur is entred the remittitur, or else that traditur in ballium: and by Windham, had the retorn been, that he had endeavoured to kill the King, the foulest treason, yet that is no argument against the filing it: and by Twisden, this Court cannot take notice of the cause till it be filed; Foster ad idem; and being filed, it was read again, and Newdigate prayed, in respect of the delay, that he may be bailed, which the Court refused, the Kings Counsel assenting, that they would indict him this term; though Cornwallis case was only by length of time, that he was bail'd, and by consent of the Kings Counsel, entred a rule quod remittitur, and brought hither the last day of the term, and if no indictment be then found, to be baild, and so he was.

Against 19 Jac. Min against Maidwell, an assize retorned coram nobis ubicunque; on the contrary was cited the pleading of it in Rast. Entr. 60, is an assize retorned coram nobis apud Westm. And by Allen, The ubicunque relates only to the retorn, and not to the stile of the Court. Stroud for the defendant, cited also Yelvert. 60, Brigs against Thomson and had not the C. B. been sitting at the same time, here a retorn apud. Westm. had been good enough. Windham, upon perusal of all the presidents of eyre, never read of any retorn coram Rege in itin. but before the justices in eyre by particular name, 4 Inst. And the register denyeth not, but an assize may be here, but not when the C. B. is in the same county: but F. N. B. is contrary, and so is the constant practice. And this is beyond the authority of Calvins case, which was but an amicable suit, Artic. Super Chart. proves that assizes were aunciently tryable here. 2. Octabas he conceived by corruption from octavæ, the eight days after the Utas, being the feast; but by custom and usage its well enough either way, stat. de die in Banco: 3. Audit is better Latin, and more frequent: Twisden, ad idem in omnibus, The distinguishing caracter of the Court is coram nobis only, Brief. F. 105. Pl. Com. 73. Lindly moved for judgment, the words being affirmative of the plaintiff, as proximum antecedens; and especially, because its thereby insinuated, that the plaintiff was unfit for a justice, which is an office of trust, credit, and profit, 1 Cr. 270, Cawdry against Higley: the Court conceived (the opinion of the Court to be against the book) 17 Car. 1, Sanderson against Rud, that A. was an ignorant man, and not fit for the place, (viz. steward of Court;) had these words been spoken of a lawyer, or physitian, they had been actionable, per Curiam, but not so here, H. 22 Car. Rot. 725, Hammon against Kingsby, He was a debauch't man, and not fit to be a justice of peace; which had been actionable, had the words been in the present tense; but the Court, by Twisden, delivered no opinion as to that; and though the statute requireth discretion, yet to call one indiscreet justice, is not actionable. Allen for the defendant, Here is no crime charged or applied to the condition of the person, 2 Cr. 90. As the words relate to the plaintiff, the Court were of opinion with him; but not so now, upon consideration of the words themselves, the case of Holly and Bristow is stronger then this, that he was a rascally villain, &c. and though justices have wages, its no profitable office to him; and this is no crime in him, but he is such as God hath made him. Twisden ad idem: Mallet contrà; Foster conceived the words not actionable, but would have the defendant bound to good behaviour, which the Court agreed, and ordered it accordingly. Error without bail is a supersedeas in ejectment, as hath been ruled in C. B. notwithstanding the new Act, 13 Car. 3, cap. 2, being not within the general word trespass, which this Court agreed. 2. Though execution be sued forth, if error be brought before it be executed, it is a supersedeas, by Twisden, though the sheriff is in no contempt, if he have no notice; which Maynard, for the defendant, denyed: but, by Windham, So long as the money is in the Courts power, they have of late time restored the money; but contrà if the money were delivered to the party himself by the Court against Twisden.

Com. 52. Stiles 335, pl. 712, in action upon the case counting, H. being produced as a witness, the defendant said that he had taken a false oath, which being in a Court of Justice, had not been actionable; but the jury having found it falsò & malitiosè, [309] it was ruled actionable; and by Allen, None could ever make his own title, if he may not be excused for such words; but this being malitiosè, cometh not under that excuse; and had this not been proved malitious, the Judge ought to direct the evidence for the defendant, for malitious doth imply science. 2. Exception was want of place of writing the letter, which per Curiam, being not the ground of the action, is not material; for whosoever had wrote the letter (it's not traversable) & the delivery and publication is the scandal: but Twisden doubted, because forgery and publication must shew place of both. Windham doubted of the want of averment that the defendant knew he had no title, is not fully supplyed by the falsò & malitiosè. Foster also conceived this was done well, there being no other remedy then to be had upon such pre-contracts, and no publication, and the man the fittingest person to be applyed to. Twisden conceived the words actionable for the ill consequence, and it being private, must be left to God, and not to be divulged unless it be proveable; and scienter is needless in this case, being private betwixt them two; otherways in title made to lands, &c. Allen, It hath commonly been ruled in action upon the case for selling and warranting a horse that was none of his, to say that knowing the horse to be anothers, or quod fraudulenter vendidit, both which ways the Court agreed sufficient, and that the fraudulenter supplyeth the scienter: but the best way is to say, that knowing it was none of his. Incumbent. Hub. 165. Yelvert. 7. 3 Cr. 642, pl. 42, contrà.

Finch solicitor for the plaintiff, conceived no ground to stay judgment on the Act for Ministers, 12 Car. 2. Or if it should be urged it were no Act, yet the possession of the plaintiff is a good title against the defendant, and the Act, as found, doth only confirm incumbents of lawful patrons, not against such as were incumbents by a prior or better title; and that the plaintiff is such an incumbent, though presented by recusant, is evident, though he agreed the presentation void: so Hub. 302, where the Ordinary will present as pleno jure, whereas he hath only collation, this may by the King be made void, or not, but as to all other persons then the patron, he is a lawful incumbent, and his charge by confirmation of patron and Ordinary, would have bound the successor; and this is out of the great piety, justice, and moderation to the Church, and indulgence of induction to serve a cure; and as presentations void by law, so of void by statute, and good against all other persons: the strongest case of symony makes a plenarty against all persons, but the King, and he may sue for tythes notwithstanding Hub. 168, which is no law, because he is not a symoniack till conviction, P. 16 Jac. Segar against Cole, adjudged in B. R. that symony was not pleadable to suit in the Spiritual Court for tythes, Hut. Heylins case accordant by suggestion before conviction. 2. The stat. 3 Jac. is nugatory in that clause that disable recusants to present, being made excommunicate before ; nor are the universities entitled as full patrons, but to supply the defects of the incumbent, and so it tends not to make the incumbency wholly void, 10 Co. Chancellor of Oxons case is in this point, and its at the rightful patrons election to make it void, or not. 3. The clause of disabling in 3 Jac. is not found 3 Jac. 4, is a general law that giveth the penalty to the King ; but cap. 5 is particular, and must be all found, as in The Chancellor of Oxons case. And he that ought to be named in a quare impedit, is such a rightful incumbent as cannot now be removed.

2. Allen for the defendant, that the plaintiff hath no title, the institution and induction, as well as the presentation, being void by 3 Jac. cap. 5, it being an act of disability in the presentor, whereby the foundation of the Ordinary is destroyed ; and the meaning was not only to make the pre-[312]-sentation alone, but all building thereon void. 3. The statute giveth the nomination, presentation, and collation to the universities, which would be fruitless if the incumbent should be yet full till removal : and the statute was meant, as well to make the incumbent, as well as the patron or donor incapable. Huberds single opinion in Gawdies case is against all reason, that this induction should amount to a collation, because this he doth as Ordinary ; the other of institution is but a ministerial act, founded on the presentation, as to the interest and institution made upon presentation of one that had no title, should not hinder the Ordinaries collation ; where the Ordinary hath a right of collation it maketh plenerty, but where he doth it only as having curam animarum, it giveth no right, but a provisionary possession, whereby he may have right to tythes or profits, but hath no freehold or interest in law whereby to maintain ejectment, or to have quare impedit brought against him, Stephens against Potter, and that such an incumbent is capable of a confirmation, 11 H. 4, 9 is mistaken by Hub. that being upon a collation made pleno jure, in which case induction is made by another. 2. The Act for Confirmation of Ministers is private, and found by the jury to be an Act of Parliament, and the Court are not bound to take notice of it ex officio ; and this Act doth give a title in law to the defendant, and the naming of the incumbent is prudence, as of any that claims title ; but he that hath right is not thereby concluded or put to a quare imped. And supposing the plaintiff had a good title, and the defendant none, yet that clause of the Act that inables incumbents in possession to hold till 20 Dec. 12 Car. 2, takes away the plaintiffs title, for the lease is made 25 Apr. and the action is brought in Michaelmas term, which is before the right accrued. Finch said this Act doth not take away the jurisdiction of this Court. Windham conceived that the naming him giveth him no right, but may be of any disturber whatever ; and the lease and ejectment being made 23 April, and the action not brought till Michaelmas term upon foundation before the Act 25 April, is ill only for damages, because the plaintiff had a good title before. And by Twisden, Since 25 Dec. the title is made, as at first, good, which the Court agreed ; and also that a parishioner may plead symony in bar of debt for tythes, 1 Inst. 344. The reason why collation puts not out of possession is, because its only a provisionable care commenda semestris, and doth not enable to sue for tythes. Adjornatur.

In trespass, the defendant justifies in three acres for common. The plaintiff replyes that two of them for enlargement of curtelage be inclosed; which, by Jones, must be for husbandry or necessity, not for all purposes; also it ought to be said, that the enlargement was for habitation. 2. This priviledge remains only so long as the land remains common, not when its reduced to its ancient nature of pasture. Allen for the plaintiff, It's not of necessity by Westm. 2 to say its an ancient house, but if it were, the defendant ought to shew that it was erected de novo; the want of the quantity of the curtelage to his habitation, to which he thus took in two acres, is not material by Allen: but this Twisden doubted, unless the demurrer confess it was necessary. And, by Windham, The house ought to be said ancient, else the necessity is of his own making, and all circumstances ought here to be expressed in the replication. Foster and Mallet conceived it ought to be ancient, and for habitation also, and not only for pleasure or convenience, which the rest agreed, as a hop-ground or park is not within the statute; contrà of a sheep-cote. He was indicted for sitting, with others, to consult the Kings destruction, and to get the Government to themselves, 30 May, 1659. The Attorny General, Palmer, began with evidence from the treaty at the Isle of Wight, 1648, after with the Acts made against kingly Government, and management of votes of the Councel of State for the Navy, until 1653. And after in 1659, sitting in the Committee of State, and managing the land forces, issuing warrants for them: and in the Committee of the Councel for Government, he contrived the alteration of Government, and raised the opinion that the people had made trustees, and that these were unalterable; all which, with procuring arms for his own regiment, amounting to a levying war actually. Sir Henry urged, that no person in being then claimed the kingly Government, but all things were done in the name of the common wealth, and so matter of law might thereon arise; which the Court conceived would not, being not material, notwithstanding. 3 Inst. 7 by Sir H. is meant of a King in possession; but, by Maynard, the Kings Serjant, which Windham agreed, there must be a King regnant, there being no interregnum in law: but by Sir H. they may be said Kings that have the authority. Finch conceived this the old priest, Watsons doctrine, who thought to oppose King James, being not actually in possession, was no treason; and this was of their own doing, who only usurped the name of a Parliament: and had it been so, yet that's no sanctuary [316] for treason, but this Court may trye them; which the Court agreed. 2. Sir H. urged also, that the Parliament in being 13 Aug. 1642 was not dissolved by the Kings death; the Act 13 Car. 2, cap. 1, § 3, of Preservation of the King's Person, mentioning only that its thereby dissolved, and the equality of the three estates in soveranity is that which makes it political, as Fortescue: and for this end, Deut. 17, Kings were constituted. Finch Solicitor, The King cannot give away that prerogative of calling and dissolving Parliaments, 4 Car. Thursbay against ——— and they are undoubtedly determined by his death: as commission of sewers, appointed by 13 Eliz. 9, not to end in 10 years: he doubted not, but Parliaments may commit treason, if an unjust thing of them may be presumed contrary to their allegiance and customs of Parliament: the contrary doctrine followeth from a venomous principle of coordination, which is against the oath of allegiance; for if men in Parliament will speak desperate things, its not to be priviledged by Parliament: and the Kings being out of possession, is but an aggravation of the treason. Windham, I see no colour, why by being continued longer then usual, they should have more power then another Parliament, which is but the Kings Counsel: and though its not to be dissolved, but by another Act, yet by the Kings death it is determined in fact, as marriage enacted not to be divorced till another Act, yet it is done by death; and betwixt King and Parliament is a like conjunction. And had an army in the life of King Charles the First, forced and packt any of the Parliament, it had been a suspension of a Parliament till it might resort again to its freedom, as is the law of all nations. Twisden, ad idem, It had been without question, had not the Act been made that it should not be dissolved; which word is not extendable to a discontinuance; so it saith, no act done or to be done shall dissolve it, his death is no such act: Mallet & Foster ad idem, It was only to treat nobiscum, which is meant in the Kings political and personal capacity, and so determined by his death, whereby those capacities were sever'd, which to do, or suppose, by any other, is the greatest treason, the law making no such distinction; but eo instante, that one dyeth, the other is King. Either House may commit treason, though the Parliament, viz. King, Lords, and Commons cannot. Twisden rebuked the abominable distinction of the Kings capacity; and, per Curiam, The endeavouring to keep the King out, though he be not in possession, is treason; and counsel, by Twisden, is not to be allowed in things that tend to subvert fundamentals, as Stories case. Dy. Post.

[317] 38. WILLIOT against DENNIS. Saturday, June 7.

Trover.

In trover for several goods, inter alia pro 400 virgat. texti de serico & pilis confecti, which, by Jones, is uncertain, no species being shewed of it by any Anglicè stuffs; but, by Twisden, Hill. 1659, trover for hydes held good enough, Pool and Cotley, so of stockings; and so he conceived here. Windham ad idem; Possibly there is no proper English word for it, and this description of the matter, being a new stuff, is sufficient; which Foster and Mallet agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff.

39. GAYTON against RAYDON.

Jurisdiction.

The Chauncellor of Oxon demand conusance of the action, being debt betwixt the beadles of the university, by special warrant to attornies, and brought into Court by rule, which being put in form of plea, the Court granted, nisi.

40. ARMIDEL EXECUTOR OF ——— against TREVILL. Ante.

Replevin.

Allen for the plaintiff, that not guilty of the taking is no proper plea in replevin, the caption and deteyner are several, and the one may be lawful the other not; therefore to say not guilty de captione within six years, is most improper: but, by Baldwin, This is only informal, but doth amount no non cepit, which is the proper plea in replevin: non culp. in debt on 2 Ed. 6 may be naught on demurrer, which the Court agreed; but is good after verdict. Windham agreed the plea good, and amounted to non cepit, so Foster and Twisden: but, by Bear for the plaintiff, 12 Ed. 4, 5, Replevin F. 21, the deteiner, as well as that caption, is to be answered; and in recaption the injustè is applyed to the detinet, therefore it must be answered; and though non cepit generally be a good plea, yet this special non cepit within six years, is ill, and negative pregnant, which the Court agreed on demurrer. 2. Baldwin for the defendant, Replevin lyeth not by executors of a caption in the life of the testator, 6 H. 7, 8, 9, but they ought to have had trespass on detinue, especially the property being alledged in the testator, Regist. 94. Allen for the plaintiff, that at common law this [318] replevin lyeth, the property continuing to the executor, though they might have had detinue; but this action as trover, or quare impedit, or ravishment of ward, are undoubtedly within the equity of the statute, which the Court agreed, in omnibus replevin, is founded on the present property, not on that at the time of the caption. Judgment for the plaintiff.

41. HUTCHINSON against CLAYTON.

Attorney.

Want of warrant of attorney after verdict, is expresly helpt by 18 Eliz. per Curiam, except Twisden, which doubted it.

42. MARCHANT against SHORT.

Courts. 2 Cr. 567, pl. 3.

One must plead recovery in Inferiour Court especially, and not only quod cum recupasset, as in the Superiour Courts in Westminster. 2. Error cannot be brought in one Inferiour Court on judgment in another, per Curiam, but was held erronious.

43. BORMAN against HAMMON.

Bail. Godbolt, 267, pl. 369.

In scire facias on recognizance of bail in a writ of error to prosecute with effect; the defendant pleads that he did prosecute with effect; whereby the judgment was reversed quod paratus est verific. and doth not conclude prout patet per record. for which cause it was on demurrer ruled ill.

44. TARLING against DEALTON. Ante. In Detinue Br. 2.

Executors.

In trover brought by executor, the defendant pleaded that the testator dyed intestate, and that administration was committed to A. who sold the goods to the defendant: to which the plaintiff demurred, as amounting but to the general issue, and so was the opinion of the Court; and so Twisden, it was here ruled in the case of money said to be delivered as a pledge. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[319] 45. THE KING against LAMBERT. Ante. Munday, June 9.

Treason. 11 H. 7, c. 1.

The evidence against him was taking a commission from the Parliament in 1659, and opposing General Monk and Sir George Booth, (which though not one word had been said of the Kingly interest) was per totam Curiam, held treason: and though the actual war was made in another county, yet the very conspiracy and acceptance of the commission was held treason in Middlesex, as was delivered in evidence to the jury, that after found him guilty.

46. WADE against SHAW. Tuesday, June 10.

Variance. Stiles 183, pl. 419.

Venire facias awarded retornable coram nobis, which should have been coram Rege, was in the case of Friend against Baker, per Curiam, amended after error brought in the Exchequer Chamber; so the quæ quidem being less by miscasting the sum.

47. FOSTER against FOSTER. Ante.

Assurances. Pl. Com. 152.

Windham was for the plaintiff the younger son, and conceived that here is no use raised by demise, grant, bargain and sale, and set over, which indenture was found in hæc verba; and that it was as well for affection as money; and that Margery that sold is yet living: although this cannot rise at common law, yet is it not necessary it should rise as a use, but the intent must guide: and the jury shall not conclude the Court when the indenture is found in hæc verba, which is the ground on which the Court must build. And in this conveyance is no intent to pass it otherways then at common law; and this is the best construction, not to strain the words beyond the literal words; although anciently this raising uses was more favoured; but in consideration of affection, will not raise a use now, Dyer 302. 40 Eliz. Sherfield against Fen; it was agreed against the opinion of Plowden, that no use will rise by grant, gift, conveying or assuring for marriage, affection, &c. 1 Inst. 49 a. and especially here being another consideration mentioned, and the words demise and grant are proper words of common law; and [320] though another consideration may be averred, yet the express is that which guides the jury and Judges to the intent, as Harpers case, and the general words, other good cause, do signifie little; and Pitfields case is unanswerable, no difference being betwixt a demise after my death, and a reservation to me during life: and in all the reports, the words of the conveyance are considered, and this can have no other exposition; dedi & concessi importing a present grant, and so nothing in futuro could have made this good: but the intent was neither to convey it at common law, nor by use in this case, being only articles of agreement, referring to a future conveyance: this intent appears by the frame of the conveyance, and no remedy by distress, &c. will lye for this rent, but only debt on the agreement: also the feme did not intend to have a bare estate for life, but might, as auncestors use to do, be unsubjected to wast, and that she was to have Matthews barn, is not material, it not appearing that it was Williams her husbands, or that she was dowable of it, and she was to have it, which refers to a future act: and the meaning appears in the after feoffment to the younger son, lessor of the plaintiff, which is a good conveyance.

2. Twisden ad idem: that no use riseth to Matthew, though the consideration be well and fully found by the jury, yet it appears to be made especially for 20l. Dy. 140, both stand well enough together. German against Johnson, Rot. 163, B. R. 1649. Demise paying debts and legacies, and his estate was found worth but 5l. and his debts were 40l. whereby it was adjudged a feesimple passed; general words in a deed may be used as best for my advantage, but with due consideration of circumstances, as dedi, concessi, is a confirmation: so grant of a reversion, as Foxes case, for money, may be used as a bargain and sale; and Sharingtons case Dy. 96, Pl. Com. 391. The covenant is not that which raiseth the use, but the intent: and Manxels case, when divers considerations are expressed, it may be used either way, and so is Bedells case: and to judge when these general words may, or may not raise a use, the intent of the parties is considerable, which if to be executed at common law, shall never be raised as a use; so was Teb and Poplewells case against the opinion of Popham and Vinians case, Dy. And here Matthew conveyed nothing but what discended from the father, and it doth not appear that this barn is so: wherefore the words are gene-[321]-ral in a deed, and there is a good consideration, and it stands in equality to be passed at common law, or by use there: if only want of ceremony be to pass it one way, it may pass another; and dedi & concessi in consideration of marriage to my son will raise a use, C. B. Hill. 1655, Rot. 1578, Sanders against Savill, as well as covenant to stand seised, as Sharingtons case: so Wats against Dixe, Stiles . . . Bargain and sale in consideration of affection, and that she had disbursed money, and provided necessaries for him, this passed by bargain and sale though the consideration were past. But it was said by Rolls, that if it had not passed by bargain and sale, it would have passed by covenant to stand seised, being both the same way; so 2 Cr. Osborns case, and if cestuy que use joyns with feoffees in a lease, its the lease of the feoffees; but if the deed cannot operate that way, as is expressed, if all circumstances be executed, it shall not be helpt, so Pitfield against Pierce, Rot. 430. March Rep. 13 Car. 1, by making it as a covenant to stand seised; so Bulkly against Simmons, Hub. and take this (she reserving) as a reservation or condition, or exception, 38 H. 6, 38, it is repugnant to the deed, had it been executed as a feoffment: and so this conveyance being void in the fabrick, shall not be supported; as covenant to stand seised; and in Callards case had the declaration been made by deed it had been void. 3. Mallet ad idem. 4. Foster said the opinion of Walmsey was agreed by all the Judges to be law, that bargain and sale to his son passed nothing, Ward against Lambert 37 Eliz. and agreed with the rest for the plaintiff. Judgment for the plaintiff.

48. STEPHENS against BRETHERIDGE. In Discontinuance Br. 38.

Siderf. 83, pl. 10.

Windham, The case is, Sir Francis Worsly seised in fee in consideration of marriage, covenants to stand seised to himself for life, remainder to Hester, whom he intend to marry, for life, remainder to the heirs-males which he shall beget on her, remainder to Sir Francis son by another venter before in tayle, reversion in fee to the father; then the father, and Hester his wife, levy a fine to the use of a daughter marryed to the defendant, then they dye without issue male: and judgment ought to be for the plaintiff, viz. Sir Francis the son. That this fine is no discontinuance, this estate being a remainder in the heirs males it is not executed, Lit. 578, but a distinct estate from the tenancy for life, severed by the interposition of the femes [322] estate for life, and though the limitation be to the heirs of the same persons, that had estate for life, yet they are not present tenants in tail, by reason such a constitution would overthrow the whole frame of the conveyance, to make the wife joyntenant with the husband, or to drown her estate for life, which cannot be here, no moieties being here executed, they being baron & feme, Lit. 525. Confirmation to baron & feme (she being before tenant for life) makes them not joyntenants for their lives, but she is as before, and he hath an estat for her life; so upon a confirmation to him and his heirs, her estate for life remains distinct; feme tenant for life, the reversion granted to husband and wife and their heirs drowns not her estate for the whole, or for a moiety; and so in the case in question, had the reversion, after their estates for life, been granted to them both, it would have drowned for no part, because it passeth a reversion only in the degree of a reversion, being by one and the same conveyance; and this is not like King and Edwards case; lands given to husband and wife and his heirs, is present estate tail in possession executed in the husband, conjoyn'd with the freehold in the wife, in that case was a feoffment, which is stronger than this case, which is by fine. And Peck against Charnel, 3 Cr. 827, cometh nearer to this case; but there the whole estate was in the husband, but the present freehold was in the right of his wife, therefore their joyning in a fine is no discontinuance; and the principal case of Bredon, 1 Co. 76, was never denied for law; and here is no displacing of any estate neither, but each granteth what they may: but the construction of Bredons case hath been denied in Baker against Huckings, 1 Cr. 405, pl. 480, this conveyance meddles not with the possession, as a feoffment doth. And here is a distinct remainder grantable over, and each passeth what he may, and so the lessor of the plaintiff hath a good title.

(2.) Twisden held that here each use ariseth by this consideration, being a covenant in consideration of a marriage to be had, he and his heirs would stand seised, this must execute presently, and so doth. 2. He conceived that the husband was no present tenant in tail, but in remainder. And 3. This fine is no discontinuance, as its agreed it would be, were they tenants in tail in possession. 4. This is no displacing of the remainder: as to the first point, he held that a use ariseth, being by way of remainder, Lord Pagets case. But 2. The main doubt is, what estate they have, whether a joynt or several estate; but he held it is not executed in her, [323] which he grounded on Littleton 225. For if the fee-simple would not drown it, neither would the estate tail, if this, being by several deeds, remain distinct, it is as reasonable to be so, being by one confirmation, 7 Co. 190. 3. This is no discontinuance most evidently, and was resolved without doubt in Pecks case, and Sir John Davis's case, 14 Eliz. Hub. 277, pl. 358, Clanricards case. 4. That here is no displacing but at the election of him in reversion, 1 Inst. 325, so is the case of fines, Sir John Davis's case, who was tenant for life, remainder to his wife, remainder to his issue male, remainder over, he had issue who was attainted, there it was resolved that these estates were distinct in the husband, and not executed, 7 H. 5, 2, and that the fine of baron & feme was no discontinuance: but the question was, whether the fine were at common law, or by statute, the tenant in tail dying before proclamation passed. 2. Whether the warranty did displace; and held that it did not, but at election: and the consequence of these two last points were, that had the fine been at common law, the remainder had discended to the issue attainted, and so the King seised without office: and here the lessor of the plaintiff sealing a lease, hath put himself out of possession.

(4.) Foster ad idem; but that the case of Littleton cometh not to this case, that being only the acceptance of the husband, which could not hurt the wife: and where an estate is limited to A. then to B. if by the same deed any reversion be limited to A. the estate is executed to some purposes, and he conceived to this, and the use as limited was agreed good to the feme, if she marry before the reversion hap, as was agreed in the serjeants case in his call; he agreed him not out of possession, but at election. Judgment for the plaintiff.

49. THORP against BAYLY. Ante. Wednesday, June 11.

Officer.

In action upon the case for disturbing the office of a water-baily; after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that this office anciently was not grantable, time out of mind, by the King and his predecessors. Sed non allocatur.

[324] 50. LORD GORINGS CASE against LACY.

Covenants.

Littleton for the plaintiff, prayed that action of covenant, after demurrer joyned in 1656, being long since, might be discontinued, which the Court would have granted, had it never been argued, or had a fatal fault been espied before argument, the Court would give such leave: but here the covenant being for a certain sum of money, and utlary pleaded in bar, because debt also lyeth, and demurrer thereon, and now pleaded in a new action in abatement, the Court refused to grant it.

51. BROMWOOD against EASTWICKE. Ante. In error, Br. 55.

Execution. 2 Roll. 492. Yelvert. 6, Tococks case. 3 Cr. 597, pl. 2. 2 Cr. 73, pl. 2.

Sir Richard Greenvils case, by Twisden, is express, that on fieri facias sued out, and then retorn'd, as Baud against Metholds case, Dyer 99, that the goods remain pro defectu empt. by error or supersedeas sued out, after that the vendition is not hindered, but if the error were allowed before, then though the sheriff be unpunishable, yet supersedeas, notwithstanding execution done, shall go, quia improvidè. And, per Curiam, if the goods be sold, the money may be brought into Court to be restored to the party, but if not, the goods may be in specie restored.

52. THE KING against SIR HENRY VANE, ante, AND LAMBERT, ante.

Treason. See the form of the writ directed to the justices thereon, in Register 182. 27 H. 8, 24 b. pl. 3.

Sir Henry cited Westm. 2, cap. 31, that he ought to have a bill of exception seal'd by the Court, and the indictment to that end read in Latin, which the Court denied, as a thing unreasonable, the statute not extending to any indictment, by Glyn the Kings Serjeant, for this is no supersedeas; but that judgment and execution may be had notwithstanding, and so this would be to no purpose, and no goal-delivery would ever be if it should be allowed. But by Sir Henry Vane, the Parliament have declared that execution should be remitted in case judgment passeth; which petition of the Houses, and grant of the King, were read. Windham, Did the prisoner not understand English, it ought to be read in Latin; but no copy of the indictment was ever delivered in Latin or English. Twisden, as the rest, delivered his opinion, that a bill of exception is not within the statute, nor ever heard of; and at common law this bill lyeth in no case. The Chief Justice having given judgment, declared that the pe-[325]-tition of the Houses, was not to be allowed by the King, in case the prisoner were obstinate, as he had been in broaching ill documents and fundamentals. 2. Lambert excepted to the indictment, that he was named without addition, which was mistaken. And so the Court gave judgment, and declared him more capable of the benefit of the Houses petition then Sir Henry Vane, by his fair carriage: and Sir Henry Vane soon after was beheaded on Tower-hill, and Lambert sent to Gersey.

53. ROSE against KITCHINGMAN.

Error.

Upon verdict for the plaintiff in C. B. they use to enter continuance only for the plaintiff, without giving day for the defendant, which was assigned for error. Adjornatur to search presidents. Yelvert. 97, pl. 32.

54. WINDEBANKE against BEAR. Ante. Thursday, June 12.

Officer.

The office was alledged to be ancient, and grantable by the King, time out of mind, to four persons, who waited in turn each three months, which were distinctly known, and had particular drawing fees, besides a part in general to be divided, which was worth above 200l. per annum. The defendant shewed that his months were not the months the plaintiff claimed, and so no disseisin, the times being parcel of the office, as a moveable inheritance, but no office being ever granted for certain months, and these months changed by the Kings special command, non allocatur. 2. It was agreed, that rightful receiver paying fees over to a stranger, maketh no disseisin; but if such rightful officer receive in anothers right, he is a disseisor at his election that hath a right, as this clerk, accounting at his second tourn for his first, which was the plaintiffs, was held in evidence to the recognitors of assize. 3. It was doubted whether patentee in reversion, Dyer 197, may enter without office or scire facias. 4. It was agreed that non-attendance of necessary office is forfeiture; and the King need not summon the party, but a recognizance cannot be avoided but by matter of record. Post.

Error. Br. 55. 2 Cr. 73, pl. 2.

Moor, pl. 569, the fieri facias is the execution and the vend. expon. but proces on it, and if sued out after the roll markt for error, and due notice, all may be undone: but if the attorney nor sheriffs had no notice of the error brought execution done, cannot be undone, per Curiam, contra Twisden: but per Curiam the money may be brought into Court, so long as the cause is not out of their hands. Post 327, pl. 61.

56. THE KING against RANDAL. Friday, June 13.

Pardon.

It was doubted on special verdict, whither tymber cut and sold by vendees of the Kings lands, be pardoned by the Act of Oblivion, or excepted by the words, goods of the King. And Windham conceived that this was profits, and not properly goods. Adjornatur.

57. SHEPHERD against WAKEMAN. Ante.

Slander. 2 Cr. 4, pl. 4.

Twisden conceived the action lyeth, by reason no colour appears for writing it, which should have been in evidence: and sciens is not here necessary, because the thing lyeth properly in the defendants conusance, as in action for forging of deeds its needless, contrà for publishing, that must aver quod sciens that they were forged. And he conceived the want of place of writing the letter, is ayded by 21 Jac. the visne being at one of the places, and no proper issue arising in other place than where the visne is. Windham agreed the words actionable, but not without a scienter alledged in the defendant: so Foster; no falso & malitiose being found, but only that the defendant was guilty of the writing. Post.

Error.

An original filed the same term that judgment be entred, its by course of C. B. held to be sufficient to warrant a count before, which was here assigned for error: but by Twisden, The difference is when the record of Hillary term only is certified, and after the original is certified, as of the same term, that's good: but if the imparlance be certified from Michaelmas to Hillary, that cannot be warranted by original of Hillary term; which the Court agreed: judgment reverst, being the original appeared to be entred after imparlance.

Covenants. 2 Cr. 383, pl. 11. That in action of covenant its good, but such pleading in action of debt for rent, is held void.

61. LUFTON against JOHNSON. Error Br. 55. Ante 326, pl. 55.

Execution.

Windham, If execution be done after notice of error brought, or the roll markt, all all may be undone, especially on cap. ad. sat. if the roll be markt before the writ of execution sued forth, but otherways not, 3 Cr. Slander. To say of a justice, or officer, he took a bribe, is actionable without averment that the officer, or he is justice. Infrâ.

On the case of Hornwood against Loe, it was moved by Maynard as error, in action upon the case for words spoken within the jurisdiction of the Court of Marshalsey, by which she lost her marriage; not saying where this loss was, or where he refused her: he agreed, where the dammage is only consequential, as to call a taylor thief, by which he lost his custom at D. This will lye in Inferiour Court; but not so where the dammages is the gist of the action, the cause of the action beginning with the loss. Wild for the defendant in the writ of error; The action is for words, and the conclusion by which she lost marriage is not traversable, and it appears not where the loss was. Windham, If loss of marriage happen seven years after the words spoken, viz. that she is a pocky over-ridden whore, the cause of action begins now, which Twisden agreed; but contrà of a release made before the loss happened: and the case of the taylor cometh not to this. Maynard conceived this special loss traversable; which Windham denyed. Adjornatur.

68. WHALLY against ANDERSON.

Priviledge.

Sir Jeffery Palmer moved for my Lord New-castle, upon a declaration delivered two terms since, when the Parliament was sitting; and the House of Lords ordered his priviledge, being lessor of the tenant in possession, which this Court will not allow in ejectment, unless the lord be tenant in possession, though the Lords may by special order; but however priviledge be allowed, yet the delivery is good as to this Court, who will not take notice of priviledge unless due to the tenant in possession; because else no right should ever be had against priviledged person, and this declaration being delivered to a person not priviledged, is good [330] enough, and by Twisden & Curiam, the priviledge is but 20 days after the Parliament.

Wild for the plaintiff moved for judgment in the assize; the recital in the patent to the plaintiff being, that the four persons mentioned were in possession, is sufficient without averring that former persons were dead, and three of the four being said dead, and the plaintiff last of the three next grantees in reversion, and said to be debito modo jurat. & admissus, of necessity the two others are intended supplyed after verdict, Stonehouse against 1 Cr. finding him debito modo admissus virtute literarum patentium, per Curiam. Damages. 3 Cr. 497, pl. 17.

Allen for the defendant, There is by this plea non debet and issue, a good confession of the debt and the damages, when assest by the jury, when the Court adjudgeth it, it's quasi an assent, especially in this action of debt wherein the Court ex officio taxt them. But, per Curiam, had the damages taxed by the Court been distinct from those of the jury, nullo habito respectu, it had been well; contrà here when the jury taxt such costs and damages as the Court should. Judgment reverst.

Rents. March, 104, pl. 178, an assignment after distress extincts the rent before remedy. Stiles 388, pl. 852. 2 Cr. 126, pl. 13.

In action of debt for rent, defendant pleads tender & uncore prist; the plaintiff having received the money, replyes, that he had not tender, and a verdict for the plaintiff. Allen moved in arrest of judgment, that the writ was abated by the acceptance of the money, which the Court agreed, it not being possible to proceed for damages after the principal money received.

[331] 86. THE KING against TRINITY HOUSE. Ante. Siderf. 86, pl. 15.

See Mich. 14 H. 4, 7, pl. by Hawke in the case of Glocester fee, he must conclude one way in certain avowry, Br. 45, seu 46, but he may use it any way, 14 H. 4, 37. Avowry Br. 47. 9 H. 6, 22, pl. 18. Double Plee, Br. 9, dedi & confirm. to tenant in possession is a release, seu 48. 2 Cr. 605, pl. 33. 22 H. 6, 10, pl. 13, by Pole, semble.

Windham would not deliver opinion that the grant was void, or that they may not take sand, notwithstanding the second grant; but he conceived the plea insufficient; but yet said, the pleading by give, grant, and confirm being synonimous, is well enough, there being no precedent grant before; so of a deed that might enure as bargain and sale, or feoffment by enrollment, or livery at election, may be used every way. The King against Bridges, M. 17 Jac. ruled accordingly on exception taken to a quo warranto: but 1. It should have been said an ancient office, Dyer 71. 2. It should have been said that the digging of gravel was used as appertaining to the office, 1 H. 7, 29, and not in gross, for the things claimed must be fixed together in the prescription, else its but an ill usage; and yet he conceived, this judgment being in information, was not final and conclusive, as it had been in a quo warranto, which is a writ original, 2 Ed. 3, 90. 6 Ed. 3, 11. 20 Ed. 3, in which aid and voucher lyeth in the Exchequer, Kel. 141, 139, The King against Sir Edmund Bacon, for the liberties of Bury, this difference was agreed, and so he conceived here. And 4. The grant of lastage and ballastage doth not necessarily suppose the taking of sand in this place. Twisden held the grant good, and that Trinity House may well digg in this soil, & cum pertinentiis signifieth nothing in most grants, especially in case of the King; but 8 H. 7, 4, the grant of an office alone passeth all things that make up the office, or belong to it time out of mind, Throgmorton and Tracy, Pl. Com. 156 b. 1 H. 7, 29. 2. He held the pleading ill, concluding no certain way which must be, though it might have been either way at the parties election, yet he cannot jumble altogether, Pitman against Pain, Dyer 115, in ejectment the same exception taken; and though this cannot enure no other way, yet its not sufficient. 3. This must be said an ancient office, else the prescription for the King and Queen to grant is not warranted, so Evesque de Salisbury, 10 Co. 59. Hub. 44, and West against Crawly in action upon the case for stopping of lights, on plea that he had a house in A. and lights time out of mind; he was of councel, and could [332] never get judgment for the plaintiff on such count after verdict, but was fain to compound it. And 4. It must be said as appertinent: and 5. The right of the case never cometh in question here, being but an information, not a quo warranto. Mallet contrà. Foster agreed with Twisden in omnibus, and that the grant doth not warrant digging in express terms, lastage and ballast, being general terms, which may be satisfied without digging, and therefore the soil of the Thames being the Kings, it must be specially said incident or appertinent, or the grant thereof specially pleaded.

In action upon the case on promise, Allen moved in arrest of judgment, the count was of an agreement for a fine of 60l. to make a lease, and in consideration the plaintiff would pay 60l. to the defendant, by such a day the defendant would deliver up the lease thereon, and quiet possession to the plaintiff, within a week after the day of payment of the money, and assigns breach in not delivering up possession, and doth not aver the 60l. was paid. Twisden, On mutual promises an averment of performance is needless, contrà where one is to be done on the other, which the Court agreed. Judgment staid.

Execution.

Maynard moved to set aside judgment had in scire facias into London with two nichills, without notice to the defendant, being on judgment had twenty years since, and the debt of A. being bankrupt was assign'd and pleaded by the defendant as his bail to the assignees of the commissioners, which the plaintiff knew. But, per Curiam, Being according to the course of Court, it shall not be vacat; and though error cannot be brought, yet the defendant may have audita querela; but the Court ordered the money taken in execution to be brought into Court, and stay till the audita querela determined, so was the case of Barcocke against Thomson. Post.

Arbitrement. Condition to pay to heirs or assigns, may be paid to executors of feoffor, but must be only to the heir of the feoffee. 1 Inst. 210. Arbitrement to pay to J. S. an estranger, or his assigns on his death, shall be paid to an administrator. 1 Leonard, 316, pl. 443. Hub. 9, pl. 19. Payment to be to such person as H. shall name by will in writing, shall not be to executors. Tender to executors of feoffee is sufficient on condition to pay to him, his heirs or assigns. So is Dyer 181, pl. 50.

Arbitrement that the defendant shall seal and deliver a demise to the plaintiff or his assigns. The plaintiff assigns breach, that demise was not made to the plaintiff, not mentioning that it was not done to his assigns, which by Winnington is ill, as the case of Trevor against Elmes out of the Exchequer Chamber, 1658. But by Twisden, The case of Trevor was held well enough, and lease cannot be made to assignee, unless he be particularly named; but its well enough made to him and his assigns, as Chapman against Dalton in Pl. Com. 286 b. and it is not intended to be to the plaintiff, or whom he shall name. 2. It was to seal and deliver a deed, Anglicè a demise of freehold; which, by Winnington, is not sufficient to pass the estate, 8 Ed. 4, 11, but non allocatur; for it is at least at will, and so long as it continues the rent must be paid, and the intent is here to be observed also. And here the defendant pleaded general performance; and after verdict for the plaintiff, this was moved in arrest of judgment, and the rejoynder was that he did seal and deliver accordingly, which the Court conceived well enough. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Sir Ralf Bovy moved for tryal at Bar, which was opposed by Wild recorder for the defendant, because the plaintiff had layn still two years, and had not given two terms notice; but by Allen, The defendant is person priviledged, and so they could not proceed sooner; and this differs not from injunction in Chancery, whereby if the defendant be hung up, such notice is needless, it being his own default, to which the Court enclined: but being a special case, day was given to shew cause against the bar tryal.

Bargain of goods is sufficient assumpsit found by special verdict, though it be found there was no other promise 4 Co. 92 b. See of special verdicts must have substance, pag. 256. 2 Cr. 503, pl. 20. In an information, the point must be precisely found usury or perjury, contrà an action. 2 Brant. 147 d. pl. 378. In debt, Br. 112.

Windham for the defendant observed on the special verdict, that there was a reasonable evidence whereby the jury in Guildhall might have found an assumpsit of the husband, as that she offered to cohabit, that the husband allowed her no maintenance, that the wares were necessary, and sold for reasonable prices. But on this special verdict the Judges here can find no assumpsit, nor ground the judgment, had it not been also found that she departed, and that the husband expresly prohibited, which weighed down his opinion for the defendant, as Littletons case in the Chancellor of Oxford, 10 Co. 56, where as much evidence of fraud, as could be, was found; yet not finding the express fraud, the Court will not find it; as trover upon demand, and denyal shall not be concluded by the Court, unless the jury find it a conversion. Most of the arguments at the Bar have been founded on the necessity, which yet is not naturæ, but convenientiæ, for by all laws, in necessity men may lay hold on the next opportunity, as to lay hold on another mans meat; at least, this doth excuse of the crime, and were this necessity allowed extream, the jury could not find it; but the manner and form must be specially pleaded, 3 Inst. 220, Stanford 15, or else the circumstances must be specially found. As to the point in law, as here found in the best sense, the law doth not enable her to contract to bind the husband in no case of sævitia, or otherwise of the husband; its a rule of law, that contract which binds the husband must have licence precedent, or assent subsequent; I allow, if my wife be house-keeper, she may take up necessaries, that being a licence in law; and such contracts shall be qualified according to his estate; but if the husband use to send his wife or servant with ready money, if she payeth it not, but taketh upon trust, the husband or master is not chargeable, 11 H. 6, 30, pl. 16, Scots case against The Abbot of Fountains; if the caterer or manciple take up any thing ad usum domus, he is bound thereby,(1) so action upon the case, Br. 5. 27 H. 8, 25, Tathams case, by assent subsequent she is enabled and capacitated to contract ab initio, 34 Ed. 1, Debt F. 163, [338] this difference is shewed plainly, 21 H. 7, 40 b. pl. 64. 14 H. 7, Debt F. 160. 2 R. 2, Br. Contract 40. If a woman buyeth goods, and the husband payeth the money generally (unless there be an assent wrapt up in that) it doth not charge the husband, though it be bread; for by the same reason, she might build houses, &c. which is all to his use, yet is a nullity, F. N. B. 120 G. on view of all the books, 22 H. 6, 20. 13 R. 2, Account, F. 50, concludes the same. The pinch of this case is, the husband allowing no maintenance to the wife, whereby, if she should not be enabled to contract, the law hath inevitably determined her ruine, having left her without means otherwise to subsist: but this reason weighs not; for though she be enabled to take up necessaries, yet the husband may take them again, for the property is still in him, and he may strip her the next day. And the law of England hath ordained a more suitable remedy for her, the Ordinary, whose jurisdiction is proper in these matrimonial causes, as for marriage portion; and its very inconvenient these domestick things should be ript up before juries; this meets with the objection before, for he will not only allow her, but fasten it on her, and to excommunicate him, and imprison his body; whereby they have the highest execution of body and soul, which was (what ever opinion of the censures of the church is now) great in former times, and as much remedy as any law can give: and this hath been the proper jurisdiction of an Ordinary, ever since there have been laws distributed by him that had the plenitude of power in his hand, 8 H. 3, upon a significavit of the excommunication, the sheriff should allow her maintenance, which though now out of date, yet the excommunicat capiendo may be awarded, 2 Cr. 364, and 1 Cr. Drakes case and Greens case: a prohibition hath for this cause been awarded to H. commissioner; and though an infant may contract for things necessary, yet is there no case of a feme covert suited herewith, but only of a moin, but infant meliorari potest conditionem, contrà of feme covert: lease by her with rent is void, so of her feoffment, which cannot be affirmed after his death by acceptance, for she hath no capacity at all, till actuated by him, but is as a moin, and her act alone, without his assent, is a nullity; contrà if her husband joyn with her in feoffment, &c. 2 Cr. 617, Tracy against Dutton, though the wife made the lease, and marryed but a day before the rent due, yet was the lessee forced to pay his rent again. As to a monk in vacation, he is as a widow, ecclesia est viduata, and yet every monk cannot take up goods in time of vacation, unless made ab-[339]-bot after, or be some officer in the house, as by custom and usage they were: the case of relegation is a civil death, and is an anomilar case, and the husband is quasi non in esse; its true, this evidence would very well have grounded an assumpsit, the things being rational to be allowed, but being found specially, this Court cannot determine it so: but this prohibition determins the point otherwise, 11 H. 6, 30, by Martin, is an opinion against all the books without ground, it is only to be intended where the husband made the wife house-keeper; and there is neither assent, or dis-assent exprest, but immediately followeth the case of moin, cellerer, &c. I confess there are no direct books in this point, nor are they necessary to be shewed by me in the negative, but by such as affirm the action doth lye: but cases semblable are Dy. 364, Poyns case, where the doubt was not, whither the goods were necessary or not, but whither the payment to the taylor would not make an assent; for if it had been specially found he did pay knowingly, it might amount to an agreement, 5 & 6 Car. 1, Bill against Lake C. B. where in action upon the case on assumpsit to pay on request for goods necessary taken up by the wife, the husband pleaded the Statute of Limitations, within which the request was, but not the sale of the goods: and the question was only, whether the sale there was cause of action by assumpsit in law, or not till request? The case was compounded, but according to my reports, the Chief Justice Richardson, and the Court did incline, that no cause of action did arise on the contract, but only on the request, which was necessary to be proved to the jury, and the six years to be accounted from the request only; and though an assumpsit did arise, yet the husband may prohibit, especially in London, though not every one, as the King may exempt some from Assizes. And that which guides me in this case, is, the many mischiefs such cases make in Guildhall, and that it's not prudent for the woman to be her own judge in this case; and she will never be trusted, but upon great advantage of gain; and it will not be seemly to rip up these differences of man and wife before juries, whereby an everlasting separation and feud is wrought, which would not be by private examination of the Ordinary; and this is like the seising mens goods, or levying debt before the action brought, which draweth on a violent prosecution, and encourage women to disobedience and extravagance; and so conclude with the advice of Ahasuerus against Queen Vasthi, 1 Esther, 16, 17, 18 verses.

The elopement of the wife in April, 1646, maketh this stronger, she came before the action brought; again, the sale was in 1658, and the action in 1659, so without the husbands consent she absented twelve years, contrary to her vow, for which reason the husband is not bound to receive her, or allow her maintenance; contrà if the husband had put her away, frustrà legis auxilium invocat qui in legem committit, 2 Cr. 502, The Cook of Grays-Inns case. And though elopement without adultery be not punishable, so not [341] adultery without elopement, for hereby she shall not lose dower, as Rot. 1622, Sir John Stowel against Weeks, Mich. 18 Eliz. B. Feme sueth in Spiritual Court for defamation after divorce, causa adulterij of the baron, after which baron released, and held void, the cause of action being after the divorce. 3. This prohibition of the baron makes the case clear for the defendant; for if I forbid any person to trust my known servant, I shall never be charged; so prohibition of one is good enough, though she could charge him, as condition not to alien to this or that person, and hereby the tradesman is satisfied she is a feme covert, and so cannot be misconusant of his condition, Dyer 234. Comptons case*, 1 Brownl. 47, per Curiam, the baron was answerable, but there was no elopement as here: and in the former times when this action began, men sued for legacies, but they cannot do so now. If an infant be clothed by a mercer, the father is not bound for him, and yet the father is bound to maintain him, 43 Eliz. B. R. 3 Cr. Rippon against Norton; but these are voluntary and charitable acts, and not compellable, 39 Eliz. Bachelor against Macherell, bond by infant for unnecessary apparel, as with gold and silver for a gentleman of the Earl of Essex, is void. The baron is only bound to provide for the feme during cohabitation, as Pl. Lady Seymor, libel in Court Christian against the baron, that he beat her, and used her hard, that she dare not live with him, F. N. B. 80, and a prohibition prayed, because she might have the peace of him at common law; but it was denied per Curiam, because the intent and main of the libel was for sustenance; and it's no argument, that because the jurisdiction of the Spiritual Court is too short, that therefore we should enlarge ours; and the wife hath brought this necessity on her self, and its none at all here, for she hath the cloaths, 3 Cr. 367, William; and the mercer that trusted hath [342] the only loss; it will be a greater mischief for us to give a judgment without foundation, then on the contrary; for by the same reason she may provide houses, furniture &c. & in omnibus agreed with Windham. Ante.

In an action of debt on 12 Car. 2, c. 17, § 8, for fifths, Stroud moved in arrest of judgment, that the action being given against the incumbent in possession, lyeth not (as brought) against the executors of such person that ought to pay it, as it doth by the executor of the person. Windham, This is an action grounded on a duty, and so is Chapman against Dalton, Pl. 31. HARRIS against BESSIE.

Nosme. See Moor 35, pl. 116. Leases are intire, &c.

In debt on obligation, condition to make a will in the presence of such persons as he should appoint. The defendant pleaded that he made the will in presence of W. O. such as he did appoint, videlicet, in the presence of Graciæ, so the issue roll, but the Nisi Prius roll was Grac. And at the trial the will was proved made in the presence of Gracius, which being another person, the defendant moved to have a new trial, pretending surprise, on Hut. 120, Hicks and Monke, &c. Hub. 73, Pope against Skinner. By Twisden it's sufficient if the will be made in the presence of any, though other persons then alledged; contrà if it were to be made in the presence of A. and B. particularly, the issue was, that no such will was made in the presence of such persons as the plaintiff should appoint. And by Jones for the defendant, he could [348] not say he made the will in the presence of A. and B. but must say that he made it in the presence of such persons, namely A. and B. which is but an ascertaining the persons for the defendants notice of trial: but per Curiam, this is well enough, and is but the same name; though by Windham, on a justification, such particular days, or things, or persons are traversable. 2. Stroud moved in arrest of judgment, that authority was given to the wife to devise 300l. and she disposeth 200 by fifties, and well per Curiam, but on licence to attorney to lease for 21 years in my name, he cannot make it for more or less, contrà on such power reserved, &c. 3. By Jones, The condition is that she shall make it in the presence of the husband, unless he refuse, or in presence of J. S. or two such persons as she should appoint, which is insufficient, no refusal being alledged, or notice to the husband, which by Windham, ought to be, Dy. Leeks case, Curia contrà, it being in the wives election, and a new trial was refused.

32. HALL against CRESWELL AND HIS WIFE.

Baron & feme.

In debt on obligation against baron & feme, being made by her in viduity, with condition that she, her heirs and assigns, keep contracts and covenants made betwixt former husband and his lessee the plaintiff. The defendant said there were no covenants made betwixt them. The plaintiff saith there was an agreement that the plaintiff should enjoy a warren of the demise of the former husband, and that he entred till put out by the defendant; issue on no such agreement found for the plaintiff. Jones moved in arrest of judgment, that there was no estate alledged in the former husband in right of the wife, whereby, though the second husband be assignee in law, yet he enters of his own wrong, and not as claiming under her: but by Allen for the plaintiff, its not requisite that the husband be assignee of the estate, but her assignee of contract, which she might have avoided; which Windham agreed: Twisden contrà, that the husband must be some ways intitled to the lease, it being not necessary that any contract, real or personal, relating to the wife, be intended; but may be as that she or her assigns would not beat J. S. in which case husband is no assignee. Foster agreed with Windham, and that she is bound for some intended interest, though no certain estate appear, which the husband hath by marriage, and doth act in her right. Adjornatur.

34. WHEATLY against THOMAS. Thursday, Octob. 30.

Remainder. Apres, 249, pl. 318.

By special verdict it appeared that the Lord Cobham seised, 3 Ph. & Mar. devised to his eldest son William for life, remainder to the first, second, and tenth son in tail, and so to divers issues males, and so to eight of his sons; and in default of such issue, the remainder in tail to the heirs generally of the body of William, the remainder in fee to Edward the youngest son; Edward and the rest dyed without issue, whereby the estate by death of the rest descended unto William the eldest, who had issue George, who had issue William, who had issue Duke, George, and Charles, (and also three daughters) G. was attainted and executed 1 Jac. after which 3 Jac. the Lord Henry Cobham also was attainted by Parliament, and after the King grants to Duke Brooke by letters patents, whereby the lands were limited to Duke and his heirs so long as any issue male of William were living, prout by the will. The issue of William s the lessor of the plaintiff, claiming by the will for want of heirs males of the rest and Henry was living when Duke had issue, under whose conveyance by fine and recovery the defendant claims. Baldwin for the plaintiff, that Henry was tenant in tail in possession, and had a remainder of the fee vested in him by death of Edward, and both titles vested in the King, but by the Act of 3 Jac. of Restitution the daughters, as heirs by that will in tayl have good title, now as 9 Co. 30, Abbot of Strata Marcellas case, when charter doth refer to another, its all one as if they were particularly recited, Patents Br. 31 and 91. So also the same relative words are of the same force in Acts of Parliament, Pl. Com. 930, Binkly against Thomas, and therefore it being found that the lands in question were devised in tail to the issues of William, and that the lessor of the plaintiff is so, she hath good title. And whereas it is objected that this reference is insensible, being that the lands shall be and remain [350] to the issue according to the will, which yet is sufficient to shew the intent of the Act of Parliament, that the plaintiff shall have them, and (shall be and remain), shall refer to the estate, and the words (shall be held and enjoyned) shall be referred to the will, and so all may stand. But the main objection is, that Henry being attainted and alive, the heirs of William cannot take: answer, by the Act of Restitution there are five estates tail to be spent before the will is to take effect, it being in default of such issue, &c. and by the will there is no particular estate limited to Henry, but its sufficient if there be an heir to take when the particular estate determins, 1 Co. 63. Dy. Cranmers case: and so though in strictness William had no issue, yet Henry dying before all the estates were spent, the attainder being now by the Act of 7 Jac. purged, they may devise, and as heir have formedon, had William discontinued. 2. The intent of 3 Jac. was, that so long as the Lord C. had issue, the reversion should not come to the Crown, (he having a numerous progeny, and was the first that thus setled on the first, second and tenth son) the lands in question being an allowance for their maintenance; and there cannot be no other signification of this limitation, then that after the remainders to the sons (which were provided not to be discontinued by fine or recovery) the daughters should take, which had been frivolous, unless there were estates tail to be cut off. 3. The Parliament are not tyed to the strict rules of common conveyances, 18 Ass. 5, The Princes case being confirmed by Parliament. Also this Act of Parliament is quasi a restitution, which shall be taken most favourably for the party against the King, as 3 Inst. 241, the nearest case to this is, Mich. 8 Ed. 1, Rot. 62, in the tally office; though William had no heirs when Henry was attainted, yet because the blood may be restored, a limitation to them may be good; if the limitation had been generally according to the will, it might be doubtful whither the heirs of William should take; but contrà here where the Act particularly limits it to the heirs of William according to the will; and so is like estate given to H. for life, remainder to the heirs of the person attainted, is good, if the person be restored before death of tenant for life; and there was no other intent of the Act of 7 Jac. then to put the attainder out of the way; also the estate hath been enjoyd according to the Act of 3 Jac. to this day. Jones for the defendant, The Act of 7 Jac. can have no operation in this case, there being an express proviso, that as to the lands in question, it shall be of no force. 2. Henry at the time of attainder had two estates [351] in tayl in possession, and the reversion that was to Williams and the heirs males, &c. And by the Act of Parliament, this remainder cannot be vested again in Henry, nor William: he agreed the confirmation of Acts, as Baldwin alledged, and that this is as strong as express, but yet at the time of the Act, Henry was not heir of William, and so cannot take by discent, nor by purchase, he cannot without entitling himself as heir compleatly, Hub. 31, Counden against Clerk, contrà by discent; and as in conveyances so by way of will, Foster against Ramsey, B. R. plaintiff devised to the heir of his brother, (which was an alien) and adjudged he could not take, and he denyed the case that reversion to the heirs of the person attainted is good, because no such forreign possibility shall be presumed as restitution. And here it is not the intent of the Act to make any contingent remainder, and the Act never intended to make any issue of Henry, the heir of the body of William, capable, else should it restore him and George his brother under general words; also this is the Act that confirms the attainder; the Act did intend only to such remainders as were capable, not to enable any, as if any in the mean remainder had levyed a fine, this Act would not defeat it, but settle it so upon the persons, as if there were no Act by them to deprive themselves: likewise should the Act give any estate to them, it should be to the use of the King, who is not bound without express words. Twisden, The only stress is on the intent of the Act, which, by Windham, is not to establish the estate as against fine, but against forfeiture, and hath given it in express words to Duke and his heirs, so long as William the grandfather hath heirs males of his body, according to the will, whereby its doubtful whether it may carry the lands to the heirs general through all the other disabled persons; had William had issue male such issue should inherit. Scire facias. Moor 524, pl. 693.

Now upon a second scire facias several tenants come in, and one pleads he hath only for years; and another not summoned hath the reversion; and another in abatement, that the plaintiff entred into the land pendant the writ of error, which, by Allen, is ill, the writ being but ex gratia, and the retorn of the sheriff is conclusive; and 31 H. 6, it hath been doubted whither he may plead in nullo est erratum, a fortiori, not in abatement: and if the pleas should be false, the plaintiff cannot thereby have judgment reverst, but is in [352] statu quo: and should the judgment be reverst without them, its good. Williams for the defendants, Tertenants conceive that the pleas are good; and that tertenants may plead for themselves is the constant course, the entry on the roll on scire facias being to hear the process, record, and errors; and so it would be in vain, Dy. 321, should they not have liberty to plead to all of them, Holland against Dancy 3 Cr. 739. The like plea, as here, that there were other tertenants (not named) joyntenants, Charnock against Worsly 3 Cr. 129, Bartholmew against Belfield, 2 Cr. 332, and that the pleas particularly are good. 1. That entry into the land pendant the writ of error, doth abate it, the nature of the writ being a right of action in order to recovery of land, which cannot be (as the ground of remitter is) because he is in possession. 2. Retorn of this writ is to remove prejudice, which one in possession cannot have, be it rightful, or by wrong and the prejudice must be immediate, and not consequential, which is the reason bayl cannot revers judgment against the principal. 2. The end of this writ is to give possession, which he hath already by voluntary action; contrà if by act in law the possession be cast on him, Lloyd against Bethells case 11 Jac. in Assize in the Great Sessions in Wales, the writ abated by entry, and making lease, Bridgman Knight against Mayor of Wickam, 3 Cr. 484. Lease for years made or accepted, suspends the bringing error, feoffment destroys it, 12 H. 6, 6. As to the second plea, that the tertenant is but lessee for years, and J. O. seised of the freehold, is good, and no more then prayer in ayd, Champernoons case, 2 Cr. 392. Owen 157. 3 Cr. 471. And here the entry on the roll is, that the Court will not proceed to examine errors, till all tertenants come in, be it in necessity or in discretion to award scire facias before or after reversal, yet being awarded, it must be fully determined. Allen for the plaintiff agreed the cases, but the plea in Hancocks case of joyntenancy, is not in abatement, but in bar for a moiety; and that an entry will abate a writ of error, he denyed, for though one hath possession, it may be charged, which cannot be avoided till error brought; and the case of Lloyd against Bethell, was betwixt the parties, not by any tertenant, as here. Twisden The tertenants (as in Samsons case) have nothing to do with the errors, but only with the process and record. Windham, Where the party enters and makes a lease, that goeth properly to the tenancy, and suspends the action, but this entry is only in abatement, and its every days practice to bring error, though one be in possession; but he doubt-[353]-ed of the plea, that he was but lessee, because a special nontenure, but Holland against Jackson, Bridgman; per Curiam, If one tertenant be warned, and retorned by the sheriff, the Court will never award another scire facias on suggestion that there are more, but the plaintiff for expedition had taken out this scire facias; but here the Court doubted of the plea of lessee for years. Account. Hetly 116, seu 114. Arbitrement is bar not in discharge of account.

In action of account, the defendant pleaded specially that the mony was delivered by the plaintiff to deliver to such persons as A. B. and C. Commissioners should appoint, which was before the Act of Oblivion publisht, and judgment being against him quod computet: the defendant afterward before auditors sheweth, that the mony was ordered by the said A. B. C. &c. Commissioners to be disposed to publick use, and so plead Act of Oblivion, to which the plaintiff demurred, as a repugnant plea, and might be pleaded in bar, and therefore cannot be pleaded in discharge now; but on the general issue pleaded by the Act of Oblivion, the defendant might have shewed this in evidence. Polixphen for the defendant, con-[355]-ceived this may be pleaded in discharge, being an excuse of payment which is as well pleadable in discharge as payment, 41 Ed. 3, 31, some things may be pleaded, as well in bar, as in discharge, 4 Ed. 4, 15. Twisden, Upon bailment of money to J. S. to bayl over J. Twisden, Many executors not named are chargeable and relievable: and by Foster, This is a mischief this statute intended to remedy, though it be not within the words; also an indebitatus assumpsit would then lye upon receipt of my rents as a debt, Rolls against Copher, à fortiori in this case per Curiam. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Copyhold. Entre Congeable, Br. 139. And 44 Ed. 3, 31 b. pl. 12, is express she shall. Dubitatur 1 Cr. 24, pl. 28. 2 Cr. 305, pl. 7. 1 Cr. 44, pl. 51, are that such assignee cannot enter for condition broken. But against Ordinary he must by 25 Ed. 3, c. 9. Poult. 151. Co. In action of covenant upon lease by copyholder, whose feme by custom is to have moiety as survivor, and if any lease be made, then she should have a moiety of the rent, after the feme of A. was seised of moiety, the heir of A. dying. By Jones, In arrest of judgment, his feme shall not have a moiety of his moiety, which the Court deny-[357]-ed, beside Mallet; and by Windham, If a heriot be payable for the whole, if it be part surrendred, both shall pay heriots, so no inconvenience; and by custom the wife may have the whole: so of the custom of gavelkind. 2. An assignee of copyholder is not within the statute to have action of covenant, Curia contrà: judgment nisi.

47. KING against GOVER. Siderf. 91, pl. 13.

Indictment of extortion quod colore officij extorsive injuriose he took money, and sheweth not for what matter or cause, which per Curiam, is well enough, the officer being bayliff of a hundred, and he needed not shew particular cause, especially being after verdict. Judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

48. LE-STRANGE against TEMPLE. Tuesday, November 4. Siderf. 90, pl. 9.

Forfeiture. So on feoffment to use of devisor in fee 1 Cr. 24, pl. 27. And this recovery without voucher is a forfeiture in both as Moor 271, pl. 423, so Leond. 264, pl. 354 is, that fine levyed by tenant for life to bargainee is a forfeiture only in the bargainee but if lessee for years accept grant for life to be made only tenant to the precipe in recovery or fine to the use of J. S. its no extinguishment. 2 Cr. 643, pl. 3.

In evidence to jury, Maynard for the defendant, challenged the tales, being not retorned by the sheriff, his deputy, or any sworn officer, but being by clerk of the Court, by general appointment of the sheriff, to act his business in his absence, per Curiam, its well enough, and the sheriff is answerable for it. 2. Tenant in common deviseth, and after by agreement and fine (without writ according to statute) makes partition, which per Curiam, in C. B. as now in B. R. is a revocation; (however, after so long time as here, 80 years, a new publication shall be presumed). 3. Tenant for life bargains and sels all his estate, and then upon recovery suffered against barganee, he cometh in as vouchee, whereby, by Windham, tenant for life is made tenant to the præcipe, so it is a forfeiture, all being but one conveyance, which the Court agreed. 4. By Glyn, Remainder limited on marriage settlement to the daughters, vests in them as they are born, and the postnati break in on them; contrà here upon limitation to all the daughters: but, by Twisden, Its all one, which the Court agreed: but, by Sir Jeoffry Palmer for the plaintiff, The law abhors removal of inheritances, and had the limitation been to all the daughters living at the time of the auncestors death, it had been a good contingent; and this is the like case, and hath never yet received determination. 5. Father and son, he being tenant for life, the remainder to the son for life, [358] joyn in a voluntary settlement, if it were with any intent in the father, or both, to defeat any other purchaser, then it will be fraudulent, as Burrels case, else not any concluding evidence: but if the party that made it had sold; fraud would be presumed, contrà here; though Wingfield against Brisford, there be a power of revocation if it be determined; contrà if it be only releast, which the Court agreed; yet every voluntary conveyance is not fraudulent, unless the intent appear on circumstances. 6. The proviso was, that if the auncestor, by his proper handwriting to be written or endorsed on the indenture, should revoke the uses therein, which by Maynard for the defendant, ought to be by writing on the indenture, which the Court denyed; and that the revocation may be by other writings, as well as indorsement. 7. That recovery suffered by tenant for life after bargain and sale, is a forfeiture, 16 Ass. 16, Fines F. and entry being made, shall not be purged by reversing it, for want of an original. As to the reversion, Maynard conceived here can be no cross remainder, which cannot be but betwixt two persons only, as was resolved, Gilbert against Writhes case in Dodridges time expresly, and not where there are more, as might have been here. Verdict for the plaintiff for third part, that no fraud appears.

49. HAYES CASE. Wednesday, November 5.

Common.

Keeling prayed distringas upon writ out of this Court to distrain the next adjoyning vils on a writ out of the Chancery on Westm. 2, cap. 46, to enquire of breaking hedges, retorned per quosdam ignitos, and granted per Curiam; the same was granted for The Queen against Vills adjoyning to Somersam.

50. HILL against SNOW.

Usury.

Baldwin moved in arrest of judgment in debt on corrupt agreement, that J. S. on 21l. money lent, should pay to such persons as the plaintiff should name 30l. at the end of six months, if the ship retorned, or did not go forth (as indeed it did not) and that the def. for brokage should have a certain sum, the defendant to bear the hazard of the sea, which he conceived not usury; but per Curiam, The jury have found this usury, and the Court will now presume it. 2. That the acti-[359]-on is brought against the broker, whereas by 12 Car. 2, cap. the action is to be brought against the party who lent, which was J. S. to whom the bond was made. Also by Wingfield for the defendant, Its not like Burtons case, but the hazard goeth to the principal, and is a probable one, as 2 Cr. 507, Roberts against Tremain. The Court agreed bills of bottomree good; but contrà in this case, where the possibility is remote, and the money lent by Snow. Post, 359, pl. 54.

51. BROOK against SHARPE.

Amendment.

Scrogs prayed an amendment of release pleaded, made 1 March for 29 February, which by Allen for the plaintiff, Its needless as its pleaded, that such a day he releast whereon he may give evidence at any day before or after; contrà where H. pleaded, that by release bearing date 1 March, that is precise to the day; and though the record were made up, the Court awarded an amendment in debt on a bond.

52. BROWN against CHARLTON.

Slander.

B. Thou rogue, wilt thou murder my sister as thou didst thy wife, (innuendo A. then defunct): adjudged actionable per Curiam, for the greater scandal if she be not dead; and being ficta & falsa, they shall be intended scandalosa.

53. MOOR against PLOWMAN. Thursday, November 6. In Error Br. 137.

Error.

Error of a judgment in ejectment by original in B. R. retornable 12 February at the next session of Parliament. Wild notwithstanding prayed execution, the Parliament being prorogued, which the Court granted, and superseded the writ, and will take no notice that it is in esse; contrà on adjornment.

54. HILL against SNOWE. Ante, 358, pl. 50.

Usury.

Snow and M. agreed that S. should lend, and M. should be bound to such person as S. should name, and that such person should bear the peril of the sea: also in the same action is another count against the defendant, as a solicitor and procurer of H. and if either of these causes of action fall, its against the plaintiff for the whole. Jones for the plaintiff, [360] that its well enough, and no hazard appears, being to be paid at retorn of a ship tunc in servitio domini Regis, which the Court cannot adjudge of, but its in the jury; for the ship might be within a mile of harbor. Twisden, Had this matter been found specially, it had been no usury; contrà on general verdict as here, which the Court agreed. 2. As to the brokage its well enough, the defendant lending his own money, per Curiam, though another name be used. 3. One action cannot be grounded on several statutes, where several penalties are given against several persons; contrà upon several offences in the same statute. Judgment for the plaintiff.

55. OLDHAM against HEMSTEAD.

Replevin. Pl. Com. 564 b. It were sufficient if plaintiff had possession though the goods were but bayld against any but him that hath property 2 Ed. 3, 17, pl. 19. Avowant may say he hath property 9 Ed. 3, 14, pl. 19, or that property is in J. S. absque hoc that it is in avowant may be pleaded by plaintiff in replevin 29 Ed. 3, 92 b. seu 3 b. pl. 14.

In replevin of taking shoos in the shop the defendant, who avows as bayly of J. S. and that the property was in him absque hoc, that it was in the plaintiff. Plaintiff in bar pleaded, that the property was in him absque hoc, that it was in default, which, by West, for the defendant, is ill, being a traverse on a traverse. Adjornatur.

56. BASSET against WILLIAMS.

Error.

Error of judgment in quare impedit was assigned by Barwell in want of title, being by lease for 99 years to commence after all former advousons, (viz. grants thereof), Tr. 3 & 4 Ph. Mar. were executed, or when the avoidances before granted were satisfied, which is ill, and uncertain, as Rector of Chedingtons case, or as lease for 60 years habendum to executors for so many years as should be undetermined at death of lessee: but, by Allen for the plaintiff, the limitation is void, there being no avoidances granted, and so the lease shall begin presently, which the Court granted, and it may be averred that there were none, and need not be pleaded, as a lease to begin presently. Judgment affirmed.

[361] 56. CORLS against CALVERT. Siderf. 96, pl. 23.

Amendment. Yelvert. p. pl. 10. Moor. 704, pl. 983. 22 H. 6 b. pl. 12, per Ascue.

In action of assault, battery, and wounding, the defendants all pleaded as to the battery, justific. quod manus leviter imposuerunt, to remove the plaintiff from hindering them to remove cross, and say nothing to the wounding. The plaintiff replyes, that the assault and wounding was de injuria sua propria: the jury find three guilty of the wounding, &c. and that other three did only manus leviter imponere. Judgment for the plaintiff in Lancaster. And Allen assigned this for error, being a plain jeofail, the verdict convicting all of the wounding, which was implyedly confessed in the bar, being quoad residuum, which goeth to the whole, which the plea doth not maintain; which, had there been but one defendant, had been but a discontinuance; contrà here, where there are others that are not found guilty. Post. Adjornatur.

57. HOLDAY against HOLDAY.

Ejectment.

J. S. in ejectment, come in and pray to be made defendant, and to plead specially ancient demean, which the Court (Foster absentè) agreed; and it's now used as of course to plead dilatories after imparlance so, &c.

58. MANBY against SCOT. Ante. Saturday, Novemb. 8.

Baron & feme.

Turner third baron for the defendant, If this contract bind the husband, it must be either as hers, which cannot be the contract of a married woman, being void as well to necessaries as other things, which are no sooner taken up by her, but it's in the husband; he agreed the cases of monks and infants, and Stile against West, 3 Jac. a stronger case, the contract of an ideot à nativitate, he may marry, or thus bind himself, it being a true relief to him, and none can take them away from him: and supposing this the contract of the wife, yet it's against the plaintiff, who hath declared of a contract of the husband, and not of the wife; so if the contract were made before marriage, the count must be (as in trespass against him for her trespass) of a trespass done, or contract made by her, but yet I hold it none of her contract. 2. It's not the husbands contract ex natura [362] rei, for he agreed not to it, either precedent or subsequent; and though this be not specially found, yet this being highly concern'd to maintain her, is no binding evidence here to find an assumpsit in the husband, as if it were found no grant were made of common in gross, yet if it were found to be said time out of mind, that is a binding evidence of it, not so here, especially when she departs contrary to his consent, Udalls case B. R. who forbade his taylor to trust his wife, being departed from him, yet he did (though forbidden by him) trust her with apparel, which was allowed to be given in evidence, and it appearing that the baron & feme did after cohabit, and she wore it in his presence, here the judgment was for the plaintiff; but yet the evidence being only found, and no express contract, it's not sufficient. 3. Its better that she have no power then if she had, however it will be exceeding mischievous to the husband, who hereby shall be forced to pay every strangers demand of money for wares sold to her, so she might take up necessary apparel of one, then of another, and the last man brings the action first, and recovers, so may every one after by combination. 4. The law hath provided for her better then to be excepted out of the general rule, viz. the Ordinary: also the law of God, and of nature, hath made a better provision, 24 Ed. 4, 13, per Callow. 15 Ed. 4, 1 b. 1 Roll. 68, 76. 7 Jac. Mantell against Wollingtons case. If the husband enters into bond on dures made to the wife, it shall be said dures to him, the law looking on her sufferings as his, and he is worse then an infidel if he provide not for her: for this reason a collateral warranty is said to barr an heir on the presumption of affection, which being reasonable, be the fact what it will, the law is the same. 5. Its not suitable to the prerogative that God and nature hath given to him (which is more then of the King over the subject) to be thus bound by her contract; this is the reason the husband shall suffer for her trespass or slander, because he hath power over her, and may restrain her, or else she would have] greater power over him, then he over her; for he cannot bind her by his contract. 6. It's not reasonable at least that such a wife as this should bind him, whose departure is sufficient to make him jealous, which is the rage of a man, Exodus and Proverbs 6, 34. 3 Jac. Sir Tho. Gardners case, the Court were of opinion the contract of the wife for necessaries should bind the husband; this is reasonable evidence to a jury where they live together, but not full to the case here, F. Debt 163. The contract of a woman binds not her self, ergo not the husband.

[363] (2.) Tyrrel Justice of C. B. for the plaintiff, that by the common law the husband is bound to maintain the wife he takes, is granted; as to the verdict he conceived it good enough, having found all the fact, but utrum it amounts to a promise or no, he desired the advice of the Court, as if they had found that A. lent money to B. but whether this implyeth an assumpsit or no, he desired advice, unless the Judge, before whom the cause is tried, direct them; for promise, or not promise, is matter of fact; but whether such circumstances amount to a promise, is matter of law. 1. As to the matter of law, there being no presidents, we must resort to the law of nature. 7 Co. 12, Calvin's case, which is part of our law. 2. To the evangelical law, which saith, no man ever hateth his own flesh, against this law no prescription or statute is good: and our law would be scandalous if it were in the husbands election to allow her, or not, contrary to those two laws. 3. Reason doth herein guide where presidents want, 1 Inst. 97. 4 Co. 94, or have no sufficient grounds of reason, i.e. of the artificial reason acquired by study and experience, not the prime or degenerate corrupted reason. This is the use and custom of all laws in all nations. Mag. Chart. cap. 7 giveth her rationabile estoverium, 2 Inst. 18, till dower assigned, which relisheth of that maintenance he should allow her whilst he liveth, of which she ought as well to partake, as after his death, feme covert being a favourite of the law, and therefore cannot be presumed to be left without maintenance. Hence also the law looks on her dures as done to him. 2. It followeth, that by our common law, the husband is bound, 40 Eliz. B. R. Hanywell against Hanywell, action lyeth not by executors against her for her peraphernalia, 33 H. 6, 31 b, pl. 5. Administrator Br. 6. 23 H. 6, 3 a. 1 Cr. 343, though there be debts unpaid, for its preferred before debts. Also there is one law of nature betwixt husband and wife, another betwixt father and son, that being not common to beasts, as this is of procreation. 2. Of the ways and means by which the husband is compellable hereto. 1. He cannot compel her, nor she him, by our law; contrà by civil law; yet no reason hinders but that he may be charged by a third person collaterally, 11 Co. 61, as well as by her tort or trespass, else it may fall out, that though he cannot murder her, yet he may starve her: the differences of having right to advowson after usurpation without remedy, &c. and this is, that there the act of the parties by which it is destroyed, contrà here where only the act of law takes it away, 1 Inst. 146, 169, & quando aliquid conceditur, concedere videtur & id sine quo [364] res ipsa esse non potest, 9 Co. 90, Pinchons case, for this reason action lyeth for rent on owelty of partition, 1 Inst. 240. 2. The remedy here he agreed, Debt F. 163, that by general contracts, 21 H. 7, 40. F. N. B. 120 B. Contract Br. 33. 1 Inst. 112, she cannot bind him without his assent; contrà for necessaries, 11 H. 6, 30, per Martyn, which is the end he there driveth at (not whether she may borrow money, or not) but that cannot be excessive, 20 H. 6, 21, per Martyn. 2 Cr. 257, Lord Boroughs case is a stronger case then ours, Hut. 205, admits this point, 12 Jac. C. B. Sir H. Comptons case, per totam Curiam, the husband was compelled to pay for cloaths taken up by the wife; the contract of the wife for goods, though they come to the husbands use, is void, if not brought for his use at first. 2. Though they come to his use, if he assent not, he is not bound; but our case implyeth both, 27 H. 8, 25, her contract by his assent is good evidence in action against him, and count on his contract, and he is at no prejudice by his being hereby prevented to wage his law, because marriage is his own act; and as Slades case and Pinchons case, it is in election of the party to bring debt, or action upon the case, both remedies being ancient, but the action upon the case applyed but lately. Also in our case no remedy is in Chancery, Latch. 169, an assumpsit as well as debt lyeth against an infant for necessaries; and thus hath the practise been these twenty years past by learned Judges, whose experience was acquired in good, though they lived in bad times: and that there was no Spiritual Courts, was no reason to alter the common law: also trover may lye against husband for her conversion, and should not he be chargeable by marriage, 8 Co. 171. 2 Inst. 17, she would be worse then by committing felony, to whom reasonable maintenance is allowed. 3. That the Ordinary will give remedy in these cases, 2 Cr. 364, is more specious then satisfactory, the common law taking away all she hath, and sending her to another Court for relief: Hyats case was only a suit for separation, 8 Jac. Agars case, in which case alimony is by them allowable, not by original suit, where the parties cohabit, or are not separate, as here, Register 34, 37, 38. Old N. B. 35. F. N. B. 41, 48. Attachment upon Prohibition 8, but if one might sue there, it's no argument that one may not sue at common law; also they only excommunicate, not sequester the estate, as at common law, and to presume one will not lye in prison rather then pay debts, is contrary to experience, and the judgment of a learned Parliament that giveth execution against lands of the debtor dying in pri-[365]-son, in which case the wife hath lost all; and he doubted it would be harder to maintain the estoverio capiendo then this case: also this excommunication is but minor, and easily discharged; also none will trust her when they see her without remedy; the supplicavit for the wife against the husband is only for to keep the peace, not to provide her food or rayment; if it were, yet if he lye in prison, her benefit would be fruitless; as to the circumstances of this verdict, it appears not for what cause she went away; and though it were contrary to his will, yet not contrary to his beneplacitum, who might have disswaded or hindred her departure; but had her departure been an elopement, he doubted whether he should not allow her maintenance, Westm. 2, c. 34. 1 Inst. 32. 2 Inst. 435, but had she been an adultress also, at common law she should have dower, and now notwithstanding adultery shall have it, and here it appears she departed with animum revertendi; however, so long as she is his wife, though she commit felony, or be attainted, he is bound to keep and maintain her, as is collected from 28 H. 6, 4. 9 Co. 87, he also is as much inexcusable in not receiving her when she offered her self; for no certain time is limited by our law of her departure, for him to take advantage of to refuse her again, all laws against this law of reason are void; and so of prohibition, supposing the case within it signifieth nothing also, unless the offence be greater than here is exprest; he is compellable to receive her by a greater authority 1 Cor. 7, 10, & 11, then that of Esther 1, 17, which was but politick advice of heathens in their cups: also the inhibition, as it refers to the defendant, is void; for else he might inhibit all that would trust her, as well as one; where the husband giveth authority to the wife to contract, he may repeal it; contrà where the law giveth her such power as here, Stanf. 27, Coron. Br. 142, also she is no felon by stealing his goods, 20 H. 7, 2, also he agreeth to be thus obliged by the marriage, and therefore it is not in his election to do it, or not after: if A. imployeth B. as his bailiff to prohibit C. to trust him, is to no purpose, but A. is bound (notwithstanding his inhibition) by B.'s contract: and so in our case, so long as she is his wife, a stranger may trust her contrary to his inhibition; for though it were for her apparel, yet its his also: should she come into a shop, and cause wares to be cut out, and take them away, the husband is chargeable in trespass or trover; and its more honourable to be charged in action without damages, then with: also the law is not to be altered, 7 Co. 27, (but only by Parliament, not by the Judges) for it's inconvenience; the danger of set-[366]-ting up two judicatures in one family, is not in this case, for it shall be tryed by jury, as maihm done to her, Lit. sect. 212, but yet her will is not so subject to his, that if his be unreasonable, yet it must be an uncontrollable law; this can be no argument for wives departure from husband, being only pro victu & amictu, not for variety, or for jewels or money, which he ought to allow without suit; in this case only the purse of the husband is lyable, in the other her life also; now he may keep her, in the other case he must part with wife, and marry by the Ordinaries law, also he that trusts her last, doth it at his peril; and it's not in the husbands power to strip his wife, as the words of the supplicavit shew: also the law in many cases, as F. N. B. 25 K. giveth liberty of court as well as of suit, as for taking away the wife; nor doth it follow that the husband shall be hereby double charged, for when the effect is had in one, it shall not after be had in the other, Hub. 225, Needlers case is a law of nature, which admits of many exceptions, as in cui in vita, & Hub. 225. But the law of nature of the husbands providing for the wife hath no exception; and therefore to be preferred; and though the wives will be at the husbands, yet not her life; and the husband shall not hereby take advantage of his own wrong: besides, this will make men that part with their daughters, to provide such fetters for the husband, that his will shall be always subject to theirs. Ante.

[367] 60. TULL against OSBASTON. Siderf. 90, pl. 11.

Prohibition.

Powis prayed prohibition to the Arches on citation out of the dioces, the defendant procured letters of request of the archdeacon, which being subject to the Ordinary, (Hutt. Dr. James's case, Hub. 23 H. 8, cap. Jones's case, Hub. 186), it was said he cannot transmit his jurisdiction per saltum, but first to the Ordinary, and so to the archbishop: but by Windham, Generally all peculiars are immediately subject to the archbishop, and that it's subject to the Ordinary, must be special suggestion. 2. Such letters of request cannot come in by suggestion only, but must be entred, that so plea may be had to it, which the Court agreed to be the regular way, and ordered the defendant to plead his letters of remission, and granted prohibition. Baron & feme. In default Br. 52.

Feme covert in suit against baron & feme is arrested, and giveth bond for her appearance, and now prayed to be delivered on common bail, the sheriff having retorned cepi corps of the baron & feme both, having only taken her, which the Court denied after retorn of cepi corps, contrà if non est inventus had been retorned as to the husband; but yet if it appear only a practice, they will discharge her, to examine which, they gave rule for the sheriff to retorn the body of the husband.

[368] 63. DOVE against DARKIN. In Continuance, Fitzh. 16. Tuesday, Novemb. 11.

Error. Siderf. 93, pl. 17. Execution sued by executors in the name of the testator being dead, is void. Stat. Merchant Br. 43. Jones 410. Error Br. 117. Error Br. 144.

In ejectment, judgment in B. R. being had, and scire facias against the plaintiff quare executio non, &c. The defendant assigns for error, that the plaintiff was dead before the verdict in the ejectment; upon issue of the parties joyn'd by attorney, in the scire facias that he was living, the jury found he was dead; which, by Allen, cannot be, without making executor or administrator party; for else there is no proper persons to joyn issue but the man in the moon. By Twisden, Though the party be alive, there can be no other course but to punish the attorney, and by affidavit or information ad informandam conscientiam judicis; but no error in fact can be assign'd without making a true party. Adjornatur.

64. BERRY against WHEELER. Siderf. 91, pl. 12.

Execution.

Maynard for the defendant in ejectment in evidence, excepted to an extent under which the plaintiff claimed, because after execution by fieri facias of part, elegit was for the whole, without mentioning any thing levied by the former elegit which recited the scire facias, but was retorned nichil. But, by Allen, Nothing here appears but an award on the roll of elegit, and a vicecomes non misit breve after another is taken out, which being filed, the party hath no remedy but by aud. quer. no such recital of the scire facias being in this second elegit; but the defendants suggestion not appearing on record, Maynard waived it. 2. He objected that it appears that more then a moiety is extended; for its said that the defendant was seized of a rectory of the value of 100l. and other lands appurtenant, quæ quidem rectoria sine terris glebalibus is the moiety, which is not like a conveyance or agreement of parties, but in brevi adversario; but it appearing that the rectory consisted of glebe and tythes, &c. else by Twisden, it is no rectory, but a parsonage; but here it may be understood of the church-yard, &c. distinct from the other lands pertaining, which the Court (Windham absentè) agreed, and as long as the extent continueth, it cannot thus be denied but there is glebe; but in count of ejectment of rectory, H. cannot give evidence only for tythes, per Curiam, contrà by Wild for the plaintiff. 3. Its said that the rectory delivered was a moiety, not say-[369]-ing according to the value or quantity, which by Maynard is ill, sed non allocatur. 4. It was not said tenend' in seperalitate, sed non allocatur.

66. BUTLER against YATEMAN. Ante. Siderf. 89, pl. 8.

Prohibition.

Powis moved against prohibition, that it ought not to be granted here, because the bounds of the parish are not in question, but only of the vill: but if it were, yet it could not be tried by suggestion, without pleading; for they having conusance of the principal, this bondary is but collateral, as F. N. B. 50, contrà by Holt for the plaintiff, these parties being not spiritual, but patentees of the King, Latch. 116, Huttons case, & Yelvert. 92, and so the bounds are properly triable at common law, it being the main question, whether it be within one tything within the vill or borough, 7 Co. 44 b. or in another without it in the same parish, Hub. 296. But by Powis, Here only the close, out of which, is only in question, not the vill, 13 Car. Whiscars against Fuller in Roberts case, 12 Co. 65. Twisden saw no difference betwixt the bounds of tything, and of the parish, but it never was granted upon suggestion of the bounds of a vill, being only incidental, and against common right, and therefore though question temporal, is triable at common law, which the Court (contrà Mallet) agreed: and by Windham, Should A. sue B. for tythes of a close, and

B. saith he is not owner of it, this shall be tried in the Spiritual Court; the Court denied prohibition, and the authority of Yelvert. 92.

[370] 67. BUXTON against BATEMAN. Ante. In Chattels Br. 11.

Church.

The plaintiff counted that he was seised of an ancient messuage, and that he, and all, &c. have used to have a seat in a pue in cella or quire of the church, not saying he used to repair; which, by Williams, is well enough without; that reparation is good evidence, but needed not be pleaded, especially this not being within the body of the church, which is generally to be repaired by the parishioners, 2 Inst. 489, so of publick isle, otherways of particular isles, which by common law the particular persons are bound to repair, and so need not shew it, for it may be for other causes then repairing, as for being co-founder, or having been contributory to its building, 3 Inst. 202, Corven against Prin, 12 Co. 105. Also this question is betwixt two common persons, which is stronger then if it had been betwixt a common person and the Ordinary, or the parish, 1 Inst. 121 b. 122 a. Also this is after verdict in action upon the case, Latch. 116. Allen for the defendant, It doth not appear but that this cella is part of the body of the church, but if it be not, the law is the same, Noy 104, Day against Bedingfield, for the prescription must appear to be legal, and on good ground, and not only by usage, Co. Entries 8. And there is no more reason why a prescription must be to repair precisely in a prohibition, then in action upon the case, in both the party may plead the same; and if it be necessary in point of law, it must appear at common law in declaration; contrà in the Ecclesiastical Court. Foster conceived consideration ought to appear by pleading. Twisden doubted whether of necessity they ought to plead it; and cited a case about 4 Car. 1, one prescribed for the upper end of a long seat belonging to his house, and adjudged good, Noy 78, which Windham agreed, the property of the founder is not altered by consecration, and by this prescription the freehold of such pue remains in the party, not the parson; but yet being after verdict, though this be great evidence, it is doubtful whether it ought to be pleaded, and both denied the difference of prescription and usage, and of suit at common law, and in Spiritual Court: but by Allen a composition betwixt parson, patron, and Ordinary to allow seat, is only a ground in Spiritual Court, not at common law: and by Foster, There is a great difference betwixt an isle of the church, and the seat in an isle, which may be since the foundation of the church; Mallet agreed with Foster. Adjornatur.

[371] 68. HERBERT against ROBERTS & UXOR.

Variance.

In error of judgment in C. B. Allen in action of escape for the plaintiff, moved a variance betwixt verdict and declaration, the count was that the defendant by virtue of a cap. in force was taken, &c. 15 Apr. 1657. Verdict find that there was a writ of Hill. 1656, retornable at a certain day therein contained, not saying that it was the writ in the count, nor can it be intended. Sed non allocatur. The point of the judgment in C. B. was, that H. had counted on arrest of baron & feme; the jury found they arrested him, saying nothing of the wife, and held good, being variance of fact, which alters not the writ on special verdict, Foster against Jackson, Hub. Judgment affirmed, nisi.

69. SMITH against CONYERS.

Assumpsit.

Error of a judgment in Durham in assumpsit, without shewing for what sum, and counts in consideration quod emissit a certain quantity of coals the defendant C. promised to deliver them, which, per Curiam, is good enough. 2. Another case of error in action of covenant on articles, wherein breach was assigned, that the defendant did not pay 20l. during the time of a lease made by the plaintiff to the defendant at the several days therein mentioned, which, by Allen, is ill, and the breach must be assigned particularly, so that the other party may plead to it. Windham conceived it well enough; as if really a breach had been at every day; contrà in debt on a bond to perform, which Twisden agreed: but by Allen, he might have pleaded he did not pay at such, or such a day, or that it was generally not paid; but as it is, none can tell what he will insist on before jury, whether breach at one, or every day, and is contrary to all presidents: and though this may be cured by verdict, yet not here, the judgment being by nil dicit, and so the jury ought to try all, as on non debet pleaded in action for rent on lease; and this involved issue is better than prolix pleading several breaches in several days, which must have several issues. Judgment affirmed in both.

Usury.

In action of covenant on bill of bottomree, that the ship intended to go forth should proceed to A. and should not deviate directly or indirectly. The defendant pleaded performance generally. The plaintiff demurred as insufficient, quod non deviaret being negative: and the not being said quod procederet directly, per Curiam, the plea is ill, as if they had been several covenants; but the Court advised amendment by agreement.

Prohibition for annuity awarded to parson, vicar, &c. by the Ordinary, as an arbitrator shall be at common law, 3 Ed. 3, 17, pl. 24.

Williams moved for prohibition to the Consistory Court of Hereford for the administrator of the vicar against the parson, the suit being for a certain annual sum, Co. Entries 445. 1 Cr. 217, which shall not be intended pension, unless mentioned; and that for the same cause prohibition was awarded in C. B. upon motion of Serjeant Earl, but the Court refused to grant it here, F. N. B. 51 B. especially the suit being betwixt the parson and vicar; though it was alledged that for this arrear an action of debt did lye at common law.

72. WISEMAN against COTTON. Ante. In Custome Br. 44.

Entred Hill. 13 & 14 Car. 2, Rot. 476. Thursday, Novemb. 13.

Custom. General custom of borough Engl. goeth not to brother, Hitch. 11, pl. 30, not to son without special pleading, Hub. 51. Suit by ex gravi quer. is not incident to burgh that may devise by custom, 39 Ass. 6, Br. 352. Nor is custom to devise incident to a vill or burgh, 40 Ass. per Wind.

In action upon the case upon a feign'd issue out of Chancery, that the mannor of Farmingham was not devisable by the custom of Kent, jury find 2 Ed. 6, cap. that the lands inter alia of Sir H. Islip, which then were gavelkind, should be changed, and not be departible among heirs, but shall be as lands at c. law to all intents, as if they had never been of gavelkind; they find the lands in question part, and that all the lands of gavelkind are devisable by custom. Jones for the plaintiff, The only question is on the Act 2 Ed. 6, whether it take away as well the custom to devise as the partition, or only the custom to be departible as at c. law, the words being as full to abrogate the whole custom, as can be devised; else the latter clause, that they should be as lands at com. law, cannot be satisfied to all intents and purposes; for at com. law lands were not devisable: also at common law she shall have but a third, and if this custom should stand, she would have half; [373] and this appears by the different penning of this statute, and 31 H. 8, cap. 3, which is only that they shall be disgavel'd, and no further; and most of the persons named therein, some of great judgment, are again named in this of H. 8. The intent of 2 Ed. 6, was to preserve those families, that it might not be diminisht, which was done by partition, and also as pernitiously by devise and dower, and the practice hath been according to this opinion of taking away the custom. Winnington for the defendant, argued only what is intended by the custom and nature of gavelkind, which is only intended by the Act to be defeated, which by Lamberts Peramb. 584. Spilmans Gloss. verbo, Gavelletum is only the discent among heirs males, and to devise is a custom distinct from it by its self: so 1 Inst. 140. Lambert 251. 2 Ed. 4, 18 b. the custom to have dower or devise must be specially pleaded; contrà of the general custom of gavelkind, 5 Ed. 4, 8. 1 Cr. 461, Launder against Brooke, Da. 50. And it may be gavelkind, and yet not devisable, nor the feme have dower. 2. It shall be at common law as if it had never been gavelkind, F. N. B. 190, 200 B. but no otherways, for it's not inconsistent with lands at common law to be devisable, and so to all intents and purposes, is only as if it were not gavelkind: this also is the intent of the Act, that the nature of the discent is only to be altered thereby; and therefore its said, that it be hereafter in no ways departible, &c. and this was to preserve families, to which end to devise was a benefit and priviledge. Twisden conceived that it was always hitherto taken to be of the nature of gavelkind to devise; and unless it be so, it will retorn again to gavelkind; for when it cannot be proved that such lands belong to any named in the Act, country men that purchase part will take it to be of the general nature of the custom. Windham conceived the general words must be circumscribed by the particular, which is principally that of discent, which Foster agreed as the mischief the Act only intended to relieve; but yet would not suddenly turn the tyde, as used contrary. Adjornatur.

Travers.

In trespass, the defendant pleaded Charles P. was seised in fee, and leased 4 Jac. to Hall for three lives, which H. assigned to the defendant, whereby he put in beasts into common. The plaintiff replyes (absque hoc) that Charles P. was seised in fee when he made the lease. The defendant confesseth that C. P. was tenant for life, and enfeofft Hall, but that before seisin of C. P. the Lord Powis was seised, and levied a fine to the use of himself, reversion to H. P. who enfeofft Holden, lessor of the plaintiff. The defendant rejoyns, and confesses the fine, but saith that H. P. dyed before C. P. absque hoc, that Henry enfeoffed Holden; on which the plaintiff demurred, as an ill travers. But by Wilmot for the defendant, the travers in the replication is ill, being of what was confessed and avowed before, viz. the seisin of C. P. 13 H. 7, 12, Stoners case, 27 H. 6. 1. The difference is betwixt an assize and trespass, 2 Ed. 4, 11, where title is necessary to be made, there H. may travers the seisin confessed before; contrà in trespass, which is but a possessory action. 2. It is a repugnant plea in replication, which confesseth the feoffment of C. P. and consequently a fee in him, and so cannot travers it after, F. Double Plea 11, which the Court denied; contrà if tenant for years be said to make feoffment. 3. This is a travers of matter in law, as 7 Ed. 4, 13, by Danby, and so void. 4. It's of an implication which is void, as by Fitzherbert in 27 H. 8, 48. Windham conceived the travers was most proper, and it's not like the confessing that lessee for years enfeofft, which admits a fee in him; contrà of tenant for life. Also it's not here sufficiently confest without travers; for if C. P. had fee, the under leases are good, else not: and in trespass, if the defendant pleaded J. S. was seised in fee, and enfeofft, the plaintiff replyes that he was seised in fee, and leased to J. S. for life, absque hoc, that J. S. was seised in fee, it's good: and per Curiam, this nor the case at Bar cannot be pleaded otherways. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[375] 74. DOVE against DARKIN. Ante. In Continuance F. 16.

Such plea is good so long as the parties are demandable, or may plead 2 H. 6, 13, pl. 6, but after writ of enquiry awarded by default, its ill, 9 H. 4, 1, pl. 4. So after issue joyned and nisi prius, such plea is frivolous, and cannot be joyned by attorney, by Fortesque, 31 H. 6, 15, seu 8, pl. 4, yet attorney may plead mort ou deposition, &c. puis Dar. Cont. 9 Ed. 4, 24, pl. 31. But if the defendant plead mort del plaintiff, the plaintiffs attorney cannot confess it, 21 H. 6, 10, pl. 23, by Markham. The death of attorney doth not abate writ, because the continuance is in the name of the master, 5 H. 7, 3, pl. 7. Or notwithstanding a prece partium taken out after the death of A. yet if the defendant do confess A. is dead, the writ shall abate, 26 E. 3, 70, seu 16, pl. 6, in Continuance Fitzh. 16.

The warrant of attorney is determined by the judgment, unless to some purposes, as acknowledging of satisfaction, &c. but the writ of error is quasi a new suit, in which he cannot plead on the old warrant quære, fol. 107.

It's assigned that the plaintiff in ejectment was dead before the judgment, in a writ of error the party himself, by attorney, joyned issue that he is alive, and its found he is dead, which by Allen is void, without scire facias against the executors or administrators. Windham agreed, that if no party had been summoned, it had been ill; but here its well enough, as Rast. Entries Brief in division under mortmain; for if he be alive there is an end of the case, as after darrain continuance the defendant pleaded death of the plaintiff, and the attorney joyned issue thereon for the plaintiff: but by Allen, there is a rightful attorney constituted, contrà here; for if the party be dead, there can be no attorney: but by Windham, the Court will suppose one when such entry is made, and there needs no scire facias, unless none come in to plead. Twisden conceived, that upon error brought the errors must be assigned, and the party may come in and alledge the other dead: but here the verdict hath found he is dead, which makes a discontinuance, which Foster agreed, being the very error assigned; contrà if he had been found alive. But it's necessary, by Allen, in errour of judgment in debt or trespass, to have scire facias against executors or administrators, especially when none appears; and here upon error assign'd, a new attorney is made by the plaintiff: but by Windham, he is punishable by the plaintiff, but not the judgment reverst. Adjornatur.

75. PETTYWARE against HAMSON.

Escape.

Nota, that if committitur be entred in the marshalls book in an action of escape against him, H. must prove he was in his custody since the time; contrà per Curiam, where it's entred on record; but by the clerk, and Wild the Kings Serjeant, the course hath always been of late, that in case it be entred on record, yet H. must prove that he was in custody since that time, because its the usual course to enter committitur against every defendant, though he be upon [376] bail. Wherefore they ordered the marshall to shew whether one were in custody, or no, inter Pettyware against Hamson.

76. MOULD against WALLIS. In Departure Br. 10.

Apprentice. Moor 135, pl. 280, doth impliedly grant it's no departure. Godbolt 122, pl. 143. 1 Cr. 159.

In action of covenant against an apprentice, breach assigned in not serving him: the defendant pleaded nonage. The plaintiff replys by the custom of London, which by Jones for the defendant on demurrer is a departure, 1 Inst. 304. Kelway 76, The Abbot of Buckfaces case, Yelvert. 13, pl. 22. Hoell for the plaintiff, 21 H. 7, 17, Feoffment. The defendant pleaded nonage: the plaintiff replys by custom of the mannor, and held good, contrà to 37 H. 6, 5, pl. 9, and so in 3 Cr. 652, but contrà where one alledged general custom in the count, and replys by a special. Windham, This is no departure from the title, but is an answer to a disability pleaded in barr, as where in action the defendant pleaded moin professe; the plaintiff replys, that before the action he was deraign'd, agreed good, which the Court agreed. But by Allen, all the presidents are to count on the custom, this being the very ground of the action. But by Twisden, Hutt. 63, Gennings against Pitman, H. 5 Car. Gilbert against Fletcher, the action is founded on the covenant, not on the custom, 21 Ed. 4, 6, pl. 17, in Labourers Br. 42. Infant Fitzh. 2, & 5 Eliz. 4, § 43 b. 1. Infant is not bound by collateral contents, but only of apprenticeship, 6 H. 7, 8. Adjornatur.

77. TRIPIT against REYNOLDS. Ante.

Assumpsit.

Allen prayed judgment for the plaintiff, that the promise is created by operation of law, and so no necessity to alledge to whom the promise was, but the wife that is to have benefit may sue for it, though the consideration moved from the husband, as Rippon against Norton, 3 Cr. , Bayfield against Spencer, and Agar against Goddard, in consideration the father would settle in marriage on the son, one promised to pay to the father, yet the son may have action, so here. Twisden, Had the promise been made express to the husband, as Frenches case, to the father, there the son could not have action unless it be upon marriage. But by Windham, either party may have the action where both are to have benefit of it; contrà where money is to be paid to a third person to the use of the assumee, for there only he shall [377] have the action, as where promise made to an attorny or servant to pay the master for wares sold, only the master shall have the action. Pardon.

In trespass, special verdict being found for the defendant, a souldier under the Parliament so called 1659, that as such he used the horse, and find the Act of Oblivion, and the repeal in relation to Sir G. Booth, when the secluded members came in, after which, viz. 25 July, the horse, for which the action is brought, was taken: which, by Windham, was intended that none should proceed criminally against such, but still the property is in the owner, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

Slander.

Allen prayed judgment, this being as much as a positive charge, that he had stole the mare; and the case in Hub. 177, that H. was in goal for stealing a horse, hath been otherways ruled. 2. The ubi revera that no such words were spoken is not necessary; the words being layd false and scandalous, though the relation of another; but it had been moved according to presidents, but here the falsity and scandal must refer to the relation, as in indictment that H. did falsely depose, the plaintiff need not aver ubi revera, the matter was false, and this is found all by verdict, but the words were not laid quod falso, &c. but only quod hæc falsa, &c. verba. Windham, The words shall not be aided by intendment, because the jury only enquire of the words, not of the falsity, and agreed the case in Hub. 177, which shall be intended that he was in the goal before. Twisden, Ubi revera I never conceived of any use, the scandalosa verba refers to all, and I conceive the case in Hub. 177 scarcely law, it being a scandal to have such an imputation laid on him. Mallet and Foster agreed with Windham, the scandal must be fixed some where, and if the party can produce his author, he is cleerd; and therefore the ubi [378] revera is necessary, according to auncient forms, which is not readily to be altered: but for the words, he conceived Hub. 177 a hard case, and these words not actionable in themselves, but if the narrator cannot produce his author; but by Allen, The defendant may justifie that J. S. told him, and need not take issue on the falsity, 21 Jac. tryed before Hub. One told J. S. that Cantrell was hanged for a robbery, and J. S. told the defendant in another action so, and not being said falso & fictè, he was found not guilty, which Twisden remembred, yet per Curiam, præter Twisden, nil cap. per bill.

(which is out of the jurisdiction of the Court of Jernemutha) being in the county of the City of N. which by Allen is error, the count being upon payment generally, which per Curiam agreed ill; so entry of continuance, not saying per Curiam; so continuance is to the next Court, which is said held 12 Dec. and the entry is ad quam quidem Curiam tent. dicto 11 Dec. Windham conceived the leaving out the place but a trick to hedge in jurisdiction. Judgment reverst.

Covenant.

In action of debt on bond, condition whereas L. S. had purchased land, which discended to W. T. and the plaintiff was obliged to pay rent to T. P. now if W. T. to whom he attorned tenant should save harmless, the bond to be void. The defendant pleaded that he hath saved harmless; to which the plaintiff demurred, as Mansers case. But by Williams for the defendant, Mansers case is to discharge and save harmless, this only to save harmless. But by Twisden, He might have pleaded non damnificat. for this that he hath saved harmless, doth imply he was damnified; which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff.

83. NICHOLAS against PULLEN. In Br. Cond. 18.

Tr. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 345.

Condition.

In action of covenant to save harmless, quiet, &c. from suits and lawful evictions. The defendant pleaded performance of covenants. The plaintiff replyed, that J. S. took out a writ of hab. fa. poss. out of B. R. debito modo exeunte, and by vertue thereof entred on possession of the plaintiff, and did expel and amove him. To which the defendant demurred: and by Powis, The judgment needed not be recited, the issue being tendered on expulsion, Curia contrà, debito modo is not sufficient without shewing particulars; contrà in Spiritual Court. As by Twisden, To say in debt for rent, that H. did demand debito modo is ill; and Allen against Thorn, in debt on bond to save harmless from lawful eviction, dower being recovered after bar by fine, and nonclaim without exception to it, which might have been taken; it was held no lawful eviction, and so the defendant found not guilty; for the plaintiff must sufficiently entitle himself. Windham, It is hard here for the defendant to shew any other title, being tourned out in ejectment against fain'd ejector; but yet conceived it ill, because the hab. fa. poss. doth always recite the term of the judgment, and therefore that must at least be shewed, but not the title of him that evicted. Judgment for the defendant. Nisi.

[380] 84. NICHOLAS against PULLEN. In Condition Br. 12.

Covenant.

In debt on bond for performance of covenants, one whereof was, that defendant should not deliver up possession to any but the lessor, or such persons as should lawfully recover. The defendant pleaded he did not deliver, but to such persons as lawfully recovered it: which, by Powis, on demurrer by the plaintiff, is well enough; and the plaintiff may shew it was to be delivered to J. S. contrà to law: and so by Twisden is Stiles, Eals against Lambert. Windham 5 H. 7, Condition to deliver so much bread as required, the defendant pleaded he did so, which was held ill, without shewing what; so here, he ought to shew that he delivered to J. S. by lawful title, or else that he delivered none, which Mallet agreed. 2. Here is no breach necessary to be assigned by the plaintiff, the plea being on perticular covenant, which is like releas pleaded on arbitrement. Adjornatur.

In debt on obligation of 200l. upon condition for payment of 100l. 10 Jan. next ensuing on three months warning (being dated 1 July) defendant in bar pleaded, that he had not three months warning before the action brought: to which the plaintiff demurred, and Weston conceived, that the certain day is 10 Jan. and the obligee must give the warning 2d. if the warning be intended three months before any 10th Jan. then it must be given by obligor, and so is 3 Cr. 202. Isham against Paget, Brief. Br. 77. 3 Cr. 842, Gawen against Syms case, its only a plea in abatement, which cannot be pleaded in bar. 3d. The breach is [381] not well assigned, in that warning was not to the defendant, for it might be to the other joynt obligor. Twisden agreed, that 10th Jan. may be intended next after three months warning, not next after the bond; but its hard to maintain that the obligor must give warning, and by Windham, Had the mony been payable 10 Jan. next after the bond, and three months warning by the obligee, though that day pass without warning, yet the money is not lost, as hath been resolved; but three months warning may be given after to the obligor, and he is bound to pay, the ascertaining the day being for his benefit. In debt on bond to perform all covenants specified in an indenture betwixt A. and B. the defendant pleaded there was no covenants; to which the plaintiff demurred; and per Curiam, this being general of all, is well; contrà if it were to perform any certain covenant; as to be nonsuited in formedon, he cannot say there is none; contrà to be nonsuited in all actions pendent in C. B. But the party is estopt to say there is no indenture, but he must set forth the indenture it self, though he have agreed there is such a one: [382] for whither the words in the indenture, as deed, &c. do amount unto covenant, upon issue, that these are such covenants, can never be questioned, but only of fact: but the plaintiff shewing the indenture, if any covenants be therein, the jury must find for the plaintiff. And by Wild for the plaintiff, This is a windlace to make the bond void; for if there be really no indenture, which the defendant is bound to shew, the plaintiff should be put to shew it. Infant. Penal bill is void if infants except to it. Godbolt, 364, pl. 456.

In debt on obligation for necessaries, no oyer being demanded, its intended single bill. The defendant pleaded infancy; the plaintiff shewed that it was pro necessario apparatu & vestitu, not saying it was for him, nor that it was suitable to his degree. The defendant demurred, but it being said it was sold to him, it shall be intended for him; but 2 Cr. 560, Ive against Chester, it must be said necessary, and the particulars set forth, by Foster; contrà per cæteros, the particulars are needless. Adjornatur.

Twisden for the plaintiff as before, conceived the verdict very proper, for this being sufficient evidence, had the jury found it, they had made an end of the case, and they need not shew the particular, what is necessary, unless the question had risen thereon, as Stone against Withipoll; and as in ejectment of copyhold, if question arise on the reasonable fine, then the particulars must be found; contrà where its on demand, so 24 Car. Parker against Coxe; and here is no doubt but its necessary; but the question is, whither it charge the husband to the point; he conceived the husband chargeable, because she is wholly disabled to contract, and therefore when things are necessary, the law will create the means, as if she take bread and eat it, trover lyeth against him, 7 Car. City of Westm. against Gerrard, the defendant a married woman, of personal estate, she had a grandchild, who was laid to the parish, and the question was; whither the husband, (so Drapers case, out of Leicestershire) as the grandfather of the infant, should keep it, or the parish, and resolved on reference to two Judges, that though Gerrard were no grandfather within 43 Eliz. yet for the benefit he had by his wife, 39 Ass. 1, he was bound to keep him; and when the husband will thus take advantage of his own wrong, in not keeping her, its reasonable he should be charged; and the disability of the wife is no hinderance to contract for necessaries, Perk. 4. 14 Ed. 4, 2 i.e. to charge the husband, as infants contracts are void, except for clear necessaries convenientiæ, H. 2 Car. As if infant be housekeeper which is not necessary quo ad esse, yet for such provision he is chargeable, B. R. Tr. 15 Jac. Rot. 1374, Hill against Blacksto 9 H. 7, 21. Lease by infant without rent is void, and trover lyeth for goods delivered with his own hand; contrà of trespass, because it cannot be said vi & armis, if the wife be beaten, being absent from her husband, and be cured, she is not suable, but only the husband; and its no reason this should charge the husband, more then for meat and drink; for in want of both, she will perish: so if she have a child cured, the law will charge the husband, Hub. 11, Bridgmans case master of a ship, who hath only conduct of it, may yet pawn it in case of danger; and shall the law take care [384] of danger; and take care of such things, and not of the lives of men? To abjured persons the law yet allows food, &c. (Coron. 407, Artic. Cleri, 13 H. 7, 3), much more here: so moin for necessity of the house may take up necessaries, not that he can put life into them, but because else the house would want support, 9 Co. Hussyes case she shall not suffer imprisonment for ravishment of ward, because she cannot satisfie; so here, because she cannot acquire any thing, the husband shall be charged: nor is it much doubted de re, but de modo: alimony is not mentioned in Art. Cleri, nor Caudryes case 5 Co. 9, nor in 25 H. 8, cap. 12, which all sum up the heads of the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, the estoveria was doubtless grounded on excommengement propter sævitiam, and could it be made good (though the practice hath been always against it) it were to the purpose. I agree the rights of matrimony 7 Co. 44, Kens case 4 Co. 29, as divorces, &c. belong to Spiritual Court, but all things that belong to matrimony is no matrimonial cause, 48 Ed. 3, 18. 50 Ed. 3, 90, 19. F. N. B. 44, 45. 52 Ass. 7, promise of money in marriage is suable in the Spiritual Court, contrà of promise to give money to such as shall marry my daughter; Debt. 8, and alimony is not properly a matrimonial cause, by reason it depends not on separation: F. N. B. 139. So the register must be understood of debitis & catallis given in testamento or matrimonio, but yet alimony is 1 Car. Greens case, a consequent of the judgment of divorce in Spiritual Court, and so may be there then allowable; but its hard she should have no allowance, unless she be divorced; and by the course of the Spiritual Court they do not allow alimony till separation; and no case hath been cyted where alimony alone originally was sued for there, F. N. B. 53 b. 139, and yet if it were, Hut. 116, and 24 Car. Globenyes case, she hath liberty of Court, and the suit in the Spiritual Court, suits not with this case, being for necessary support, 2 Car. Penelope Owens case, in prohibition to the marches, it was held the Spiritual Court cannot sequester estate, and they will not allow alimony till causa est contestata, nor after 37 H. 6, 14. So 18 Eliz. cap. 3, of Bastdras, might have provided that the father should be imprisoned till he allow the son maintenance, but it goeth a surer way that the parish shall allow present subsistence, and charge the father after; and it was foreseen, 21 Jac. cap. 24, that men would live in prison rather then pay debts; and though it be cause of divorce for severity if the husband take away her necessaries, yet that doth not take [385] away her liberty of charging the husband, no more then her taking supplicavit and binding him to the peace, and if the fault be in the husband, that then she may charge him, then all the arguments of her contract fall to the ground, and the obedience or disobedience signifieth nothing; also could she obtain a separate maintenance, as she shall in Spiritual Court, and separation beside, then she may rant and live as feme sole and laugh her husband in the face; but if she sue at common law, it will make her very cautious how she proclaim her defaults before a jury in open Court: also a trover will lye 21 H. 7, 40, or trespass if the contract be void against both, and so she, as well as he may be imprisoned; and if elopement alone be cause at common law to lose dower, that is when she is become feme sole, and able, but she doth not hereby lose food and rayment during marriage; nor is it said she shall lose alimony in Spiritual Court: also here is no time defined, when such elopement shall be a forfeiture. 3. As to the prohibition, its annexed to the liberty of the wife, and so void contrà where annexed to feoffee, as not to infeoff J. S. Also should he adhere to the enemies of the King or have the plague, she may be a good woman, and yet refuse to go with him; and therefore there is no reason she should want maintenance for such cause: also this is an incident inseparable to her, and there is no reason the abuse of the mercer should take away her use of such things as the law alloweth. I agree the case of the wives resceit of rent to be void, but that's nothing to necessaries: also we defend the liberty of common law, and so though plaintiffs are not put to shew authorities, but such must produce them that would draw the cause ad aliud examen, as the defendants, 11 H. 6, 30, by Martyn is put as a case unquestionable, and so is a full authority; and the opinion of the Court went a step further, that he need not say the things were for the necessary use of the house 8 Car. Jones said it had been adjudged in Bill against Lake, that the cause of action began by the request that this is a new action, cannot be said, seeing the several opinions before, yet it hath not been very frequent before; but before 12 H. 8 no action upon the case lay against the executor on promise of testator, but many authorities to the contrà, 7 H. 7, 12. 11 H. 7, 26, only Norwoods case; Pl. Com. 183. So of latter times, action upon the case on 43 Eliz. 6, 12, Policy of Assurances, so assumpsit against feme for not marrying with him, lyeth now at common law every day; also when this action was brought, [386] no alimony was allowable, the Courts being taken away, of which the stat. 17 Car. taketh notice, and all the spiritual law is but branches of the common law, and therefore when they cease, they retorn again to common law 12 H. 7, 18. Atkins for the defendant as had been argued before.

93. BROAD against HALL. November, Monday, 17. In Incumbent, Br. 7.

Quare impedit. Sinderf. 93, pl. 18.

Twisden denyed the opinion in Bosvills case, 6 Co. 51 b. and conceived that H. that recovers in quare impedit, as Hub. 127, pl. 15, shall remove the incumbent whoever he be, unless the presentation of H. be obtained pendente placito; but the incumbent, if he have a better title, may have spoliation, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

94. BUXTON against BATEMAN. Ante. In Chattels Br. 11.

Church.

If the repairing were but matter of evidence, the party need not alledge it as suggestion for prohibition, no more then in prescription, because no issue can be thereon: and the matter being ecclesiastick, there must be a temporal reason given to draw it thence, and so are all the books: and in this very case a prohibition was granted in C. B. because that by the common law he must alledge he doth repair, whereas usage alone, in the Spiritual Court may be sufficient by their law. Winnington for the defendant, 2 Cr. after verdict its well enough, as prescription for common not saying pertinent. but only for beasts levant and couchant. Twisden, upon advise
